STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DURBIN (for himself, Ms. WARREN, Mrs. BOXER, and Mr. REED):

S. 1803. A bill to require certain protections for student loan borrowers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1803

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Student Loan Borrower Bill of Rights".

SEC. 2. TRUTH IN LENDING ACT AMENDMENTS.

The Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 128 (15 U.S.C. 1638)—

(A) in subsection (e)—

(i) in paragraph (1)(O), by striking "paragraph (6)" and inserting "paragraph (9)";

(ii) in paragraph (2)(L), by striking "paragraph (6)" and inserting "paragraph (9)";

(iii) in paragraph (4)(C), by striking "paragraph (7)" and inserting "paragraph (10)";

(iv) by redesignating paragraphs (5) through (11) as paragraphs (8) through (14), respectively;

(v) by inserting after paragraph (4) the following:

"(5) DISCLOSURES BEFORE FIRST FULLY AMORTIZED PAYMENT.—Not fewer than 30 days and not more than 150 days before the first fully amortized payment on a private education loan is due from the borrower, the private educational lender shall disclose to the borrower, clearly and conspicuously—

"(A) the information described in—

"(i) paragraph (2)(A) (adjusted, as necessary, for the rate of interest in effect on the date the first fully amortized payment on a private education loan is due);

"(ii) subparagraphs (B) through (G) of paragraph (2);

"(iii) paragraph (2)(H) (adjusted, as necessary, for the rate of interest in effect on the date the first fully amortized payment on a private education loan is due);

"(iv) paragraph (2)(K); and

"(v) subparagraphs (O) and (P) of paragraph (2);

"(B) the scheduled date upon which the first fully amortized payment is due;

"(C) the name of the lender and servicer, and the address to which communications and payments should be sent including a telephone number and website where the borrower may obtain additional information;

"(D) a description of alternative repayment plans, including loan consolidation or refinancing, and servicemember or veteran benefits under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) or other Federal or State law related to private education loans; and

"(E) a statement that a Servicemember and Veterans Liaison designated under paragraph (15)(F) is available to answer inquiries about servicemember and veteran benefits related to private education loans, including the toll-free telephone number to contact the Liaison pursuant to paragraph (15)(F).

"(6) DISCLOSURES WHEN BORROWER IS 30 DAYS DELINQUENT.—Not fewer than 5 days after a borrower becomes 30 days delinquent on a private education loan, the private educational lender shall disclose to the borrower, clearly and conspicuously—

"(A) the date on which the loan will be charged-off (as defined in paragraph (15)(A)) or assigned to collections, including the consequences of such charge-off or assignment to collections, if no payment is made;

"(B) the minimum payment that the borrower must make to avoid the loan being charged off (as defined in paragraph (15)(A)) or assigned to collection, and the minimum payment that the borrower must make to bring the loan current;

"(C) a statement informing the borrower that a payment of less than the minimum payment described in subparagraph (B) could result in the loan being charged off (as defined in paragraph (15)(A)) or assigned to collection; and

"(D) a statement that a Servicemember and Veterans Liaison designated under paragraph (15)(F) is available to answer inquiries about servicemember and veteran benefits related to private education loans, including the toll-free telephone number to contact the Liaison pursuant to paragraph (15)(F).

"(7) DISCLOSURES WHEN BORROWER IS HAVING DIFFICULTY MAKING PAYMENT OR IS 60 DAYS DELINQUENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Not fewer than 5 days after a borrower notifies a private educational lender that the borrower is having difficulty making payment or a borrower becomes 60 days delinquent on a private education loan, the private educational lender shall—

"(i) complete a full review of the borrower's private education loan and make a reasonable effort to obtain the information necessary to determine—

“(I) if the borrower is eligible for an alternative repayment plan, including loan consolidation or refinancing; and

“(II) if the borrower is eligible for servicemember or veteran benefits under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) or other Federal or State law related to private education loans;

“(ii) provide the borrower, in writing, in simple and understandable terms, information about alternative repayment plans and benefits for which the borrower is eligible, including all terms, conditions, and fees or costs associated with such repayment plan, pursuant to paragraph (8)(D);

“(iii) allow the borrower not less than 30 days to apply for an alternative repayment plan or benefits, if eligible; and

“(iv) notify the borrower that a Servicemember and Veterans Liaison designated under paragraph (15)(F) is available to answer inquiries about servicemember and veteran benefits related to private education loans, including the toll-free telephone number to contact the Liaison pursuant to paragraph (15)(F).

“(B) FORBEARANCE OR DEFERMENT.—If a borrower notifies the private educational lender that a long-term alternative repayment plan is not needed, the private educational lender may comply with this paragraph by providing the borrower, in writing, in simple and understandable terms, information about forbearance or deferment options, including all terms, conditions, and fees or costs associated with such options pursuant to paragraph (8)(D).

“(C) NOTIFICATION PROCESS.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Each private educational lender shall establish a process, in accordance subparagraph (A), for a borrower to notify the lender that—“(I) the borrower is having difficulty making payments on a private education loan; and “(II) a long-term alternative repayment plan is not needed.

“(ii) CONSUMER FINANCIAL PROTECTION BUREAU REQUIREMENTS.—The Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall promulgate rules establishing minimum standards for private educational lenders in carrying out the requirements of this paragraph and a model form for borrowers to notify private educational lenders of the information under this paragraph.”;

(vi) in paragraph (8), as redesignated by clause (iv), by adding at the end the following:

“(D) MODEL DISCLOSURE FORM FOR ALTERNATIVE REPAYMENT PLANS, FORBEARANCE, AND DEFERMENT OPTIONS.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Student Loan Borrower Bill of Rights, the Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall develop and issue model forms to allow borrowers to compare alternative repayment plans, forbearance, and deferment options with the borrower's existing repayment plan with respect to a private education loan. Such forms shall include the following:

“(i) The total amount to be paid over the life of the loan.

“(ii) The total amount in interest to be paid over the life of the loan.

“(iii) The monthly payment amount.

“(iv) The expected pay-off date.

“(v) Related fees and costs.

“(vi) Eligibility requirements, and how the borrower can apply for the alternative repayment plan, forbearance, or deferment option.

“(vii) Any consequences, including the loss of eligibility for alternative repayment plans, forbearance, or deferment options.”;

(vii) in paragraph (11), as redesignated by clause (iv), by striking “paragraph (7)” and inserting “paragraph (10)”;

(viii) in paragraph (14), as redesignated by clause (iv), by striking “paragraph (5)” and inserting “paragraph (8)”;

“(15) STUDENT LOAN BORROWER BILL OF RIGHTS.—

“(A) DEFINITIONS.—In this paragraph:

“(i) BORROWER.—The term ‘borrower’ means the person to whom a private education loan is extended.

“(ii) CHARGE OFF.—The term ‘charge off’ means charge to profit and loss, or subject to any similar action.

“(iii) PRIVATE EDUCATION LOAN.—The term ‘private education loan’ has the meaning given the term in section 140(a).

“(iv) SERVICER.—The term ‘servicer’ means the person responsible for the servicing of a private education loan, including any agent of such person or the person who makes, owns, or holds a loan if such person also services the loan.

“(v) SERVICING.—The term ‘servicing’ means—

“(I) receiving any scheduled periodic payments from a borrower pursuant to the terms of a private education loan;

“(II) making the payments of principal and interest and such other payments with respect to the amounts received from the borrower, as may be required pursuant to the terms of the loan; and “(III) performing other administrative services with respect to the loan.

“(B) SALE, TRANSFER, OR ASSIGNMENT.—If the sale, other transfer, or assignment of a private education loan results in a change in the identity of the party to whom the borrower must send subsequent payments or direct any communications concerning the loan—

“(i) the transferor shall—

“(I) notify the borrower, in writing, in simple and understandable terms, not fewer than 45 days before transferring a legally enforceable right to receive payment from the borrower on such loan, of—

“(aa) the sale or other transfer;

“(cc) the name and address of the party to whom subsequent payments or communications must be sent;

“(dd) the telephone numbers and websites of both the transferor and the transferee;

“(ee) the effective date of the sale, transfer, or assignment;

“(ff) the date on which the transferor servicer will stop accepting payment; and “(gg) the date on which the transferee servicer will begin accepting payment; and

“(II) forward any payment from a borrower with respect to such private education loan to the transferee servicer, immediately upon receiving such payment, during the 60-day period beginning on the date on which the transferor servicer stops accepting payment of such private education loan; and

“(ii) the transferee shall—

“(I) notify the borrower, in writing, in simple and understandable terms, not fewer than 45 days before acquiring a legally enforceable right to receive payment from the borrower on such loan, of—

“(aa) the sale or other transfer;

“(cc) the name and address of the party to whom subsequent payments or communications must be sent;

“(dd) the telephone numbers and websites of both the transferor and the transferee;

“(ee) the effective date of the sale, transfer, or assignment;

“(ff) the date on which the transferor will stop accepting payment; and

“(gg) the date on which the transferee will begin accepting payment;

“(II) accept as on-time and may not impose any late fee or finance charge for any payment from a borrower with respect to such private education loan that is forwarded from the transferor servicer during the 60-day period beginning on the date on which the transferor servicer stops accepting payment, if the transferor servicer receives such payment on or before the applicable due date, including any grace period;

“(III) provide borrowers a simple, online process for transferring existing electronic fund transfer authority; and “(IV) honor any promotion or benefit offered to the borrower or advertised by the previous owner or transferor servicer of such private education loan.

“(C) MATERIAL CHANGE IN MAILING ADDRESS OR PROCEDURE FOR HANDLING PAYMENTS.—If a servicer makes a change in the mailing address, office, or procedures for handling payments with respect to any private education loan, and such change causes a delay in the crediting of the account of the borrower made during the 60-day period following the date on which such change took effect, the servicer may not impose any late fee or finance charge for a late payment on such private education loan.

“(D) APPLICATION OF PAYMENTS.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Unless otherwise directed by the borrower, upon receipt of a payment, the servicer shall apply amounts first to the interest and fees owed on the payment due date, and then to the principal balance of the private education loan bearing the highest annual percentage rate, and then to each successive interest and fees and then principal balance bearing the next highest annual percentage rate, until the payment is exhausted. A borrower may instruct or expressly authorize the servicer to apply payments in a different manner.

“(ii) APPLICATION OF EXCESS AMOUNTS.—Unless otherwise directed by the borrower, upon receipt of a payment, the servicer shall apply amounts in excess of the minimum payment amount first to the interest and fees owed on the payment due date, and then to the principal balance of the private education loan balance bearing the highest annual percentage rate, and then to each successive interest and fees and principal balance bearing the next highest annual percentage rate, until the payment is exhausted. A borrower may instruct or expressly authorize the servicer to apply such excess payments in a different manner.

“(iii) APPLY PAYMENT ON DATE RECEIVED.—Unless otherwise directed by the borrower, a servicer shall apply payments to a borrower's account on the date the payment is received.

“(iv) PROMULGATION OF RULES.—The Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, may promulgate rules for the application of payments that—“(I) minimizes the amount of fees and interest incurred by the borrower and the total loan amount paid by the borrower;

“(II) minimizes delinquencies, assignments to collection, and charge-offs;

“(III) requires servicers to apply payments on the date received; and “(IV) allows the borrower to instruct the servicer to apply payments in a manner preferred by the borrower.

“(E) REHABILITATION OF LOANS.—If a borrower successfully and voluntarily makes 9 payments within 20 days of the due date during 10 consecutive months of amounts owed on a private education loan, or otherwise brings a private education loan current after the loan is charged-off, the loan shall be considered rehabilitated, and the lender or servicer shall request that any consumer reporting agency to which the charge-off was reported remove the delinquency that led to the charge-off and the charge-off from the borrower’s credit history.

“(F) SERVICEMEMBERS, VETERANS, AND PRIVATE EDUCATION LOANS.—

“(i) SERVICEMEMBER AND VETERANS LIAISON.—Each servicer shall designate an employee to act as the servicemember and veterans liaison who is responsible for answering inquiries from servicemembers and veterans, and is specially trained on servicemember and veteran benefits under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) and other Federal or State laws related to private education loans.

“(ii) TOLL-FREE TELEPHONE NUMBER.—Each servicer shall maintain a toll-free telephone number that shall—

“(I) connect directly to the servicemember and veterans liaison designated under clause (i); and “(II) be made available on the primary internet website of the servicer and on monthly billing statements.

“(iii) PROHIBITION ON CHARGE OFFS.—A lender or servicer may not charge off or report a private education loan as delinquent, assigned to collection (internally or by referral to a third party), or charged-off to a credit reporting agency if the borrower is on active duty in the Armed Forces (as defined in section 101(d)(1) of title 10, United States Code) serving in a combat zone (as designated by the President under section 112(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986).

“(G) BORROWER’S LOAN HISTORY.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—A servicer shall make available through a secure website, or in writing upon request, the loan history of each borrower for each private education loan, separately designating—

“(I) payment history;

“(II) loan history, including any forbearances, deferrals, delinquencies, assignment to collection, and charge offs;

“(III) annual percentage rate history; and “(IV) key loan terms, including application of payments to interest, principal, and fees, origination date, principal, capitalized interest, annual percentage rate, including any cap, loan term, and any contractual incentives.

“(ii) ORIGINAL DOCUMENTATION.—A servicer shall make available to the borrower, if requested, at no charge, copies of the original loan documents and the promissory note for each private education loan.

“(H) ERROR RESOLUTION.—The Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall promulgate rules requiring servicers to establish error resolution procedures to allow borrowers to inquire about errors related to their private education loans and obtain timely resolution of such errors.

“(I) ADDITIONAL SERVICING STANDARDS.—The Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, may establish additional servicing standards to reduce delinquencies, assignment to collections, and charge-offs, and to ensure borrowers understand their rights and obligations related to their private education loans.

“(J) ARBITRATION.—

“(i) WAIVER OF RIGHTS AND REMEDIES.—Any rights and remedies available to borrowers against servicers may not be waived by any agreement, policy, or form, including by a predispute arbitration agreement.

“(ii) PREDISPUTE ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS.—No predispute arbitration agreement shall be valid or enforceable by a servicer, including as a third-party beneficiary or by estoppel, if the agreement requires arbitration of a dispute with respect to a private education loan. This subparagraph applies to predispute arbitration agreements entered into before the date of enactment of the Student Loan Borrower Bill of Rights, as well as on and after such date of enactment, if the violation that is the subject of the dispute occurred on or after such date of enactment.

“(K) ENFORCEMENT.—The provisions of this paragraph shall be enforced by the agencies specified in subsections (a) through (d) of section 108, in the manner set forth in that section or under any other applicable authorities available to such agencies by law.

“(L) PREEMPTION.—Nothing in this paragraph may be construed to preempt any provision of State law regarding private education loans where the State law provides stronger consumer protections.

“(M) CIVIL LIABILITY.—A servicer that fails to comply with any requirement imposed under this paragraph shall be deemed a creditor that has failed to comply with a requirement under this chapter for purposes of liability under section 130 and such servicer shall be subject to the applicable liability provisions under such section.”; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

“(g) INFORMATION TO BE AVAILABLE AT NO CHARGE.—The information required to be disclosed under this section shall be made available at no charge to the borrower.”; and

(2) in section 130(a)—

(A) in paragraph (3), by striking “128(e)(7)”

and inserting “128(e)(10)”; and

(B) in the flush matter at the end, by striking “or paragraph (4)(C), (6), (7), or (8) of section 128(e),” and inserting “or paragraph (4)(C), (9), (10), or (11) of section 128(e).”

SEC. 3. STUDENT LOAN BORROWER BILL OF RIGHTS.

The Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in part G of title IV (20 U.S.C. 1088 et seq.) by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 493E. STUDENT LOAN BORROWER BILL OF RIGHTS.

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) SERVICER.—The term ‘servicer’ means the person responsible for the servicing of any student loan, including any agent of such person or the person who makes, owns, or holds a loan if such person also services the loan.

“(2) SERVICING.—The term ‘servicing’ means—

“(A) receiving any scheduled periodic payments from a borrower pursuant to the terms of a student loan;

“(B) making the payments of principal and interest and such other payments with respect to the amounts received from the borrower, as may be required pursuant to the terms of the loan; and “(C) performing other administrative services with respect to the loan.

“(3) STUDENT LOAN.—The term ‘student loan’ means a loan made, insured, or guaranteed under this title.

“(b) TRANSFER OF LENDER OR SERVICER.—If the sale, other transfer, or assignment of a student loan results in a change in the identity of the party to whom the borrower must send subsequent payments or direct any communications concerning the loan—

“(1) the transferor shall—

“(A) notify the borrower in writing not fewer than 45 days before transferring a legally enforceable right to receive payment from the borrower on such loan, of—

“(i) the sale, transfer, or assignment;

“(ii) the identity of the transferee;

“(iii) the name and address of the party to whom subsequent payments or communications must be sent;

“(iv) the telephone numbers and websites of both the transferor and the transferee;

“(v) the effective date of the sale, transfer, or assignment;

“(vi) the date on which the current servicer will stop accepting payments; and

“(vii) the date on which the transferee servicer will begin accepting payment; and

“(B) forward to the transferee servicer any payment with respect to such student loan, immediately upon receiving such payment, from a borrower during the 60-day period beginning on the date on which the transferor servicer stops accepting payment for such student loan; and

“(2) the transferee shall—

“(A) notify the borrower in writing not fewer than 45 days before transferring a legally enforceable right to receive payment from the borrower on such loan, of—

“(i) the sale, transfer, or assignment;

“(ii) the identity of the transferor;

“(iii) the name and address of the party to whom subsequent payments or communications must be sent;

“(iv) the telephone numbers and websites of both the transferor and the transferee;

“(v) the effective date of the sale, transfer, or assignment;

“(vi) the date on which the current servicer will stop accepting payments; and

“(vii) the date on which the transferee servicer will begin accepting payment;

“(B) accept as on-time and may not impose any late fee or finance charge with respect to such student loan for any payment forwarded from the transferor servicer during the 60-day period beginning on the date on which the transferor servicer stops accepting payment, if the transferor servicer received such payment from the borrower on or before the applicable due date, including any grace period;

“(C) provide borrowers a simple, online process for transferring existing electronic fund transfer authority; and “(D) honor any promotion or benefit offered to the borrower or advertised by the previous owner or transferor servicer of such student loan.

“(c) MATERIAL CHANGE IN MAILING ADDRESS OR PROCEDURE FOR HANDLING PAYMENTS.—If a servicer makes a change in the mailing address, office, or procedures for handling payments with respect to any student loan, and such change causes a delay in the crediting of the account of the borrower made during the 60-day period following the date on which such change took effect, the servicer may not impose any late fee or finance charge for a late payment on such student loan.

“(d) ELIGIBILITY FOR DISCHARGE.—The Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary, shall promulgate rules requiring lenders and servicers to—

“(1) identify and contact borrowers who may be eligible for student loan discharge by the Secretary;

“(2) provide the borrower, in writing, in simple and understandable terms, information about obtaining such discharge; and

“(3) create a streamlined process for eligible borrowers to apply for and receive such discharge.

“(e) APPLICATION OF PAYMENTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary, shall issue rules for the application of student loan payments that—

“(A) minimizes the amount of fees and interest incurred by the borrower and the total loan amount paid by the borrower;

“(B) minimizes delinquencies, assignments to collection, and charge offs;

“(C) requires servicers to apply payments on the date received; and “(D) allows the borrower to direct the servicer to apply payments in a manner preferred by the borrower.

“(2) METHOD THAT BEST BENEFITS BORROWER.—In issuing the rules under paragraph (1), the Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau shall choose the application method that best benefits the borrower and is compatible with existing repayment options.

“(f) SERVICEMEMBERS, VETERANS, AND STUDENT LOANS.—

“(1) SERVICEMEMBER AND VETERANS LIAISON.—Each servicer of a student loan shall designate an employee to act as the servicemember and veterans liaison who is responsible for answering inquiries from servicemembers and veterans, and is specially trained on servicemember and veteran benefits and options under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) and other Federal or State laws related to student loans.

“(2) TOLL-FREE TELEPHONE NUMBER.—Each servicer of a student loan shall maintain a toll-free telephone number for the servicemember and veterans liaison designated under paragraph (1), which shall be made available on the primary Internet website of the servicer and on monthly billing statements.

“(3) PROHIBITION ON DEFAULT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a servicer may not report a student loan as delinquent, assigned to collection (internally or by referral to a third party), charged off, or in default, to a credit reporting agency if the borrower is on active duty in the Armed Forces (as defined in section 101(d)(1) of title 10, United States Code) serving in a combat zone (as designated by the President under section 112(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986).

“(4) ADDITIONAL LIAISONS.—The Secretary shall determine additional entities with whom borrowers interact, including guaranty agencies, that shall designate an employee to act as the servicemember and veterans liaison who is responsible for answering inquiries from servicemembers and veterans, and is specially trained on servicemember and veteran benefits and options under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) and other Federal or State laws related to student loans.

“(g) BORROWER'S LOAN HISTORY.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A servicer of a student loan shall make available through a secure website, or in writing upon request, the loan history of each borrower for each student loan, separately designating—

“(A) payment history;

“(B) loan history, including any forbearances, deferrals, delinquencies, and defaults;

“(C) annual percentage rate history; and “(D) key loan terms, including application of payments to interest, principal, and fees, origination date, principal, capitalized interest, annual percentage rate, including any cap, loan term, and any contractual incentives.

“(2) ORIGINAL DOCUMENTATION.—A servicer shall make available to the borrower, if requested, at no charge, copies of the original loan documents and the promissory note for each student loan.

“(h) ERROR RESOLUTION.—The Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary, shall promulgate rules requiring servicers to establish error resolution procedures to allow borrowers to inquire about errors related to their student loans and obtain timely resolution of such errors.

“(i) ADDITIONAL SERVICING STANDARDS.—The Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary, may establish additional servicing standards to reduce delinquencies, assignments to collection, and defaults, and to ensure borrowers understand their rights and obligations related to their student loans.

“(j) PROMULGATION OF RULES.—The Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary, shall promulgate rules implementing this section.”;

(2) in section 433 (20 U.S.C. 1083)—

(A) in subsection (b)—

(i) in paragraph (12), by striking “and” after the semicolon;

(ii) in paragraph (13), by striking the period at the end and inserting “; and”; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following:

“(14) a statement that—

“(A) the borrower may be entitled to servicemember and veteran benefits under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) and other Federal or State laws; and

“(B) a Servicemember and Veterans Liaison designated under section 493E(f) is available to answer inquiries about servicemember and veteran benefits, including the toll-free telephone number to contact the Liaison pursuant to section 493E(f).”; and

(B) in subsection (e)—

(i) in paragraph (2), by adding at the end the following:

“(D) A statement that—

“(i) the borrower may be entitled to servicemember and veteran benefits under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) and other Federal or State laws; and

“(ii) a Servicemember and Veterans Liaison designated under section 493E(f) is available to answer inquiries about servicemember and veteran benefits, including the toll-free telephone number to contact the Liaison pursuant to section 493E(f).”; and

(ii) in paragraph (3), by adding at the end the following:

“(F) A statement that—

“(i) the borrower may be entitled to servicemember and veteran benefits under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) and other Federal or State laws; and

“(ii) a Servicemember and Veterans Liaison designated under section 493E(f) is available to answer inquiries about servicemember and veteran benefits, including the toll-free telephone number to contact the Liaison pursuant to section 493E(f).”; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following:

“(4) NOTIFICATION OF REPAYMENT OPTIONS AND ALTERNATIVES TO DEFAULT.—The Secretary shall require eligible lenders to, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Student Loan Borrower Bill of Rights—

“(A) notify borrowers, in writing, in simple and understandable terms, about alternative repayment options, including income-based repayment, income contingent repayment, consolidation, and forgiveness options, as well as servicemember or veteran benefits under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. 501 et seq.) or other Federal or State laws;

“(B) provide borrowers, in writing, in simple and understandable terms, information about alternative repayment plans, including all terms, conditions, and fees or costs associated with such repayment plans in a format that allows the borrower to compare the current repayment plan with alternative repayment plans; and

“(C) offer to enroll such borrowers in alternative repayment plans, if eligible.”; and

(3) in section 455(d) (20 U.S.C. 1087e(d)), by adding at the end the following:

“(6) NOTIFICATION OF REPAYMENT OPTIONS.—The Secretary shall carry out, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Student Loan Borrower Bill of Rights, the activities described in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of section 433(e)(4) with respect to loans made under this part.”.

SEC. 4. KNOW BEFORE YOU OWE.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO THE TRUTH IN LENDING ACT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 128(e) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1638(e)), as amended by section 2, is further amended—

(A) by striking paragraph (3) and inserting the following:

“(3) INSTITUTIONAL CERTIFICATION REQUIRED.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), before a creditor may issue any funds with respect to an extension of credit described in this subsection, the creditor shall obtain from the relevant institution of higher education where such loan is to be used for a student, such institution's certification of—

“(i) the enrollment status of the student;

“(ii) the student's cost of attendance at the institution as determined by the institution under part F of title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965; and

“(iii) the difference between—

“(I) such cost of attendance; and “(II) the student's estimated financial assistance, including such assistance received under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 and other financial assistance known to the institution, as applicable.

“(B) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a creditor may issue funds, not to exceed the amount described in subparagraph (A)(iii), with respect to an extension of credit described in this subsection without obtaining from the relevant institution of higher education such institution's certification if such institution fails to provide within 15 business days of the creditor's request for such certification—

“(i) notification of the institution's refusal to certify the request; or “(ii) notification that the institution has received the request for certification and will need additional time to comply with the certification request.

“(C) LOANS DISBURSED WITHOUT CERTIFICATION.—If a creditor issues funds without obtaining a certification, as described in subparagraph (B), such creditor shall report the issuance of such funds in a manner determined by the Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau.”; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

“(16) PROVISION OF INFORMATION.—

“(A) PROVISION OF INFORMATION TO STUDENTS.—

“(i) LOAN STATEMENT.—A creditor that issues any funds with respect to an extension of credit described in this subsection shall send loan statements, where such loan is to be used for a student, to borrowers of such funds not less than once every 3 months during the time that such student is enrolled at an institution of higher education.

“(ii) CONTENTS OF LOAN STATEMENT.—Each statement described in clause (i) shall—

“(I) report the borrower’s total remaining debt to the creditor, including accrued but unpaid interest and capitalized interest;

“(II) report any debt increases since the last statement; and “(III) list the current interest rate for each loan.

“(B) NOTIFICATION OF LOANS DISBURSED WITHOUT CERTIFICATION.—On or before the date a creditor issues any funds with respect to an extension of credit described in this subsection, the creditor shall notify the relevant institution of higher education, in writing, of the amount of the extension of credit and the student on whose behalf credit is extended. The form of such written notification shall be subject to the regulations of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau.

“(C) ANNUAL REPORT.—A creditor that issues funds with respect to an extension of credit described in this subsection shall prepare and submit an annual report to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau containing the required information about private student loans to be determined by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary of Education.”.

(2) DEFINITION OF PRIVATE EDUCATION LOAN.—Section 140(a)(7)(A) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1650(a)(7)(A)) is amended—

(A) by redesignating clause (ii) as clause (iii);

(B) in clause (i), by striking “and” after the semicolon; and

(C) by adding after clause (i) the following:

“(ii) is not made, insured, or guaranteed under title VII or title VIII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 292 et seq. and 296 et seq.); and”.

(3) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 365 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau shall issue regulations in final form to implement paragraphs (3) and (16) of section 128(e) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1638(e)), as amended by paragraph (1). Such regulations shall become effective not later than 6 months after their date of issuance.

(b) AMENDMENTS TO THE HIGHER EDUCATION ACT OF 1965.—

(1) PROGRAM PARTICIPATION AGREEMENTS.—Section 487(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1094(a)) is amended by striking paragraph (28) and inserting the following:

“(28)(A) Upon the request of a private educational lender, acting in connection with an application initiated by a borrower for a private education loan in accordance with section 128(e)(3) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1638(e)(3)), the institution shall within 15 days of receipt of a certification request—

“(i) provide such certification to such private educational lender—

“(I) that the student who initiated the application for the private education loan, or on whose behalf the application was initiated, is enrolled or is scheduled to enroll at the institution;

“(II) of such student’s cost of attendance at the institution as determined under part F of this title; and

“(III) of the difference between—“(aa) the cost of attendance at the institution; and

“(bb) the student’s estimated financial assistance received under this title and other assistance known to the institution, as applicable;

“(ii) notify the creditor that the institution has received the request for certification and will need additional time to comply with the certification request; or

“(iii) provide notice to the private educational lender of the institution’s refusal to certify the private education loan under subparagraph (D).

“(B) With respect to a certification request described in subparagraph (A), and prior to providing such certification under subparagraph (A)(i) or providing notice of the refusal to provide certification under subparagraph (A)(iii), the institution shall—

“(i) determine whether the student who initiated the application for the private education loan, or on whose behalf the application was initiated, has applied for and exhausted the Federal financial assistance available to such student under this title and inform the student accordingly; and

“(ii) provide the borrower whose loan application has prompted the certification request by a private education lender, as described in subparagraph (A)(i), with the following information and disclosures:

“(I) The availability of, and the borrower’s potential eligibility for, Federal financial assistance under this title, including disclosing the terms, conditions, interest rates, and repayment options and programs of Federal student loans.

“(II) The borrower’s ability to select a private educational lender of the borrower’s choice.

“(III) The impact of a proposed private education loan on the borrower’s potential eligibility for other financial assistance, including Federal financial assistance under this title.

“(IV) The borrower’s right to accept or reject a private education loan within the 30-day period following a private educational lender’s approval of a borrower’s application and about a borrower’s 3-day right to cancel period.

“(C) For purposes of this paragraph, the terms ‘private educational lender’ and ‘private education loan’ have the meanings given such terms in section 140 of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1650).

“(D)(i) An institution shall not provide a certification with respect to a private education loan under this paragraph unless the private education loan includes terms that provide—

“(I) the borrower alternative repayment plans, including loan consolidation or refinancing; and “(II) that the liability to repay the loan shall be cancelled upon the death or disability of the borrower or co-borrower.

“(ii) In this paragraph, the term ‘disability’ means a permanent and total disability, as determined in accordance with the regulations of the Secretary of Education, or a determination by the Secretary of Veterans that the borrower is unemployed due to a service connected disability.”.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect on the effective date of the regulations described in subsection (a)(3).

(3) PREFERRED LENDER ARRANGEMENT.—Section 151(8)(A)(ii) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1019(8)(A)(ii)) is amended by inserting “certifying,” after “promoting.”.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 24 months after the issuance of regulations under subsection (a)(3), the Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and the Secretary of Education shall jointly submit to Congress a report on the compliance of institutions of higher education and private educational lenders with section 128(e)(3) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1638(e)), as amended by subsection (a), and section 487(a)(28) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1094(a)), as amended by subsection (b). Such report shall include information about the degree to which specific institutions utilize certifications in effectively encouraging the exhaustion of Federal student loan eligibility and lowering student private education loan debt.

SEC. 5. REPORT ON STUDENT LOAN SERVICERS.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall submit a report to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate, the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate, the Committee on Financial Services of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Education and the Workforce of the House of Representatives on private and Federal student loan servicers, including—

(1) any legislative recommendations to improve student loan servicing standards; and

(2) information on proactive early intervention methods by servicers to help distressed student loan borrowers enroll in any eligible repayment plans.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 317—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE ON THE CONTINUING RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GEORGIA

Mr. SESSIONS (for himself and Mrs. SHAHEEN) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 317

Whereas Georgia is a highly valued partner of the United States and has repeatedly demonstrated its commitment to advancing the mutual interests of both countries, including through the deployment of Georgian forces as part of the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) in Afghanistan, where Georgia is currently the largest non-NATO contributor and serving without caveats in Helmand Province, and the Multi-National Force in Iraq;

Whereas, contrary to international law and the 2008 ceasefire agreement between Russia and Georgia, Russian forces have constructed barriers, including barbed wire and fences, along the administrative boundary line for the South Ossetia region of Georgia;

Whereas this “borderization” is inconsistent with Russia’s international commitments under the August 2008 ceasefire agreement, is contrary to Georgia’s sovereignty and territorial integrity, creates hardship and significant negative impacts for populations on both sides of these barriers, and is detrimental to long-term conflict resolution;

Whereas the peaceful transfer of power as the result of the October 2012 parliamentary elections in Georgia represents a major accomplishment toward the creation by the people of Georgia of a free society and full democracy;

Whereas the presidential election of October 2013 marks another step in this transition to a free and open democracy in Georgia;

Whereas international election observers from the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) concluded that the election “was efficiently administered, transparent, and took place in an amicable and constructive environment [. . .]. Fundamental freedoms of expression, movement and assembly were respected, and candidates were able to campaign without restriction. [. . .] A wide range of views and information was made available to voters through the media, providing candidates with a platform to present their programmes and opinions freely”;

Whereas such election conduct is consistent with actions that demonstrate progress toward a mature and free democracy; and

Whereas, on November 29, 2013, Georgia initiated an Association Agreement with the European Union (EU), making Georgia a member of the Deep and Comprehensive Free Trade Area, removing significant trade restrictions with the European Union, and signifying an important preliminary step towards the signing and eventual implementation of the Association Agreement by all European Union members states and Georgia: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) declares that the United States supports the sovereignty, independence, and territorial integrity of Georgia and the inviolability of its internationally recognized borders, and expresses concerns over the continued occupation of the Georgian regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia by the Russian Federation;

(2) encourages the President to enhance defense cooperation efforts with Georgia;

(3) supports the efforts of the Government of Georgia to protect its government, people, sovereignty, and territorial integrity within its internationally recognized borders;

(4) reaffirms its support for Georgia's NATO membership aspirations, congratulates the Government of Georgia on the steps it has taken to further its integration with NATO, and commends the determination of the Government of Georgia to maintain its troop contribution to International Security Assistance Force and its willingness to extend its mission in Afghanistan beyond 2014;

(5) congratulates the Government and people of Georgia on the presidential election of October 27, 2013, commends the Government and people of Georgia on a peaceful and democratic transfer of power, and encourages all parties to work together constructively to maintain continued movement toward a free and democratic society;

(6) strongly encourages the Government of Georgia to defend the rule of law, improve the independence of the judiciary, and protect the rights of political opposition—all essential components of a free and open democracy and which can and should be demonstrated in the upcoming 2014 local elections;

(7) strongly supports a United States and international election monitoring mission for this final phase of Georgia's election cycle;

(8) further encourages the Government of Georgia to refrain from politically motivated arrests and prosecutions;

(9) affirms that the path to lasting stability in this region is through peaceful means and long-term diplomatic and political dialogue; and

(10) remains committed to assisting the people of Georgia in their efforts to establish an enduring democratic society with strong institutions within the rule of law.

SENATE RESOLUTION 318—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE CRITICAL NEED FOR POLITICAL REFORM IN BANGLADESH, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. DURBIN (for himself, Mr. ENZI, and Mr. MURPHY) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 318

Whereas the nation of Bangladesh was established in 1971 after a bitter war in which it split from Pakistan, and for many of the ensuing years until 1990, it was ruled by military governments;

Whereas political tensions have at times turned to violence in Bangladesh, undermining the democratic process;

Whereas the last parliamentary elections in Bangladesh originally scheduled for January 2007, were postponed indefinitely after the military intervened amid rising violence and questions about the electoral process's credibility;

Whereas a military-backed civilian caretaker government held power until December 2008 when Bangladeshis returned to the polls to elect a new parliament for the first time in many years;

Whereas ongoing antagonism between the country's two ruling parties, the Awami League and the Bangladesh Nationalist Party, distracts from the important needs of the country;

Whereas concerns have grown about religious extremism in the otherwise usually tolerant country;

Whereas the United States-Bangladesh relationship is strong and involves many shared interests, including regional economic integration, counterterrorism, counter-piracy, poverty alleviation, food security, regional stability, and mitigation of natural disasters;

Whereas bilateral trade between the United States and Bangladesh now tops $6,000,000,000 annually, with major United States companies making significant long-term investments in Bangladesh;

Whereas the economy of Bangladesh has grown six percent per year over the last two decades, despite a range of challenges;

Whereas the poverty rate in Bangladesh dropped from 40 percent to 31 percent between 2005 and 2010—a notable accomplishment in a country in which poverty has been deep and widespread;

Whereas the Grameen Bank's revolutionary microfinance lending to the poor has helped reduce poverty not only in Bangladesh, but has served as an innovative and powerful model for helping the poor elsewhere in the world;

Whereas the Department of State, Congress, and other high profile international voices have recognized the Grameen Bank's innovative work and expressed great concern over actions by the Government of Bangladesh that undermine the Bank's independence;

Whereas Bangladesh, an example of a moderate and diverse Muslim-majority democracy, is scheduled to have national elections on January 5, 2014;

Whereas, in 2013, hundreds of Bangladeshis died in violent clashes as a result of political violence and unrest, and some opposition and human rights activists have been arrested;

Whereas trials held by the International Crimes Tribunal in Bangladesh—set up to prosecute those responsible for atrocities committed during Bangladesh's war of liberation with Pakistan in 1971—have fallen short of international standards;

Whereas the Government of Bangladesh eliminated a constitutional provision requiring the governing party to cede power to a neutral caretaker government three months before an election;

Whereas the 18-member opposition coalition in Bangladesh called for numerous nationwide strikes and transportation blockades in 2013, resulting in dozens of deaths;

Whereas Bangladeshi students cannot attend school and complete mandatory exams due to the strikes and blockades and related violence;

Whereas many citizens of Bangladesh have had their work and daily activities disrupted due to the strikes and related violence, which come at a cost to the economy and stability of Bangladesh;

Whereas a stable, moderate, secular, Muslim-majority democracy with the world's seventh-largest population, and the world's fourth-largest Muslim population, will have lasting positive impacts in the region and beyond;

Whereas the success of the democratic process in Bangladesh is of great importance to the United States and the world; and

Whereas during the week of December 8, 2013, United Nations Assistant Secretary General Oscar Fernandez-Taranco visited Bangladesh to foster political dialogue between Bangladeshi political parties and leaders in order to bring a halt to violence and allow for a credible peaceful election: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) condemns the political violence in Bangladesh and urges political leaders in that country to engage directly and substantively in a dialogue toward free, fair, and credible elections;

(2) expresses great concern about the continued political deadlock in Bangladesh that distracts from the country's many important challenges;

(3) urges political leaders in Bangladesh to take immediate steps to rein in and to condemn the violence as well as to provide space for peaceful political protests;

(4) urges political leaders in Bangladesh to ensure the safety and access of observers in its upcoming elections;

(5) supports ongoing efforts by United Nations Assistant Secretary General Oscar Fernandez-Taranco to foster political dialogue between political factions in Bangladesh; and

(6) urges the Government of Bangladesh to ensure judicial independence, end harassment of human rights activists, and restore the independence of the Grameen Bank.

NOMINATION OF CHAI RACHEL FELDBLUM TO BE A MEMBER OF THE EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the nomination.

The assistant bill clerk read the nomination of Chai Rachel Feldblum, of the District of Columbia, to be a Member of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission for a term expiring July 1, 2018.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will now be up to 8 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination equally divided in the usual form.

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Madam President, it is my understanding that if I yield back 40 minutes, the vote will occur at 9 a.m. tomorrow morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. REID. I yield back 40 minutes of the Democrats' time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time is so yielded.

The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. FLAKE. Madam President, I rise to address the nomination and some other issues.

I want to say a few words about nominations. The Senate just confirmed President Obama's third nominee to the D.C. Circuit this year, and did so without the support of a single Senator from the minority party.

I have only been in the Senate for a year, but I understand the importance of minority rights and the moderating effect that the minority has on the nominations and on legislation as a whole. Requiring the support of at least some of the minority Senators encourages both the nomination and appointment of more mainstream nominees.

I think in the case of executive nominees, it ensures the heads of executive agencies are responsible to both the minority and majority parties. Minority input reinforces the separation of powers and safeguards the ability of Congress to conduct effective oversight.

Let me give a couple examples of where I think this is important and something we have lost once the nuclear option was employed with regard to executive appointments.

Earlier this year we had the appointment of a person to head the Environmental Protection Agency. It is an extremely important agency. It is important to Arizona—particularly since Arizona has a lot of Federal, State, and public lands—where actions of the Federal Government are perhaps amplified, and so that was an extremely important appointment. I ended up voting for Gina McCarthy. I think she is a good nominee.

I understand that the President won the election, and he has the power to appoint his people and his team. Unless there are extraordinary circumstances, he ought to have that right. I have voted for nearly all of his nominees.

In this case, the head of the Environmental Protection Agency, while she was the nominee she knew she needed 60 votes. She knew she ought to see not just the Members of the majority party but those in the minority as well, and she made the rounds to my office as well as others.

We had a good meeting. For example, I explained the importance of the dust regulations that are promulgated by the EPA where Arizona has a problem. We have occasional dust storms that are not recognized as such, and sometimes we have to fill out paperwork that is costly and time consuming just to convince the Federal Government that an occasional dust storm does blow through. It has nothing to do with the air quality protections or provisions that have been put in place but just because of the conditions on the ground. The Environmental Protection Agency's guidance and regulations have not caught up to that.

She was understanding of that. She worked at the State level and agreed to talk to the stakeholders and interested parties in Arizona about this issue. She made good on that promise. We had that conference call a few weeks later, and it was the first time that many of these people in Arizona had been heard on the issue. They had a good meeting with the EPA, and I think it will lead to better regulations coming out of the EPA.

That was a product of the process we had here which requires nominees from the President to not just go to the majority party, but to go to the minority party as well. I fear that has been lost, and I think that is a shame. I wish we could go back to the system we had and the system the Senate has operated on for a long time.

When I gave my maiden speech on the floor a few months ago, I mentioned that the party holding the gavel is on a short leash. Bringing even the most noncontroversial resolutions to the Senate floor requires the agreement, or at least the acquiescence, of the minority party. I mentioned at that time that over the past decade both parties have chafed under these arrangements. Both parties have, at times, considered changing the rules that would in some measure make the Senate more like the House. I mentioned at that time, up to that time, that both parties had resisted that urge. They had been convinced by their own Members and others that it wasn't the way to go. Unfortunately, that is no longer the case, and I think this body, this institution will be the poorer for it. I hope we can return to the traditions of the Senate, one where consensus is the hallmark of this body. I hope we can get there.

Let me turn my attention to one of the issues that I think is a good example of what happens when one party moves legislation through this body too quickly, without consultations from the other party. It has to do with the Affordable Care Act. The Affordable Care Act passed with not a single Republican vote in the House or in the Senate. I think it is a good example of what can happen if legislation is rushed through without consultation or input from both parties.

Let me speak about some of the issues that have come up with the Affordable Care Act, better known as ObamaCare. The Wall Street Journal had an editorial the other day that talked about some of the issues that are going on with the enrollment data. It says:

Most of Washington seems to have bought the White House claim that 36 federal exchanges are finally working. . . .

They go on to explain what working really means:

A charitable reading suggests that ObamaCare's net enrollment stands at about negative four million. That's the estimated four million to five and a half million people who had their individual plans liquidated as ObamaCare-noncompliant—

They are liquidated because they were noncompliant with ObamaCare—offset by about 364,682 who have signed up for a plan on a state or federal exchange and the 803,077 who have been found to be eligible to receive Medicaid.

So if we take that and net it out, it means that net enrollment—people who now are covered by insurance of some type—has gone down by about 4 million. I think when we consider things are picking up in terms of people signing up, they are still being dropped far faster from private insurance plans than they are being picked up.

It goes on, this editorial from the Wall Street Journal, saying:

HHS is boasting of enrollment for November that was four times as high as October, yet 62 percent of the total was in the state exchanges, some of which are marginally less prone to crashing than the federal version. Then again, 41 states posted sign-ups only in the three or four figures, including eight states that run their own exchanges. Oregon managed to scrape up 44 people. Among the 137,204 federal sign-ups, no state is reaching the critical mass necessary for stable insurance prices.

One problem they mention as well is that these figures are probably misleading. They say:

A larger problem is that none of these represent true enrollments. HHS is reporting how many people “selected” a plan on the exchange, not how many people have actually enrolled in the plan with an insurance company by paying the first month’s premium, which is how the private insurance industry defines enrollment. HHS has made up its own standard.

I think when we find out that there is probably a pretty large dropoff between those who actually enroll and those who actually sign up, then they will realize these figures are misleading as well.

Let me turn to another related issue. Michael Tanner of the Cato Institute had a piece the other day where he said:

The good news, if you want to call it that, is that roughly 1.6 million Americans have been enrolled in ObamaCare so far.

The not-so-good news is that 1.46 million of them actually signed up for Medicaid. If that trend continues, it could bankrupt both federal and state governments.

He notes:

Medicaid is already America’s third-largest government program, trailing only Social Security and Medicare, as a proportion of the federal budget. Almost 8 cents out of every dollar that the federal government spends goes to Medicaid. That’s more than $265 billion per year.

As these Medicaid rolls expand, we know that is going to be a huge expense and probably a greater number of people signing up than anybody we thought would do. The Federal Government has committed to pick up 100 percent of the cost of new enrollees for a 3-year period, and then 90 percent thereafter. If the Federal Government makes good on that pledge, it may cost us a lot more than we figured, and it will increase the budget pressure on the Federal Government. If the Federal Government does what it often does and shifts those costs to the States, then the States are going to need to be prepared for a big increase as well.

Mr. Tanner mentions:

State governments pay another $160 billion for Medicaid today. For most states, Medicaid is the single-largest cost of government, crowding out education, transportation and everything else.

New York spent more than $15 billion on Medicaid last year, roughly 30 percent of all state expenditures. The Kaiser Foundation projects that over the next 10 years, New York taxpayers will shell out some $433 billion for the program.

There are going to be increasing pressures on State budgets as well.

So these are some of the things we haven’t considered yet.

As we go into the new year, the next big shoe to drop will be in April or so when insurance companies actually see who is enrolling and who is not in the exchanges. I think everyone’s fear is that there are too few healthy 28-year-olds signing up and more who are more high-cost enrollees and the numbers just will not add up and the insurance companies will be forced to jack up their rates, which will make insurance even less affordable than it is today and could increase the pressures we are talking about both on the Federal Government, on State governments, and, most importantly, on families across the country.

I found of interest today a story by CNN. CNN looked at four stories after the ObamaCare so-called fix. They concluded in their headline “many are still left out.” Let me discuss briefly a couple of these and it gives some idea of what families are facing. This is exactly what I am hearing at home from neighbors and family and friends and exactly what I am experiencing enrolling in the Federal exchange as well—these kinds of cost increases. It reads:

In the face of mounting criticism, President Barack Obama announced last month that he would allow insurance companies to renew so-called “subpar” plans for existing customers. But nearly a month later, not everyone is seeing the benefit of this policy change.

They note that they spoke to four people in the days and weeks following the President’s announcement to see how they have been affected. The results were varied, and for some of them the future remains uncertain.

When we read through the stories it seems for everyone it is a pretty uncertain and more costly future.

The first person they talk to is a woman by the name of Catherine. She said it is a 280-percent increase in premiums for her family.

It was in September when Catherine received her letter. The much-maligned HealthCare.gov Web site had yet to be launched and approval ratings for the President’s signature health care law were on the upswing.

Catherine knew she would have to sign up for a new insurance plan but didn’t expect her options to be so costly. She is a mom and a Navy veteran employed part-time as a nurse. Her husband is a small business owner. Her employer offers insurance plans but because she was not working full-time, getting a policy to cover her family of three was expensive. Unfortunately for her, a provision in the new health care law states that since her company offers plans that she could afford to cover herself but not her family, she does not qualify for a subsidy from the Federal Government, even though she is below the income threshold. She is, therefore, subject to an unusual loophole that requires her to pay the full premium of a new policy if she wants to cover her family or leave her job to get the subsidy.

So we are seeing a huge increase in premiums. She experienced a 280-percent increase in premiums. That mirrors what I have been hearing from others as well.

Greg and Linda live just down the street from me at home. I got an email from Greg, a friend of ours, the other day. He said that he and Linda, who are near 60 years old, had their insurance canceled because it was noncompliant with the new law. They went out and shopped on the exchange and found that the cheapest policy or the policy that most closely mirrored theirs—actually not as good as theirs but most closely mirrored theirs—was double their previous cost to more than $800 a month. That is what I am hearing again and again and again. When we read through these stories, we see it again and again.

Here is another one, again from the CNN story:

By most people’s standards, Valentina Holroyd is in excellent health. She works out six to seven days a week and competes in triathlons with a group of equally high-energy friends. She participates in 10 or 12 races a year. She is a moderate Democrat who hoped that this new law would help people with preexisting conditions such as her husband get access to insurance and would allow people who could not afford insurance to get plans within their reach.

It goes on to say that she had a plan, but then everything changed in October. She was notified by her insurer that her plan could not be renewed for 2014. The comparable plan offered was a 29-percent increase in premiums with higher copays as well as significantly higher prescription drug costs.

The people I talk to, virtually all of them, are saying not only is there an increase in premiums but there are higher copays, higher max out-of-pocket costs. It is just not as affordable as it was before.

I think the fear all of us have is that as we go into the new year and we see the numbers of those who are actually signing up or not signing up, it simply means that rates are going to go up again and again. Once the employer mandate kicks in and a lot of businesses then unload their employees into the exchange, we are simply going to see the same problem. Only those who can afford it or those who are more expensive to insure will be signing up, by and large, and too few healthy individuals to lower the cost for everyone in a high pool, so costs will simply go up again.

We can’t have this go on for very much longer. This is called the Affordable Care Act, but I think most of us are finding it is anything but.

Let me just go to one more of these stories while I have time. This is a Connecticut psychologist by the name of Martin Klein, and he is someone who has had plenty of experiences dealing with insurance companies. He has been practicing in the State for 11 years, runs two offices.

Anthem Blue Cross Blue Shield sent him a letter notifying him that his plan would no longer be offered for renewal when it expires in January. They said he needed to shop on the exchange. He goes on to explain that it is simply not as affordable as his old plan.

As we go along in this coming year, we have to find out how we can actually make good on the promise that was given to have health care that is actually accessible and affordable for those who can't access it now. We all know the current system doesn't work very well. It needs to be changed. But change in this matter simply means that more people are uninsured and unsure about the future as well.

I appreciate the opportunity to be here and speak about this tonight and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DONNELLY). The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, good morning, Wyoming. In Wyoming it is midnight right now. I suspect there are people watching and probably wondering what the heck is going on. We are here at this hour dealing with a nonessential distraction, and it is being done so that it is a distraction from the mounting ObamaCare problems.

None of these nominees need to be confirmed, not even the circuit court judges, and maybe especially the circuit court judges. I was here when President Bush tried to fill those circuit court judges in the D.C. Circuit. And I remember Senator REID and the chairman of the Judiciary Committee making an impassioned speech that they were not needed, that the workload was too low in the District of Columbia, that they should not be approved. Of course, since they were in the majority, they had the capability to ever keep that from happening. But when the shoe is on the other foot, they need those D.C. court judges, even though the caseload has not gone up.

So they broke the rules to change the rules, and part of that was so that—we are calling it ObamaCare 2—it was so that the American people would be distracted from the problems they are having signing up for ObamaCare. Some of my constituents ask that I not call it “ObamaCare.” They ask that I call it “the Obama tax” because that is what the Supreme Court said was the legal part of it, that we can virtually tax anybody anything we want as long as we call it a tax. If we put it in the Commerce clause, oh, that will not work. But that is the ruling we got from the Supreme Court.

So right now the Democrats are trying to distract us from what is going on across this country; and, oh boy, is it going on across this country. So we should be dealing with the problems of ObamaCare. Each day the health care law is going to fail to live up to the promises made by the administration. How many people have heard the President say—and he started doing this clear back in the joint sessions of Congress so he could explain his law—he said: If you like the insurance you have, you can keep it. That has not been true almost since day one. It especially has not been true since some of the regulations have been put in place.

So we have a failed law. Let me tell you how bad it is failing. A couple weekends ago I got to Cheyenne, WY, early enough to address some school kids. I actually read a children's book to the kindergarten classes of the whole school. After I finished, a little girl came up. She could not have been any taller than that, and she said: Are we going to be able to fix this health care mess? When it has gotten down to kindergartners, you know that the adults are talking about it even more.

It is a problem. It is a problem that needs to be solved. We should not be playing “the Grinch that stole Christmas” and doing a whole bunch of non-essential appointments that could well wait until after Christmas or next year without hurting the courts at all. But, again, they want this outcry. They want this to detract from what is happening with ObamaCare.

Millions of people have lost their health care plans that they were told they could keep. Of course, the President has been forced now to admit that he broke his promise. But he did not remove the promise from the White House health care Web site. A week ago, it still said: If you like your plan, you can keep it, and you do not have to do a thing. I guess that might be partly true because he announced a new initiative that he said would really allow people to keep their existing health insurance plans this time. He should have added, if he wanted to be honest: for a short time. Because that is all he gave them. That is not even true because one thing he does not have the power under the Constitution to do is to rewrite or ignore the law.

We passed a law by this body and the House, and he signed it, and he continually talks about how that is settled law and you cannot change it. Then about twice a week he changes it without authority, ignoring the written laws passed by Congress.

So it would also mean that he would have to be willing to ignore a 2010 administration regulation that has prevented insurers from continuing to offer insurance for millions of individuals and small businesses. That is right. At the same time the President was promising out of one side of his mouth that people could keep their health insurance, the other side was approving rules that would make that impossible. Everyone who was in the Senate at the time knew it. It was right there in the Federal Register. It was written by the President's own administration. Congress knew and the administration knew the President was not telling the truth. But he kept making the promise anyway.

When one party has 60 votes in the Senate, the minority party has very limited things that it can do. There are a few exceptions to the majority leader's control. But essentially he decides what the Senate can debate and vote on. I have noticed if an amendment comes up that he does not like, instead of having us vote on it, he pulls the bill down.

Now, that is not the way it used to be. We used to be able to put amendments in, and even if the majority did not like the amendment, we still had to vote on it. Of course, if they did not like it, they voted it down. But that does not happen anymore. A number of bills that we have done around here have been prevented from having amendments, and sometimes this negotiation process that the leader uses takes 2 or 3 weeks. The amendments could be voted on in a week if they were just allowed to be voted on. But this process of negotiating so that he can tell the minority what amendments he is willing to address of ours—that takes away the right for us to represent our constituents.

Problems are different in the West. Problems are different in Wyoming. Problems are different in big cities. You cannot have one size fits all that works for everything. The reason there are so many Members of the Senate and so many Members of the House is so that the unintended consequences might be found before a bill becomes law. That has not been the case around here. That definitely was not the case on ObamaCare.

So the leader has helped the majority to prevent us from being able to bring up any amendments on any number of topics, and that has led to what we are doing tonight. We are taking advantage of some of our rights as the minority to see if we are going to get a chance at all. Nobody ever expected one party to be able to dictate to the other party. Of course, the other side did have 60 votes, and when you have 60 votes you can do anything you want because there is no such thing as a filibuster if you can get all 60 votes.

Of course, you probably remember that the majority had to kind of buy some of those votes. Yes, there was the Nebraska “Cornhusker kickback,” and that Senator decided not to run again, and there has been the “Louisiana Purchase,” and that Senator is up for election. There was the Florida deal and the New York deal that dealt with Medicare Advantage. Now, none of the rest of the States got those deals, and they had to be done. Those are places where there are a lot of seniors, and it was going to take away some of their capability for health care insurance that they already had. In fact, the bill stole $716 billion from Medicare. Medicare is going broke, and it did it to make new programs. It did not do it to fix Medicare.

Tomorrow in the Finance Committee we are going to be marking up a doc fix, a thing so that doctors will be paid adequately, because there was a provision there that will continually reduce the amount they are getting. Of course, as you reduce the amount that a doctor can get, even in times of inflation, pretty quickly the doctors cannot afford to run their practice. When they cannot run their practice, they do not see Medicare patients. In fact, some practices shut down. Others sell out to the hospital. Do you think it is cheaper to get health care from a doctor or health care from a hospital? That drives up the cost again.

So one sure way to inject something not approved by the majority leader is to find an offensive regulation and petition the Senate for a debate and a simple majority vote. We have this thing called the Congressional Review Act, and that is exactly how it works. But you have to keep your eye on the Federal Register because that is where the administration reports what the effects are going to be and what the actual regulations are. Sometimes the regulations have more of an impact than the law itself, and that was the case in this instance. Again, it dealt with this: If you like your health insurance, you can keep it. But there was a regulation that came out in 2010 that took away that right.

Yes, I am the accountant. I read the bills, and now I even have to admit that I read the Federal Register. But there are a lot of dollars that are mentioned in there, and some of those are consequences of the bill. If you can catch one of those regulations within 60 days of the regulation's publication, and you can get enough people to sign the petition, you are guaranteed 8 hours of debate and an up-or-down vote. If you miss that date, it cannot be brought up again, and once it has been brought up, it cannot be brought up again. So if you lose the vote or you lose the opportunity, it cannot be brought up again. That opportunity is gone.

That is an opportunity that Democrats in the Senate squandered. Every single one voted to defeat my resolution, and many ridiculed the effort. Over the next few months their constituents are going to make them answer for this. I can tell, some of them are already antsy over it. They are already drafting bills, and, of course, when you draft a bill in the context of a crisis, there is this legislative rule that if it is worth reacting to, it is worth overreacting to.

So, once again, it is not something that will be brought through the correct process and ironed out so there are not unintended consequences. They will have to pay a price. They need to pay attention when there is a rule that is going to affect people adversely. I have heard their arguments. There were a number of issues in this regulation, and there were two that they thought were good.

There is not any reason they could not have voted for the thing, gotten rid of it, and then brought those two back. That is how it ought to work. I really think that Congress ought to have the right to review every major regulation, and if we do not have a majority vote for that regulation, it should never go into effect.

A lot of the regulations are written by the administration. But the direction for doing the regulation comes from Congress. It is to get into a level of detail that we do not handle here, but maybe we should. Maybe that ought to be our biggest job: to make sure that the regulations are what we want to have happen, and to be sure that the unintended consequences are not even in the regulation. We have kind of given that away. But now we need to be sure we take back some oversight over that; otherwise, you have an administration that is a runaway. And that is the situation we have right now.

I fought against the new health care law for the past 4 years because I knew there was no way the President could keep all of the promises he was making about how the law would affect the average American. As an accountant and a former small business owner, I understood that you cannot mandate that everyone must purchase gold plated health insurance plans without increasing costs and causing millions of people to lose their existing insurance plans.

In fact, I have talked about exchanges, and the exchange that is there is not the one that I envisioned at all. I did not expect that the Federal Government would say: There are only four kinds of plans you can buy. You pick it out from bronze to platinum, but if you do not pick out one of our four plans, you cannot have a plan.

We did prescription Part D, and at that time there were only two companies that were providing seniors with prescription drugs in Wyoming. I was a little worried about what was going to happen if we opened the market a little bit. I was hopeful it would cause more competition, and that is exactly what happened. Instead of 2 companies providing the pharmaceuticals, 48 of them were interested in doing it. That created a little confusion, but there was an exchange that you could go into, and you could list the drugs that you were taking, and when you hit the button it said: These are the companies that can provide that drug, and this is the price that you will have to pay.

Before that went into effect, it saved seniors 25 percent. That is what competition does. That is how the insurance plans should be set up. I have had a 10-step bill since before the President became a Senator that suggested how we could provide insurance for everyone.

Another thing that kind of fascinates me is the President talks about how we eliminated the caps for chronic illnesses so that nobody has to lose their insurance or lose their pay just because they have a chronic illness. Do you know what the flaw in that one is? If you are in Medicare, there are still caps. If you are a senior, there are still caps. We did not remove those. So even that is not a completely true statement.

So there is a little bit more here. If you cannot keep the health plans you like, then you are going to have a tougher time keeping the doctors and the hospitals you like. We are hearing those stories all over the Nation right now. Of course, the biggest problem—and the one that this little kindergarten was raising—was getting on the Web site to even be able to sign up for one of these policies that has more in it than what a family might want, particularly what an individual might want.

There is a lot of discussion on that. But that Web site is just the tip of the iceberg. That is what we have seen so far, the Web site failures. I think a lot of people have noticed that there are some Web site failures out there. In fact, I remember Jay Leno saying: You got to watch these health care sites because there are 700 sites already that are trying to steal your personal information, steal your identity. But he did point out that there is one way to know if you are on one of those phony sites: If you are able to sign up, you are on a phony site.

So, yes, there have been Web site failures. Here is what is coming: higher premiums, canceled coverages, you cannot keep your doctor. If you cannot see your doctor, do you have any insurance at all? I do not think so. And then there is the fraud and identity theft I mentioned and higher copays and deductibles. Pretty universal. There might be a few examples out there of where this has benefited someone, but most of the people are now paying through the nose and finding out that it is very hard for them to be able to afford the insurance they want.

So we should get ready for the next wave of disappointment and frustration from the expectations created by this President and his public relations machine as they come crashing up against the harsh reality of the real world.

ObamaCare casualties will continue to grow even if the President launches media blitz after media blitz—and those cost some money, incidentally—in an attempt to convince people that higher premiums, worse coverage, and a bigger debt for this country is a good thing.

One of the things we were able to get in the bill was a requirement that the Senate and the House come under the same rules as everyone else when it comes to exchanges. That has created quite a bit of consternation around here.

In the committee, it has improved things. I remember that about 4 months ago in the Finance Committee we were having a hearing with the people doing this Web site that has all of the failures. Both sides were asking intense questions because we wanted to be sure this would work.

One of the questions was: How is it coming?

They said: Oh, it is fine. We have already beta-tested it. It will work when it comes to October 1. Everything will work.

Well, I remember Senator BAUCUS saying: Can we get a list of the people who beta-tested it?

To my knowledge, he has never gotten that list because what we found out since is that it had not yet been tested at that time. So would that be considered a lie? I am not sure that all of the hearings are under oath. Maybe they ought to be.

But at any rate, it was not ready. As it turned out, there was 26 hours of beta testing. Talking to some of the other companies that would have liked to have tried to bid for a final project instead of bidding for a cost-plus job—that is what we got, a cost-plus job. Anyway, that complicates it, makes it more expensive, makes them earn more money. Talking to some of those other companies, they said that should have been beta-tested for at least 6 weeks to 6 months. Not only that, they should have had professional hackers trying to get into that system to see what is happening.

We keep having hearings on this issue. I remember at one of them Secretary Sebelius was there. We were asking about the security of the information. I am still trying to figure this out. She said the information goes in there, it pings around to the different people who need it, but none of it is stored on the system. Everybody is saying: So how do you retrieve your records? Well, I guess that is the problem so many Americans are having. They put in their information, they try to retrieve their records, and they cannot get their records. So it is a system that is fraught with a lot of problems and should never have happened. I guess that is what happens when you get in a hurry and you are not ready for it and you are more interested in public relations and media blitzes than you are in getting it right.

I know the President went coast to coast and all over the place and he sent others trying to convince people that higher premiums and worse coverage and a bigger debt for this country is a good thing.

There was another interesting thing at our hearing. They said the premiums came down. So there were some extensive questions about that because there were not very many people who were aware of any of them coming down. The explanation was that the administration's estimate was that the prices would go up by 68 percent and they only went up by 45 percent. So that was a reduction in rates. No, that was an increase in rates. You cannot fool the American people that way. A lot of this is a smoke-and-mirrors attempt. It is not working.

So what is the opposition doing? We are doing a bunch of judges who do not need to be approved. That is to take the attention off ObamaCare. Well, we are not going to let that happen. The American public deserves to know what is happening with ObamaCare. The American public is concerned about it. We have kindergartners concerned about it. We have a lot of people concerned about it.

In fact, we had a cookie party at our office today. My wife bakes a couple thousand cookies every year. It is for the people who do the real work around the Senate. It is for the janitors and the carpenters and the electricians and the plumbers and the guards and people who work in the restaurants, and they all come by. I was surprised at how many of them were concerned about what is happening with their insurance and their ability to get on it. Some of them even recognized the effort I made in 2010 to get the Congressional Review Act—the only window we had to reverse that lie that if you like your insurance, you can keep it.

So during the health care debate, the President and his congressional allies also promised that the new health care law would reduce health insurance premiums for American families. I covered that briefly. I and my colleagues argued that rather than saving money, the new law instead would drive up the cost of insurance for millions of families. There is no way in there to increase the competition. If you are going to increase the competition, you need to have a sale of insurance across State lines and you need people to be able to go through an association to get a big enough group who can effectively negotiate with an insurance company. There are a lot of ways of getting that to increase. That did not happen. There also were some co-ops that were formed. Now it looks as though the money that went to the co-ops may have been money poured down the drain because apparently they are not doing too well. So the disastrous planning and implementation of the healthcare.gov Web site made it difficult for Americans to learn just how much this partisan law has driven up costs.

We warned, when it was 60 votes that could pass the whole thing, that if the 60 votes passed the whole thing without a single Republican vote, they would be stuck with it. That is exactly where the majority is at the present time—stuck with it.

So people are learning how much their premiums are increasing. The more they do, the more people will not appreciate how the President's promise failed to reflect the reality of the new health care law. I think they really thought they might get to just kind of pick what they needed and find out what the cost was. That was my idea for how we ought to do it. I presented that at the summit with the President. He invited several of us after the bill passed. He should have done it before the bill passed, but he did it after the bill passed. A dozen of us and a dozen Democrats got invited to the Blair House to tell him what we thought should be in the bill. The strange thing about that was every time Republicans threw out an idea, he chopped it to bits. He did not comment on the Democratic ones. At the end of the day he gave a speech he had obviously written the day before because it did not deal with any of the ideas we had discussed on either side of the aisle. He obviously rejected every one of the Republican ideas.

I talked about exchanges and said: You should be able to go online, have a list of insurance possibilities. You could check whatever possibility you thought you needed. One of the things they talked about is if you are a 60-year-old lady who has had a hysterectomy, you probably do not need maternity care, so you would not check that box. But you would check the boxes that you thought applied, that you would really like to have. Then when you hit the "enter" key, it would bring up the list of the companies that would provide exactly what you wanted and tell you what the cost would be. You would not have to sit down with a dozen or two dozen insurance agents and hear their pitch for why they are the best. You would be able to tell what you wanted, and then you would be able to see who provided it and what it would cost. Then you would have choices. That would inspire competition, partly because each of the companies would know what the other companies were selling things for. That sometimes brings prices down as well.

So we had disastrous planning and implementation. People are starting to learn how much their premiums are increasing.

The President and his allies also promised that the new law would improve the economy and protect Medicare beneficiaries. I have often been wondering how that would work. We now know that the small businesses across the country are not hiring workers because of the impact of the health care law and the impact it will have on the bottom line.

I am traveling Wyoming, and I run into a guy who says: You know, I have this great business. It is time for me to expand. In this town I want to go to, there is a phenomenal location. It is the perfect location and the price is right. Should I expand?

One of the questions that I ask is, How many employees do you have? If he says 45 to 50, I say: I would take another look at it because you better see the effects ObamaCare is going to have on what you are trying to do. In most of those instances, they have not increased. There are a number of problems like that.

I was in a small business committee hearing. I was kind of wondering what "aggregation" meant. That is a pretty big word to use. But they were able to explain aggregation. An aggregation means this rule that if you work under 30 hours, you are considered part time. So we changed it from being under 40 hours to being under 30 hours before it was part time, and that has caused a lot of people to take two jobs and not get benefits from either of the jobs. So they are getting a reduction in pay because of this law.

But here is the kicker. That doesn't help the small businessman anyway. Here is how aggregation works. You have 10 employees at 29 hours; that is 290 hours. You divide by 30, and then you find out that you still have 9 2/3 employees. So by making this drastic cut, you were only able to reduce your numbers by one-third of an employee. Again, that is kind of a fraudulent situation to rope people into doing the ObamaCare thing.

Another way that aggregation works, according to this hearing I went to, is that if you own a piece of one business and you own a piece of another business but you do not own a majority of either of the businesses, the two have to be combined to figure out whether you have employees who come under ObamaCare. That is wrong. That is fraud.

These things ought to be very clear. I think that if we were able to get a vote on raising that part-time work back up to 40 hours, we would see a huge number of people who would vote for it or a huge number of people who would not be around here much longer. Of course, the Small Business Administration says that a small business is not 50 employees, a small business is 500 employees.

So just by changing those two things in ObamaCare, we could probably have more jobs in the economy than the stimulus package ever provided. There are other changes we could make in ObamaCare that would have a bigger effect than the stimulus package. Oh, yes, that is right, that is not a very high mountain to climb, is it?

Another thing we ought to do is eliminate some of the regulations that have been put out there. I know of six regulations that if we got rid of them, it would not affect our way of life, but it would increase jobs and the economy more than the stimulus. We could have an increase in the economy around here, but we cannot do it if we keep loading up the businesses with more regulations. You know we had a government shutdown not too long ago.

I got an interesting letter from a trucker from Pinedale, WY. He said he was getting a little tired of all of the people who were riding in the wagon and how many fewer people were pulling the wagon. What he is referring to with that is that every time we expand the government, every time we do one of those new programs and put a whole bunch of new people on the payroll—heck, we got a whole bunch more just in IRS people who are supposed to be checking on ObamaCare. If you put them in the wagon and the private sector has to pull it, there will come a point where they cannot pull it anymore.

What he was suggesting was that if we wanted to really find out about America, that the private sector ought to have a shutdown. It would not take 16 days for us to realize the effect of the private market. That is something we have to watch out for because that is where the taxes come from.

Oh, yes, all of us in government pay taxes. None of us pay as much in taxes as we receive in wages. We are riding in the wagon, and it is getting tougher and tougher to pull.

ObamaCare is something that really loaded the wagon with the regulations they have to pull around. It is a tremendous burden. A small businessman can't read the thousands of pages of regulations. Do you know what. They have to.

I was able to get a review committee, and it was over $1 million in costs in new regulations. That is a very severe committee. They do a very good job. I am pleased with the people who run it. Unfortunately, again we are missing an enforcement piece, so that again the regulation disappears for small businessmen. It is going to be very detrimental.

We try to do these one-size-fits-all things around here, which is what ObamaCare is. Well, it is four-sizes-fit-all. One-size-fits-all or four-sizes-fit-all won't take care of America. This is probably the most diverse country in the whole world and the most successful country in the whole world because it is so diverse. We have so many different kinds of people doing so many different things.

It has also been one of the most innovative countries in the world, and that is where we want be. We want to be inventing things for the world and having the other countries pick them up when they get a little older and steal them at that point. That is the way it has always worked. But we are taking away the incentives for these people to use their minds to create new things that will sell all over the world the way we are used to it. That is what has brought prosperity to the United States—inventiveness. We invented a new government, and it has worked very well up to now. We have invented all kinds of things from which the world has benefited. We need to make sure that what we do encourages that instead of discourages it.

This thing that the government knows best—I don't run into many people who think that is right. Most of them think the government doesn't have enough experience in business.

I go back to Wyoming almost every weekend, and I travel to a different part of the State. Over the weekend I try to get into a business or two. I try to find out what they do, how they do it, and, most importantly, how the Federal Government might interfere or help them. It is very valuable. I have found that if a person hasn't been in business, every business looks simple.

We should look at how people look at our jobs. It looks very simple. They don't expect that anybody is going to be speaking at 2:30 in the morning. They think all we do is vote, which is not true. We have to draft bills. But it is more difficult in the private sector than it is in government because people's wages, people's food, and people's housing rely on that business paying them.

Among the small business committee—and I keep explaining that one really hasn't been in business unless they wake straight up in the middle of the night in a sweat, saying: Tomorrow is payday. How do I meet the payroll? That is being in business, and it happens to every small businessman out there once in a while. For some of them, it is the end of that small business.

We have to watch out for those small businesses because those are the ones that grow into big businesses. Those are the ones that become a part of the world market. There is more opportunity for that now more than there ever was, but there won't be if we keep stifling them, if we keep piling regulations on so they spend all of their time reading the regulations that we did. Thousands of pages of regulations are turned out all the time. I read the Federal Register, and it is getting heavier to carry all the time.

We know that small businesses across the country are not hiring new workers because of the impact of the health care law and what it will have on their bottom lines. If they are not profitable, they will be out of business. They are not like the government. They can't spend more money than they have. They don't understand why we don't understand. Why do we keep spending more money than we have coming in and doing it continually? I guess it is because we can sell bonds and we don't think there is going to be any consequence to it. If interest rates go up, we are not going to be able to do even national defense. So we need to be more careful about what we are doing and do things more timely.

Millions of Medicare beneficiaries are going to face reductions in their existing benefits as a result of the billions that were taken from Medicare. That was to fund the new law; it wasn't to provide more benefits for seniors. Most of the seniors have figured that out. I already mentioned that they have caps on their benefits even though the President promised there wouldn't be caps on benefits. There aren't caps on benefits if someone is out there working in the private sector, which, incidentally, makes it very hard to figure out the actuarial cost of a plan.

It is not quite 2014 yet, and most of the thousands of pages of the new law haven't even gone into effect. But each day it seems there is a new breaking story about what a debacle this health care law is turning out to be.

I received a letter from Jessica in Laramie, who explained how this health care law is negatively affecting her. Jessica's catastrophic health care plan, as a single adult, according to healthcare.gov, is $297 per month. This is with the premium support from the Federal Government. I repeat, this is with the subsidy.

The University of Wyoming health insurance rate for a semester is $452. This is over the course of 4 months. The university's rate is nothing new; it was available for students long before the Democrats forced their health care disaster through Congress.

Today, Jessica's premiums would cost more than any of her medical bills to date. Jessica recently fractured her foot—a very common injury—and that cost her less than $300 in some medical bills. When they start looking at the Web site, they are going to find out that the deductibles have gone up dramatically.

One of the things that has been constrained and in some cases eliminated is health savings accounts. That is the right thing for young people to have. Of course, that doesn't pay for the older, sicker people, so we had to force them out of that system and get them into the regular system with everybody else and compress the prices so that the younger people are paying for the older people. I don't think they are going to stand for that for very long. I think they are going to be upset about it. I think they are already upset about it. Health savings accounts provided them a way to have catastrophic insurance and the right to put money, tax free, into an account that could grow over time and provide for the deductible they have. That is very essential. If they keep putting money in the account tax free and it keeps growing, it might take care of their health care for the rest of their lives. I think it is a solution for everybody. Again, it is one of those where one size doesn't fit all, but it fits a lot of people, and they ought to have that option, but they don't.

Of course, the bill doesn't really allow us to do the flex spending accounts either. That is one where some people have the right, through their company's health insurance plan, to set aside some additional money to take care of health care during the year—again, tax free. Of course, since it is tax free and we want to raise taxes, we are going to eliminate that. Well, I don't want to. I think that was essential and we ought to have it. But the other side of the aisle decided it was terrible and we ought to eliminate it or reduce it and put extra requirements on it so there was less that you could get with it even though those are individual choices on health care expenditures that a person has to make with their own money.

That is one of the keys to bringing down health care expenditures—have people make their own choices with their own money. If people are making the choices with their company's money or the Federal Government's money, it doesn't make nearly as much difference. If they are not participating in a plan at all and they can get whatever they need and they can go to a very expensive place instead of a less expensive place, that is going to break the system, and that is some of where we are.

I mentioned Jessica's plan and how it is going to go up considerably higher than what her costs are for normal medical. Well, Jessica's mother also works for the State government and she has health care through the State. However, even though she is under the age of 26, Jessica is not allowed to join her mother's insurance plan. That is yet another example of a broken promise from the Obama administration. The President's flawed health care bill is a raw deal for our students and for our Nation.

Jessica said: It feels like the government is punishing everyone for the few people who have health care bills worth more than a house. It isn't remotely fair.

Students are paying the price, and they are realizing it. They know what a bad deal has been foisted on them.

Karen from Cody contacted me because her construction company had to drop their Blue Cross Blue Shield health insurance plan. Why? The President's flawed health care plan mandates health care coverage for full-time employees who work more than 90 days for the company. The company was already providing health care plans for their employees, and now these folks can't keep the health care plan they like. Their employees are mostly young Americans, and they are trying to make their budgets work. They couldn't afford to sign up for health care plans that would reduce their pay. As a result, all of her employees will have to seek individual policies in 2014. Karen also said there is a lack of information on insurance plans. She doesn't know what doctors and what medical facilities will be included or even available in any health insurance plan next year. Karen is upset. I am upset too.

I have said for 5 or 6 years that if a person can't see a doctor, they don't have any kind of insurance. And that is what we are running into. Doctors are changing the way they operate, and they are saying: If you are on Medicare, I don't think I will be able to take you. We have problems with doctors who deliver babies because of the long tail on their potential liability, which goes until the child is of age. That creates a lot of other costs, but that is a different story.

It is time for Congress to heed the calls of the majority of Americans and repeal this partisan law. That isn't going to happen unless ordinary Americans continue to speak out and demand those who brought them ObamaCare keep their promises, every one of them.

I can go on about health care much more, and I may come back to it, but I am going to talk about the budget deal because I am a little upset about that.

One of the problems we have is that we are now in a mode of making deals instead of legislating. This body isn't designed to make deals, to send half a dozen people to solve a problem or, in this case of the budget deal, 2 people—one from the House and one from the Senate. Everybody else feels as if they ought to have some input. No—everybody feels their constituents should have some input, and that is what we are missing.

We send 2 people, 6 people, or 10 people to come up with a deal, we set a date so the media can crescendo up to that point, and then they bring us what the budget deal will be and we vote yes or no. We don't get to do any amendments. That is not how we are designed, and that won't work either.

I would like to talk about the recently announced Murray-Ryan budget deal. I hoped we would have an open process to finally come up with a solution to our Nation's spending problems, but that didn't happen. Instead, we have another backroom deal put together by two Members. That is bad for our country. It is tough on those individuals. They worked hard and came up with something, but they didn't have all of the input from everybody. That makes it difficult too. It is usually done through amendments—amendments that are debated and voted up-or-down. But that doesn't happen anymore.

This budget deal increases spending and shows that one thing Democrats and Republicans can agree on is putting off the tough decisions. We can't keep on doing that. I just showed how we are piling it onto the young with ObamaCare. Now we are piling it onto them with the budget deal. Every man, woman, and child out there—a child who was just born today already owes $50,000 in national debt. How would you like to carry that burden around and then be looking at student loans?

Incidentally, student loans were a part of paying for ObamaCare. People probably heard the controversy where the rates were to go to 6.88 percent. At that time the Federal Government was paying .86 percent for interest, so that other 6 percent was to go to help fund ObamaCare. But the students found that out and said: That is not fair. The President said: Yes, it is not fair. We are going to change that. We are going to knock it down to 3.44 percent. Well, that is still 3 percent the students are paying on ObamaCare. But the real kicker is that it was just extended for 1 year and it was only extended for 40 percent of the students attending college. That is wrong. When it came up the next time, several of us got together and did a little bill. That bill makes it more fair for 100 percent of the kids going to college. We set it as a slight fee above whatever the Federal Government is borrowing the money at. What that fee is when you enter into that loan will be the price of that loan for the life of the loan, and it will apply for 100 percent of the individuals. So we found a way, and it actually passed. I think everybody was relieved, although we have this habit around here of wanting to hold people hostage 6 months at a time. That is what we have been doing on the doc fix for quite a while.

But to get back to the budget deal, the plan does spend more than the current law. It charges people in States for more things and uses the money to increase the spending in nonrelated areas. Spending cuts are scheduled for outlying years. We say: Oh, yes, we are going to cut that stuff, but we are going to do it on the end of 10 years, but the so-called savings from that are used up right now.

Is there anybody in America who can go ahead and spend their future earnings now and not have to do it on the other end, when it actually comes due? That is what we have been doing for far too long. Those spending cuts are scheduled for outlying years and are called savings but are used up right away, and that just isn't real. Let's call it what it is. It is not real, and it is wrong.

This bill has a lot of problems. It again raises rates for premiums that private companies pay the Federal Government to guarantee their pension benefits. I worked on a bill—the Pension Protection Act—several years ago, and the goal of that bill was to make sure companies that promised people pensions would result in people getting pensions. We wanted to do it without putting the companies out of business because then it falls on the Federal Government with this Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation.

Two years ago, we raised the rates, and the PBGC could use the money, but that isn't where the money went. We put it into highways for 2 years. Ten years' worth of money, 2 years' worth of highways. Now we are raising that pension guaranty again by $200 per person. How many companies do you think are going to keep their pension plans?

People might not be aware that pensions are voluntary in this country. They are not mandated. They are voluntary. Fortunately, there are a lot of companies that realize the value of maintaining their employees and so they have pension plans and they worry about those pension plans. They want to make sure they are going to be solvent so they can provide what they need to. They are liable for it. So it is wrong for us to increase a tax to say we are going to help make sure those are more secure and then the money never goes into the fund that insures it. Let's see. Should that come under the category of fraud?

So those savings from these rate increases will be spent on Federal discretionary programs, and employers are still in the process of implementing a $9 billion rate increase to pay for the highways in last year's transit bill. So to put it simply, over 2 years the flat rate premium will have increased 40 percent, and over 3 years the variable rate premium will have increased over 100 percent.

If you are in business and you are looking at a 100-percent increase in your pension costs, you have to take a look at it and say there has to be a different way we can go, and that is going to mean a lot of people are not going to have pensions. They will have the pensions they have been promised to that date but not the pensions they were looking forward to at the time they retire. That is a huge tax and it will cause companies to end their voluntary pension and their retirement plans.

These pensions are completely voluntary, and if the cost to keep them goes up, companies may have to re-evaluate. Workers and their families will be forced to find other ways to save for retirement due to this increased tax on companies.

There isn't anything else you can call it. I notice they are trying to call it a fee. The definition of a fee is if you don't participate, then you don't have to pay it. But that isn't what we are trying to do. We are trying to have companies provide pensions. We are not trying to have them realize they can't afford the pensions they are giving out because of increased charges by the Federal Government. So that is wrong.

Under this budget deal, they are again telling Wyoming, Montana, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, and other States that allow for the production of minerals on their land that the Federal Government deserves more than half the revenue. Under Federal law, States are entitled to half the royalties collected by the Federal Government for energy production on their lands. To distribute the State's share, the law intends for the Minerals Management Service to divide the amount of mineral royalties collected by the two and to write a check for that amount and mail it to the States. But an even split isn't enough under this new budget. In an attempt to satisfy an insatiable appetite for spending, the budget bill plans to take more money away from our States—about $40 million each year.

We had an interesting situation this last year when they did the sequester. The Federal Government said: OK. Our half of the money when it comes in is revenue. Your half of the money when it goes out is an expenditure. Therefore, we need to take the 5.3 percent out of that. When we heard that, we started passing a bill around and getting a lot of traction on it from both red and blue States saying: That is wrong. You can't take our money away. If you are going to take something out for sequester, it at least ought to come out of both halves, but it definitely doesn't deserve to come out of what is by law money that belongs to the State.

We raised enough furor, and it looked like that bill could pass—and I am sorry we didn't go ahead and pass it. The Federal Government decided they were wrong, so they have agreed they are going to pay back that 5.3 percent they stole from the States. But this budget puts about another $40 million each year in there that the Federal Government is going to keep out of the State's half. That is money the States use for roads, for health care—yes, health care—education for children and more efficient environmentally friendly development of our energy resources.

It is money that finds its way directly to the people, not down some bureaucratic black hole. A disproportionate share of this funding—about $20 million—comes from my home State of Wyoming, which supplies a disproportionate share of energy to this country. Yet the Federal Government still wants more. Unlike bureaucrats, we have to answer to our constituents.

Mine are telling me they do not want the Federal Government to take any more of our State's money. I am sure my colleagues will hear the same thing. Whenever you have some money, they are saying: OK. The States are rich now, compared to the Federal Government, and that is true for almost every State. So they are planning on how they can steal money from the States and give to it the Federal Government.

Worst of all, the so-called budget conference committee, for all practical purposes, did not exist. The agreement was the sole product of one House Member and one Senate Member. I sat on the conference committee, but I can tell you that I am hearing the particulars of the deal at the same time as the public. They weren't part of the process or the negotiations and neither were we. We did have a meeting to begin with, and everybody got to give statements for how they thought this deal ought to go, but there were no further meetings of the conference.

Any conference I have ever been on, once there was a deal made, you met again and you got an explanation of the deal and then all the sides voted. If it didn't receive a positive vote in the Senate and in the House, it wasn't passed on as a conference that was finished yet. You went back to the drawing board again.

I guess we are in a crisis here and decided we had to do something in a hurry, but that is the worst of all worlds when you do that. We were not a part of the process or the negotiations, and it is not the way this body was designed. Conference committees have a definite purpose.

Actually, the task should not have even been assigned to the Budget Committee. The task should have been assigned to the spending committees. We were at the point where in the calendar business there are already bills that the appropriators—the spending people—have put together for all 12 items. Those could have been brought up one at a time, probably would take 1 week for each of them, if amendments were allowed, and we would have wound up with a pretty good budget, in pretty good standing.

Of course, I am kind of fascinated. We are about to January, and in January I will have dozens of people visiting me. It is a long trip from Wyoming to come out here and they will come out here on individual programs of the Federal Government and they will say: Please, this is how important this particular program is. Please make sure we get funding for it.

One of them is Head Start. They actually think we get to look at the Head Start budget and make additions or subtractions from it. We don't even get to look at Health and Human Services or transportation or any of those. They all get lumped together sometime in the year. There is no oversight. There are no decisions by the main body on how to spend $1 trillion a year. That is the wrong way to do it.

So this is a symptom of the abandonment of the committee process. Instead of Representatives and Senators offering constructive amendments and debating spending bills in public, a couple of people and their staffs sit in a room and then present a take it or leave it right before a holiday or a manufactured crisis deadline.

We are going to have that yet on the Omnibus spending bill. Right now we are just doing a continuing resolution and allowing those agencies to spend one-twelfth of what they spent the year before, essentially. So they do not know what they get to do for the rest of the year. When the sequester hit, it was supposed to be 2.3 percent, so they had to take those cuts out of the last 4 months. The result was they had to take 5.3 percent out.

I mentioned Head Start. They came to me and they said: We can't afford to have a 7½-percent cut every year. I said: Where did the 7½-percent come from? They said: That is what we are being cut.

It looks to me like what happened is the bureaucracy in Washington took their 5.3-percent cut but stole 2.3 percent from the local folks in order to pay for the Washington bureaucracy. So it was the kids who suffered. The kids didn't get the money. More kids had to be taken off the roll instead of more kids put on the roll. If it is going to hurt, it ought to hurt in Washington. It shouldn't hurt out there where the kids are.

I have some solutions for it. One of them is the no government shutdowns. The way that would work is if those spending committees don't have their work done by the time they are supposed to, which would be October 1, each spending committee would have to take 1 percent off of what they are allowed to spend each quarter until they actually get their work done. I think that would be a little incentive for them to get their work done.

I also have a penny plan. A penny plan would cut one cent off of every dollar the Federal Government spends. That in conjunction with the sequester would balance our budget in just 2 years—just 2 years. That would be 3.2 percent for 2 years. I think the people would say: You know, that wasn't too bad—provided we didn't make it hurt.

That is one of the terrible things about government. They always like to pick the things people will notice, instead of eliminating things such as duplication. There is plenty of duplication out there. There is $900 billion a year in the Federal Government in duplication. We ought to be able to eliminate half of duplication, shouldn't we? That would be a better deal than the sequester. But we don't do that. We make it hurt. We want people to notice their item is being cut and then they complain and then we restore it and that is how you get to $17 trillion worth of debt.

But with the penny plan everything would be on the table. It would have flexibility so it didn't have to hurt. We could get rid of that duplication.

Then, of course, I am also proposing a biennial budget. The way that would work is we would appropriate for every agency for a 2-year period so they know what they are doing for 2 years. They could actually do some planning. We shouldn't wait until we are 8 months through the year before we tell them how to spend their money for the last 4 months.

I have a little twist in my biennial budgeting. I would split the 12 spending bills into 2 categories. Right after an election, that year we would do the six bills that are tough, and then the next year we would do the six bills that are easy. Then we would actually be able to look at those individual items, and then a lot of these things that come up on the floor as extraneous amendments to other bills wouldn't need to be done because they would be done with the spending part they are supposed to do.

So those are a few plans right there. We do have a spending problem. We don't have a revenue problem. We shouldn't raise taxes in order for Washington to spend more. We can't spend our way to prosperity. That is more people getting in the wagon and less people pulling the wagon.

Identifying a process forward for tax reform is where part of the effort for the budget conference should be focused. If done correctly, tax reform will help to generate additional revenue through economic growth. Let me repeat that—not through new taxes but through economic growth to reduce the deficit and pay down the debt, and I am ready to make that happen.

We need to prioritize spending. Find the spending cuts that do the least harm and start there. It has worked in Wyoming. Our Governor knew he might be having an 8-percent cut in the revenues the State was going to get. So what did he do? He got ahold of all the agencies and said: I want to know what you would cut if you had to cut 2 percent; what you would cut if you had to cut 4 percent; what you would cut if you had to cut 6 percent; and what you would cut if you had to cut 8 percent.

Why did he do that? That gives him four lists to look at and he can see what that agency thinks is the most important to cut. What would be the least hurt to cut. That is exactly what they did. They wound up having to do a 6-percent cut and there wasn't a whimper. We could do that too.

I sit up nights worrying about our Nation's debt and how it will affect Wyoming children, my children, grandchildren. There is a chance to apply reasonable constraints to impossibly high future spending, but instead we get more spending and no plan to solve the problem.

America wants a plan. There is nothing as universal as that. They tell me every time in Wyoming: We have got to quit spending more than we take in. I agree. Congress should have been working on Federal spending bills and a responsible budget for months, and the Senate majority put that work off.

I could go into some things on the Defense bill. I have a lot of things here, and over the next few days I will be talking about these. But what we are going through right now is, instead of these things that are really important to the American people and will really make a difference in their lives, we are working on judges which doesn't make any difference. There are plenty of judges out there already. But that is to detract us from these problems of ObamaCare and a budget. We have got to solve the real problems and quit worrying about whether the judges can be stacked in the District of Columbia so that the President can have his way. That is wrong.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURPHY). The Senator from Utah.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, I first thank my distinguished colleague, the senior Senator from Wyoming, who is a good friend and a fine example to all those who know him. People from both sides of the aisle can learn and benefit from my friend from Wyoming who, as a businessman, later as a mayor, as a devoted husband and father, has served his country well and has served his colleagues in the Senate well.

His remarks on the Senate floor tonight have been especially insightful, and I have learned something from him this evening as I do every time he speaks. He is one who reached out to me shortly after I arrived here in the Senate and has always shown to me great kindness. I have always been grateful for that, and I look forward to continuing to work with him in the Senate.

What is happening in the Senate right now is more than just an attempt by the majority to end debate on nominees. It is an attempt to shut out the American people from the political process.

President Obama and the majority party in the Senate are so dedicated to enacting their progressive agenda that they will do anything, even if it means running roughshod over the minority and ignoring the will of the people.

Our Founding Fathers drafted the Constitution to prevent this sort of thing from happening and to protect the rights of all Americans. They devised a constitutionally limited government, with a system of checks and balances, so that no one branch of government would wield unlimited power.

The whole idea of this system was to prevent the excessive abrogation of power, the excessive accumulation of power within the hands of a few.

Under our Constitution, the President's representative function is to faithfully execute the law and not to make it. Congress as a whole alone makes the laws, including a deliberative Senate whose majorities reflect minority views. Senate Democrats' recent actions are an assault on republican institutions and on the protections that they provide to all Americans.

The current administration and Senate Democrats view the Constitution as an impediment to the enactment of their agenda. This is why the President illegally amended the Affordable Care Act—a law passed by Congress—through executive action instead of asking Congress to amend it. It is also why Democrats are willing to break the rules of the Senate in order to change the rules of the Senate so that they can more quickly, more easily confirm the President's nominees.

Make no mistake. The executive and judicial nominees we are considering will be tasked with implementing and upholding President Obama's agenda. Congress is a representative body and is the only branch of government given the constitutional authority to make laws. We represent the people. When the President illegally changes the law or when he tramples on the rights of the minority in the Senate, he guarantees that the people will have no voice and no representation. These are not trivial matters. These are not matters that we can casually cavalierly cast aside. These are matters of great importance.

We have to remember what happened just a few short months ago, when we were told on July 2 of this year that President Obama had decided to change the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act in several meaningful ways.

This of course was a law that was passed without consensus. It was passed without any semblance of bipartisanship. It was a law that was passed without a single Republican vote. Not a single Republican voted for it in the Senate; not a single Republican voted for it in the House. All 2,700 pages of this law—a law that wasn't read before it was passed, a law that we were told Members would have to pass in order to find out what was in it—this law took effect. Over time, as the American people learned about the law's contents, they didn't grow more favorably predisposed toward the law.

The law has in fact never enjoyed the support of a solid majority of Americans, but over time its popularity has tended to diminish. Perhaps seeing this, President Obama on July 2 of this year chose to wield his executive pen in such a way as to amend that law.

He chose, among other things, to announce that although the law contains a number of deadlines, a number of start dates, that he would not be enforcing the employer mandate in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. He would of course still be enforcing, as of the January 1 start date, the individual mandate. But he would not be implementing or enforcing, at least for the first year of the law's full operation, the employer mandate. Of course, he had no authority to do this. The Constitution sets in place a system for making law.

In order to become law, a legislative proposal has to make its way through the House of Representatives, has to make its way through the Senate, has to be passed by most of the people in the House and in the Senate, and then it has to be presented to the President consistent with article I, section 7, clause 2 of the Constitution before it may become law.

But of course, once it is law, it is law; and a law passed under one administration can't simply be vetoed or fundamentally altered by a subsequent President. In fact, it can't be vetoed or subsequently altered by even the same President who signed it into law in the first place. And yet, that is in some respects exactly what happened here.

The President modified the law. He was too impatient, too unwilling—too unwilling to defer to the legislative branch, too unwilling to respect the oath that he took to uphold, protect, and defend the Constitution from all enemies, foreign and domestic, too disrespectful of that very document, our founding document that has fostered the development of the greatest civilization the world has ever known. Too unwilling to defer to that document in order to follow its most basic precepts and its most basic commands.

He suggested that he needed to do this because the law wasn't ready to be implemented. He later suggested that he did this because he had to do it because, as he put it: Under normal conditions, under more ideal conditions, obviously the thing to do if you wanted to change the law would be to go back with that branch of government charged with making the law—that branch of government which passed it into law in the first place—Congress. But, as he pointed out, these are not ideal circumstances.

No, they are not ideal. Not ideal, because he controls only one division of the legislative branch of government, the Senate. The Senate is under the control of his party and the House of Representatives isn't.

This can hardly justify this kind of blatant usurpation of legislative authority. This can hardly justify a President taking upon himself the sole task of changing legislation. It is in fact an act of legislation unto itself. Yet this is what he did by a stroke of the executive pen. This is exactly what the Founding Fathers tried to protect against, this kind of unilateral action by the executive, this kind of accumulation of power in the hands of the few—or, in this case, the hands of one person. Yet this is what he did, and he has done it on several occasions.

Some people have suggested that if what the President did was wrong, if it was unconstitutional, if it wasn't authorized by the Constitution—which it wasn't—if it wasn't authorized by an act of Congress, either the Affordable Care Act or some other statute—and it wasn't—then perhaps the courts can and should and must and will remedy the constitutional problem embodied in that act. There are some problems with that.

First of all, as we all know, not every unconstitutional act can necessarily be remedied in court. Many unconstitutional acts are themselves outside the purview of the Federal courts' ability to review. In some cases, an unconstitutional act might be something that the courts consider a nonjusticiable political question, not subject to the court's authority, or something that the courts aren't willing to wade into.

In other circumstances, an unconstitutional act might occur in a situation in which no one party is likely to be able to develop and establish article III standing in order to challenge that unconstitutional act.

In order to establish article III standing—in other words, in order to establish the right to sue in Federal court—article III of the Constitution requires that the plaintiff be able to establish that the plaintiff has suffered an injury in fact, an injury in fact that is fairly traceable to the conduct of the defendant, and, thirdly, that it is subject to redress by the authority of the court.

In this circumstance, one must ask the question: Does anyone really have standing? Can anyone really establish the kind of standing in order to challenge the President's refusal to implement and enforce the individual mandate while refusing or declining to enforce and implement the employer mandate of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act?

Who has standing to do that? Who has been harmed by that? One could suggest, I suppose, that an employer might want to look into that. But when they would examine the situation, most or all employers would probably have to acknowledge that they have been given a reprieve. So employers, No. 1, are not likely to be aggrieved by it in the sense that they are not likely to feel the need to sue; and, No. 2, if they were to try to sue, it seems to me they would have a very difficult time establishing in a court of law the fact that they had suffered an injury in fact.

Who else might do it? Most constitutional scholars would conclude—probably correctly—that a Member of Congress would lack article III standing under the applicable Supreme Court precedent, Flast v. Cohen and other Supreme Court precedents. Merely being a Member of Congress is not necessarily enough to give a person article III standing.

So I think it is very difficult to reach the conclusion that anyone—at least obviously—has article III standing to sue.

So we cannot necessarily rely on the courts to be able to undo this constitutional damage, to be able to seek an adequate remedy in a court of law for this blatant insult to the U.S. Constitution. Even if they could, moreover, even if somebody could establish article III standing, even if somebody could come before an article III Federal judge and convince that judge that they have standing, would that Federal court be in a position to dispose of this case within the roughly 1-year period in which this provision of the law is effectively suspended? It takes a lot of time to litigate a case all the way through to completion, and I think it is doubtful whether somebody would be able to bring an action in Federal court and have it be fully litigated all the way through to judgment in the roughly 1-year period in which it would still be relevant.

If you could not get it done in that time period, then it would appear very likely that the case would be rendered moot at that point. So this, quite simply, is the kind of case in which no Federal suit is likely to be brought and if one is brought it would likely fail. So that is yet another reason why we as a Congress ought to be looking very closely at this, you see, because this is one of those many instances in which it is possible that someone can violate the U.S. Constitution, here the President of the United States, without the courts being in a position to effectively remedy that constitutional defect.

We too as Members of this body have taken an oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States. In my mind, that means doing more than simply refraining from that which the Supreme Court of the United States would obviously invalidate. To my mind, that means more than simply saying: If someone has violated the U.S. Constitution, then I am sure the courts will take care of it. We simply know that is not true. We know that in many circumstances—and I have just outlined a couple of them—the courts are not in a position to be able to remedy a constitutional defect, to be able to remedy a blatant insult to the Constitution and an absolute violation of the Constitution's provisions.

So we need to continue to hold this President accountable when he fails, quite blatantly in this circumstance, to do that which the Constitution requires. This is a question that I think is particularly important, not only in light of how this particular act of Congress came to be, not only in light of how it was enacted and the fact that it is 2,700 pages long, that it has now resulted in 20,000 pages of regulatory implementing text but also in light of the fact that it was challenged in court; that is, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act was challenged in court as to its constitutionality, but it was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States in a most unusual fashion. Let's talk about that for just a moment.

A number of States and a few others banded together and challenged in Federal court a few years ago Congress's power to enact certain provisions of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. Among those provisions that they challenged were the individual mandate. The argument was Congress lacks the power asserted by Congress in the Affordable Care Act, pursuant to article I section 8 clause 3, the commerce clause, to tell individual Americans that they must buy a product—health insurance; not just any health insurance but that specific kind of health insurance that Congress in its infinite wisdom deemed absolutely essential for every American to purchase. The challenge asserted that Congress lacks this power under the commerce clause.

The lawsuit also alleged among other things that Congress lacked the power to tell States that the States had to expand their Medicaid Programs and gave the States no choice; that this, too, violated the Constitution, that it exceeded certain limitations on Congress's power because the courts have long recognized that Congress lacks the power to commandeer the States' legislative and administrative machinery in order to carry out a Federal program.

Congress has the power to encourage States, to ask States to do this, but it lacks the power to direct a State to do X or Y or Z. We cannot just tell a State to do something just because we want it to be done. We might be able to persuade the State to do something. We might even be able to fund the State, to offer funding in case a State wants to participate in a given program, but we lack the power to dictate to States that they do such a thing.

In this circumstance, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act was unmistakable in its clarity. It simply told the States they had to expand their Medicaid programs in the fashion outlined in the Act itself.

So these two core pieces, these two core aspects of this judicial challenge made their way up through the Federal court system, made their way up to the Supreme Court of the United States. The Court decided these two issues, as I said a moment ago, in a most unusual fashion. Turning to the commerce clause issue, the Court addressed that issue right after addressing another issue that was sort of a jurisdictional question, an introductory question. The Court had to determine first of all, before it even got to the merits of the constitutional challenge as to the individual mandate in the Affordable Care Act—it had to address the question of whether the individual mandate and the enforcement mechanism attached to it could fairly be characterized as a tax, for purposes relevant to the so-called anti-injunction act, a Civil War-era statute that basically says that any time someone wants to challenge a tax in Federal court they have to wait until such time as that tax is actually being collected. Then that challenge is brought as against the attempted enforcement of the tax statute.

The Supreme Court of the United States, using centuries' worth of jurisprudence, looked at the language of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, it looked at the manner in which it was written, and easily concluded, no, this is not a tax. This is a penalty. Because it is a penalty and it is not a tax, we, the Court, may proceed to consider the merits of the arguments brought up in this case, the merits of this challenge brought as to Congress's authority, vel non, to enact something like this, the individual mandate under the commerce clause. So the Court quickly dispensed with that issue and reached the merits of the constitutional question before it.

The Court then went on to conclude that Congress does, in fact, lack the power under the commerce clause, under article I, section 8, clause 3 of the Constitution, to tell individual Americans they must buy a particular product, health insurance; not just any health insurance but the specific kind of health insurance that Congress told the American people they have to buy in the Affordable Care Act.

The Court fairly easily and, in my opinion, correctly, decided that Congress lacks that power because of the fact that the power Congress has to regulate interstate commerce is meaningfully different than the power to compel individuals to enter into commerce, to regulate inactivity, to punish inactivity, to punish the failure to buy a particular product that the people might not want to buy.

You see, for a long time we had this understanding as Americans that the power given to Congress was in fact limited. We look at all the authorities granted to Congress under the Constitution, the overwhelming majority of which can be found in article I, section 8. All of these were limited and they were limited with good reason. They were limited with good reason because that played a very large part, that played a very significant role in how and why we became a country.

We broke away from Great Britain, not just because we grew tired of having a monarch but because we grew tired of the authority of a parliament—a parliament that not only refused to grant us any representation but also a parliament that refused to acknowledge any natural limit on its power to regulate us, and it did in fact regulate us and it regulated us heavily, mercilessly. It taxed us overwhelmingly and it refused to recognize any meaningful—failed, refused to recognize any meaningful limit on its own authority.

That is one of the reasons we became our own country. That is one of the reasons the Founding Fathers put in place this system in which our national legislative body would be vested with only a few specifically listed or enumerated powers. The founding generation understood that each of those powers would in fact be limited, so much so, in fact, that James Madison described the powers given to Congress as few and defined and characterized those reserved to the States as numerous and indefinite.

During the first 140, 150 years or so of our Republic's existence, we as a people continued to recognize the necessarily limited nature of Congress's power. Much of that started to change during the New Deal era in which President Franklin D. Roosevelt, with the assistance of Democratic majorities in the House and in the Senate, pushed forward with a very progressive agenda, one that expanded not only the role of government in general but also the role of the Federal Government in particular.

Initially, the Supreme Court resisted and the Supreme Court acknowledged the fact that the powers granted to Congress under the spending clause and the commerce clause were, in fact, limited. But the more FDR and the more Congress pushed back against the Supreme Court, the more the Supreme Court seemed inclined to relent. Ultimately, we saw the Supreme Court of the United States back down in the late 1930s from its what had been previously more rigorous, more restrictive interpretations of the spending clause and of the commerce clause.

The Supreme Court ended up adopting a set of rules that would basically say that as long as Congress was acting broadly within the field of what could be loosely considered a regulation of interstate commerce, that the courts would stay away in second-guessing Congress's determinations.

The Court, starting out with a case called NLRB v. Jones & Laughlin Steel in 1937 and culminating in another case 5 years later in Wickard v. Filburn in 1942, ended up concluding that Congress may, without interference from the courts, regulate any activity that when measured and evaluated in the aggregate, has a substantial effect on interstate commerce. Regardless of whether the discrete activity in question might actually occur entirely intrastate, Congress would be able to regulate that activity pursuant to its commerce clause authority, regardless of how intrastate that activity might be when viewed in isolation.

Under this very broad interpretation, Congress's power could, in a sense, be viewed as extending to virtually every aspect of human existence because, after all, almost everything we do when measured in the aggregate might well be understood to have a substantial effect on interstate commerce. Yet even under that broad analysis, that couldn't extend to what was being regulated in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act—in the individual mandated provision, which was inactivity. Remember, this is an enormous breadth that the Supreme Court said Congress could, without interference from the courts, regulate under its commerce clause authority.

In Wickard v. Filburn what was at issue was the cultivation of wheat. Congress adopted a statutory framework in which farmers would be severely restricted in how much wheat they could grow—how much they could produce of this or that agricultural commodity.

There was a farmer named Roscoe Filburn who committed a grave offense against the Republic. His offense did not involve dealing drugs; it didn't involve murder or kidnapping. His offense involved growing too much wheat.

Roscoe Filburn grew more wheat than Congress—in its infinite wisdom—viewed appropriate for any American to grow. He was fined many thousands of dollars, which during the New Deal era was an enormous amount of money because of the fact that he grew too much wheat.

Roscoe Filburn was fortunate in that he had access to some good lawyers, and his lawyers advised him on this. They represented him aggressively and competently in court. What they argued, relying on true facts, was that, yes, our client Roscoe Filburn did, in fact, grow wheat in excess of the limit imposed by Federal law, but the amount of wheat he grew in excess of the grain production limit applicable to his farm that year was grain that never entered interstate commerce.

In fact, it never entered commerce at all. You see, that grain never even left Roscoe Filburn's farm. He used it on his farm to feed his family, to feed his livestock, and he held on to the remainder of it to use as seed for a subsequent planting season.

In a very real sense that wheat was not part of interstate commerce at all. Nevertheless, the Supreme Court of the United States, lacking nothing in imagination, said that even that wheat was within Congress's almighty grasp—within the all-knowing, wise reach of the Federal sovereign. What the Court said was that the wheat grown by Roscoe Filburn in excess of the grain production quota was itself something that when viewed in the aggregate, could substantially affect interstate commerce.

In other words, if lots of farmers everywhere—just like Roscoe Filburn—grew too much wheat, even if their wheat never entered interstate commerce, the growing of all of that excess wheat would inevitably have an impact on the supply and demand and ultimately the price and availability of wheat on the interstate market. Therefore, even that wheat which was entirely locally grown and locally consumed would be subject to Congress's reach.

Wicker v. Filburn thus erected an extraordinarily low barrier for Congress to clear in establishing that it had properly invoked its authority under the commerce clause. Yet even that extraordinarily low barrier was high enough to stop Congress from acting pursuant to the commerce clause in enacting the individual mandate under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. Thus ended the Supreme Court's analysis in June 2012 when it ruled that Congress had exceeded its constitutional limits under the commerce clause in enacting the individual mandate.

Significantly, this was only the third time in about 75 years—only the third time since NLRB v. Jones and Laughlin Steel and Wicker v. Filburn—in which the Supreme Court of the United States recognized Congress had overstepped its limits under the commerce clause. This was a rare thing for the court to do. It was foreseeable because the individual mandate in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act went so far beyond anything that had ever been seen before. Yet it was only the third time in the last 75 years in which that had happened.

Then something different happened—something very few people on either side of the aisle in this body or on either side of the political divide in America generally had seen. After concluding that Congress lacked this power under the commerce clause, the Supreme Court, under the pen of Chief Justice John Roberts, proceeded to analyze the government's backup argument; that is, the argument that even if, as the Court had now concluded, Congress lacked the power to do this under the commerce clause, Congress still had the power to do this consistent with its power to impose taxes.

The Court went on to conclude that Congress did have this power. Strangely, the Court also went on to conclude that is essentially what Congress had done here.

This was odd on many levels. No. 1, the Court had already concluded, as it had to conclude in order to proceed to the case—as it had to conclude in order to exercise jurisdiction over this case—prior to the implementation of the law, prior to the collection of this alleged tax, that it was, in fact, not a tax but a penalty. It was very strange that the Court was now basically saying: OK, it is a penalty and not a tax for some purposes, but it is a tax and not a penalty for other purposes. Yet that is what the Court did.

It was also strange that the Court did this for the additional reason that Congress had considered legislative proposals in a different, earlier iteration of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act that would have enforced the individual mandate by means of a tax.

Congress considered language that would have done that. Congress knew, and still knows, how to enact legislative language that imposes a new tax. Yet when it tried to use that language, language that under 100 years' worth of jurisprudence everyone understands would have imposed a tax, Congress could not get the votes to pass it even in what was then a Congress in which the Democratic Party dominated both Houses.

Even in that Congress they tried but failed to get the requisite number of votes to pass the individual mandate enforced by means of a tax. They could not do it. It was therefore very odd that the Supreme Court of the United States would interpret what Congress couldn't pass as a tax in such a way as to make it a tax for constitutional purposes when Congress itself didn't have the votes to do it.

In order to pass legislation raising revenue—in other words, in order to pass legislation imposing a new tax—the Constitution requires that legislation of that sort originate in the House of Representatives. Why is this? I think most who looked at the issue would agree it has to do with the fact that the House of Representatives is the entity within our Federal Government structure that is, by design, most representative of the people.

In the Senate we have elections every 6 years. In the House it is every 2 years. From the outset the House was the body in which the people were represented because, of course, at the outset the Senate was the body in which the States were represented. That is no longer the case. We are directly elected by the people.

But it was always the case, and still is the case, that tax legislation must start in the House because it is the body closest to the people and most responsive to the needs and the desires and the concerns of the people. It is therefore quite ironic that this law—this tax, as the Supreme Court called it—was put into place as a tax, not by the body within the Federal Government that is most accountable to the people, the House of Representatives, but instead by the body within the Federal Government that is the very least accountable to the people, the Supreme Court of the United States.

I believe this amounted to a usurpation of constitutional authority. I believe this amounted to a betrayal of the judicial oaths of the five robe-wearing men and women who signed on to that opinion. They did not have the power to legislate. They did not have the power to create a tax. They did not have the power to create out of whole cloth tax language out of penalty language—language that under a century's worth of jurisprudence, the Court's own precedence carrying stare decisis effect made clear it was a penalty and not a tax. Yet that is exactly what the Court did.

When people discover this—when they learn about and hear about it and dare to plow through the Supreme Court's opinion so they can understand what happens, they will inevitably ask: How can the Court do this? Does the Court have that power—the power to legislate, the power to impose a tax where Congress has not chosen to impose a tax? No, the Court doesn't have that power.

Then how can the Court do that? How could the Court do that? Why did the Court do that? The Court did that because it could, not because it could in the sense that it had the constitutional power to do it but because the Court has an exercise of raw political power. It chose to do so and did so.

This was a tragic day in American history. It is a day we should not soon forget and a day we should do all in our power to remedy. This decision was wrong. It was unconscionable. As a matter of jurisprudence, it was unforgivable.

The Court then went on to address the challenge related to Congress's power to compel the States to expand their Medicaid Programs. Medicaid, as we all know, is a program that is partially funded by the Federal Government but administered and partially funded by the States. In the Affordable Care Act, Congress directed the States—whether the States were so inclined—to expand their Medicaid Programs. It gave them no choice but to expand them and to expand them to a very significant degree. It expanded them in a way that would bring about not only significant costs to the States over the years but also very substantial administrative burdens as well. Yet the Affordable Care Act left the States with no choice. You must do this. Just do it because we are Congress and we are all powerful. You have to do it because we say so.

There is this anticommandeering principle embedded within our constitutional jurisprudence, rooted in the enumerated powers doctrine and rooted partially in the Tenth Amendment as well. It says that Congress lacks the power to commandeer States' administrative or legislative machinery to put in place, to carry out the legislature, to administer a Federal program. The Supreme Court of the United States concluded that Congress had violated this anti-commandeering principle in passing the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, and in doing so in a way that left the States with no other alternative.

So this was the second constitutional defect in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

But, here again, the Supreme Court chose to rewrite the law a second time in order to save it. Ordinarily, what the Court would do in this circumstance—in that circumstance, after concluding that Congress had violated this anti-commandeering principle and that this aspect of the Affordable Care Act was, in fact, unconstitutional—the Court would be under an obligation to go into what is called severability analysis, to analyze whether or to what extent or in what way Congress might have intended to allow the rest of the statute's provisions to operate independently, notwithstanding the unconstitutionality of the provision deemed invalid by the court. In this case, quite steadily, the Supreme Court engaged in no such analysis. It never reached the severability question, even though it had been the discussion of extensive briefing and conversation and oral argument.

The Supreme Court didn't get into severability at all. The Court decided it just didn't need to. It didn't need to because the Court rewrote the statute in order to make it constitutional. The Court wrote into the law a carve-out provision. It simply said, We are going to read this law as though it gave the States an opt-out provision, as though it gave the States an option of deciding whether or not to expand their own Medicaid programs.

The only problem is the text of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act contained absolutely no such language. We can read through all 2,700 pages of that law, and we won't find any opt-out provision such as what I just described. No, the Court created this too from whole cloth. The Court did this in the absence of any text. This too amounted to a betrayal of the judicial oaths of those who signed their names to that opinion. This too was a blatantly unconstitutional act that was an insult to the high judicial office that those individuals occupy. That too is an insult to the constitutional system, which has fostered the development of the greatest civilization the world has ever known.

We can't likely overlook crimes against the Constitution. We can't likely overlook the usurpation of authority by the few. We can't likely overlook the fact that laws—our most fundamental laws—have been openly flouted in this case, nor will we soon forget the fact that it has occurred here.

So here are all of these reasons why some of us feel so strongly, so passionately that this law started with some unconstitutional premises and has had its constitutional defects compounded over and over and over, as we have had the Supreme Court of the United States rewriting it, not just once but twice, in order to save it. We have the President of the United States rewriting it, in effect, legislating through the stroke of the executive pen several times now, because, among other things, he says the law is not ready to implement. He doesn't have the power to legislate on his own any more than the Supreme Court of the United States has the power to legislate, any more than the Queen of England has the right to legislate for the United States of America.

The legislative power belongs here. It belongs here in the Congress of the United States, and we must exercise that power. When someone else takes that power from us, when someone else independently exercises the legislative power, we must guard it jealously. We must protect it. I don't care whether one is a Republican or a Democrat, and I don't care whether one is President Obama's biggest fan or his most aggressive critic. The office we occupy here requires us, compels us to defend our institutional prerogative as Federal lawmakers. When someone else exercises that power—a power that does not belong to them but to us—we must protect it, not because it is ours but because it belongs to those we represent. It belongs to those who elected us to serve here, those who elected us and not someone else to make the laws. Whenever—to any degree—we overlook the fact that someone else has legislated, someone not vested with lawmaking authority, we do ourselves and our country a disservice and we reflect a certain cavalier disregard for the oath we have taken to uphold the Constitution of the United States, which was put in place to make the men and the women of the United States of America free.

There is another issue related to all of this that I think we need to touch on, which is the issue of excessive delegation of legislative authority to the executive branch. In some circumstances, we have a situation in which Congress may voluntarily relinquish some of its lawmaking power to the executive branch. I say it may do that, that it can do that, but that is not necessarily saying that it should do that. Perhaps the most influential political philosopher in America's founding era was Charles de Montesquieu. Charles de Montesquieu wrote that the power to legislate is the power to make laws, not the power to make legislators. He recognized, I think, that there was a natural temptation among elected lawmakers to want to pass the buck along to someone else, to want to give to someone else the task of making law.

We do this sometimes when we pass an extraordinarily broad law and then we direct some executive branch agency to simply fill in the gaps, to effectively make the laws. The Affordable Care Act is replete with instances in which this kind of thing occurs, in which certain broad parameters are spelled out and in which we then say to this department or that department that it will have the power to promulgate rules carrying the force of generally applicable Federal law, which that same department or that same agency will then have the power to enforce.

So that is part of how we end up with 20,000 pages of implementing regulations already under ObamaCare—20,000 pages and counting—because we have a lot of instances in which we have delegated de facto lawmaking power. That too presents its own kind of constitutional problem—not necessarily a constitutional problem that the courts are inclined to recognize, but a sort of constitutional problem nonetheless, because the more we delegate de facto lawmaking power to an executive branch agency, the less we see that anyone is accountable to the people for our laws.

One can imagine, for example, if taken to an extreme, what this could look like. Let's suppose one day we just decide we are tired of debating and discussing and voting on and having to pass laws that are controversial, laws that are specific, laws that require us to get our hands dirty, laws that require us to make difficult decisions, so, once and for all, we are going to pass a law that everyone can get behind. It will be called the law of good laws. A law that says we shall have good laws and we hereby delegate to the herewith created U.S. Department of Good Laws the power to make and enforce good laws. We then pass that and we give this Department of Good Laws the power to issue regulations and to enforce those regulations. This is actually not all that different from what we do all the time and what has been done under ObamaCare to a very significant degree—about 20,000 pages of regulations so far, and that is still building.

One of the reasons this is a problem is because when the people don't like our laws, they can come to us and they can hold us accountable for laws that we may have voted to enact. They can choose to replace us with someone else, someone who wouldn't vote for that kind of law the next time they have the chance. But when the law that they don't like is not one that we have enacted but instead one that has been promulgated by an executive branch agency, the people come to complain to us and, in that circumstance, we say: Don't look at me; go to the executive branch agency; they are the ones who did it. They go to the executive branch agency, and they see that the people occupying the executive branch agency, as well mannered, well educated, well intentioned, and well groomed as they might be, are not subject to elections, so they can't be voted out. They can't be fired by the people. That is why we are entrusted with the law-making power. It is not necessarily that we are the best equipped in every way to do it; it is that we stand subject to elections in 6-year intervals in the case of the Senate, and in 2-year intervals in the case of the House of Representatives. It is yet another reason why we ought to be more resistant, more concerned when it comes to enacting legislation that delegates an excessive amount of de facto law-making power to an executive branch agency.

It is yet another reason why I think we need to pass something akin to the proposal that has been introduced as the REINS Act, which would say anytime an executive branch agency issues a new rule, a new regulation deemed by the Office of Management and Budget to constitute a major rule, that major rule will take effect if, and only if, it is first passed into law by the House and then by the Senate and then signed into law by the President. Then and only then do I think we will be able to start to reclaim that legislative power which is rightfully ours, and that, more importantly, the American people will be able to hold Congress accountable for the responsibilities properly given to Congress under the Constitution. This is about allowing the people to be governed by those they choose. When we delegate excessively our own lawmaking power to executive branch agencies, we deprive the people of their right to have their laws written and enacted by men and women of their own choosing.

This is important, and it should be important to people of all political backgrounds, to people at every end, at every step, at every stage along the political continuum. This is an issue this is neither Republican nor Democratic, it is neither liberal nor conservative, it is simply American.

When we pass laws, we pass laws through democratically elected Senators and Representatives. We do not do it through nameless, faceless bureaucrats who, regardless of how well-educated and well-intentioned they may be, do not serve the people in the sense that they are not elected by the people. They are not subject to reelection. They are not subject to dismissal by the people.

We must hold that power here. That power belongs to us, not to bureaucrats. It belongs to us, not the President. It belongs to us and not to nine Justices wearing black robes across the street in the Supreme Court of the United States.

These are some of the things that are at stake. These are some of the reasons it is so significant that we have this prolonged, protracted effort by the President of the United States to usurp power that is not his own. We must not facilitate the President in his ongoing effort to aggregate power, to accumulate power within the executive branch of government that is not his own.

That is why we need to stand up to the President. I am against some of these nominees he has pushed forward again and again and again trying to trample over the rights of the minority. We have to do that. We have an obligation to stand up to the President, especially because he is taking power that is not his own, and he is doing it, among other things, to move forward with ObamaCare, a law that a majority of the American people have never approved of and a law the American people are growing steadily more against every single day.

I see my time is expired.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KAINE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, the matter before us is that of a nominee to be Commissioner of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission for a term expiring July 2018. This nominee was asked to serve as a Commissioner by President Obama and was confirmed by the Senate by a voice vote in December 2010 for a term ending July 2013. While her term expired at that date, she can continue to serve until the end of this congressional session, December 2013, so she is still in the position, continuing to serve.

I have gone through her entire biography, and I would have some questions if I were to have an opportunity to visit as a Senator today with this nominee to be Commissioner of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. I would like to ask the nominee if she is willing to forgo Federal employee insurance, which she currently has, to go onto the insurance now forced upon most of America through the President's health care law. Would she, who is now seeking nomination and seeking confirmation, be willing to do what Americans are being asked all around the country to do, people who received letters that said: Sorry, your insurance isn't good enough. Sorry, you can't keep your insurance regardless of what the President may have promised. What would this nominee say? Is the President's health care law good enough for her? Is what the President is promising to Americans good enough for her? I shouldn't even say "promising"—offering, if they can get it, depending on whether the Web site is working on a given day, whether they can afford it, whether they want it, whether it works for them. Is this something this nominee would think is a good idea for her?

Because, of course, she is in position as Commissioner of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, I would like to ask the nominee regarding her views of employers who are being forced to change health care plans offered to their employees as a result of the Democrat-mandated and passed on party-line votes Obama health care law. What are her views on employers being forced to change health care plans offered to employees because of what this Senate body did?

I would also like to ask the nominee whether she believes an employer who requires some of his or her employees to join the exchange and is OK about exempting other employees—whether that would be a violation of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission laws. Does she believe an employer who requires some of his employees to join the exchange while exempting others—would that be a violation of the laws. That is what the majority leader of the Senate has done. Do the laws not apply to the majority leader? Can he decide one way or the other?

We have heard his explanation. I know the Washington Post gave him three Pinocchios, meaning there is a considerable amount of untruth in his explanation. But what about this nominee before us today?

I would also like to hear her thoughts regarding whether people in power should have the right to change rules at any time in a manner that restricts the rights of those whom the rules were intended to protect because that is what has happened on this floor of the Senate in the last couple of weeks. A group broke the rules to change the rules in a way that has denied the minority rights that had been protected for centuries. So I would be interested in hearing what the nominee has to say about that.

It is interesting because the facts that have been brought forth on the floor by the Senate majority leader regarding the filibuster have actually been described as fraudulent: "Democrats' Filibuster Fraud."

On November 21, majority leader HARRY REID broke his promise not to employ the nuclear option when he and Senate Democrats eliminated the filibuster on nominations. They did so based on what Senator HATCH once described as a "filibuster fraud." ORRIN HATCH, a longstanding Member of this body, probably knows the rules better than any.

I believe they did it in an attempt to divert attention away from this ObamaCare nightmare—people faced with higher premiums, canceled coverage, people finding out they can't keep their doctor, fraud and identity theft which is going on even until today and I think is going to continue to get worse in the future, and higher copays and deductibles.

One of our Senate colleague's staffers was trying to sign up for insurance on Monday, I understand was on a Web site that pretty much looked identical to the government Web site, and what he found was it took him to a page where they asked for his bank account number and his PIN number. I think everyone agrees that is not part of the health care Web site. This is a staff member who works for the Senate and found himself taken through the computer—I should say the broken Web site, easy to maneuver and manipulate—it took him to a page asking for his bank account number and his PIN number.

He then called the help line, spent several hours on hold waiting to talk to people, and they said: Just get off of that Web site. The folks he was talking to even seemed surprised to know that he logged in to what he thought was the correct Web site and what looked identical to the government Web site, but yet there was a problem there.

So I believe what we are seeing is an effort to divert attention away from the ObamaCare nightmare and ensure that the circuit court of appeals will be a rubberstamp for the President's agenda. And what has happened? The Washington Post looked at the comments by the Senate majority leader, who on November 21 said:

In the history of the Republic, there have been 168 filibusters of executive and judicial nominations. Half of them have occurred during the Obama Administration . . .

The Washington Post, which looked at it, said: Leader REID's figures confused cloture motions, which are requests to end debate, with filibusters, the response to those requests.

So just making a request isn't a filibuster; it is actually making a filibuster response to the motion.

They said: This was despite the clear admonition of the June Congressional Research Service Report that cloture motions don't correspond with filibusters.

Apparently Senator REID did not have a chance to read that or wanted to ignore it. It didn't fit the scenario or the story that he was trying to weave. They went on to say:

Since the majority leader files nearly all cloture motions, Senator Reid himself created the very statistic that he relied upon to force a rule change.

Senator REID himself by filing all these cloture motions, he is the one who created the very statistic that he relied upon to force a rules change.

Many of these, the Washington Post reports, were clearly unnecessary. In fact they say 32 percent of all cloture motions in the past 4½ years were withdrawn before a vote. Even the fact checker of the Washington Post rejected the majority leader's claim. They said:

But we especially find it hard to get past CRS's admonition that the data in its report should not be used to calculate the number of filibusters, as Reid's office has done.

They have given him a couple of Pinocchios on that one too. It is fascinating that the majority leader of the Senate receives Pinocchio after Pinocchio in the Washington Post for continuing to distort or tell his version of a story which is just not true at all.

I believe all of this is in an effort to distract people from all of the issues that are damning and hurting the President's standing in the eyes of the American people.

It is interesting. You do not have to go too far back in the newspapers. You just go to Wednesday, December 11, yesterday. The Wall Street Journal, page 4, "Poll: Health Law Hurts President Politically."

The American people know this is the law that the President forced through, a party-line vote, in the middle of the night, Christmas—and it looks like we may be here Christmas again this year, because of an unwillingness of the Democrats to work together to accept Republican ideas, to talk with their colleagues. Let's see the subheadline here, "Obama's Job-Performanace Disapproval Rate Rises to All-Time High."

The President's disapproval rate of his job performance rises to an all-time high of 54 percent. Then it says "Even As Americans Upbeat On Economy."

So the President is at an all time high of his disapproval even at a time when people from an economic standpoint believe that things are not as bad as they may be. Why is it? Because of the health care law. People all across the country—the numbers are 5 million now who have lost their insurance, gotten letters from their insurance companies saying sorry, you have lost your insurance. It might have worked well for you.

I talked to folks at home in Wyoming, a ranch family. They have insurance. It works for them. It is what they wanted, it is what they had for many years, but they found out it didn't qualify because it was not good enough. It is interesting to hear the President say better insurance. Not better for them. More expensive, more things to cover that they don't ever need. The reason they lost their insurance is because it didn't fit the President's 10-point criteria. It didn't include maternity coverage.

A woman who knows I am a doctor, knows I practiced medicine in Wyoming for 24 years—and I talked to her at the Wyoming Farm Bureau meeting in Laramie a couple of weeks ago—said: I have had a hysterectomy. She said: Doctor, you know somebody who has had a hysterectomy doesn't need maternity coverage. They are not going to have more babies.

So she lost insurance that the family has had. It worked for the family, and they could afford it. They had it included in their budget, and they lost it because she doesn't have maternity coverage, because she has had a hysterectomy. She had insurance that worked for her.

Who does the President think he is, to say that he knows better than she does, what is right for her and for her family? That is why the President is being hurt politically. It is the health law. It is the mandates on the American people. It is the President and the Democrats in this body saying: We know better than you do. We know what your kids need, we know what your family needs, we know what works in your life.

I will tell you, the President does not know. He has no idea what works for these people at home in Wyoming and that they have made intelligent choices, thoughtful choices. They know what works for them. He doesn't know their lives, and he doesn't know their needs. His disapproval rate—not surprising to me—is at an all time high, and it is well deserved because people are being faced with not just the Web site failures, which drew attention to this, that I believe made the Secretary of Health and Human Services the laughing stock of America because of her comments and how they played forth on the comedy shows, but also and more important, because of what is below the tip of the iceberg, the higher premiums. My friend in Wyoming has found that what she needs to do in terms of the insurance that the President said she needs—it is going to cause their premium to skyrocket. She is going to be forced to buy insurance because the law says all Americans need to buy insurance. She is going to be forced to buy insurance that really they don't need, they don't want, they are never ever going to use, they cannot afford, and it is money not going to be used for other things—for books for the kids, for food for the table, for things around the house. They are going to lose that opportunity. That is what this is all about.

That is why the President's numbers have dropped so significantly. It is interesting when you go through these statistics, findings—and this is a combined poll from the Wall Street Journal and NBC news—the health care law, whether it was a good idea or bad idea. According to this poll: bad idea, 50 percent, good idea, 34 percent—50 percent bad, 34 percent good.

Then they say what is the impact of this health care law on your family? That is what people wonder about. What does it mean to them? What does this mean to them personally? Because it was interesting. On the exit polling from the Presidential election last year with Mitt Romney and Barack Obama, people across the country believed at that time that in response to the question of “cares for someone like me,” Barack Obama did much better, scored much higher than Mitt Romney.

Now the President is underwater because people are saying he doesn’t care about me; he doesn’t know about me; doesn’t care about me; is not thinking about me, is thinking about his legacy but not thinking what I am going to have to pay in premiums; not thinking about my insurance being canceled; not thinking about me not able to keep my doctor; not thinking about fraud and identity theft; not thinking about the higher copays and deductibles. Right now, in terms of the poll that was in yesterday’s Wall Street Journal by NBC news, whether this was going to have a positive or a negative impact on people’s lives, fewer than 1 in 8 Americans believe that this health care law is going to have a positive impact on them and their families. Fewer than 1 in 8. It is astonishing that fewer than 1 in 8 people think that this health care law is going to have a positive impact for them and their family.

Yet it was crammed down the throats of all Americans, forcing them to face all of these issues and costs related to that. The poll shows the President’s disapproval at the highest rate ever, 54 percent, going back from the time he was elected. In terms of how you look at this—start reading the article.

The federal health-care law is becoming a heavier political burden for President Barack Obama and his party, despite increased confidence in the economy and the public’s own generally upbeat sense of well-being, a new Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll suggests.

Disapproval of Mr. Obama’s job performance hit an all-time high in the poll, at 54%, amid the flawed rollout of the health law. Half of those polled now consider the law a bad idea, also a record high.

There was the flawed roll out and Web sites can be fixed. The Web site can be fixed—and that is why the Web site failure is only the tip of the iceberg. What has really gotten people mad is the 5 million letters, and we don’t even know how many letters went out in Illinois, Ohio, Texas. We don’t have those numbers yet. So the numbers of folks who lost their health care coverage that worked for them, that they liked, that number is, I believe, going to be higher than 5 million. So this is going to continue to roll out with people showing huge disappointment. I expect the President’s popularity to fall even further.

I think it is going to get even worse come January 1 as people start to go to a doctor and find out that maybe they think they bought insurance through the health care Web site and find out that they actually do not have it. We have people I have talked to that have put in all the information. They spent hours, but the Web site went down.

They came back for more hours but don’t have confirmation yet. They really do not know if they have insurance yet. They would like to know. They would like to see assurance. They would like to have confidence their government can get something right. They do not see it now. They don’t see the President doing what he promised.

The President was on television with President Clinton, at the Clinton World Summit in New York, just 3 or 4 days before the Web site was unveiled, and there was the President sitting with former President Clinton saying that this was going to be easier to use than Amazon. Cheaper than your direct phone bill, and if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor.

Did the President really believe that or was he so detached, so disconnected from the reality of what is happening in this country that he was not even overseeing his job. This is his signature achievement. Yet it seems like he ignored the implementation process.

For those in this body who served as Governors, as chief executives of States, as the Presiding Officer of the Senate has done, you never let that happen. You might have tested it for yourself: What is it going to look like? I am curious, what happens when people sign on? How does it work? But just to push “go” and have this blind confidence that everything is going to be fine and not know and 3 or 4 days before on a world stage saying: Oh, easier than Amazon, I think is very distressing to many people. That is why the President’s performance shows such high disapproval, 54 percent. That is why, according to the Wall Street Journal poll and NBC news, the health law is hurting the President politically.

This is not just a survey of a couple of people. This survey is of 1,000 adults. It was conducted between December 4 and December 8. What it did is it found a sharp erosion, they say, a sharp erosion since January in many of the attributes of a President.

What are the attributes you would like to have in a President? What would a nation look to in a President? Attributes that say: This is what we want in our President. Honesty—that is what you would like to have, a President who is honest. Leadership ability to handle a crisis. They say that had kept President Obama aloft through the economic and political turmoil of his first term, but now it is not there anymore. The feeling about the President regarding his own honesty has dropped precipitously.

You do not want our country to have a President who the people think is not honest, but that is where we are right now. I will tell you, he brought it upon himself and he did it intentionally, he did it deliberately and he did it by looking into that camera and intentionally misleading the American people about his health care law—not just in the lead-up to passing the law but continued all the way through. What does the President say? He said if you like your insurance, you can keep your insurance, period. It was his punctuation of that sentence that said there is nothing after that. He said if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period. He has continued to say that.

It was interesting, even after the whole debacle, the letters going out, so many people finding their coverage had been canceled, the White House Web site continued with a video of the President saying, “If you like your coverage, you can keep your coverage, period.” If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period. Is it any surprise that the American people no longer find the President trustworthy, honest? Is it a surprise, then, that the President finds that the health law is hurting him politically? Is it a surprise that the disapproval of his performance is now at an all-time high? That is what we are dealing with in this country, and yet the President continues to go forth and say, are the Republican ideas?

We have had idea after idea. We tried to visit with the President about those ideas. He wants to hear nothing. He wants to hear nothing. He wants his talking points and he doesn’t really have a clear understanding of what damage he has done to America with this law that has hurt so many families across the country and continues to cause pain and suffering and anxiety, and as a result anger, and as a result the health law hurts the President politically. Those are the issues that are in front of us. Those are the issues that are in front of us.

I have a letter from a gentleman who lives in Cody, WY, that I want to read and share. This came in a couple of days ago online.

For the most part people in Wyoming know me as Dr. BARRASSO. I have treated many of them. I have been involved with the Wyoming health fairs and taking low-cost blood screenings to people all around the Cowboy State. I still attend the fairs and visit the small communities. We did a poll there about why people go to health fairs. The No. 2 reason they go is for their health, and the No. 1 reason is to socialize and see other people in their community.

I know the Presiding Officer has seen similar things in his home State when he goes to activities that people go to, and they want to see one another.

This email is by a gentleman who wrote to me and knows about my activities at the health fairs and as a doctor.

He said:

Just got a quote from my insurance agent on Obama care insurance. From $860 I currently spend per month for my family of 4, to $2,400. All with the low deductible of $10,000 per person per year.

That is the other issue: Higher copays and deductibles. This is a big part of what is happening with this health care law. I mean, it is interesting.

This is Monday's Wall Street Journal, dated December 9: "Deductibles Fuel New Worries of Health-Law Sticker Shock." That is what my friend from Cody, WY, is finding after being hit with the higher deductibles.

I will share some of the things the Wall Street Journal said and then get back to the letter from my friend in Cody.

It says:

The average individual deductible for what is called a bronze plan on the exchange—the lowest priced coverage—is $5,081 per person a year, according to a new report on insurance offerings in 34 of the 36 states that rely on the federally run online marketplace.

That is 42 percent higher than the average deductible of $3,589 for an individually purchased plan in 2013 before much of the federal law took effect.

"Deductibles Fuel New Worries of Health-Law Sticker Shock."

Right under the article, "Health Site Snafus Plague Maryland." I understand that is a State that has their own exchange. That is not even a Federally run exchange. When the President says the States are doing such a great job, and if we let the States do all of these things, we wouldn't have all of these problems. Maryland is having huge problems, as are quite a few of the States.

Getting back to the letter written by this gentleman from Cody, WY, who was hit with an incredibly high deductible—higher than the average. The average is over $5,000, which is higher than it was last year for people around the country. He said:

I'm not sure what planet they think I live on, but there is no way I can spend more than ½ of my monthly income on insurance. For the first time in my adult life I will soon be without insurance.

What does President Obama have to say about that? How does the ObamaCare health care law—I thought it was written in a way that people would get insurance, not lose insurance. Wasn't that the purpose of this? This gentleman said this is the first time in his life he will be without insurance. Why? Because of the law.

He said: "What does it matter if my 18-year-old children can stay on my insurance plan if I can't afford to keep one?"

I mean that is the big talking point on the other side of the aisle; young people up to age 26 can stay on their parents' health care plan. I think it is a good idea to allow young people to stay on their family's insurance plan. Of course the President tends to add in that it is free, and it is not free. There is a cost to that. I think it is a good idea to help with families.

As this gentleman from Cody, WY, says:

What does it matter if they can stay on the insurance plan if I can't afford to keep one? Also all the air time to pre existing conditions are meaningless if I can't afford to keep a plan.

I feel greatly blessed to have the good paying job that I have. It puts me above the pay level that would allow me to get any subsidies.

He has a family of four and can't get subsidies. He said: "By the way, with the system in place this year, I wouldn't have needed subsidies." With the current system he wouldn't need subsidies, but when he goes from $860 to $2,400, he can't afford it even though he doesn't qualify for subsidies. Yes, we see the genius of the Obama health care law by ignoring what happens in real people's lives.

I think it is interesting to see that the people who wrote this law wrote it behind closed doors. I know the President said this evening he was not a Member of this body at the time, but it was written behind closed doors through that door of the Senate. The people who knew the most about what is in that law, they seem to be the very people who have been excluded by the majority leader from having to live under it. Those are the people who got the exemption, and they are the ones who know what is in it.

It is so ironic that the majority leader of the Senate would say that his people who helped to write this law don't have to live under it. The Washington Post calls him on it. Yet the rest of America has to live under what is not good enough for the majority leader's own staff. It is ironic and sad to see a day like this come to our country.

As this gentleman says, he has never needed to have subsidies before. He said: "I have never needed them in the past and would like to continue to never get a handout from my government." This is an independent individual. He doesn't want a subsidy. He is not asking for a subsidy. He just wants the insurance that worked for him and his family for all of these years, and now he has no insurance.

He said:

I employ about 35 people with my company. When we first opened about a year and ½ ago we were talking about getting some sort of coverage. It became very clear that we will not be able to do this . . .

They have 35 employees, so under the 50, but still wanted to do the right thing. He wanted to give people coverage. He said:

It became clear that we will not be able to do this, and have stopped any of our plans to provide this in the future. We also know for sure that we cannot afford to ever employ more than 50 people as we continue to grow, there is an upward limit on how many people we will hire.

That is as a result of the law and not because the business is not there and not because the economy won't support it. It is not because they don't want to employ more people, and not because they don't want to help their community. Because of the health care law, they are putting a cap on the size of their business.

He said:

Simple economics, Obamacare is a job killer in Wyoming. It has never been easy to be in business, that is part of the fun of being successful. It is discouraging when our federal government limits the American dream for everyone.

The Federal Government is limiting the American dream for everyone. He said: "I am thankful for your efforts, but from my office chair in Cody, it is already too late."

I know I am not the only person in this body who is getting letters like this. I know people who actually voted for the health care law are getting letters like this. I am not sure what kind of responses they are giving them. We call these people. The staff has worked with them, and I visit with them when I get home on the weekends to listen to folks.

But when we look at that sort of letter and that sort of well thought out rational approach from somebody who is working and has had insurance their whole life, that provides for his family and builds a business in a community, hires people, wants to provide insurance and now says: Not going to provide insurance, going to limit our growth, and my family loses insurance—why? It is because of a health care law that I think the President—I don't know if he had any idea of what the impact of this was going to be. We came to the floor on this side of the aisle day after day and week after week talking about why when you read the law, it is a real problem. We talked about why the concerns expressed by the American people should have been listened to but regrettably were not listened to, and why I think it is a terrible mistake and very harmful to the American people.

It is not just the Web site. It is the higher premiums that my friend from Cody is hearing about because his coverage was canceled because it wasn't good enough according to the President.

We will get to whether he could keep his doctor or not in a second. We have talked about higher copays and higher deductibles, and those are the things we are facing now in this country. People are noticing them around my State and all around the 50 States. Doctors are noticing it.

I was in my medical office last week talking to some of my colleagues—my former medical partners. They are being swamped right now with folks coming in for care. This is not just in the middle of Wyoming. This is all across the country.

I talked to a surgeon yesterday on the faculty at Duke University. He had the same story there. So we are seeing it east and west and north and south. Doctors' offices are being swamped with patients who have insurance now.

The President's health care law was to make sure that more people got more insurance and coverage after the first of the year. These are people who have insurance now and are afraid they will not have it after the first of the year. They don't know if they will have it. If they had to go onto the exchanges, they haven't gotten confirmation from the exchanges yet. They are anxious about that; they are also angry.

They don't know if they are going to be able to keep their doctor, which gets to the point of "can't keep your doctor." So what they are doing is going to their doctors' offices now and saying: I have been putting this off for a while—my shoulder that has been bothering me or my hip or my knee, and I want to get it taken care of now while I know you are still my doctor. I know that I can still come to you at least until the end of the year, and I know for sure I still have insurance right now.

Hospitals, medical offices, and clinics are all being swamped by patients trying to get caught up with things they may have put off for a while. They don't know what will happen come January 1st, and I will tell you neither does the President of the United States. I think the President doesn't know what will happen on January 1.

I think he is standing there with his fingers crossed and hoping it doesn't get any worse. I will tell you. I think it will get worse with more people, with sticker shock of higher premiums, and coverage canceled. People are going to find out all across the country they can't keep their doctor.

Fraud and identity theft is going to get worse as more cases get reported, and we are going to see more and more people not being able to pay their deductibles.

I wanted to spend a second on this issue—on the whole issue of the President's promise that if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor. As a doctor, there is a very special relationship between a doctor and a patient and a patient and a doctor. It goes both ways.

I think it was very telling, as well as distressing to many people, this past Sunday when on one of the Sunday news shows, Ezekiel Emanuel, Rahm Emanuel's brother, who is a professor at the University of Pennsylvania and a physician in the academic setting—one of the interviewers asked him: Was it a true statement, "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor?" He said: The President never said you could go to all of these other people and specialists. The interviewer said: Wait a second. Let's get back to if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor. Ezekiel Emanuel basically said if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor if you are willing to pay more. That is not what the President said. The President used the punctuation point, used that period at the end of his sentence: If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period. Now we have Ezekiel Emanuel on the Sunday shows saying: Well, the President never really said that. But he did. He said it dozens of times.

Folks in this body have asked me about the bond between a doctor and a patient, and I think the President knew very well about that bond when he made the promise that if you like what you have, you can keep it. So I put pen to paper and had an editorial in yesterday's Investor's Business Daily—Wednesday, December 11, 2013—called "A Special Bond Deeply Severed By ObamaCare." I would like to share some of those thoughts with my colleagues today because I think that is a special bond. As a doctor, I know what that bond is like with my patients.

I write in this column:

A central architect of the president's health care law admitted this week that the often repeated promise that "if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor" simply isn't true.

Instead, Dr. Ezekiel Emanuel explained that if you like your doctor, you will simply need to pay more to keep your doctor.

I write:

As a physician, I know firsthand how this will hurt many Americans.

Families look to doctors as trusted friends, as confidants and as counselors and turn to them for advice in making life and death decisions.

In Wyoming, patients have included me in graduations, in weddings, and asked me to serve as a pallbearer. They have asked me to pray with them, to referee family disputes, and to provide reassurance when a doctor they did not know was called in to consult.

I go on:

Norman Rockwell's painting "Doctor and Doll" tells the story.

I think people here can kind of visualize that picture.

A little girl holds up her doll as the trusted family doctor listens to the doll with his stethoscope. The caring, compassionate physician takes the time to reassure the concerned little girl.

The doctor-patient relationship is a very special bond. It requires faith and trust for a patient to allow me to cut into their body to remove a tumor, to replace a worn-out joint, to fix a broken bone, to repair a torn ligament and, above all else, to do no harm.

The President knew of the special relationship between people and their doctors. That is why when he was trying to gain support for his health care law, he made a clear and simple promise to the American people. The President said, "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period."

Now people across the country are finding they can't keep their doctor.

The same law that has caused millions of Americans to lose the health insurance that worked for them is now causing people to lose their doctors.

People shopping for insurance on government exchanges and people going to the Web site are being forced to purchase insurance for things they don't want, don't need, or will never use.

To keep costs down, many of these policies limit the doctors and limit the hospitals that patients can use.

So not just the doctors, the hospitals as well, including the Mayo Clinic and Cedars-Sinai Medical Center—they are excluded from many insurance networks.

Some of the best children's hospitals in the country are also excluded from the exchanges. This means a child with cancer—

And there have been articles about this—may lose access to his or her doctor and the specialty hospital because of this law.

Come January 1, there are kids in this country who are not going to have the ability under their new plans to go to the hospitals that have been treating these young people.

In New Hampshire—

There are two Senators here from New Hampshire, one on either side of the aisle.

In New Hampshire, 10 of the state's 26 hospitals—

So there are 26 hospitals; 10 of the State's 26 hospitals—are excluded from the only carrier offering insurance in the exchange.

There is only one carrier in the exchange. I remember the President talking about all of this competition. There is 1 carrier in the exchange. There are 26 hospitals in the State, and 10 of them are excluded from the only carrier that is offering insurance.

I will tell my colleagues that this next sentence is fascinating.

The head of the medical staff of one of the excluded hospitals—

This is the chief of staff of the hospital—learned that her plan does not even allow her to seek treatment at her own hospital where she is the chief of staff.

It is unbelievable.

We take a look at that and say: How could this have happened? But that is the law that was passed, and that is the 7-foot tower of regulations that has come out from the bureaucracy.

I write:

The situation could be equally bad for seniors on Medicare.

For seniors on Medicare, if you can't keep your doctor, it is a really big deal. It is sometimes difficult for a senior on Medicare to find a doctor. If they get one and then they like that doctor, they want to keep the doctor. As we have seen, seniors sometimes move to other communities to be closer to their kids and grandkids. To find a doctor is a struggle, it is a challenge, but I think the situation could be equally bad for Medicare, and here is why, and I wrote about it in this editorial in the Investor's Business Daily yesterday:

Thousands of doctors caring for seniors on Medicare Advantage—

And about one in four people is on this program called Medicare Advantage.

Thousands of doctors caring for seniors on Medicare Advantage have been dropped from their networks. Those Medicare patients will now be challenged with finding a new doctor to take care of them.

The president's health care law is making it harder for doctors as well as patients.

It is not just the patients; it is very hard for doctors.

Doctors know their patients' health history, they know their families, they know their lives. Doctors value the personal relationship as much as the patient does.

That's why people become doctors in the first place—to take care of their patients.

In my graduating class, the way we felt about it—and I was invited back to speak at the commencement. I think it was about the 30th year after I had graduated that I got invited back as a guest speaker, talking to those medical students who were graduating. That is the same reason people continue to go into medicine. They want to take care of patients. They are intellectually stimulated and challenged by all the new advances, but people go into medicine to take care of their patients.

In this editorial, I say:

Even if someone is able to keep their doctor, they won't necessarily be able to spend as much time with that doctor as they might like. That's because nearly two-thirds of the doctors expect to spend more time on paperwork under the requirements of the new law.

So doctors are going to have to spend more time on paperwork. Some of this is done with computers, with electronic medical records, but there are still paperwork-keeping activities. It is interesting because so often doctors have the computer in the office with the patient, and patients feel the computer that is mandated under the health care law is interfering, with the doctor looking at the computer screen rather than looking at the patient. So this is all having a significant impact.

I conclude by saying:

This is not at all what the president promised. People all across America put their faith and trust in Barack Obama when they elected him President.

It's the same kind of faith and trust they have in their doctor. When patients lose trust in their doctor—or citizens lose trust in their president—it is extremely difficult to regain.

That is why—going back to yesterday's Wall Street Journal: "Health Care Law Hurts President Politically"—the disapproval rate has risen to an alltime high of 54 percent. Fifty-four percent disapprove of the President.

I go on to say in this article, which is what happens:

I continue to hear from my patients in Wyoming. They have always had my home phone number. They are anxious. They are angry. They call me at home. They know what they wanted from health care reform. What they wanted was access to quality, affordable care.

That is what the President talked about in his speeches, but that is not what he delivered in his health care law.

That's not what they got with this law. Now, many face losing the doctor who has always been there for them.

If President Obama wants to regain the trust of the American people, he will sit down with Republicans to deliver reforms that will help all Americans and fully protect the doctor-patient relationship.

After all—

And I hear this at home in Wyoming—

President Obama has his own doctor at the White House who is dedicated to his care. I'm sure he values that relationship just as much as other Americans value their relationship with their doctor.

So that is what I felt when I wrote this article called "A Special Bond Deeply Severed By ObamaCare" in yesterday's—December 11—issue of Investor's Business Daily, that people can't keep their doctor and there are great concerns about that, and they are being impacted in so many ways.

It is interesting. Since this health care law passed, I have come to the floor just about every week with a doctor's second opinion about the health care law to talk about ways that I felt this health care law was bad for patients, bad for doctors and nurses, physician assistants, and others who take care of patients, and why I thought it was terrible for the taxpayers. But it seems that in recent weeks we can pick up any newspaper and there is a story basically saying this law is bad for people.

This is the New York Times, and they support the law. This past Monday, Robert Parry, a well-known journalist who writes frequently on the topic of the health care law and on health exchanges, said:

Premiums may be low, but other costs can be high. For months, the Obama administration has heralded the low premiums and medical insurance policies on sale in the insurance exchanges created by the health care law, but as consumers dig into the details—

Which is something I was asking for on this Senate floor a number of years ago when the law passed: Will the Democrats please dig into the details to see what impact this is going to have on people in terms of higher premiums, in terms of canceled coverage, in terms of trying to keep their doctor, in terms of higher copays and deductibles, in terms of people on Medicare trying to find a doctor to take care of them.

As consumers dig into the details, they are finding that the deductibles and other out-of-pocket costs are often much higher—

Often much higher; not a rare case—than what is typical in employer-sponsored health plans, which says that the exchanges are not going to be helping many people.

I found it interesting—talking a little about people not being able to keep their doctors but also not being able to keep their hospitals—why is that? I think we are seeing a number of these exchanges and policies being offered. They realize that the people who go to certain hospitals have more serious conditions, likely more expensive, and as a result don't include those hospitals.

In the Financial Times this week, "Healthcare insurers cut costs by excluding top hospitals." This was Monday of this week, and we are seeing this week after week, which is why I have been coming to the floor with great regularity to share with this body what people across the country are seeing.

It says:

People buying insurance plans under "ObamaCare" will have limited access to some of the leading U.S. hospitals, including two renowned cancer centers, as insurers try to cut costs.

There is a picture of MD Anderson Cancer Center at the University of Texas. It says the plan will not cover treatment at the Houston cancer center. I didn't even get into that in my article. I talked about pediatric hospitals, and I talked about New Hampshire hospitals. But we are talking about major cancer hospitals that are not included in the exchanges for the most part, and that is what we are seeing all across the country. You can kind of compare it to what kind of car you could buy. What kind of coverage can you get. But the bottom line is people were misled by the President and people feel deceived by this President.

Tuesday's Washington Post: "Under health law, insurers limiting drug coverage." "Costs may soar for those with HIV, other ailments." This is not on the back page. This is on the front page of the Washington Post. This is all as a result of what the Democrats, in a party-line vote, passed and forced upon the country.

That is what is going on here. We have a health care law that people are very uncomfortable with, and they are going to continue to let the President know that, which is why he is being hurt, his disapproval is the highest ever, and what has been sharply eroded are folks' belief in this President's honesty and his leadership ability to handle a crisis.

This is a crisis for the President. This is a crisis for the country. What is the President doing about it? He is blaming the Republicans for a law that passed with no Republican votes. He is blaming the Republicans for an idea that was his and was forced through on party-line votes, without Republican input, written behind closed doors, right through those doors over there, by people who have now been excluded, do not have to go under the health care law. Yet in the Washington Post: "HARRY REID's explanation for why not all of his staff is going on 'ObamaCare'"—and the big three Pinocchios. Remember the story of Pinocchio, the boy whose nose grew whenever he told falsehoods. That is what the Washington Post has to say about the majority leader of the Senate in not making all of his employees live under what the rest of the country is having to deal with right now.

I think it is very distressing. That is what we are facing. The country is facing higher premiums. Are people going to not have Christmas because they are, instead, having to use that money to pay their January premium? Are they going to not pay the January premium? How does that play into all this? Are they going to decide: I don't think I am going to have insurance, like my friend from Cody who wrote to me, who has had insurance all of his life but not now.

We have a Senator from Wyoming, the other Senator, the senior Senator, MIKE ENZI. He was one who was also sounding the alarm during this entire debate. He saw the impacts beforehand. It was interesting. There was a letter to the editor in the Powell Tribune, a newspaper in Wyoming, that talked about what we saw coming with this health care law. It was written by someone from Gillette, a Marion Scott. The headline is: "ENZI saw ACA impacts beforehand. . . ." It says:

Dear Editor:

Fox News had a very interesting and informative program Tuesday evening Nov. 6 on "The Kelly Files with Megyn Kelly."

As anyone who watches Fox News knows, they are covering the beginning effects of the Affordable Care Act, also known as ObamaCare, as it is being implemented. Megyn Kelly began her program stating she had a special guest who had predicted three-and-one-half years ago almost exactly what will happen when the ObamaCare law goes into effect this October.

Her special guest was our own Wyoming senior Senator Mike Enzi and he had made his predictions in a speech on the Senate floor three-and-one-half years ago. He was then called a fearmonger and radical right-winger.

And he was. That is what they called him, as Senator ENZI went to the floor because of his concerns that you would not be able to keep your insurance. He had actually read the Federal Register, saw the regulations that came out, and he said: Millions of people are going to lose their insurance. He said it from right here at this desk over here. He came to the Senate floor. He said it 3½ years ago, and those on the other side of the aisle voted against Senator ENZI's proposal that would actually let people keep their insurance. It was the regulations regarding grandfathered insurance policies, that people would be able to keep their policies. That was the vote. Those on this side of the aisle all voted to allow people to keep their policies because that is what the President promised them. Folks on the other side of the aisle voted against Senator ENZI's proposal.

But those on the other side called Senator ENZI "a fearmonger and radical right-winger."

It says:

Senator Enzi was probably one of a very few elected officials who had actually read the bill.

Senator ENZI, it says, was one of the few elected officials who actually read the bill. I believe that. Who can forget NANCY PELOSI saying: First you have to pass it before you get to find out what is in it. That video has been played and played again and again. I believe that many of the people who voted for it never did read it. I believe they did not read the bill. I believe they did not really understand it, and part of it is, I believe, they actually believed the President when he said: If you like what you have, you can keep it. If you like your insurance, you can keep it. If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor. So they took this as an article of faith.

I read the bill. Senator ENZI read the bill. I know a number of our Members who read it were very concerned and came to the floor and spoke about different parts of the bill. I can remember Senator SUSAN COLLINS standing here with her sign about the impact on small businesses and how detrimental it was going to be. I remember Senator Olympia Snowe down here on the floor focusing on how it was going to impact businesses in Maine. Yet all of these concerns that we raised, which are now coming home to roost today, were ignored on the other side of the aisle.

This woman continues and concludes by saying:

With this kind of representation in the Senate I would ask Wyoming voters this question. Is now a good time to send a new Senator to Washington and lose this experience and seniority?

I will tell you, I am proud to stand with Senator ENZI, and he saw it coming. He saw it coming 3½ years ago with the amendment on the Senate floor. We voted that way, and the Democrats voted essentially to confirm that people would lose their insurance. They were not going to be able to keep it even if they liked it.

So these are the problems that continue to plague the health care law, continue to plague folks all around the country, as they are trying to deal with something they never anticipated. You kind of think a year in advance: What is going to happen with our kids? What is going to happen? Are we going to need to do something with the car? Patch a hole in the roof? How do we kind of budget for the year? I will tell you, my friend in Cody, WY, never ever saw it coming that he was going to have to go from $860 a month to $2,400 a month for health insurance.

We know that at least 5 million people have gotten letters that they have lost their insurance. For them, I do not think they are going to find it is going to be a very happy holiday season, a very Merry Christmas. I think they are going to be trying to figure out: Do I have insurance or do I go without it, as what is going to happen with my friend there. Those are the things we are looking at.

Then, of course, there is the Web site. It is just interesting. This is an article in this week's Jackson Hole News & Guide in Jackson Hole, WY. "New health care glitches plaguing Jacksonites. Marketplace insurance companies try to mail paperwork to Jackson street addresses." But they only get mail in post office boxes there.

But that is how the Web site was set up. It was not set up so there would be a separate area if you do not have a street address. They need a physical address, but in some places you do not get mail that way, in many places around the country, in certain rural American locations. But the people who wrote it, the people who did this whole thing were rather clueless about how the country works, rather clueless about what happens in people's homes, in people's families, in people's communities. I am sure they are very smart people and got degrees from advanced places but really do not have an idea of what is going on out there.

I also found it interesting that even when the President tried to tell success stories of people who may have had some success under this, it does not even pan out.

A story on CNN: "Woman Hailed by President as Obamacare Success Story Now Can't Afford Obamacare."

CNN reports that a woman the President hailed as an ObamaCare success story just realized she won't be able to afford ObamaCare because it is too expensive.

It is too expensive. This is the tragedy. This is a national tragedy, this Obama health care law. It was a self-inflicted wound on our country. No foreign enemy did this to us. The President of the United States, who gave speeches that painted a broad picture of a better world, has delivered a much worse world for folks through this legislation.

I think this is devastating to the country, to patients, to doctors, to the nurses, the caregivers, and to the taxpayers. The reason we needed health care reform in the country was because of the cost of care. That is what this was all about, trying to help people get the care they need from a doctor they choose at lower cost. That is what we were really focused on.

So we needed reform. We needed the right kind of reform—reform that actually lowers patients' costs, improves health, and protects the vulnerable. So that means more affordable insurance options. It means helping people with preexisting conditions. It means protecting quality care for older Americans. We do not have any of that with this President's health care law. This is causing costs to go up, causing quality to go down, causing people to lose their doctor. The President, time and time again, in speech after speech, talked about providing coverage, but not providing care. As a doctor will tell you, there is a huge difference between coverage and care.

This whole thing was predicated on printing up and giving out to people Medicaid cards. Medicaid is a broken system. States will tell you, Governors will tell you, that in many States Medicaid is the No. 1 cost driver of the State. In our home State, it was No. 1 when I was in the State senate. What it meant is that money that went to that then was not able to be used for teachers or schools or students or roads or public safety officers. It is a huge cost driver.

So the issue is we needed to deal with the cost of care. The President says: Put them all in this Medicaid system. What is it? Forty percent—some high number of physicians do not want to take patients on Medicaid because in a sense the reimbursement to doctors who take care of those patients is low enough that you could not even afford to keep the doors of the clinic open if all you saw were Medicaid patients all day.

So doctors want to see and take care of everyone. The idea was to put all these additional people on Medicaid, give them Medicaid cards. But this whole health care law did nothing adequately to address the need for more health care providers. So now you have more people with so-called coverage, but it is empty coverage, it is not quality care because there are not enough people to actually take care of the patients who are now being covered. It is like giving people a bus ticket when there is no bus coming. They can just stand there, but it does not mean they can actually get care. But the President continued to focus on coverage, and coverage does not equal care.

So you take a look at the problems families face with cost and access, and what the President is trying to provide is coverage, but we have seen higher premiums, coverage canceled, which is coverage that worked for many people. Some of these are now being forced into trying to find something. People are losing their doctor and have higher out-of-pocket costs, higher copays, higher deductibles.

You read some of these stories of somebody saying: If I have to pay all this every month, why should I even sign up? Why don't I just pay the fine? Why should I pay all this every month and then have such a high deductible when I am never going to use that much care. Maybe they never will use that much.

So the logic behind this whole thing is baffling to many who have kind of ignored it, I think until now, until October 1 when the Web site went live and subsequently crashed repeatedly. But now they are saying: Hey, I have lost my insurance. That has been the real fracture point, when people see they have lost their insurance that has worked for them. To replace it is going to be something that does not work as well for them and their families and is going to be more expensive.

So we see the public reaction to the law. It is a reaction related to the premiums, related to trying to use the exchanges, and related to whether employers stop hiring, which we have seen from my friend in Cody, WY. We have seen the issues of reduced work hours because there is the regulation, if you are working more than 30 hours a week you get counted toward that 50 employees. So many businesses have lowered the work hours for people, which affects their take-home pay.

The President had some thoughts on that. He said we will just delay the employer mandate for 1 year. That is the mandate in the law that everyone has to—at work they have to supply insurance to the employees. The President may have had some idea that things were going to get sticky for him and he was going to become a little more unpopular with the individual mandate. So he pushed off the employer mandate for 1 year, unilaterally. When is the law the law and when is the law something that the President can take a page out, throw it away and say: Well, we will move that back a year. It has happened about 14 times in this law.

Even when the House tried to give the President authority to do what he did, the Democrats blocked that. It is astonishing. What about the individual mandate? We are going to be fining people—the government. The President is going to be fining people; whether it is a fine, a tax, a penalty, depending on how the Supreme Court states. That is going to go into effect January 1.

The people may not even be able to buy the product they are being fined for not having come January 1. So is the President going to delay the individual mandate as well? There was a vote in the House, a number of people voted with bipartisan support for that. I think it is going to be challenging in the days ahead for the President to get ahead of the situation the country is facing.

The newest numbers were out yesterday with the signup. The Associated Press reported on that:

Health care signups pick up the pace in November playing catchup with a long way to go. President Obama's new health insurance market last month picked up the dismal pace of signups, the administration reported Wednesday. Employment statistics showed 364,000 people had signed up as of November 30 under the health care law. Although that is more than three times the October total, it is less than one-third of the 1.2 million people officials had originally projected would enroll nationwide by the end of November.

So crunch time is coming. Consumers who are afraid they do not have insurance, they have until December 23, if they want to keep their coverage January 1. But as I said earlier, that is why we are seeing so many people across the country who do have insurance going to doctors now—the doctor they know, the doctor they like—to take care of problems that may have been kind of put on the back burner but that they would like to have taken care of now because they are not sure what is going to happen January 1: not sure if they are going to be able to go to the same doctor, not sure if they are going to be able to go to the same hospital, not sure if they are going to be able to have insurance, even though they think they may have insurance. Those are the things the American people are facing.

So as we come to the floor to discuss this nominee, the number of questions I have are those related to what she would think about employers changing things, people not signing up, others being forced to sign up; should she have to live under the law of the land as a government employee, when the Senate majority leader says, well, his people—some of his people do, some do not. These are questions one would expect to have answered. I know we are going to vote on that nominee in a couple of hours. But I think this is something the nominee should be thinking about as we take a look at this health care law and the devastating impacts it is having on people all across the country.

Take a look at what is happening for consumers, people who do not work in Washington, people who do not live in Washington. What you see is that the costs are going to be crippling to them. I stand here amazed that that gentleman from Cody, WY, tripled the cost. I do not know that everybody is going to face that. But the President promised that costs would go down. He promised his health care reform would save American families I think he said $2,500 per year by the end of his first term.

I remember—and I have seen the reel of him saying it—fifteen times he said that. Your insurance premiums will go down by $2,500 by the end of the first term. Go down? They have gone up significantly, thousands of dollars. They have gone up. This is as he was a candidate running for President. He promised his health care reform would save American families $2,500 by the end of his first term.

But for many Americans it is driving the premiums way up; in some cases doubling them, in some cases tripling them. It is happening on the exchanges. It is happening for people who are trying to shop not on the exchanges but if they have lost their policy and have to start paying for a lot of other things, whether it is pediatric dental care, pediatric ophthalmology care. All of those things drive up the costs.

That is the sticker shock of the health care law. So as people continue to learn more about the law, they are going to continue to become more and more displeased, which is why I think we are going to go back to this headline: "Health care law hurts President politically." I know for people in this body that is a big deal. For the President that is a big deal, because the last time I had a chance to speak face to face with the President, he was taking a lot about polls.

But as a doctor, I am more concerned about how the health care law is hurting people's health, hurting their families, hurting their families economically, hurting the help they need, the care they need, interfering with life choices, impacting their quality of life, costing them in terms of disposable income in terms of money they could use for other things, and it is all because of the health care law.

I am going to continue to come back to the floor on a regular basis to talk, not about the Web site failures because that is just the tip of the iceberg. I expect that the Web site is going to get fixed. It is going to take them a while. It is going to take them a lot longer than they ever suspected, because the day it happened, they described the Web site problem as being a result of heavy traffic. We know on that same day, worldwide, many Web sites had much more traffic. The site broke down with I think less than 1,000 people logging on.

But they said it would be fixed almost immediately. It was not. Here we are. They said it would be fixed by the end of November. So they gave themselves 2 months. It was not. Somebody testified not too long ago in the House to say the back end has not been built, there is 30 to 40 percent of it which has not even been put together.

Ultimately the Web site will get fixed, but the higher premiums are going to continue, people trying to buy insurance for their family that meets the criteria the President has set out which is not based on criteria that works for families or necessary for families. It is just these 10 things government has decided that they think they know what is best for families, when I think families know what is best for them and what they would look for with health insurance and health care.

So we are going to continue to face higher premiums. People are going to continue to have their coverage canceled. It is not just the individuals. Next year when the employer mandate goes into effect, when businesses are forced to make a decision: Do I try to buy health insurance that meets all of those high demands that government says has to be included? Do I meet all of that and face these double or triple higher premiums or do I say just go to the exchanges?

People who work, will they lose their employer-based insurance? I think we are going to see more and more of that. Even the Congressional Budget Office, which took a look at this health care law, said it will happen. They said there are employers who will no longer provide insurance who are providing it now. There are different numbers from different assessments as to how many people are going to be forced off their employer-based insurance, how many folks will lose it. I do not know. I have seen different ranges. But it starts in the low millions and it goes into the tens and twenties and thirties of millions and even higher than that.

So those are the folks who will be losing and having their coverage canceled. Then will those people be able to keep their doctor? The answer there is many will not. Many will not. Many of those who have lost their insurance now are not going to be able too keep their doctor, even if they want to, and even if their doctor wants to keep them.

Doctors do not even know if they are going to be included in a number of these exchanges. They cannot find out, when they go and look and try to see if they can get on the Web site, where are they covered, where are they not included? This has been so poorly thought out and so poorly executed. It has left patients in the lurch, it has left hospitals in the lurch, and it has left doctors in the lurch.

I am astonished that all of those people still have the faith and confidence in the President, which is probably another reason why people do not look to the President now as having either honesty or leadership ability to handle a crisis—to see such a precipitous drop in the view of the President's ability to handle a crisis. Because if they cannot get this right, what happens in terms of a national disaster? How could he respond quickly when he had 3½ years to put together a Web site that apparently he paid very little attention to?

So we are looking at the higher premiums, the canceled coverage, cannot keep your doctor, the higher copays and deductibles are going to continue to plague this country and people. I know people on both sides of the aisle are going to get letters to this effect.

I know the Presiding Officer, when he goes home every night to his home State, hears from people. You stop and fill up with gas, you hear from people. I am hoping other colleagues of ours will actually read their mail, go home, listen to people, to see how devastating of an impact this health care law is having on their lives, their individual lives.

Will there be some people who benefit from this health care law? Oh, yes. But the pain it is causing for millions and millions of Americans is not at all what the President promised them: You like what you have, you can keep it with your insurance. Not true; insurance premiums drop $2,500. Not true; If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor. Not true.

So I come to the floor to discuss a nominee who very likely is not going to ever have to be living under the President's health care law, is going to go under some other health program, paid for with taxpayer dollars that those taxpayers are not going to have in their own pockets to pay for their own premiums, while she enjoys a government insurance program paid for in a different way by their taxpayer dollars, where she is likely to be able to keep her doctor, not be subjected to the higher premiums, not be subjected to canceled coverage, not be subjected to losing her doctor, not be subjected to the fraud and identity theft, and not be subjected to the higher copays and deductibles.

I would say, if it is good enough for the people of America—that is what President Obama wanted for them—if it is good enough for Members of this body, except for those the majority leader said, oh, no, they know what is in it so they do not need to live under it, I think it ought to be good enough for this nominee as well.

I yield the floor and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAGAN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, as we continue this week's vote-arama on executive branch nominations, I wish to remind the American people how we got here today and what it means to the future of our great country and our system of government.

Over the last 5 years President Obama and his administration have repeatedly bent the law to serve their own purposes in a way that I think is unprecedented in my experience. We saw this when he gave special treatment to union pension funds during the Chrysler bankruptcy process. We saw it again during the Solyndra bankruptcy. We saw it when President Obama unilaterally announced a moratorium on the enforcement of certain immigration laws. We saw it when the administration unilaterally issued waivers from the 1996 Welfare Reform Act and the 2002 No Child Left Behind law. And, of course, we have seen it multiple times with the President's signature legislative—accomplishment, if you can call it that—ObamaCare, which effectively became a law that means whatever the President wants it to mean. Indeed, without any real legal authority, the administration has unilaterally delayed the employer mandate, unilaterally delayed the income verification required in the ObamaCare exchanges, unilaterally delayed the cap on out-of-pocket expenses, and has unilaterally delayed other insurance regulations.

Meanwhile, the Internal Revenue Service has been hauled into court because it has said that it will flout the text of the law by issuing ObamaCare tax subsidies in the Federal exchange even though the law that Congress passed and the President signed made clear that those subsidies may only be used in the State-based insurance exchanges.

I constantly get asked by my constituents back home whether Congress can do something about it. My response ordinarily is, well, the Congress under our system of government passes the laws, but it is the executive branch's obligation to enforce those laws. Indeed, that is the oath the President takes when he is inaugurated—to uphold and defend the laws and to faithfully execute those laws.

I think we have seen the kind of havoc that can be wreaked when the executive decides to pick and choose which laws to enforce based on expediency, political or otherwise. We used to say that we are a nation of laws and not of men. Indeed, that is one of our country's—indeed, our economy's—great strengths.

There is a great little book written by a Peruvian economist on the nature of capital, which, of course, is so important to our economic growth. The point he makes is there are a lot of entrepreneurial societies in the world, but one of the things that really distinguishes the U.S. economy and our success relative to those other entrepreneurial societies is the rule of law. It is the things, for example, that mean that when you invest money in a piece of real estate or in a contract or in some other investment, you know with reasonable certainty that investment will be protected against arbitrary action by either government or some other person, which, if you think about it, really is one of the unique characteristics of the U.S. system of laws because we know with reasonable certainty that if those rights are breached, if that investment is stolen, if it is nationalized by the Federal Government, you can go to court and seek compensation for that law-breaking.

Well, if President Obama wanted to continue to legislate in this time and effect from the White House by changing the laws Congress passed, he should have stayed in the Senate. But his responsibility—indeed, his sacred oath—is to enforce the laws even if those laws prove awkward or inconvenient.

One of the other important aspects of being a nation of laws is that if, in fact, it turns out that those laws prove inconvenient or awkward or undesirable for some reason, we have the capacity through the legislative process to change those laws. That is sometimes referred to as a conversation or a dialog that the branches of government have with one another.

So Congress passes laws that the President signs, and then if they are being implemented either by the executive branch or by administrative agencies that are part of the executive branch and they turn out not to have the result Congress thought they would have or the President thought they would have, the great thing about our system of government is we have the capacity to change those laws when they prove to have resulted in unintended consequences or when they prove inconvenient or awkward or otherwise undesirable.

I believe that, notwithstanding the greatest hopes and, I would grant, the good faith of those who actually thought ObamaCare was going to work—it sounded pretty good. The President said: If you like what you have, you can keep it, and if you think your premiums are too high, the average family of four is going to see their premiums go down by $2,500. And if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor. Well, all of that sounded pretty good, especially when you looked at the public opinion polling back in 2009 when the President first started saying those kinds of things because 88 to 90 percent of the people polled said they liked what they had. So when the President said they could keep it, they said: OK; that is fine. I guess this is all about dealing with that 10 or 12 percent of people who had no coverage or who had what they viewed as inadequate or otherwise undesirable coverage.

So I understand that some people may have been lulled into this idea that this is the best thing that has happened in terms of health care delivery in a long time. As a matter of fact, we have talked about this approach for many years. Even before I got to Congress, during the Clinton administration we had HillaryCare. That was another grand scheme to basically commandeer the health care delivery system in the country that, in a way—again, I would grant the good faith of those who actually thought they could make it work, but it didn't work, at least as manifested in ObamaCare. And now we are confronted not with the grand theory and good intentions but with the hard facts and the reality that ObamaCare has proved to be an unmitigated disaster.

Whether you are one of ObamaCare's biggest cheerleaders or whether you were a skeptic like me and voted against it because you did not think it was going to work, I think it is incumbent upon us to try to figure out how to come up with an alternative, to hit the reset button and to pivot to patient-centered health care reform that leaves the choices not in the hands of bureaucrats and the Federal Government but leaves the choices in the hands of hard-working American families and patients, where doctors whom we choose and trust can work with us to come up with the best solutions rather than having the Federal Government say: We have done a cost-benefit analysis, and you are out of luck. You're not worth it. The Federal Government, the bureaucracy doesn't think you should get that kind of treatment.

Well, what I don't want is for any President, including this President, to unilaterally waive or change or refuse to enforce a law for political reasons. And that is what has happened. We have watched the President's poll numbers plummet as the American people, who by and large during his first term of office and now during the first year or so of his second term of office wanted this President to succeed—I think the fact that President Obama's Presidency was historic in many ways, as the first African-American President ever elected in this country, gave all of us a sense of pride that our country had come so far—over, admittedly, a long period of time but so far that a person who back at the beginning of our country might have been considered less than a fully human being would now be the President of the United States. That gave us all hope in the future and hope in this great experiment known as America, to have the first African-American President of the United States.

So this President was elected in 2008 and reelected in 2012 with a huge reservoir of good will and hope that he would be successful. Indeed, all of us, regardless of our political stripes—whether we are conservatives or liberals, whether we are Independents, Republicans, or Democrats, we are Americans first and we want America to succeed. That is what we want more than anything.

It is also important to remember that our system of government is important to our success over these last couple of centuries and that we haven't gotten here by accident. We have gotten here because of our Constitution, because of the genius of checks and balances between coequal branches of government. That is a lesson this President seems to have forgotten; that too often he decides to go it alone or do an end run around Congress because he can't get what he wants.

Well, we are not guaranteed, any of us, in political life or in life in general, to get everything we want. We know that particularly when it comes to legislation—things like health care reform—nobody gets everything they want if, in fact, it is going to be a bipartisan product.

But rather than attempting a bipartisan product, this President and our friends across the aisle decided to jam the American people and to jam the minority party in Congress and to pass a law which now they own lock, stock, and barrel.

Again, I am willing to concede the good faith and good intentions of those who thought this would work, but now we have gone from theory to evidence and experience, and we know it hasn't worked.

Well, thankfully, in our three co-equal branches of government, we have not just the legislative branch that passes the laws and the executive branch that is supposed to enforce the laws, we have a third branch of government; that is, the judiciary. And they have done their part—but they are not through yet—to stop executive overreach and uphold the rule of law.

I have heard some of our colleagues say: Well, the Supreme Court has upheld most of ObamaCare and it is the law of the land—as if it is somehow sacrosanct and can never be changed. Well, that is just not true, at least not under our system of laws. As I said to begin with, if we find that the laws we passed result in consequences we did not intend or we find that the American people are dissatisfied with it and it leads to undesirable results, we can change it, and that is the way our system works.

We are not bound forever by any law. We can change them because that is the way our system works. So when people say it is the law of the land, get over it, move on down the road, that is not an American perspective, at least under our Constitution.

As I said, we have seen a number of times where this President and this White House have simply ignored laws, refused to enforce laws, and overreached. For example, the District of Columbia Circuit Court has demanded that this administration follow the law on issues related to corporate governance, emissions requirements, recess appointments and the disposal of nuclear waste. This is the same court that this majority leader, Senator REID, and his political party have decided to stack. They decided to break the rules of the U.S. Senate that have been in effect a long time in an overt power play in order to stack this second most important court in the Nation, the D.C. Circuit Court, by breaking the Senate rules in order to deny the minority a voice in the confirmation process and to confirm these nominees in what we are engaged in this week, which is another overt power play.

But the stated reason for doing that, and the supposed necessity of doing that, is because the senior Senator from New York, the majority leader, and others say they are not happy with the way the D.C. Court of Appeals has ruled on cases involving the Obama administration. But as I said a moment ago, in at least four of these big areas, the D.C. Circuit Court has upheld the administration's point of view in important appeals before the court.

At the same time, the D.C. Circuit Court has also ruled in favor of the administration on some issues related to health care, embryonic stem cell research, and several other major environmental matters. But notwithstanding those successes in terms of policy approval by the D.C. Circuit Court of this administration's policies and of the bureaucracy's interpretation of those policies, we know that the majority leader was bound and determined, along with his allies in the other party—that they were bound and determined to make sure the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals would issue no rulings which would undercut or fail to enforce this administration's policies. So they decided to pack this court, which is what this process we are engaged in this week is all about, with ideological allies who would rubberstamp their agenda.

When the minority in the Senate—and, by the way, I am not just talking about my rights or Senators' rights. We are just representatives. I represent 26 million people. When the majority leader shuts me out of the amendment process or the opportunity to have a say in the advice and consent over the nomination of judicial nominees or executive branch nominees, he is not affecting my rights per se but the rights of 26 million Texans, to have their voice heard in this process. That is something he ought to think about and reconsider.

We know the nature of the Senate has been fundamentally transformed under the leadership of Senator REID. When I first got to the Senate, which was a while ago—it doesn't seem like that long ago, but it has dramatically changed—we had an open amendment process. We would actually have bills come to the floor, legislation such as the national defense authorization bill, and we would spend up to 3 weeks debating and offering amendments on that important piece of legislation. As we have heard at different times, the national defense authorization bill is viewed as so important by both political parties and by the entire Senate that we have passed a Defense authorization bill for I think at least 50 consecutive years. That is quite a tradition. But instead of doing that, Majority Leader REID decided to cut off the opportunity for the minority to offer amendments to this important piece of national security legislation.

When we were able to block cloture in order to protest that in order to provoke, hopefully, a negotiation which would result in a process whereby minority rights would be respected and an opportunity to amend this legislation provided, now we learn that as part of this end-of-the-year sprint to Christmas, that in addition to jamming through these nominees, the majority leader's intention is to take a bill that was basically negotiated among four Members of Congress, that would be the four Members of the Armed Services Committee, both the chairman and ranking members on both sides of the Capitol, to fill up the amendment tree, file for cloture, and pass it in the last week we are in session.

It is beyond outrageous, this transformation in the Senate. I think what shocks many of us the most is that Majority Leader REID is an institutionalist, and by that I mean it as a compliment. He has been in the Senate a long time. He understands how the Senate works and why the Senate rules are so important. Yet nobody in my memory has done more to undermine the institution of the Senate and its rules and traditions than the current majority leader. For what purpose? For short-term gain.

Why do I say it is short-term gain? They can get away with it when they are in the majority, but it is temporary, because during the time I have been in the Senate I have been in the majority and I have been in the minority. I have to admit, being in the majority is a lot more fun. But in other words, what I am saying is this short-term power play by the majority party in the Senate to break the Senate rules, to jam through legislation and to deny my 26 million constituents in Texas an opportunity for me, on their behalf, to offer amendments to important legislation affecting the national security of the United States is an outrage. It is an outrage.

I will give just one example. Four years ago at Fort Hood, TX, Nidal Hasan, a major in the U.S. Army, killed 11 people and wounded about 30 more. This is about 4 years ago. You will remember it. The reason it took so long for him to be brought to justice—I am not sure I understand exactly why—but there was some concern, and a concern I shared, that if we identified this for what it truly was, which is a terrorist attack on our own soil, it might undermine the fairness of his trial and give him some grounds to appeal and perhaps escape the just punishment for what he did.

Major Hasan, when there was initial review of what he did and evidence that he had shown absolutely clear signs of being radicalized and joining the fight of Islamic extremists against the United States of America, against his own government, that those were completely ignored by the military, by the Army, in an exercise of political correctness. Even though he stood up that day and he said Allahu Akbar, "God is great," in the traditional cry of Al Qaeda and Islamic extremists and others who were bent on suicide and homicidal acts, initially when that was reviewed, the conclusion by the politically correct police here when they reviewed it was this is workplace violence. In other words, they refused to call it what it was, which was a terrorist act on our own soil.

I do not fully understand the reticence to identify it for what it is because we all know we had at least one other major terrorist attack on our own soil on September 11, 2001, when approximately 3,000 Americans were killed by one of the most horrific terrorist acts to occur in our lifetime and hopefully ever—hopefully it will never occur again.

After that, the Department of Defense decided to use its discretion to award the people who were injured or killed in that incident the recognition and benefits they deserved under our laws—Purple Hearts and other death benefits. But when I and my colleagues on the other side of the Capitol, Congressmen JOHN CARTER and ROGER WILLIAMS, sponsored legislation to recognize that this attack at Fort Hood that cost the lives of 11 Americans, including 10 members of the U.S. military and 30 more people were shot and injured, many of whom bear those wounds even today—when we filed legislation on the national defense authorization bill in order to amend that bill in order to give that same recognition to these 11 Americans who lost their lives and the 30 more who were injured in that terrorist attack on that day at Fort Hood, TX, in Killeen, TX, some 4 years ago, that amendment has been shut out of this process.

Do not be confused. This is not about denying me my rights as a Senator. This is about denying those 11 Americans who lost their lives that day justice, and the 30 more who survived that attack, the benefits they are entitled to by virtue of being a victim of a terrorist attack on our own soil—again.

There are real human consequences to the machinations of the majority leader and this revolutionary change in the nature of the Senate, denying the rights of the minority to be heard and to offer legislation on behalf of our constituents. That has such far-reaching impact.

In many ways I think what we are experiencing this week and what we have experienced recently is an attempt to distract the American people from the train wreck known as ObamaCare. If I had voted for the President's signature legislative proposal and I was one of the Democrats who voted for it, since no Republican voted for it, I would want to change the subject too. As someone who served in this Chamber for 11 years, it saddens me that our Democratic friends choose to obliterate the Senate rules and gravely weaken minority rights for petty partisan reasons. Again, it is so shortsighted it is just unimaginable. It is as if Members of this body have attention deficit syndrome, where they are so focused on immediate gratification that they forget or they ignore the long-term consequences of this revolutionary change in what once was called the world's greatest deliberative body, which is no more the world's greatest deliberative body, at least under this majority leader and under his rule-breaking regime.

Over the years leading up to last month's showdown, the majority leader repeatedly promised not to use the nuclear option. Again, I know this is about process. The eyes of the American people begin to glaze over when we talk about the internal processes and operation of the Senate. But as I attempted to demonstrate a moment ago, they have real-world consequences. Tell that to the people back at Fort Hood who lost their family member in this terrible terrorist attack on our own soil, committed by an American citizen wearing the uniform of the U.S. Army, where he joined the enemy, Islamic extremists, was radicalized by the same person who essentially tutored the Underwear Bomber who was arrested in Detroit, who tried to blow up another airplane on that day. Those people are the ones who are suffering the negative impact of the undermining of this institution by the majority leader. Well, the majority leader repeatedly promised not to use the nuclear option, but he broke that promise.

My experience in public life is—again, we all have different ideas about how to accomplish our goals and hopefully improve life for the American people, but one of the things that are even more important is the personal relationships between Members of the Senate.

There is a lot of good work that can get done when there is good faith and trust between Members of the Senate, and, indeed, those are not the kinds of things that typically make their way into the newspapers or that people pay much attention to because they are done quietly behind the scenes, cooperatively and collaboratively. But when the majority leader—the leader of this institution—breaks his word repeatedly about undermining the Senate rules in a partisan power grab, it necessarily undermines the trust that has come to be the important glue to this institution, and because it is important to this institution, it is important to the country. When we learned that trust is unjustified and that his promise is hollow and meaningless—well, it reminds me of another American who has made extravagant promises to the American people that were obviously false and could not and cannot be relied upon. I am talking about the President's promise in ObamaCare that if you like what you have, you can keep it. I saw a poll recently that said 37 percent of the respondents in that poll believe the President is honest and trustworthy.

I didn't vote for this President, but he is still my President. The ability of the President of the United States to actually govern and to be respected—not only here in America but around the world—and viewed as a person of character and substance, well, it is completely undermined by the kinds of false promises this President has made in ObamaCare.

It is not just limited to health care; it has broad ramifications and a huge ripple effect. In terms of the way that, for example, Bashar al-Assad in Syria used the President's redline on the use of chemical weapons—if Bashar al-Assad thinks this President is not going to be honest or trustworthy in terms of his statements, then his threats of a redline simply will not be believed.

It is the same thing in Tehran, where 19,000 centrifuges are spinning and enriching uranium in Iran's pursuit of nuclear weapons—a goal which, if achieved, and which is not too far off in the distant future, will destabilize the Middle East and will threaten not only a regional war but a larger conflict because if Iran gets a nuclear weapon—Iran is not just any average nation state. It is a state sponsor of international terrorism in the form of Hezbollah and other support, particularly directed at our ally and friend, the nation of Israel.

Iran has been killing American soldiers in Afghanistan and Iraq for many years through their training and support for our more obvious adversaries there, through the design and importation in Iraq, for example, of explosively formed penetrators that will melt through the metal of our vehicles and other protective armament that our military uses and, as I said, resulted in the deaths of multiple American GIs. So Iran is not our friend.

So when the President says: This is another redline, well, our enemies can read our newspapers. They read the same polls we read. They see a President making false statements that cannot be relied upon, and it undermines his credibility when it comes to our enemies—people who want to wipe Israel off the face of the map. That can have very dangerous consequences, obviously, because when people don't believe what America says through the voice and in the person of our Commander in Chief, the leader of the free world, it emboldens our enemies.

They push the envelope in North Korea, Iran, Syria, and other places around the world. This is not a minor issue. When the President acts as if the law does not apply to him and if the law means just what he says it will—meaning at any given moment—it is as if the law doesn't really matter and his word cannot be trusted.

Just a few other thoughts on how ObamaCare was passed. I remember being in this Chamber on Christmas Eve in 2009. I think it was 7 in the morning. It may have been 7:30 in the morning when we had the vote on the ObamaCare passage—at least the initial passage. It passed with 60 Democratic votes and no Republican votes.

I often pointed out that before ObamaCare, every major domestic reform in modern U.S. history—from civil rights, to Medicare, to welfare reform, to No Child Left Behind—enjoyed significant bipartisan support at the time of its passage. Why is that important? Well, because ObamaCare was a pure partisan power play. It was shoved through on a party-line basis without a single Republican vote and despite high levels of public opposition.

I remember people were told: Well, we just haven't done a very good job of messaging and explaining or when ObamaCare is implemented, people will learn to love it. Well, we now know that jamming through legislation which basically commandeers one-sixth of the American economy is a recipe for disaster. It is a bad way to pass any major law, let alone a measure that affects everyone in the country because our health care delivery system affects every man, woman, and child in our country.

ObamaCare is a part of a broader pattern that should be deeply disturbing to anyone who cares about our Constitution and the checks and balances that the Framers of our Constitution knew would be so important to maintaining consensus and maintaining balance.

Today's Democratic leaders seem to believe that might makes right and that inconvenient legislation can be swept aside by Executive fiat and that when the Senate rules prove to be an obstacle to obtaining what they want, such as stacking the second most important court in the Nation in order to be a rubberstamp for the bureaucracy's ideological zeal, well, they can sweep aside those rules too.

This debate is about far more than policy differences. It is about the respect for the rule of law and respect for our Constitution, it is about preventing the executive branch from running roughshod over Congress, and it is about safeguarding the constitutional government.

If we need any more examples about the Obama administration's abuse of power, I am prepared to provide that. We know the Obama administration showed contempt for the normal legislative process in a number of ways. When Congress refused to enforce card check for labor unions, the administration turned to unelected bureaucrats at the National Labor Relations Board, the NLRB. When Congress refused to,

on a bipartisan basis, pass cap-and-trade energy taxes, the administration turned to unelected bureaucrats, the Environmental Protection Agency. Indeed, now President Obama has authorized the EPA to regulate virtually every aspect of the American economy without congressional approval even though the EPA itself has acknowledged that its proposed greenhouse gas rule would not have a notable impact on carbon dioxide emissions during the next decade.

The Obama administration is acting in a lawless manner in other ways as well. In early 2011, more than 2 years before the Supreme Court ruled on the Defense of Marriage Act, President Obama ordered his Justice Department to stop defending the law even though it was passed with an overwhelming bipartisan majority of Congress. It was signed into law by President Bill Clinton and broadly supported by the American people. The right way to deal with that is not for the executive branch to refuse to enforce the law, but it is to come back to Congress and say: You know what. We think things have changed. Congress ought to reconsider.

Rather than do that, the President decided to have the Justice Department refuse to enforce the very law Bill Clinton signed.

Then there is the Independent Payment Advisory Board. This is part of ObamaCare—one that perhaps has one of the most pernicious impacts because what it does is it puts unelected bureaucrats in charge of deciding health care for your mother, your father, your grandmother, or your grandfather—in other words, whether Medicare beneficiaries can get the health care they need. How do they have an impact? Well, these 15 bureaucrats, under this ObamaCare-created bureaucracy, will have the authority to decide what sort of health care Medicare pays for. This is just a way to ration access to care. So if these 15 bureaucrats on IPAB—the Independent Payment Advisory Board—say: You know what. We think you are too old; we don't think it is worth it for you to get a hip replacement so you can walk and be productive and mobile; we don't think it is worth it for you to get bypass surgery; we are not going to pay for it, the Federal Government will not pay for it, and so it will not be delivered.

What is worse is that IPAB's recommended Medicare cuts automatically take effect unless a congressional supermajority votes to cut health care spending by an equivalent amount.

Columnist George Will said:

This is a travesty of constitutional law-making: An executive branch agency makes laws unless Congress acts to achieve the executive agency's aim.

This is the Constitution turned on its head. Indeed, IPAB makes a mockery of our constitutional system of separation of powers, and it should be repealed immediately.

Not only has the administration used unelected bureaucrats to sidestep the normal legislative process and disregarded the rule of law for transparently political or ideological reasons, it has also fostered a culture of deception and intimidation.

One example is Operation Fast and Furious. This has particular impact to my State, which is a big border State. My colleagues will recall that Operation Fast and Furious was this bone-headed idea wherein the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives would actually allow weapons to go from American gunshops into the hands of the drug cartels without interdiction. I guess the idea was once they got in the hands of the cartels, we would somehow trace them and know who the bad guys are, but it broke down along the way. So many of these guns were simply not recovered and no doubt have been used to kill many people in Mexico, as well as an American citizen, Border Patrol agent Brian Terry, 3 years ago.

Attorney General Holder, who is administratively responsible for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, repeatedly obstructed a congressional investigation into Fast and Furious, and his sworn testimony was repeatedly contradicted by the Justice Department itself, by their own memos. One DOJ official—a U.S. attorney in Arizona—tried to smear a whistleblower by leaking a private document. The Department of Justice's own inspector general called this behavior inappropriate for a Department employee and wholly unbecoming a U.S. attorney. A separate DOJ official was forced to resign her position after she was caught collaborating with leftwing bloggers to slander both whistleblowers and journalists.

Then there is the IRS scandal. It is almost hard to keep up with all of the scandals, but we can't let these get away from us because they are so important to get to the bottom of one of the most important governmental bodies in the U.S. Government, and that is the Internal Revenue Service that, again, touches all of our lives. We found out, of course, that IRS agents were deliberately targeting people based on their political views. At least one conservative activist, Catherine Engelbrecht from Houston, TX, was targeted by multiple agencies, including the IRS, the FBI, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, OSHA.

We also know the administration—or at least the bureaucracy—has targeted political donors. The 2012 Obama campaign bullied private citizens who donated money to Gov. Mitt Romney, including a man named Frank VanderSloot whose experience was chronicled by Kimberley Strassel in the Wall Street Journal. In April of 2012, Mr. VanderSloot found himself, along with seven other Romney donors, condemned by an Obama campaign Web site for being “less than reputable.” The Web site suggested that quite a few of the eight donors had placed themselves on the wrong side of the law and had gotten rich at the expense of so many other Americans. Mr. VanderSloot was singled out because—or I should say he was singled out as a “bitter foe” of the gay rights movement.

Mr. VanderSloot didn’t run for public office. He didn’t volunteer to be treated like this. He is an American citizen who was engaging in a constitutionally protected right to provide financial support to a political candidate of his choosing. Rather than keep the fight on the political opponent—Governor Romney—the Obama campaign went after the donors. Mr. VanderSloot didn’t have a criminal background, nor did any other of the Romney donors who were similarly targeted. But shortly after he was denounced by the Obama campaign in this manner, a Democratic opposition researcher began researching his divorce records. Meanwhile, the IRS decided to audit 2 years’ worth of his tax filings, and the Labor Department announced a separate audit of the immigrant workers employed at his cattle ranch.

As Kimberley Strassel wrote for the Wall Street Journal: “Every thinking American must henceforth wonder if Mr. VanderSloot has been targeted for inquiry because of his political leanings.”

We also know this administration has harassed journalists. Although President Obama said this administration would be the most transparent administration in American history, it has proven not to be so. In the case of FOX News correspondent James Rosen, the Obama Justice Department tracked him down like a common criminal simply for doing his job. The Department of Justice tracked Rosen’s movements, got a search warrant to examine his private emails, and even obtained his parents’ phone records. This is a journalist. As a Washington correspondent for the New Yorker magazine noted: “It is unprecedented for the government, in an official court document, to accuse a reporter of breaking the law for conducting the routine business of reporting on government secrets.”

We also know the Obama Justice Department has conducted a disturbingly intrusive investigation into the phone records of journalists who work for the Associated Press, and, as I said, displayed an unprecedented level of contempt and obstruction for the Freedom of Information Act.

Washington lawyer Katherine Meyer has filed FOIA cases under six different administrations dating back into the late 1970s. FOIA is the shorthand for the Freedom of Information Act, of course. Last year, she told Politico that “this administration is the worst on FOIA issues—the worst.” So much for the President’s claim to be the most transparent administration in this Nation’s history.

In 2011, the Obama-Holder Justice Department received a mock award from the nonpartisan National Security Archive which said that the DOJ had shown the “worst open government performance” of any Federal agency that year. This is the agency that is supposed to enforce the Freedom of Information laws, and it was recognized as demonstrating the “worst open government performance” of any agency that year. Among other things, the Department of Justice was cited for its mistreatment of whistleblowers and its efforts to undermine the Freedom of Information law.

Speaking of whistleblowers, we know the State Department has also punished U.S. diplomats for cooperating with congressional investigators looking into the September 2012 terrorist attack that killed four Americans at Benghazi, Libya. This is so outrageous that it bears recall that Susan Rice, the President’s U.N. Ambassador, showed up on five, I believe it was, Sunday morning talk shows and claimed the attack at the American consulate in Benghazi that took the life of four Americans was precipitated by a video that was deemed to be disrespectful of the religion of Islam. It turns out that wasn’t true, and for a long time the administration denied this was even a terrorist attack—something which it now acknowledges. But when people come forward, such as the whistleblowers, diplomats who knew the Ambassador and those who lost their lives on that terrible night in September of 2012, then they are punished, not welcomed as truth tellers, to get to the bottom of this terrible incident in Benghazi, Libya.

Then we know that further intimidation continued with ObamaCare in 2010. Actually, this preceded the Benghazi intimidation. In 2010, various health insurance companies began alerting their customers that ObamaCare was going to force them to raise premiums. This is back in 2010. Fast forward to 2012. That is what has happened. So first of all, people saw the Web site was a problem and now that is getting fixed, and now they are experiencing cancellations, and then there is the sticker shock where their premiums have gone up. In 2010, when the insurance industry tried to tell their own customers their premiums are going to go up because of this law, Kathleen Sebelius, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, responded by threatening to punish these companies and bar them from participating in the ObamaCare exchanges.

It is quite remarkable. I think in any other context we could call this thugery, intimidation, abuse of power.

A few years later, we learned that Secretary Sebelius was shaking down private companies to help fund the implementation of ObamaCare because Congress, believing it had been misled in so many instances regarding ObamaCare, had refused funding. It is very disturbing to learn that the same IRS official who led the division that targeted people because of their political beliefs is now in charge of administering large portions of ObamaCare.

As I said a moment ago, one of the biggest casualties in all of this—particularly as it relates to the false promises of ObamaCare—is the President’s own credibility. The other day I had a chance to speak on this topic and I said, “ObamaCare is the single biggest case of consumer fraud in American history.” Anybody else under any circumstance would find themselves hauled into court and be called to account. If a private citizen or a private company had spoken out, they would be sued for money damages. They would likely be put out of business because there would be an injunction granted or perhaps punitive damages.

When the President speaks on behalf of the United States, whether it is in domestic affairs such as ObamaCare or whether it is on international matters such as the red line on chemical weapons in Syria or the red line on Iranian nuclear aspirations, it should count for something. But according to a new NBC Wall Street Journal poll, only 37 percent of Americans give President Obama a “very good” rating for “being honest and straightforward”—37 percent. That compares with 63 percent in January of 2009. So the President’s reputation for honesty went from 63 percent in January 2009 to 37 percent on December 11, 2013, or at least that is the date the Wall Street Journal and NBC reported the results.

We know when the President’s approval rating—particularly his approval rating for honesty and truthfulness—is damaged, all of those who trusted the President as he led them down the gangplank with the implementation of ObamaCare are bound to get pretty nervous, because while the President was able to move the actual implementation of ObamaCare past his own reelection in 2012—this law was passed back in 2010. Yet the President himself was able to avoid accountability, by and large, by pushing the implementation past his election in November 2010. But 2014 will be a mid-term election. The President will not be on the ballot, but his allies will be on the ballot—people who trusted him, as he told them and he told the American people that you are going to be able to keep what you have if you like it, even though he knew it wasn’t true. We know that from as far back as 2010.

Senator MIKE ENZI led the effort to expand the grandfathering flexibility in the Health and Human Services rules, and that was defeated on a party-line vote. All of our Democratic friends voted against expanding the flexibility of these grandfathering provisions back in 2010 when HHS and, indeed, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that as many as 78 million Americans on employer-provided plans would find they would no longer be able to keep their coverage either.

So there is going to be a day of accountability in November of 2014, as those who, perhaps unwisely, trusted the President, who believed in this big government scheme that simply has not worked—and that many of us believed would never work—there will be a day of accountability.

My hour has come and gone, and I see the Senator from Oklahoma on the floor. In conclusion, I ask unanimous consent that a summary of stories from Texans who have been affected by ObamaCare be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STORIES FROM TEXANS WHO HAVE BEEN AFFECTED BY OBAMACARE

TEXANS CONTINUE TO WRITE IN WITH PAINFUL STORIES OF HOW OBAMACARE HAS AFFECTED THEM AND THEIR LOVED ONES

My husband and I are self-employed. We have coverage through BCBS of TX. Our current premium for us and our 2 children is $854 per month. Our premium was raised to $854 from $814 three months ago. We have a $6000 family deductible, and an out of pocket amount of $12,000. We have been very happy with our policy. However, I created an account on healthcare.gov to see if we could get a cheaper policy with similar coverage.

The cheapest insurance coverage offered on the website is a Bronze package with 60% coverage and monthly premium of $1189. This is the cheapest policy with less coverage than what we currently have!

TEXAS RESIDENT,
Austin, Texas.

"I worked 34 years for AT&T/Lucent/Avaya and took an early retirement in 2001 with pension and healthcare. I became Medicare eligible this year as I turned 65, however my wife is only 59 and remains on my employer group plan. This month we were notified that Avaya would stop providing all pre-65 healthcare to retirees and their dependents. Living on fixed income this additional expense is taking me out of the middle class and putting me financial jeopardy for my remaining years."

DON WHISENANT,
Mesquite, TX.

"Because of health conditions, both my wife and I are in the Texas State High Risk Pool and have been for at least 12 years. Now because of Obamacare, at midnight on December 31st, we are no longer going to be covered by an insurance policy that covers my heart condition and my wife's epilepsy. While the State High Risk Pool is expensive ($2300.00/month) it is about half of what ACA is, our $1000.00 deductible will jump to over $7000 and possibly up to $10,000.00 with half the benefits. This law needs to be repealed."

CHUCK MARSH,
Canadian, TX.

I am one of those whose plan was canceled. I have a high quality, admittedly high deductible, PPO plan from a major carrier. There is nothing discount or low quality about it. The ACA offering is for the same coverage and the same deductible. There are two differences in the ACA plan from mine. The first is that it includes maternity and pediatric care, which in our fifties my wife and I don't need. The second difference is the ACA plan premium is 65% more per month than my current plan.

The president said I could keep my plan, at 65% less for the same high quality coverage offered by the ACA option I want to keep it. For Americans who have to purchase their health care independently, the ACA is deeply flawed. Please help.

GLENN BARLOW,
Plano, TX.

Obamacare has caused my mother to lose her insurance because she no longer meets the minimum for coverage. My father went back to work for insurance and his company won't give it to him because he is older than 65 so he has to go on Medicare. Most doctors in his area won't take it and the ones that do offer sub-par care. He needs a hernia surgery and they won't cover it because of his age. No one wants a hernia surgery unless they need it. My husband switched jobs for a pay raise. It ended up being a pay cut because of the crippling cost of insurance. We now pay close to $24,000 a year for insurance and we can't afford to use it because it covers so little. We were promised all these things wouldn't happen.

CHRISTINE ROBINSON,
Round Rock, Texas.

I am writing to add my name to the growing list of your constituents that will be canceled from coverage next year. I am self-employed, a small business owner insured through Blue Cross Blue Shield Texas. Apparently my current plan is "substandard" as it does not offer maternity coverage. Something you can imagine is vitally important to a single male of 54 years age.

ANTHONY DEVITO,
Fort Worth, TX.

"We get our employee coverage from Pepsico the #43 company on the Fortune list. Everyone enrolled with our BCBS was canceled.

That policy is not what you seem to expect. We had birth control, prenatal, substance abuse, psychiatric, family counseling, chiropractic. In the last 3 years they paid out over 300,000 dollars for me alone in things like open heart surgery, new corneas, 21 days in the hospital, 5 days in ICU. In total for those 3 years I paid 7,500 and they paid 300,000+. That is NOT the sub-par insurance that Obama says he canceled.

I was canceled because it isn't ACA compliant. The replacement is much higher and the deductible is 1250 and the out of pocket is 6,000. If my next 3 years is like the last 3 it would cost me 21,750 instead of 7,500. How is that better?"

CLINT McLAUGHLIN,
Dallas, TX.

Mr. CORNYN. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, I enjoyed listening to my colleague for Texas. I will just comment to him, we are just beginning to see the series of untruths about what the President and his allies have said about this bill. I practiced medicine for 25 years, I delivered over 4,000 babies, I had a broad-ranging general practice, and I was belittled on this floor for the statements that are now coming true by the very colleagues who voted for the unaffordable care act.

Let me just outline for you four things that are going to be untrue.

You cannot keep your insurance. Whether you like it or not, you are not going to be able to keep your insurance. You cannot keep anything. I am going to read a story in a minute about a young man who could not afford his employer-based plan but went shopping, had a vasectomy so he could qualify for his insurance because it did not have maternal coverage. They did not want more children. His wife wanted to stop working. He had a wonderful plan. He cannot do it now. Now he cannot get insurance because he cannot afford it, and he makes about $500 too much to qualify for any subsidy.

So you cannot keep it.

The second thing is you cannot keep your doctor. I am experiencing that right now. MD Anderson in the Senator's own State is not covered by any of the plans. I have had a recurrence of cancer. My doctors now are at MD Anderson. I cannot use them under the unaffordable care act, unless I want to go and spend $70,000 or $80,000 on my next procedure out of my own pocket. I will have to go somewhere where the care is not what I would deem it.

The third untruth is every family is going to save $2,500. It is going to be about the opposite. Because everybody is going to be spending about $2,500 more.

Then, finally, what I was belittled on, that the quality of care is going to go down when they said the quality of care is going to go up. Access is going to be harder, not easier.

So when the American people really find out—the intention behind trying to fix health care was a good one. The system was broken. We do need to do things. But the untruths associated with this attempt to micromanage people's lives in a market—that was not perfect—I want to tell you, this is going to be so much worse than what we had in terms of real care and real outcomes. When it comes to individuals, most important is the relationship between the doctor and the patient. It is not just for the patient. The doctor having a relationship with the patient makes for much better judgments in terms of the quality of care they give and the insight into caring for the whole of that person. We are wrecking that. We are going to wreck that.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. McCASKILL). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COBURN. I am happy to yield.

Mr. CORNYN. I just ask my colleague, I am aware of his own experience that he just recounted here with the fact that MD Anderson—the world class hospital located in Houston that is really the premier cancer treatment facility in America and perhaps even in the world—they are not in the exchanges so the Senator cannot continue his treatment there.

Can the Senator explain how that happens because I think a lot of people think if they like their current doctor and they like their current hospital facility, they are expecting that when they sign up for ObamaCare they are going to be able to continue to see that doctor and go to some same high-class health care facilities. How did that happen?

Mr. COBURN. I have not researched it yet. I guarantee my colleague, I will research it, and I will find out. But the fact is, the leading cancer centers—Sloan-Kettering, the same thing—the leading cancer centers in this country probably could not reach an agreement at a price low enough that would pay for their costs for this advanced cancer care, so they did not offer them a contract because they would not cut their prices enough for the insurance.

So here is the main point. We promised to increase access. What you are really seeing is decreased access. I cannot go to Chris Logothetis. The No. 1 urologic oncological specialist in the United States—I cannot go see him under my insurance. I can. I am fortunate enough. I had a career before I was in the Senate. I will pay. But think about how many people are not going to be able to see Chris Logothetis and go to MD Anderson and have their life saved through the latest advances in pure biochemical and medical research put forward by a lot of people from Texas; some money from the NIH, there is no question; some from the Milken Institute, private money that has gone into research. We all seem to think that NIH is the only one who funds research around this country. There are a lot of entrepreneurs who fund tons of it.

So as to this idea of access, we can say you are going to have access. It is just like in Medicaid. Oklahoma chose not to expand Medicaid, and I agree with that. The reason is we are never going to send the States the money. It is an impossibility, if you look at our budget situation, for us to ever keep the promise that the unaffordable care act said we would do for the States.

But here is what is happening: People who are going to be signed up for Medicaid—and there is a whole other story about people who are put in Medicaid who are not eligible and will not be able to sign up who the whole system has kicked wrongly into Medicaid—you can sign up for Medicaid. Where is your doctor? Seventy-five percent of the doctors in California are not even going to sign up for the Affordable Care Act.

In Oklahoma, a recent survey said, of the doctors over age 52, 60 percent are retiring in next year. Age 52—our best doctors, the ones with the most experience, with the most gray hair. They have seen it all. They have the best differential diagnosis. They are hanging it up.

Now we have all these rules coming with the Affordable Care Act on what you have to do on electronic medical records. You have ICD-10—66,000 codes now versus 10,000 that the doctor is responsible for picking. What we have is a mess on our hands.

The final fifth lie is the denial of the problems that ObamaCare, the unaffordable care act, has caused and sticking our head in the ground and saying: Well, it is not causing any of those things.

It is going to be the most disruptive thing that has ever happened in this country to one-fifth of our economy.

Mr. CORNYN. Will the Senator yield for one other question?

Mr. COBURN. I would be happy to yield.

Mr. CORNYN. To the Senator's point about Medicaid, in Texas, I believe the number is basically only one out of every three doctors—about a third of doctors—will see a new Medicaid patient because it reimburses at about 50 cents on the dollar of what a private insurance plan will. I know there is the problem of coverage versus access that the Senator alluded to. But I wanted to just ask the Senator about that sometimes our friends who supported this legislation said: If you care about getting people with preexisting conditions coverage or if you care about young people being able to stay on their parents' health insurance coverage, you have to take the whole enchilada; in other words, you have to accept all 2,700 pages of ObamaCare, and that is the only way you could address these concerns.

Are there ways to address some of these legitimate concerns, such as preexisting conditions, without embracing all of ObamaCare?

Mr. COBURN. Sure. One of those things is adverse selection, where sicker people raise the costs for everybody in the pool. But if, in fact, you looked at the Nation as a whole, and you had a law that said for any insurance company that is cherry-picking only healthy people, a portion of their profits will go into a pool at the end of the year for people with high-risk illnesses, that is what Switzerland does. It works wonderfully. What it does is it changes the behavior of the insurance company. They cover everybody.

So the whole idea behind insurance is to spread the risk. We did not have good risk rating. There is no question we need to address it. The Senator was on a bill with me, the Patients' Choice Act, which actually would not have created any of this mess and actually would have created a market with some of the parameters that would have spread the risk and had real indemnification in the country, but also would have had market forces driving it and still let you choose what you want.

The biggest problem with the unaffordable care act is it takes any discretion away from you about what is best for you and your family. It does it two ways. One is in terms of the details of what you can and cannot buy. I have 63-year-olds who have to buy maternity coverage.

But the final point I would make in that regard is that it takes away your ability to do what is your free and correct right to not buy health care if you do not want it. What is freedom about? You have to buy health care? We say: It does not really do it. It just charges you a tax, right? Even though we said it was not a tax, we somehow got it twisted around, and the Supreme Court says this is now a tax. I have not figured that one out yet. I hope the Senator has.

What does that have to do with freedom? If I choose to not buy a product—what if I choose not to buy high-definition cable? Is there a penalty for that? In other words, does Washington really know better? I think we have seen in the last 10 years, in my experience in the Senate, we are really the last ones to know, and the common sense of the American people is far greater than most of the ideas that were ever thought about coming out of here, other than some of the original founding documents that our Founders had.

So I would make one other comment on Medicaid. There is a recent study out of Oregon, which has done a good job of expanding its Medicaid. But when they went to look at what the difference was of expanded Medicaid, what they found out was that you were still, in Oregon, better off if you did not have Medicaid. You were better off if you had no insurance at all than if you had Medicaid. That is because we downward select through Medicaid, because of its pricing, to not the best of the health care system.

So when they looked at the control of diabetes, when they looked at high blood pressure, when they looked at the control of heart disease and congestive heart failure—when they looked at all those things—they found one thing that was better: the treatment of anxiety.

That was it. So in Oregon, when they actually looked at the study—and part of that is because, even though you say you got Medicaid, if you do not have a great doctor-patient relationship, where someone can get in your face who loves you and cares for you and cares about your health, and says: You have to do these things to change, you are going to change. So there is no impact.

So running it from Washington versus having real markets with a real safety net like the Patient Choice Act, which had a real safety net so that people are auto-enrolled who are irresponsible against catastrophic illnesses, is not a much better answer.

The other thing that is going to happen—I predict in April—is that you are going to see another uproar in this country. That is when the seniors in this country pay their taxes and they find out that the little meager interest income they got off their savings because of what the Federal Reserve is doing, or the few dividends they got, 3.5 percent of that is going to now come to “pay for ObamaCare,” because that is called investment income—3.5 percent.

So whatever your tax rate is, if you have any earnings on an investment, you are going to be paying that. You know, I will never forget Christmas Eve morning 2009—not having an opportunity to go over the Patient’s Choice Act or have it voted on through the raw, brute political force of this body and ignoring the rights of the minority. We voted on the bill that many of us predicted—I am not worried about the exchanges. They will get that fixed. That is just the incompetency of management. They will get it fixed. It will eventually work and work well.

What will not work is the rest of it. It will not work. Just look at centralized management everywhere else in the Federal Government. It is inefficient, most of the time ineffective, oftentimes complicated by fraud or incompetence. We are going to do that to one-sixth of our economy. We are doing to it one-sixth of our economy.

The other thing that is going to happen in April of this year is people who have a health insurance policy through their employment, not buying through an exchange, are going to see their personal contributions through their employer rise significantly. That is because the insurance industry is going to have to pay for all of this. They are going to have adverse selection in what is being signed up on the exchanges.

The insurance companies that sell to the medium-size businesses and the smaller businesses who are not in a risk plan, they are going to be raising the costs for small businesses. So what is probably going to happen is that those small businesses are either going to markedly increase their employees’ share or they are going to drop insurance all together and pay the fine—pay the tax or pay the fee, whatever it is. Pay the penalty. But the individuals, the people who we said we were helping, then will not be with the insurance that they had. They will be back to an exchange with a price, even with subsidies that are greater, 1. No. 2, with a copay that is greater—2. And, No. 3, with a massive deductible which is at 6,000 or 7,000 bucks, and all you really have is catastrophic coverage. Why did we not just do that? Why did we not just write catastrophic coverage for everyone in the country and let the market work on the rest of it?

That does not allow the elites in our society to make decisions for you. That is what we have done.

Let me share another story. This is from Tina Wilkerson. Tina called in. She has been a school cafeteria worker for a long time. For the last 14 years she has worked 40 hours a week for 10 months out of the year. She works for a food contractor company.

She has now been changed to a seasonal employee because of ObamaCare, so that her employer can avoid the ObamaCare mandates. It was costing her about $400 a month for a health care premium, which included medical, dental, vision, plus life insurance, plus a short-term disability policy. She went to the Web site, looked at plans. With her subsidy, she pays $645 a month premium, with a $12,000 deductible, does not have vision care, does not have dental care, does not have life insurance coverage, and does not have disability coverage.

That is middle income in Oklahoma. Here is someone who, because of what we have done, is now far worse off—far more exposed in her attempt to do good. I will give my colleagues credit. Their ambitions, their goals are worthy; they were worthy. But the results are a disaster and will become much worse of a disaster.

I want to spend a little bit of time talking about the fact of what is really going to happen in the medical world. I have four former partners. I go by there sometimes on Friday and visit. You cannot believe the morale in the medical community today—unbelievably negative. You talk about worried. Think about the average physician. They have an undergraduate degree. They spend 4 years in medical school. They then spend 3 or 4 years in specialty training. So they have 12 years at a minimum of higher education.

They come out all excited about actually doing good, real good, making a difference in individual people’s lives—whether it is holding a hand when somebody is going through a rough time or diagnosing a very serious disease. The payment for being a physician is the relationship with a patient. It does not have anything to do with money. It has to do with helping your fellow man. I want to tell you, that is totally upside down right now. If you do not think that makes a difference when you have a doctor walk into a clinic setting, and you are sitting there on an exam table, and that doctor is focused on: How am I going to pay the overhead? How am I going to buy the next piece of equipment that I need to care for you the way I need to care? How am I going to buy insurance for my own employees? How am I going to pay for the necessary bills?

Oh, by the way, I have got the Independent Payment Advisory Board coming that is going to tell me what I can and cannot do as a physician, regardless of how I am trained, regardless of what I know, regardless of how much gray hair, regardless of how much experience I have in terms of really caring for folks, I am going to have a group of unelected, appointed bureaucrats decide what I can and cannot do for you.

Then on top of that, we have ICD-10. Most people do not know that. That is a diagnostic code manual that has just been expanded from some 10,000 diagnoses to over 66,000 with Federal penalties if you do not explicitly get it down to the detail. It is not enough that you broke a metacarpal in your hand, you now have to label which hand, which finger, and describe in subsets the fracture. Your nurse cannot do that for you. You have got to do it. So now we are taking more time, and the penalties are going to be severe if you do not do it right.

As a matter of fact, they will not pay you for Medicare or Medicaid if you have not done that. There is no significant benefit to the health care community, but certainly a mandated bureaucratic cost on every physician practicing in this country that will offer no long-term benefit to the individual patient.

So now you have a doctor walking in. He may have been up all night the night before delivering a baby, carrying this added burden of all of this bureaucratic mess that the affordable/unaffordable care act placed on physicians in this country. Think that has any impact on diagnostic skills, on compassion, on empathy? Think it will impact care? It certainly will. It is going to have a devastating impact.

I want my physician focused on me. I do not want him worried about the Federal Government. I do not want him worried about IPAB. I do not want him worried about ICD-10. I do not want him worried about whether or not they have met the requirements of electronic medical records. I want him worried about me. I want him concentrating on me.

So we have put this big distraction out there because we know better than the market, than the trained professionals, and the arrogant assumption that we know better than the average American about what they need because we have already told them what they must buy. We have told them, if you do not buy what you must buy, here is the penalty. Thank goodness the young people of this country have figured that out.

Which brings us back to the integrity of the statements of the President. What did he say? We have seen all sorts of rationalization evidence: If you like your insurance now you have got, you can keep it. Is that right? Right now, for 5.8 million, and soon to be 15 million Americans that is not true. They knew it was not true when they said it. But it sounded good.

Second deceitful thing: If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period. Oh, really? Can I if I did not have individual separate means to keep Chris Logothetis? No, no. You cannot keep your doctor. You can have a new doctor, based on what your insurance company—based on what the pricing mechanism has. You can have one of those doctors. But if your doctor is not on that list, you cannot keep him.

So somebody may have delivered all of your babies, taken care of your parents, delivered your baby's babies, cared for your husband's heart attack, knows everything about your family, knows your psychosocial profile, knows your emotional needs, someone who has really been your ally in life—that is gone for millions and millions and millions of Americans.

But oh, no: You like your doctor, you can keep your doctor. Every one of my colleagues voted against MIKE ENZI's bill to allow you to keep your insurance under the grandfather clause. Every one. MIKE ENZI knew what was going to happen. He put a bill on the floor. All of my colleagues said: No, we do not want you to be able to keep your insurance. It does not work that way. What about the deceit of this? Is it significant? Sure it is. It is a matter of trust.

Third thing. The promise of President Obama, who said, on average, that your health insurance costs will go down $2,500 a year. I do not know who told him that, whether it was Dr. Emanuel or who. I do not know what whiz-bang accountant or financial forecaster told him that. But it is just the opposite of that. Probably the average American is going to spend about $2,500 more trying to get equivalent care to what they had, not keeping their same insurance and not keeping their doctor.

Then, finally, the deceit that is assumed but not spoken, is that your doctor is going to make decisions for you and with you about your health care.

When the independent advisory board gets going, it will be not only about Medicare, it will be about everybody. If a group of unelected bureaucrats thinks I shouldn't run a non-stress test on a pregnant woman whom I am watching closely and they say I can't do that, I won't be able to do that.

We are going to be having a group of people practicing medicine in this country who don't know the patient, don't know the situation, don't have their hands on the patient, haven't ever touched the patient, making decisions about what kind of care that patient will get.

When we try to unwind the unaffordable care act, we have a routine chorus of noes. So the consequence is, who is going to be held accountable?

A total disruption of the indemnification market in this country is now occurring in terms of health care insurance. When the insurance companies look at what their ratios are in terms of young to old, in terms of higher risk patients who cost more versus younger patients who cost less, they will make a calculation this spring about what their fees will be for next year.

The ObamaCare administration did something else deceitful—intentionally deceitful. Before the election next fall, they don't want you to know how much the health care costs are going to rise, and so they changed the date on which you will make a selection for next year and on which those prices will go through until after the November elections next year because they know that if you know the significant increase in costs that are going to come next year—not just this year but next year—based on the adverse selection and the mix of all of the insurance companies in this country—they know that the rise in your insurance health cost is going to be significant. So what did they do? They passed a little rule, and they changed the day to make the knowledge available to you, the purchaser, come after the election. So you won't be a fully informed voter knowing that your insurance costs are going to rise 20 or 25 percent again next year under the unaffordable care act—the unaffordable care act.

We are in a mess in a lot of ways. We are going to continue to see significant disruptions in the health care in this country. We are going to see a continuous decline in the quality of health care in this country—just the opposite of what they promised—because we are disrupting the doctor-patient relationship. I know this, having practiced for 25 years. I know what it takes to really care for someone. I know what it means to be in a room and spend the time that it takes to listen, to find out what is really going on, to find out why the patient is really there. We are going to drive down all of that.

We have this payment system in Medicare which pays on the basis of procedure—which is a dumb system—instead of paying on the basis of time that is spent with a patient. What most people don't recognize is that all reimbursements in this country for physicians—unless a doctor is in concierge medicine, which is another thing I will talk about in a minute—force doctors to spend less time with their patients because as we crank down reimbursements, either through Medicaid or through the insurance or through Medicare, and a doctor has fixed overhead which has been markedly expanded under the mandates associated with the Affordable Care Act, less time means less quality care. Less time means less quality care.

There was an interesting study done recently about how long—after your doctor comes into the room and asks “why are you here today?” how long before you are interrupted because the doctor is in a hurry to get to the next patient. It is 6½ seconds.

So our reimbursement mechanism, mandated by the Federal Government—another positive aspect of us meddling in the markets—is decreasing the time, the quality, and the quantity of health care that patients rightly deserve when they are sitting in your office.

What is the market doing about this? There is this growing expanse of what are called concierge doctors where, for a certain fee, that doctor is yours no matter how many times per year you want to go to him or them. No matter what your needs are, they are available to you 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days a year. How does it work? Well, most people can't afford concierge medicine. It is about $1,000 a year that you pay. Insurance doesn't reimburse you for it. You pay $1,000, and they are available. You get a comprehensive, thorough health care screening exam once a year. All of your tests are included in that as far as blood tests and laboratory tests at a physician's office. Then if you have a need at any time during that year, you have access to that physician.

What do we find? The first studies that have come out on that, where we take the time pressure off the doctors and let them actually practice medicine the way they were trained, show that they order 40 percent fewer tests. Isn't that interesting?

The axiom in medicine that every doctor is trained with is if you will listen to your patients, they will tell you what is wrong with them, whether it is cancer or diabetes or heart disease or anxiety or depression or hypertension. But it takes time, it takes interaction, and it takes a great differential diagnosis. The unaffordable care act is destroying that. This is why you are seeing this little blurb out in the market where you see concierge medicine because now the reason they are ordering fewer tests is they spend about five times as long with a patient because they are not in a hurry to get to the next patient because they are not making their money by filling out a code and filing it with an insurance company. There is a complete relationship between the physician and their patient.

I would like to return to this gentleman named Brian who is from Oklahoma. He and his wife have two children under 5 years of age. They believed what the President said when he told them they would keep their health insurance plan and their doctors if they liked them. Brian recently called my office and said: That isn't true. That was a lie to me. It was deceitful. It was untrue.

Brian works in Tulsa, and the company he works for, he felt the insurance cost was too much, so he didn't take insurance from his employer, and he went on the private market and bought, through Community Care in Tulsa, a plan he and his wife could afford. His wife decided to quit working, stay home, and raise their two kids. He was paying a $330 premium, but it didn't cover maternity care, and they didn't want any more children, so he underwent a vasectomy, which is an elective procedure, to make sure he wouldn't have more children.

On November 1, Brian received a letter in the mail stating that as of November 1 of this next year he would be terminated from his current plan and he would have to find a plan that satisfied the new mandates that the wisdom of Washington said had to be in there—maternity care. He spent hours on the ACA Web site, and what he found were plans that ranged in costs from $800 to $1,100 per month—four times what he was paying. He can't afford that. He didn't qualify for a subsidy, but he can't afford that.

So now what does he do? He had plan for $330 a month that met his needs and covered what he and his wife thought they needed covered. He is a young man. What is going to happen to Brian? Brian is going to get taxed, not because he doesn't want to buy health care, not because he can't afford the $330 or even $400 or $500 a month, but because he can't afford $800 or $1,100 a month. So now Brian is going to be without health care—I am going to say it again: without health care—and then we are going to fine him, we are going to tax him because we designed a system that took him out of the market. It didn't put him in the market; it took him out of the market.

What have we done? We had an opportunity to fix that with the Enzi amendment, to grandfather all of these plans in, and all of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle said no.

So here is Brian with a wife at home and two small children under 5, and he is stuck in no man's land. Do you think he thinks President Obama is truthful? No. Does he think those who touted the Affordable Care Act are truthful? No. He has lost confidence in his government.

That is really where we are in our country today. We are in a crisis of confidence with Washington. It was never meant to be. If you read the enumerated powers—as a matter of fact, we have an Enumerated Powers Act. It has 36 cosponsors. It says simply that if you bring a bill to the floor, you have to state what section of the Constitution gives you authority to legislate in that area based on what article I, section 8 of the Constitution has to say. Disappointingly, there is not one of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who is a cosponsor of that bill. It doesn't stop you from offering the bill, it just says please reference where in the Constitution you have the authority to legislate in this way. None of our colleagues believe the Constitution has any bearing on what we do by the fact they will not even cosponsor that bill.

The very thing our Founders emphasized was our authority to make or change law. That is fundamental, structural to this country. As we have ignored—as does the affordable-unaffordable care act—the enumerated powers, the consequences to our country are monstrous.

This book contains, through the middle of November, all the emails my office has gotten on the Affordable Care Act from a State of just 4 million people. We are just 4 million people. There is not much positive in here. As a matter of fact, there is not one positive story in here. They are all stories similar to Brian's and Tina's—identical. Had care; don't have care now. Had an affordable plan; don't have an affordable plan now. Had a doctor; don't have that doctor now.

As a matter of fact, one of the stories in here is from somebody who had their doctor for 35 years and can't have that doctor anymore. It is not because the doctor doesn't want the patient, and it is not because the patient doesn't want the doctor. It is because the unaffordable care act has decided that will not work in our system anymore.

We have heard through the press that we didn't have any ideas on health care. My colleagues know that isn't true. Senator BAUCUS stood right over there on December 8, when we tried to bring up the Patients' Choice Act. That did everything in terms of the goals which the Affordable Care Act did, without raising taxes, without disrupting the indemnification market in this country, creating a true safety net for those who could not afford health care, and created auto-enrollment for the irresponsible. We were never allowed to vote on that.

It was very similar to what we are seeing now with the Defense authorization bill. We have to pass one, but you can't have your say. My 4 million people don't count when it comes to the Defense authorization bill because they do not like the amendments I might offer.

Under the Constitution, it is illegal for the Pentagon not to give a report of how it is spending its money. It is a violation of the Constitution. We have an Audit the Pentagon Act. It has real teeth in it. There is somewhere between $50 billion and $100 billion worth of waste a year in the Pentagon. We will never manage the Pentagon if we can't measure what they are doing. Yet we don't get an opportunity to offer that. It is a smart good government amendment. But it is not in there, and it is not ever going to get offered. Why? Because the majority leader in this body has decided he will decide what amendments are offered and what amendments will not be.

This is no longer the greatest deliberative body. This is a mimic of the House of Representatives—the exact opposite of what our Founders intended the Senate to be. Their genius was they created a House of Representatives to be responsive to the populace demands of our country. That is why elections are every 2 years for the House of Representatives.

When the Senate was first formed, it was an appointed body by the State legislature and it was for a 6-year term. Jefferson wrote the rules—the first rules under which the Senate would operate—and the Senate was designed to make sure there could never be a tyranny of the majority, as we see today; that the minority rights of those in opposition would never be limited. For the first 130 years, it took absolute unanimous consent to do anything in this body. The rules were always changed—when the rules changes were made—with a two-thirds vote of those duly sworn and present, until November of this year.

Are things raw in the Senate right now? You bet. And they are going to stay that way because the very genius behind our Founders was to force consensus and compromise in the Senate, something the majority leader doesn't believe in. We saw the raw, brute political power with the unaffordable care act. Not a single Republican voted for that bill. It was forced through with a 60-vote margin in December 2009 on Christmas Eve morning.

Now we see more raw, brute political force, not because it had to be that way but because leadership is lacking, an understanding of the traditions and history of the Senate. CARL LEVIN explained why he didn't agree with that. We didn't listen to one of the senior Members who has been here a long time, who understands the history of the Senate, and so consequently we find ourselves in a situation where consensus is not derived, the mechanism to force consensus has been diminished, long-term thought goes out the window, and bipartisanship will as well.

I wish to spend another minute or two talking about the Defense Authorization Act and the waste in the Pentagon. A little over 1 year ago I put out a report on the Pentagon. In the Pentagon's budget is $67 billion a year which the Pentagon spends on items that have nothing to do with defending this country. I put out that report in the hopes the Senate Armed Services Committee would look at that report and say: We ought to take all this out of the Defense Department.

Do my colleagues realize the Defense Department has 112 science, technology, engineering, and math programs—110 separate programs. That doesn't have anything to do with defending the country. They have 138 green energy programs, spending billions of dollars every year on them.

That should be at the Department of Energy, not in the Pentagon. It costs $50,000 a year to educate a child on a military base in this country—four and a half times what it costs to educate anybody anywhere else in this country. That doesn't have anything to do with defending the country either. Why?

So we have $67 billion that not one aspect of was acted on in the Defense Authorization bill. That was not taken out. Let's have the military defend this country and not do all these other things that don't have anything to do with defending the country.

Oh, by the way, if we moved that $67 billion out, it is estimated we could save about $15 billion in overhead absorption by moving medical research to the NIH, where it belongs, instead of the billions of dollars we send to the Pentagon for medical research that doesn't have anything to do with extraneous diseases that our combat forces might encounter in odd places around the world.

So $67 billion, and we could have saved $15 billion. That $15 billion is three-quarters of what the new "agreement" between the House and the Senate on the budget for the next 2 years is. We could have saved that. That is $15 billion that would have paid for training; $15 billion that would have bought more ships; $15 billion that would have worked on missile defense, now that we are going to need it since Iran is going to eventually be armed with a missile-based nuclear weapon. But we didn't do it.

We have the Government Accountability Office that in the last 3 years has identified duplication throughout the Federal Government coming close to the tune of $250 billion. One committee in the House has actually acted on their report. Of that $250 billion, perhaps $50 billion or $40 billion could be saved by eliminating some duplication. Yet not one committee in the Senate acted on the recommendations of the Government Accountability Office to eliminate duplication—not one. Not one bill came to the floor.

We have tried to insert a lot of it, but we can't offer amendments anymore. We don't have the opportunity—the 4 million people in Oklahoma—to have a say on what happens. They see what is not happening, and they wonder why we don't fix these things.

Let me create a scenario for a minute. What do my colleagues think would happen in the country if we actually did the things the Government Accountability Office recommends we do? What would the people think if we eliminated the duplication, if we eliminated the fraud, if we eliminated the waste? The confidence of the American people in this Congress would rise because we are actually addressing the problems. We are actually addressing the key components that put us in deficit every year.

It is true—my colleagues all tell me—the biggest problem is our entitlements. That is true. But it doesn't mean we don't worry about the smaller problems. As a matter of fact, I am reminded—as I see the Presiding Officer in the Chair—that I owe Senator KING some information on some programs I forgot to give him that he asked me for in November. But if in fact we did all those things, if our committees were charged, through the leadership of this body, to eliminate the duplication, consolidate the programs, and save the money because we need the money right now, we need to not be charging it to our children, what would happen to the confidence in this country? It would rise. We would actually be doing what the people expect us to do. Nobody in the real world gets to do what we do—ignore the real problems, don't act on the real problems and say: It is too hard. It is too difficult.

I yearn for bipartisanship, for consensus. I yearn for a system that forces us into consensus—not all my way, not all somebody else's way but somewhere in the middle. That requires using the rules of the Senate and a long-term vision of where our country needs to be going and not caring about what a political career looks like but caring about what our country looks like.

We have lost focus on what is important. It is not my career, it is not the career of the distinguished Senator from Iowa, it is what happens to our country. We have our eye on the wrong ball. I do too. I admit it. We degenerate to the easiest thing to be critical about.

I am human. I admit to that as well. It doesn't have to be that way.

Mr. President, I see that the majority leader and several others are on the floor. I yield the floor in anticipation of our vote.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I rise in enthusiastic support of the nomination of Chai Feldblum to serve a second term at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Commissioner Feldblum has served with distinction at the Commission since 2010. She is a respected professor of law, and one of America's premier experts on employment discrimination and civil rights laws.

I have had the pleasure of working personally with Commissioner Feldblum first on the passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act in 1990, and more recently in 2008 on the passage of the Americans with Disabilities Amendments Act. She was a tremendous help to me in both of those efforts.

Chai Feldblum has a fierce intellect and a passionate commitment to ensuring equal opportunity for all. Perhaps the most important quality in a Commissioner at this critical agency, Commissioner Feldblum has the ability to listen to all sides and to make careful decisions about the allocation of the scarce resources that Congress provides to the EEOC. That ability to listen carefully, to search for compromise, and to forge consensus are skills that I have observed during our work together, and that I know she brings those skills to the EEOC.

She has built close working relationships over the course of her career with both worker advocates and the business community. This explains why her nomination has broad bipartisan support here in the Senate and in the employment community as a whole.

I have here letters of support from the Society of Human Resource Managers, the U.S. Business Leadership Network, and a letter signed by leading attorneys in the labor and employment bar. The signatories on that letter include five former GOP Commissioners and officers of the EEOC and the Department of Labor. Speaking of Ms. Feldblum, these attorneys say, and I quote, "Commissioner Feldblum has been one of the leading lights in the employment law field. She is a tireless contributor to the employment law bar and to educating stakeholders on employment law issues."

I ask unanimous consent that these letters be made part of the RECORD.

I would also like to note the critical role the EEOC plays in ensuring that people with disabilities are protected from employment discrimination, and in interpreting and enforcing the employment provisions of the Americans with Disabilities Act, ADA. My committee last year issued a report, Unfinished Business: Making Employment of People with Disabilities a National Priority, that focused attention on the fact that employment rates for people with disabilities remain far below the employment rates for any other group. The report noted that people with disabilities participate in the workforce at less than one-third the rate of the general population, and that workers with disabilities dropped out of the labor force at a much higher rate during our recent recession. Given these harsh realities, it is critical to have a Commissioner at the EEOC who understands disability law and is committed to enforcing the employment rights of people with disabilities. Given the role that Commissioner Feldblum played not only in passing the ADA and the ADA Amendments Act, but in the implementation of those laws, it is invaluable to have someone with her expertise at the EEOC.

I am not alone in that view. I have a letter here signed by 38 separate disability organizations in support of her re-nomination. I ask unanimous consent that this letter be included in the RECORD.

Commissioner Feldblum's confirmation will ensure that the EEOC has a full complement of members, and that the agency is able to move forward with the critical work of ensuring equality in the workplace. While much progress has been made in recent decades, discrimination in the workplace persists. Today, too many employment decisions are based on insidious stereotypes and prejudices rather than an employee's talent, ability and qualifications. Too many hardworking Americans face hiring discrimination, harassment, unfair treatment or even termination, not because of lack of skills or poor performance but because of their age, race, sex, disability or some other irrelevant factor.

Commissioner Feldblum brings to the EEOC a determination to work on a bipartisan basis to craft practical solutions, and to work to make America's workplaces more fair and free from discrimination.

The EEOC's mission is simple: to promote equality of opportunity in the workplace and enforce Federal laws prohibiting employment discrimination. Unfortunately, the agency must fulfill this broad mission without sufficient resources. The EEOC is constantly being asked to do more with less. Just in the past year, as the result of sequestration and across-the-board cuts, the EEOC has seen its budget drop from $360 million to $343 million. Meanwhile, the EEOC continues to handle an increasing number of complaints—almost 100,000 each in 2011 and 2012!

At least in part thanks to strong management and setting clear priorities, in 2011 the agency managed to reduce its backlog for the first time in almost 10 years. Together with Chairman Berrien and the other members of the Commission, Commissioner Feldblum has played an important role in developing a strategic plan that allows the EEOC to create a system that rewards effective investigations and conciliations, and does not incentivize the closure of charges simply to achieve closures.

I urge my colleagues to support the re-confirmation of this excellent, highly qualified nominee. I look forward to her confirmation and to her continued service on the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KING). All time has expired. The question is on the Feldblum nomination.

Mr. COBURN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Chai Rachel Feldblum, of the District of Columbia, to be a Member of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission?

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr.

MANCHIN), the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI), and the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. ROCKEFELLER) are necessarily absent.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Alabama (Mr. SHELBY) and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Alabama (Mr. SHELBY) would have voted "nay."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 54, nays 41, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAGAN). On this vote the yeas are 55, the nays 41. The motion is agreed to.

VOTE EXPLANATION

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I thought I had voted on the last vote but apparently it was not registered. Had it been registered, I would have voted aye.

I thank the Chair.

NOMINATION OF ELIZABETH A. WOLFORD TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will now be up to 2 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination, equally divided in the usual form.

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. On behalf of the majority, I yield back 57 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

MCCAFFERTY NOMINATION

Mrs. SHAHEEN. Madam President, I appreciate the 3 minutes to be on the floor in support of the nomination of Landya McCafferty to the Federal district court for the District of New Hampshire. If confirmed, Landya will be the first woman to serve on the Federal bench in New Hampshire. But it is not Landya's gender that matters; it is her professional experience and her personal qualities that make her stand out. She has widespread bipartisan support throughout the New Hampshire legal community and she will make an excellent addition to the Federal district court in New Hampshire.

She is currently the U.S. magistrate judge for the District of New Hampshire. Her Federal court experience includes clerking for two district court judges and at the First Circuit Court of Appeals. Landya has also prosecuted professional misconduct cases for the New Hampshire Supreme Court Attorney Discipline Office, served as an appellate and trial attorney in the highly regarded New Hampshire public defender program, and worked in private practice as a civil litigator.

Landya is an innovator. As a magistrate judge, she has become a nationally recognized expert and teacher on how to use technology to achieve a more efficient and paperless workflow in the Federal court system.

She was unanimously rated "well qualified" by the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary—their highest rating.

Landya is also active in the legal community outside the courtroom. For the past decade she has lectured at continuing legal education seminars on various topics, primarily on legal ethics, and has also presented guest lectures on legal ethics and civil procedure at the University of New Hampshire School of Law.

I am pleased that this morning, after several months, we are finally going to get a chance to vote on Landya McCafferty, who is a well-qualified, noncontroversial district court nominee. She has the support of Senator AYOTTE, who also represents New Hampshire.

I have no doubt Landya McCafferty will be an outstanding Federal district court judge, and I urge my colleagues to support her nomination when the vote comes up this morning.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mrs. FISCHER. Madam President, I rise to discuss the nomination of Elizabeth Wolford to be U.S. district judge for the District of New York.

I am new here. I am just completing my first year in the Senate. But I believe this nomination gives us all an opportunity to discuss how government is or is not working in Washington, DC.

I know when I travel the State of Nebraska—and I am back in the State most weekends and put on hundreds of miles; we are a big State, but as I travel the State of Nebraska, people always ask me: How are things going in Washington? How are you doing in Washington? I can't help but compare what we do in Nebraska to what we are doing now in Washington, DC, because in Nebraska we have a pretty unique system. We are unicameral, we have one house, we are nonpartisan, and we get things done.

We have an agenda set up every day in the Nebraska legislature, and we follow that agenda. We have bills listed. We go through those bills, and, most importantly, we take votes. As a State senator in the State of Nebraska, I have an opportunity to rise and debate with my colleagues on the issues before us. I have the opportunity to sit at my desk in the chamber in the Nebraska capitol and write out an amendment, take it up to the desk, have it discussed, and then have it voted upon.

I believe the Nebraska way is a good example for what we could do here in Washington because we have so many important issues before us that are not being debated. I am speaking basically to an empty Chamber right now. We aren't debating the big issues before this country. We are not acting upon the big issues that are before this country. We certainly are not voting on those issues.

We have a system in the Senate where amendments are not accepted. That whole concept is very foreign to me, because, as I said, in Nebraska we are able to file amendments and we are able to have those amendments voted upon. We also respect the rights of the minority, for although we may be officially nonpartisan, we do belong to political parties. We have a right to express our views on an issue, to represent our constituents, and to express their concerns. Those rights are respected, they are valued, and they are upheld.

I can tell my colleagues I had bills that were filibustered in the State, and those filibusters would last, in one case, 16 hours. But in the end, after those views of the minority were expressed, we took a vote on the issue. In Nebraska, we take up those issues. We defend the rights of our constituents to be heard, and that is what this body should do as well. We should honor the rights of all of our constituents and have their views be heard.

Being from Nebraska, we don't have as many people as some of the other States. But within this body, every Senator is equal. Every citizen has equal representation. That is a principle, and that is a value that must be respected.

I am sorry to say I believe we are at a point where that principle, that value is no longer respected within the U.S. Senate.

I see my colleague from Nebraska is in the Chamber, Madam President. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Nebraska and I be able to enter into a colloquy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. FISCHER. Thank you, Madam President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. JOHANNIS. Madam President, I appreciate the opportunity to enter into this colloquy with my colleague from Nebraska.

We have a rather unique experience. For 6 years I was the Governor of Nebraska, and when Senator FISCHER was elected to the unicameral, I was actually coming to Washington to be the Secretary of Agriculture, so we did not work together. But we both worked in the same system.

I would like to get a legislative perspective about how the Nebraska unicameral works. I saw it from the Governor's office, but, of course, I was not on the floor every day. That is not typically what a Governor would do—to go to the floor every day. But Nebraska is a pretty Republican State. I think we all recognize that. We know that. It is a nonpartisan unicameral. So not only is it a one-house system, but the senators do not run as Republicans or Democrats. They run on a nonpartisan ticket.

I would also say that our voter registration in Nebraska is public record. So, of course, the media, when we would run for office, would always look up how we were registered or they would ask us. I do not remember a time—maybe there was a time, but I do not remember a time—when Democrats had the majority in the unicameral by their voter registration.

I would like the Senator from Nebraska to explain how the majority party, Republicans, worked with the minority party in terms of committee assignments, how they would work with the minority party in terms of chairs. Would a member of the minority ever get a chance to be a chair of a committee? How does that work? And I would like the Senator to talk a little bit, if she would, about how this system works on a day-to-day basis in terms of the relationship between the majority and the minority. Maybe it will be instructive today.

Mrs. FISCHER. Madam President, I am so very fortunate to have Senator JOHANNIS as the senior Senator from Nebraska. He has a wealth of experience as a former Governor, as a former Secretary of Agriculture, and as a U.S. Senator. So he has definitely been a mentor to me. I believe, perhaps, Nebraska can mentor the Senate through the trying times we are facing right now.

As Senator JOHANNIS said, we are nonpartisan. We do not caucus. We do not have majority or minority leaders because we are nonpartisan. So we do not have that leadership structure in our State that we have here in the Senate.

In the State of Nebraska, if you want to be part of leadership, you stand on the first day of a legislative session, and you have to nominate yourself and run for that position. So you would nominate yourself for speaker and then we do a secret ballot. It is 25 votes, and you would be speaker because there are only 49 of us. Then we go through the committees, and we have 14 standing committees. So as chair of the transportation and telecommunications committee, I had to stand on the floor of the legislature and nominate myself, which is hard to do, but you nominate yourself, and then your colleagues, your peers, decide who the chairman will be.

We had Republicans and Democrats who were committee chairs. In fact, this past year in the legislature, even though officially there is a majority of Republicans, many of our chairmen—in fact, I think it was the majority—were Democrats because you are rewarded for the hard work you do, for your integrity, for your honesty, for being willing to listen to all sides and work with everyone to reach consensus.

So it is a unique system, it works for our State, and it is that ability to work with each other to try and build those coalitions so you can get your 25 votes on an issue, on a bill that you have, that makes us so very special with regard to other States and also with regard to the U.S. Senate, because we do work together.

The coalitions change. The coalitions change depending on the issue. You can find allies all across the spectrum—from more liberal members to more conservative members. If you have a good idea that is going to benefit the people of the State, your peers are willing to come forward and work with you.

I know Senator JOHANNIS as Governor had to draw up budgets and send those budgets, then, to the legislature and have our appropriations committee go through that process dealing with his agency heads. Then the appropriations committee would bring that package to the floor. Here again, we would debate it. I do not know if the legislature always agreed with Senator JOHANNIS during his time as Governor, but perhaps he could give us some insight into how we came together on budgets and were able to work through that as well.

Mr. JOHANNIS. Madam President, I would love to be able to stand here today and say to my colleague from Nebraska that every time I submitted something to the legislature they loved it, blessed it, and passed it. But that did not happen. There was a give-and-take process that would occur. The budget is actually a perfect example. Like this system, the Governor of Nebraska gets the first shot. The Governor, soon after the legislature would go into session in January of each year, would submit a budget. We have a long session. It is a 90-day session 1 year, and then next year it is followed by a 60-day session. In the 90-day session we would do the full budget exercise. Typically, in the 60-day session we would do the fine tuning. It was a biennial budget that would be passed.

I quickly learned if I was going to have any success, whether it was the budget or any other initiative, I had to reach out on an individual basis and convince each senator of the merits of my idea I was proposing. This was not a situation where I had the ability to go to the majority leader and say: Get your people in line. Crush the minority and pass my budget. That would never happen in Nebraska. It would not happen with the majority—typically that would be Republican in Nebraska—and it would not happen with the minority, which is typically Democratic in Nebraska.

I always said as Governor that most days the one thing that the unicameral could almost unanimously agree upon is that they were mad about something when it came to the Governor. But the reality is we worked through these things. There was give-and-take. There were things that I wanted that I did not get. There were things that I did want that they would have to give in and compromise on. It never failed, we would pass a budget by the end of the legislative session.

I have said many times looking back on my time as Governor that at the start of the legislative session—the 90-day session—there was one thing I could guarantee to Nebraskans. That was that by the end of the session a budget would be passed. The second thing I could guarantee is, without gimmicks, that budget would balance. We had a simple philosophy. We would not spend money that we did not have. No. 3, I could promise Nebraskans that we would not borrow money to make that budget balance because, you see, in Nebraska we are limited by our constitution. We are only allowed to borrow $100,000, which I am sure when the constitution was written many, many decades ago that was a very handsome sum of money. Today it does not get you very far. So at the end of day we had to balance the budget.

Some of my greatest allies as Governor were Democrats. Some people who fought me the hardest on certain issues were Republicans. But we had to work through that.

I would ask my colleague from Nebraska, does she ever remember a time in the 8 years she was a Nebraska senator where she was in a meeting where her Republican colleagues said to her: Let's figure out a way to silence the minority and get our way on every vote because we have the majority. We could win every vote if we do that. Let's figure out a way to break the rules so we can change the rules so this minority means nothing anymore in this legislative body when it comes to these issues.

I ask my colleague from Nebraska, did that ever happen?

Mrs. FISCHER. Madam President, the people of Nebraska would never stand for that to happen in our State. As I said, we are very proud of our unicameral system and how we are able to work together. Of course, we know who is a Republican and who is a Democrat in the Nebraska legislature. But as I said, we are able to cross that aisle, which does not exist in Nebraska, by the way. We do not sit separate from each other. We are able to reach out and work together. We have this system that is so open and so transparent. We work with the Governor—or perhaps in Senator JOHANNIS' case not work with the Governor—on the issues. But we are able to have that dialog with our chief executive. We are able to have that dialog with each other.

We have a committee process where every bill that is introduced has a public hearing. Any person can walk into the hearing room and come forward and testify before a legislative committee in the State of Nebraska. Senators then have the opportunity to ask questions to be able to gain more information, not just from people who are invited to come and sit on a panel before a legislative hearing but from citizens who step forward and are willing to take that time away from their jobs, their families. Some may have to travel a great distance since we are a very big State in order to get to the capital to be at a hearing and express their views. I believe in most cases—at least in my experience—every individual who would come before a legislative hearing in the State of Nebraska was treated with respect, whether they agreed with a majority of the members on the committee or they had a disagreement.

It is a respect for those views that are different from your own that I believe is so very valuable as a legislator, to be able to hear, to be able to question.

That is why it truly saddens me that we are seeing a rules change here in the Senate, where I believe the views of the minority will no longer be considered.

It has been my experience here so far that I have been able to have meetings with nominees, nominees who are coming before the committees that I sit on to be confirmed. They come to my office. I am able to ask them questions. I am able to express to them the concerns I have heard from the people in my State and hopefully get answers from them. It does give us an opportunity to establish a relationship where we are going to be able to work together in the future but, more importantly, it gives me the opportunity, as the Senator from Nebraska who happens to be in the minority, to have that chance to question the nominee for Commerce Secretary. With the rules change, now that requires 51 votes, and even as a committee member, those nominees do not even have to come and introduce themselves to me.

That is not fair. It is not fair to the people of my State because every State citizen needs to be represented here in the Senate. That is what is so very—or what used to be so very special about this body.

You look through history—I know Senator JOHANNIS is a great student of history—you look through history and you read about the debates that happened on the Senate floor. I remember earlier this year when we were all in the Old Senate Chamber and we got to experience that feeling of being open and honest with our colleagues, without the cameras going, and truly being able to air some grievances. I thought that was helpful. It was a very moving experience for me as a new Senator to be there. But I think perhaps the Senator would agree with me that we have lost that spirit of the Old Senate Chamber and of the Senate Chamber in which we are standing.

Mr. JOHANNIS. Madam President, I remember that night well. It occurred just some months ago. The nuclear option was being threatened. Many had worked very hard to avoid that.

Keep in mind that the nuclear option was not just discovered this year or last year; Senators have known of the nuclear option for a long time. We have been down this road before when Republicans were in the majority. Fortunately and wisely, they backed off. A group of I think 14 Senators got together and said: You know, we have to figure out a way to deal with this. And they did. They got a lot of criticism. I remember that. I remember the criticism was that they caved in, they gave in, they compromised, and that they should not have compromised and all of the things that you hear. But at the end of the day, leadership backed off of doing exactly what happened here right before Thanksgiving.

Well, that night we went into the Old Senate Chamber. Anybody who has ever visited that room, you walk in and you feel the history of that place immediately. Some of the great Senators in our Nation's history have spent time in that room arguing for the great causes of the day. It is a remarkable place. The doors were closed. There was no staff in the room. There was no media in the room. There were no cameras recording everything we were saying. This was a meeting of the Senators who were there to try to figure out whether there was a way forward.

I will not talk about the specifics of who said what to whom on this, that, and the other, but I will tell you about the atmosphere. I felt the atmosphere was extremely tense and uncomfortable, especially at the start of the meeting. We were really hopelessly divided on the issues we were facing. But the conversation began. People started making points on all sides of these issues.

In the context of that meeting and some things that had happened previously, a picture started to come together. The picture was that we had agreed as Senators—most of us, not all of us; some had disagreement with what we were doing—that there were certain executive branch appointees that, if there was no objection from any Senator, could move forward through the process really unimpeded. If a single Senator had an objection and said: Wait a second, I have had a dealing with this person, or whatever, that is very problematic, well then they have to go through the whole process. But we set aside hundreds of executive branch appointees. We said:

Look, there is no good reason to force them through this process when there is no objection. Democrats, Republicans, and Independents shook hands on that, and that became the way we operate today.

Another piece of the context was that there was discussion about some things we could do with the rules. At this very lengthy night meeting, like gentlemen and gentlewomen, we shook hands and we had a way forward. It took a while to develop it. It took a while after the meeting to flesh it out. There was give-and-take. Some were concerned that it did not embody what we agreed upon. I personally thought we gave too much on our side, but at the end of the day I thought it made sense as a way forward to avoid the nuclear option. We reached an agreement. As I said, we shook hands. That put the issue to bed.

As I would talk to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, we would say to each other: You know, that was a good meeting. It has only happened twice since I have been here—once on the START treaty and once on this. We congratulated each other for finding that way forward.

But then we started to hear just a couple of weeks ago that the agreement was not holding, not because either side had violated it but because all of a sudden the majority, led by Senator REID, decided they wanted to revisit this whole issue. I felt we had put the nuclear option in a lockbox, locked it up, and thrown away the key. I felt we had come to an agreement as a Senate that the damage to our Nation and its citizens in employing the nuclear option was too great a price to pay. That is what I came out of that meeting believing. That is what I continued to believe as I talked to my colleagues on the Democratic side of the aisle.

So what happened? If the agreement was not violated, if people were living by the agreement and a whole host of nominees had gone through the process, some of whom I did not like a bit but they got the votes necessary—they were confirmed, they had gone through the process. So what was different about a couple of weeks ago versus when we walked out of that meeting that evening? Well, I would ask my colleague's thought on that, but I think I know what that was about. I am going to continue to talk about this in the days ahead as we talk about this nuclear option and what it is doing to our country.

What happened is this: ObamaCare started to roll out. I remember the day ObamaCare passed. As I said last night, I was sitting in a chair right in front of Senator FISCHER. It was my first couple of years here in the Senate. What happened before Thanksgiving in the breaking of the rules to change the rules reminded me exactly of what happened with ObamaCare. The Democrats had the votes. It was a very unusual time in our Nation's history. They had 60 Senators and they had the majority in the House and they had the Presidency. Under the rules, they could stop debate and pass anything they wanted to pass. That Christmas Eve day, I remember feeling, as a member of the minority, I was told to sit down and shut up because my viewpoint on ObamaCare meant nothing. What mattered that day was raw, sheer political power. They had the 60 votes. I sat there during the rollcall vote. I heard every Democrat vote for one of the worst pieces of policy ever passed by this body. I felt that day as though I was told to sit down and shut up.

Then a couple of weeks ago, when ObamaCare was literally melting down before our eyes, people were being thrown off their insurance plan, they were beginning to realize what the cost of this was going to be, and they were beginning to realize that the promise that "if you like your plan, you can keep your plan, period" was a political gimmick. It was a lie. They were being thrown off their plans, and they could not even get on the Web site. All of a sudden, our colleagues on the other side of the aisle began to realize their jobs were at stake. Their numbers were crashing. All of a sudden, after we shook hands like gentlemen and gentlewomen after a very tense meeting and we implemented what people agreed would be implemented, we came back to revisit the nuclear option.

I would like to offer one additional thought about what this means. The rules of the Senate have been changed on occasion. It is not something we do very often around here, but on occasion they have been changed. The rules contemplate a way to change the rules: Two-thirds of the Senators have to agree to the rules change.

How did this come about? Let me explain that. The majority leader asked for a ruling of the Chair. Basically, the ruling got to the question of how many votes it takes to confirm somebody. That ruling was properly decided. The majority leader announced: I want to appeal that ruling.

That ruling was, in fact, appealed. How does one successfully appeal a ruling of the Chair with the majority vote, and that is exactly what happened. The Democrats fell in line, and I had the same feeling that day before Thanksgiving that I had on that Christmas Eve Day when ObamaCare was passed. The feeling I had, as a Member of the minority, was that every single Member sitting in those chairs, the majority, the Democrats, were saying to my colleagues and me: Sit down and shut up.

I said last night that I have a tremendous amount of respect for a man who served here for many years with great distinction, admired by everybody. I got to know him a little bit as he had not passed when I came to the Senate. Senator Robert Byrd was probably the finest historian of the Senate, maybe ever. He would come to the floor and talk about the beautiful history of the Senate, this institution, and the sacred rights of every single Senator to come to the floor, argue, make their point, and offer an amendment.

Under the rules, the amendment doesn't even have to be germane to get a vote on it.

This beautiful institution worked for over 200 years under that rule, under that philosophy. Unbelievable.

It worked through wars, it worked through the 1918 flu pandemic. It worked through attacks on our Nation, 9/11, and Pearl Harbor.

Somehow, some way, great men and women came into this Chamber and figured out a way to make this body work until 2 weeks ago, when by sheer political force the majority pulled out of Pandora's box the nuclear option.

I ask my colleague from Nebraska to offer her thoughts as a new Member. I look forward, as the senior Senator from Nebraska, to watching the junior Senator from Nebraska.

I am not running again. What impact is this going to have? How does the Senator implement the desires, wishes, and dreams of Nebraskans who elected the Senator and sent her to Washington under circumstances such as this?

Does the Senator worry that what is going to happen will not just stop; that it will be Supreme Court appointments at some point and it will be legislative activity. I wish to hear those thoughts.

Mrs. FISCHER. In watching the Senate before I arrived and in studying the Senate throughout history, the beauty of this body has been the individual rights of every single Senator.

With the change we have seen, I believe those rights are diminished, which translates into the people who live in States that are represented by the minority will not be heard in this body.

I have been surprised, I have been shocked, and I have been hurt by comments from the majority, where I am referred to as an obstructionist, where my colleagues on this side of the aisle are referred to as extremists, anarchists.

I don't even know how to respond to the question of the Senator because nothing could be further from the truth. How I view this body is as one that should have an agenda. We should have Members on the floor participating in debates on bills following an agenda and taking votes, but we don't see that.

Instead, we see the two of us and our friend and colleague, the Presiding Officer, speaking to an empty Chamber, speaking to the TV cameras. That is not the way the Senate is supposed to operate. We are supposed to be doing the people's work.

I say to the Senator I don't know what we are obstructing, because as a member of the Armed Services Committee, we passed the National Defense Authorization Act out of committee in May. We passed that out of committee in May. We could have taken it up in June. We could have taken it up in July, September, and October. Instead, we seem to be in this crisis management mode in one of the greatest bodies in the world. That makes no sense.

I am ready to do the work, but until these bills appear on the agenda, how do we do the work? Why do we wait until we have a few days left in the year to take on what I believe is our most sacred responsibility, the defense of this country, our national security, our military men and women, our veterans.

The committee passed out a great bill in a bipartisan vote. It has passed in the Senate for the past 50 or 51 years. Yet we are against a time limit that was manufactured.

As I said, the bill came out in May. Why wasn't it on the agenda? Why can't we have amendments to it—very important amendments.

I happen to have a good amendment with Senator CLAIRE McCASKILL, a Democrat from Missouri, and Senator KELLY AYOTTE, a Republican from New Hampshire, that we believe makes the provisions in our committee bill dealing with sexual assault even better, even stronger, that will protect victims. We are not allowed to have that amendment.

Again, that is a foreign concept to me, as a Senator, not being allowed to have an amendment on a bill that should have been brought up on the floor months ago so we could have had a debate on this truly No. 1 priority of our country. Instead we have crisis management.

I don't know about the Senator from Nebraska, but I don't respond well to crisis management. I like to have time to make wise decisions, to have major discussions, to gather information, to represent our constituents, to represent the American people.

The American people demand more. They demand us to be better. I can't even imagine what folks think when they know we are speaking to an empty Chamber, when we should be talking about the big issues of the day, when we should be talking about the National Defense Authorization Act, when we should be talking about sexual assault in the military, when we should be talking about how are we going to make sure our military men and women have the resources they need to keep them safe so they can return to their families and return to their families whole.

We should be talking about Iran. We should be talking about Benghazi, but we are not because we are not allowed to have that legislation before us.

As a new Senator, I can tell the Senator I am very frustrated. I know when the Senator is back in the State he hears, as I do, that the people of Nebraska are frustrated as well. I believe they reflect the views of the people of this country. They expect more from us. They expect us to be better. They expect us to do our job.

How can we do our job when we are not allowed to vote on legislation that addresses the truly pressing issues of our day?

I say to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, yes, I am frustrated. I am upset. I am angry that I am not able to represent the people of my State by taking a vote, by taking a vote on amendments that all Senators feel are important as well. It is not only Republicans offering amendments that don't get heard, it is Democrats as well.

I would imagine the Presiding Officer is very frustrated. This has to change. I don't know how long it has been going on, but we can change this. We can change this by having an agenda that works, an agenda that brings bills up by a leader who is going to have an open amendment process.

Instead of us coming to the floor and addressing a camera, we need to be able to debate each other and have our voices heard because we are representing those voices back home. They expect that.

We need to do this. Maybe I am naive, but I think we can do it. I think we can still come together and be able to work together. Sometimes we hear the terms "obstructionist," "extremist," and "anarchist." Enough of that.

It is not only Republicans who are demanding their rights and who are exercising their rights. I know we have Democratic colleagues who have put holds on nominations. They are not obstructionist. They are not extremist. They are exercising their rights as Members of the Senate. They are exercising their rights to have questions from their constituents answered.

I will defend their rights to put holds on nominations until they get those questions answered.

We don't always hear about that though. We don't hear that it is all of us in the Senate who have that duty to make sure we can have our constituents' concerns answered; so we can have a project in our State that is being held up for one reason or another addressed; so we can bring forward a question—from our Governor or our State or our State legislature—that an agency has not addressed in a timely manner, and where we as Senators can push a little harder to get an answer from a nominee or an agency. That is checks and balances. That is a balanced government. That is transparency. That is accountability.

It is not allowing the executive branch to get everything they want. None of us gets everything we want.

Senator JOHANNNS made the comment that as Governor it is give and take. As a State senator I can tell you I had to compromise on bills that I thought were great the way I had them drafted, but you need to compromise with your colleagues, with the Governor, and with the President, in order to truly represent all the people in this country.

I am sorry to say this country is polarized. This country is polarized and the Senate is polarized. If we could show some leadership here—if we can take on these hard issues, make tough decisions, and make hard choices—then we would be good examples to our country and we would have a brighter future. We need to show some leadership. We were elected to make these hard choices for the American people so that we can go forward.

With that, Mr. President, I yield the floor so that my colleague has time to address issues before us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BOOKER). The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. JOHANNNS. I thank my colleague for being with me for this colloquy. I appreciate so much the legislative experience Senator FISCHER brings to this body. It is very extensive. She was regarded as the leader in the Nebraska unicameral and chaired an extremely important committee. She would be too modest to point this out, but at the time when our road system needed funding, she figured out a way not only to identify funding—and not by raising taxes but by better efficiency and better management, and it was a significant amount of funding—but she then built the coalitions necessary to actually get that passed. Back home, today, that is getting rave reviews. So I thank her for that because I drive on those roads and I know she does too.

My colleague mentioned the Defense bill, and nothing could be a better example of what we are dealing with here. This bill came out of the Armed Services Committee, which has a reputation for being one of the most bipartisan committees in the whole Senate system. It is not about Republicans and Democrats on that committee, for a whole host of reasons. One is there is just great leadership on that committee, and there has been great leadership in the past, but the focus is on the national defense of our United States and our allies.

For 50-some years we have passed a Defense authorization bill. It is one of the things, even when nothing else could get done, that we would get done. The hallmark of that is that it is a very open process. The bill comes out of committee—this one came out in May—and the amendment process starts, and we might go days working our way through that bill. It is very normal. It is very much a part of the process. At the end of it, typically that bill is passed with very strong bipartisan support.

What has happened that we would get a bill in May that has bipartisan support in this committee, it comes out of the committee ready for floor action, and we can't get to that bill except right before the holidays? We all know who controls the floor. Democrats control the floor. They are in the majority. The majority leader, through the election by Democrats, controls the floor. So it feels to me as though we are saying to our United States military: You are not important enough that we would give you 2 or 3 weeks in June or July, September or October to work through this huge package of spending. In fact, we are going to relegate you to the last hours before the Christmas break. Then the majority leader is going to say to those of us in the minority: By the way, I will pick your amendments. I think some of these amendments are pretty tough amendments for my people to vote on, so I will pick the amendments.

So what has happened to the right of every individual Senator to come to the floor of the Senate and offer their idea on a piece of legislation or, for that matter, any other important issue facing our United States?

This is like sending a message to the military from the Democrat majority that says: Look, you are important enough to get a few hours before we break, and we all go back and enjoy a big ham dinner for Christmas, and we open our presents while you are off fighting in Afghanistan or wherever you have been ordered to serve.

I don't think that is right. There isn't any reason why this bill can't get done. It has been done for 50-some years. What is so tough about it? There isn't any reason why this bill can't get called up in the summer. There isn't any reason why we can't deal with this bill in June. It came out of committee in May. There isn't any reason why we can't use these months leading up to now—the end of the year—to pass this bill.

There are few guarantees in the Senate these days, but one guarantee I can make is that if you allow this Defense authorization bill to go through the regular process, allow Senators to offer their amendments, come to the floor, debate their amendments, and pass or not pass those amendments, at the end of the day that bill will pass.

Instead, what has happened is the bill is put on the floor right before a holiday break and the majority leader says: I will decide whose amendments are going to get heard. I will be the one picking the amendments, and we have to get this done. If you don't agree with the way I want to do things around here, then you are an obstructionist, you are an anarchist.

Wait a second. I should have a say about that bill. It authorizes billions and billions of dollars. I should be able to go home to Nebraskans and say that I gave my best effort with an amendment that I supported or sponsored or whatever, and at the end of the day I won or I lost. After all, that is what they elected me to do.

It is not just what happened with the nuclear option, it is the way this Senate is being operated by those who are in the majority—Democrats. Never in the history of this institution has a leader filled the amendment tree, which is a fancy Washington way of saying I'm taking away the amendments from the minority, more times far and away than any other majority leader. When he does that, when he takes away the right to amend, he silences the minority because we don't control what comes to the floor. We are not in the majority. We don't control when a bill is going to be heard. We are not in the majority. So the only thing we can do as a minority is offer an amendment and plead our case.

Senator FISCHER mentioned a perfect example of the point I am trying to make. She says that she and others, on a bipartisan basis, have an amendment on sexual assaults, which we know is a very serious problem. Now, some might find this surprising, but I want her amendment to go further. I don't think it goes far enough. I don't think she would mind me saying that. I signed on to an amendment offered by Senator GILLIBRAND. I was one of the early ones to sign on. It is a bipartisan amendment, and it has over 50 cosponsors. That is the amendment I want.

I think this is an important issue. I see these young men and women come to my office, and they are proud as proud can be. They have just signed up or they want to go to the military academy, and it breaks my heart to think they may be subjected to sexual assault in the military. I believe we can't be tough enough. I believe we can't work hard enough to create an atmosphere that is so inhospitable to the sexual offender that they would never think of being in the military. I want to go as far as we can and I want to argue that point. I believe there will be Nebraskans that will agree with me and perhaps disagree with me. Why shouldn't we have that bill on the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All postcloture time has expired.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Elizabeth A. Wolford, of New York, to be United States District Judge for the Western District of New York?

Mr. JOHANNIS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

The result was announced—yeas 70, nays 29, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 260 Ex.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the nomination of Landya B. McCafferty, of New Hampshire, to be United States District Judge for the District of New Hampshire, shall be brought to a close? The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. HATCH (when his name was called.) "Present."

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 58, nays 40, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 58, the nays are 40, and one Senator responded "Present."

The motion is agreed to.

NOMINATION OF LANDYA B. MCCAFFERTY TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the nomination.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Landya B. McCafferty, of New Hampshire, to be United States District Judge for the District of New Hampshire.

The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. On behalf of the majority, I yield back 57½ minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will now be up to 2 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination equally divided in the usual form.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—H.R. 3548

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, as if in legislative session, I ask unanimous consent that if the Senate receives H.R. 3548 from the House of Representatives and the bill is identical to S. 1689, as introduced, then the bill be considered as having been read three times and passed; and that the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I wish to thank my colleagues, in the Christmas spirit, despite these contentious times, for letting this bill move forward. Let me just briefly explain.

On Christmas Eve, 2012, nearly one year ago today, the 125-member West Webster Volunteer Fire Association—a volunteer fire department outside of Rochester—faced an unimaginable tragedy when four of their brave members were wounded, two fatally, when they responded to a fire but in instead faced an ambush of unspeakable proportions.

While many of our families across our Nation were waking up last Christmas Eve morning preparing Christmas dinner, shopping, wrapping presents or picking up family from the airport, four families in Webster, NY, were instead confronting a heart-wrenching tragedy.

The call of a house on fire came in to the West Webster Fire Department at 5:30 a.m. that morning, December 24. It was a cold, snowy morning, still dark, but the everyday heroes from the West Webster Fire Department courageously did what they volunteered to do on behalf of their neighbors and on behalf of their hometowns. They left their homes and their families to put out a fire.

Instead, this routine call turned into a tragedy which shocked this community and people throughout the country and even the world. What they didn't know was that the fire was intentionally set by the home's owner in order to lure these innocent firefighters into a senseless sniper ambush. The sniper was hiding behind a berm amid the chaos of the fire and began shooting at the responding firefighters.

The firefighters were confused at first to hear popping sounds; they thought it might be the fire, but Lieutenant Mike Chiapperini, who was also a Webster police officer, knew better and shouted to his fellow volunteers to take cover, but it was too late.

Firefighter Hofstetter was shot in the pelvis while trying to alert dispatchers on the radio to the situation.

Ted Scardino was shot in the shoulder, and 5 minutes later shot in the leg. A 16-year volunteer lay there bleeding for an hour, enduring the December cold while sustaining second-degree burns on his head.

Lieutenant Chiapperini and firefighter Kaczowka both died in the ambush.

As news of this horrific senseless Christmas Eve tragedy spread, well meaning people from Rochester, New York State, the Nation, and the world reached out to the West Webster Fire Association to offer their support and prayers.

Not realizing that collecting and distributing the funds to the family would jeopardize the association's tax exempt status with the IRS, the association accepted donations from generous people all around the Nation wanting to help the poor families who suffered so on that day. They collected these donations for the victims and their families. They wanted to give these donations to the victims and their families. It defies reason that they would be unable to do so because of a technicality in the Tax Code.

Just as we did after 9/11 and again after a similar fire department tragedy in California, it is our obligation to make sure the West Webster Volunteer Firemen's Association can now distribute to these families the contributions their neighbors and unknown countless generous others wanted them to have. With the passage of this legislation, that will happen.

I thank my colleagues, particularly on the other side of the aisle. I know these are contentious times, and this was done truly in the Christmas spirit, and I thank them.

WOLFORD CONFIRMATION

One more brief moment. We just confirmed to the U.S. district court the first woman to serve on the Federal bench in the Western District of New York, Elizabeth Wolford. She is going to be a great judge. Ms. Wolford is right out of central casting for the role of a Federal judge. Not only will the legal community of Western New York be well served by her ascension on the bench, the entire community will benefit from her leadership, wisdom, and judgment.

It is an honor to have nominated and to now confirm Elizabeth Wolford, the first woman to represent the Western District of New York, a very distinguished bench.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. President, I wish to speak about where we are right now. We are moving toward confirming a number of individuals with the majority deciding that the majority could do that by themselves. Apparently, they had the right to change the rules, which I guess means there really are no rules and the majority can change the rules any day they want.

What we are seeing now with the health care implementation is what happens, frankly, when one side decides they don't want to make any effort necessary to get even one other person from the other side to agree with them on moving forward with something as big as the health care legislation. That should have been an example to us, but apparently the example was the example that they, the majority, can do whatever the majority wants to do.

Let me share for a few minutes some of the things I am hearing in our office from people who are contacting us to tell us the problems they are having that they didn't anticipate.

This is a letter from Pam from Chesterfield, MO. She says: My husband and I have always played by the rules and carried insurance. I had no idea we were going to have to change plans and go to the exchange, but our provider apparently doesn't want to have individual plans any longer because it is too costly to figure out the complexities that would apply to individual plans.

Then Pam says: At least for now, my husband and I are not getting health insurance, and I guess we have to hope for the best. What a mess, she says. So much for playing by the rules. I never expected the two of us to be uninsured. But, now, she thinks that is what is likely to happen.

Jennifer, a college student from St. Louis said that she initially supported the Affordable Care Act. She worked part-time at a Home Goods store where she had what she thought were great health benefits—or at least the health benefits she wanted—and where she could work as many hours as she wanted. But, she says, because of the health care plan, her employer reduced the maximum number of hours she could work to 24 hours.

So, she says:

My name is Jennifer, a hard-working student from St. Louis, MO, and I would like to share my emerging problems. At first I was supportive of the Patient Protection and Affordable Health Care Act. Insurance for everyone—that sounds so appealing, but now that it has affected my life in a negative way, I am not so sure I can be supportive anymore. I have worked for my employer for almost 3 years while going to school. It has been an excellent place to work until now, and now not only do I not have the health care benefits I had before, but I am not able to work as much as I was able to work before.

Carla and her husband are farmers from Oreck, MO. They farm full-time; neither of them is employed off the farm. They have two sons, one just graduated from college and just went to work; another is a junior in college. They have one full-time employee on the farm. Her family provides their own insurance. In order for them to have insurance they have had a health savings account through Humana. Their deductible is $10,000, and they still pay a little over $500 a month or $6,057 a year for their family insurance. But she tells me beginning January 1, 2014, their deductible goes to $12,600. Their premium goes to $11,422, an 89-percent increase in a family that provides their own insurance. By the way, they provide insurance with dollars they earned and they pay taxes on, so we can add another premium to that and find out how this family, that has done all they could to have insurance for their family, now has an 89-percent increase in their insurance and a deductible they hope they never use. But if they do, it is a big problem if they use that deductible. The deductible is going to be over $12,000.

If a family is paying $11,000 for premiums and then they develop health care needs, they pay another $12,000 before their insurance helps them, that is $23,000 a year before their insurance benefits them in any way for a family that had insurance coverage that, until right now, they thought was working for them while doing all they could to have it.

Catherine from Springfield, MO, says a few weeks ago she was informed she was going to lose her health coverage because of the President's health care plan. She has been concerned that she might not be able to sign up because the Web site wasn't working. Whether the insurance costs more or not wasn't as big of a concern to her as having insurance. She says: The nightmare that is ObamaCare is going to affect us in a major way, and the stress of what is coming is affecting many people. Not only are we losing health insurance plans we liked, and possibly the doctors we trust, but the new coverage is not as good and it costs us more. This is—to paraphrase the Vice President, "a big deal", she says.

Ken writes:

Dear Senator Blunt. I am writing to inform you of my recent experience with health insurance and the ACA. My wife and I make a decent income but are far from wealthy. On September 30 I received a notice that due to the ACA, my employer-sponsored health insurance plan would no longer be available. Yesterday—after worrying about this since September 30, apparently—yesterday, he continues—I discovered that my employer was able to renegotiate an early renewal and our monthly premium will only increase by 12.5 percent. However—by the way, 12.5 percent is a pretty good increase by my books except the ones that compare what is happening right now. However, he continues,

I have been made aware that next year my plan premiums will increase by a minimum of 39 percent.

So it increased 12.5 percent this year, and they have already notified this family that their increase will be a minimum of 39 percent next year, and his deductible, according to him, will double. So reading his letter further, he says: So I guess I will not be able to keep my insurance and my costs will not decrease as the President said they would.

Carol from Republic, MO, says her monthly premiums have gone from $600 to $800, and the part-time jobs she and her husband both had at the local community college have actually gone down because they are not able to teach as much as they were able to teach before, because the community college has decided they can't let any of their part-time faculty work more than 30 hours. So their income went down, their expenses went up, in both cases because of the President's decisions on health care and the legislative decisions on health care in both cases. We know this has impacted the workplace, part-time workers, people holding their workforce down so they wouldn't be covered, holding their worker hours down so they wouldn't have to pay the penalty if they didn't offer insurance or offer the insurance for the first time at levels they hadn't had before.

Now we are also seeing—not only did the hours of work go down, but the cost of health insurance goes up. Surely, we can come up with a better plan than that.

Christian from St. Peter's, MO, just learned that his wife's employer will start excluding him from their family coverage and that he now has to receive insurance in some different way. It looks like he is going to be able to do that with his employer for $1,300 more per year. This is actually the best story I have told so far—only $1,300 that this family used to have to spend for something else, and they are now spending for health care. He says: I am not sure who ObamaCare benefits, but it sure isn't my family.

These stories are just examples of some of the things we are hearing.

Last weekend I noticed that one of the architects of the President's health care bill, Dr. Zeke Emanuel, on Fox News to Chris Wallace, said that what the President really should have said—and this is his exact quote: "If you want to pay more for your insurance company that covers your doctor, you can do that."

I don't know what he is looking at, and some may be able to find their doctor for more money, but in our State some of the health care providers aren't on the exchange.

I read the other day that more than half of the hospitals in New Hampshire aren't on the exchange. So if your doctor happened to work for more than half of the hospitals in New Hampshire, there is no amount of money you can pay on the exchange and keep your doctor, because your doctor is no longer available through the way that you are told by the health care act that you can get insurance as an individual.

The President promised that. He said: My plan begins by covering every American. If you already like your health insurance, the only thing that will change for you under this part is the amount of money you will spend on premiums, and that will be less.

I think we are going to quickly see not only are people losing insurance, but for most people the premiums are not going to be less and the deductibles are going to be higher, not lower.

This is going to be a story that is going to affect American families as nothing the Federal Government has done in a long time, and maybe nothing the Federal Government has done ever.

If you truly want to impact the lives of families, impact their health care. Somebody told me one time: When everybody in your family is well, you have lots of problems. When somebody in your family is sick, you have one problem.

We are dealing with the one focusing problem for American families: their access to health care that they can afford with decisions they like.

I yield back.

PRAYER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the order of February 29, 1960, the hour of 12 noon having arrived, the Senate having been in continuous session since yesterday, the Senate will suspend for a prayer by the Senate Chaplain.

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Eternal God, who gives us so much more than we deserve, when the days are dreary and the long nights weary, we are still indebted to You for Your generous mercies. May Your blessings provide our lawmakers with the willingness to see and do Your will. Living by the principles of Your sacred revelation, may they do nothing to cause them shame. Give them respect for diverse viewpoints, open their hearts to Your love, their minds to Your truth, and their wills to Your service.

We pray in Your gracious Name. Amen.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COONS). The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HOEVEN. Mr. President, I rise to continue the discourse my esteemed colleague, the good Senator from Missouri, was engaged in on the Senate floor just a minute ago, talking about the importance—the importance—of bipartisanship as we work to craft policy for this country, policy that all Americans can support and policy that truly moves our country forward.

So whether we are considering nominations or whether we are considering legislation, we need to find ways to come together and come up with solutions that the American people support across the board in a bipartisan way. So as we consider these nominations, we have to consider the fact that now the Senate will be approving these nominations with essentially a 1-party vote, 51 votes.

Right now, the Democratic Party has the majority in the Senate, so they can put judges on the bench, confirm other nominations without any Republican support whatsoever. Of course, under that approach, at some point the reverse may very well be true, that nominees may be confirmed—whether it is judicial nominees or other types of appointments—with only Republican votes if the Republicans are in the majority without any Democratic votes. Why does that matter?

Why it matters is because, again, I go back to my earlier statement that in crafting policy, crafting laws and making appointments, nominations to the bench, we need to do it in a way where we garner broad support across the country.

More than 300 million people's lives are affected dramatically by all of these things, by who those appointees are, the offices they hold, what they do with the laws we pass. So if we are going to impact everybody in the Nation with these laws, with these appointments, we have to make sure there is input, consideration by and, if you will, from both sides of the aisle.

That is how we get the kinds of policies and we get the kinds of nominees and we get the kinds of judges and Justices that truly will have the support of people across this great country. I believe that is what we need to truly build the kind of future we want for ourselves and for our prosperity.

As we talk about nominees, we consider also implementation of the Affordable Care Act. This is a huge topic of discussion in our country right now, and it is going to continue to be a huge topic of discussion. You are talking about one-fifth to one-sixth of our economy engaged in health care. So this is something that touches every single American in their daily life in a big way. It is so important we get it right.

As was the case with my esteemed colleague from the State of Missouri, he was presenting anecdotes, presenting stories, real stories, real-life stories, of people who are impacted by the Affordable Care Act and how they are impacted. It is very important we do that because we need to know how people's lives are affected by the Affordable Care Act and what we can do to make sure they have the best health care possible.

By the way, I think of hopefully building bipartisan support to get the kind of health care reform we truly need. I am going to present some of these real-life cases, as my colleague from Missouri just did, and I am going to start with one that talks about the marriage penalty created by ObamaCare, the Affordable Care Act. This is from someone in Grand Forks, ND, who writes in about the marriage penalty created by the Affordable Care Act. This citizen writes:

My husband and I met with the primary health insurance carrier in ND and were told that our current coverage, under the guidelines of the Affordable Care Act, will cost us at least another $400 more a month, and our deductible will increase from $2,000.00 to $12,000.00, and because we are married, we cannot choose individual plans, which would be a much lower deductible. In essence, we are being punished for being married. We are looking at paying more than $1500.00/month in health care, because we are only 61 years old and not eligible for Medicare for another 4 years—[that is] $18,000 a year for health care!

We were told that part of the problem is the provisions in the law require us to choose a plan that has maternity benefits. How does this make sense for seniors to be forced to buy coverage that does not apply to them? We agree that benefits shouldn't be denied to people but it is not fair to be forced to buy coverage that does not apply.

Well, let's delve a little deeper into exactly what this individual is writing about. What is the marriage penalty that is, in fact, created by ObamaCare? Let's talk about that.

The ObamaCare tax subsidies actually create a marriage penalty. They create a disincentive for individuals who are cohabiting to become legally married. From the standpoint of marriage, the subsidies represent a hidden tax on marriage whereby married couples purchasing their coverage on the exchanges will be subsidizing similarly situated but cohabiting single adults who earn the same or more income.

In 2011, the House Oversight and Reform Committee held a hearing on the topic of ObamaCare's penalty against marriage. But since then little has been devoted to this topic in the House or the Senate.

So how does it work? It works through the requirement of household income when calculating the ObamaCare tax subsidy.

For those persons not eligible for Medicare earning up to 400 percent of the Federal poverty level, the law entitles them to a tax subsidy in the form of a refundable credit so long as they purchase their coverage on the ObamaCare exchanges.

To calculate income, however, the law requires the reporting of household income rather than individual income. Household income includes the income of any family member residing in the household, such as a spouse, but not that of a cohabiting unmarried partner.

So when a person shops on the exchange's Web site for a plan, he or she must first provide the financial information and identity of all family members in the household, even if none of those persons intend to purchase their insurance on the exchange because that information is required to calculate subsidy eligibility.

Subsidy eligibility is then calculated using a complicated formula involving household income in relation to the poverty line, family size, and the price of plans offered through a State's marketplace.

The value of the subsidy awarded to an eligible person adjusts on a sliding scale in proportion to household income, up to 400 percent—up to 400 percent—of the Federal poverty level. Above 400 percent of the Federal poverty level, no tax credit. Right.

The marriage penalty results when a spouse's income causes an otherwise eligible individual to no longer be eligible for the subsidy and could cost a married couple in their household in excess of $10,000 a year in lost subsidies versus two individuals who are cohabiting but not married.

So let's go through an example.

According to the Kaiser Family Foundation's health reform subsidy calculator, a 62-year-old individual in a high-cost area who earns $46,000 a year, which is equivalent to 400 percent of the Federal poverty level, would be entitled to $7,836 in a government tax credit. However, if that same individual earns an additional $22 or $46,022 a year—just over $46,000 a year—which is now 401 percent of the Federal poverty level, they lose the entire credit. They lose the entire $7,836 credit.

Similarly, any married couple that earns more than $62,040—400 percent of the Federal poverty level for a family of two—earns too much to qualify for a subsidy. But that same couple if unmarried and cohabiting could earn up to $45,960 each—or $91,920 total—and they are still eligible for subsidies in a high-cost area such as New York State, for example.

So the limit for a married couple is just over $62,000. OK. So for a married couple, you can earn up to $62,040 before you lose the credit, but it is almost $30,000 higher for two people living together who are not married. They can earn $91,920 for an unmarried cohabiting couple. So if you have two people living together, they each get the individual exemption, which is more than $45,000. So they can earn $91,000-plus together—they still get the credit—but for a married couple, just over $60,000. Mr. President, $62,000 is the limit. So you can earn $30,000 more if you are living together and still get the credit than you can if you are married. That is the marriage penalty. So why would we design a health care program that discourages or penalizes marriage?

Further, according to the Congressional Budget Office, the tax subsidies are projected to be the biggest deficit-increasing component of ObamaCare, and CBO estimates they will add $100 billion to the deficit by 2018 and grow even more thereafter. By 2019, CBO estimates that about 19 million people will be receiving the subsidies to purchase their insurance through the exchanges.

As I say, I became aware of this problem when I was contacted by a North Dakota couple. I read that short vignette. We looked into it, and it is, in fact, true. This is just one of the many problems created by ObamaCare, or the Affordable Care Act, which is why Republicans have said: Look. We need to replace this with a comprehensive, step-by-step, market-based approach that truly is focused on competition and choice, that empowers individuals, empowers people across this great Nation to choose their own health care insurance and their own health care plan.

We can absolutely do that. That is why I am here on the floor and others are here on the floor continuing to talk about Americans and their everyday lives and the challenges they face because of ObamaCare.

I have more of these stories from North Dakotans, people in my State who are facing real challenges because of ObamaCare.

So often we hear: Well, wait a minute, if we are not going to do the Affordable Care Act, if you do not like the Affordable Care Act, then what is your solution?

We continue to put solutions forward, solutions such as expanded health savings accounts, which, combined with high-deductible policies, can create tremendous incentives for young people to purchase health care; more competition across State lines, which can help give citizens more choice and reduce costs; tort reform, which can help bring down cost; reforming Medicare to create the right incentives; giving States more control over Medicaid. The list goes on. We will continue to advocate for those types of solutions—real solutions that empower Americans to choose their own health care insurance and their own health care providers.

Let me read some more letters from North Dakotans who talk about the challenges they are facing because of ObamaCare, the Affordable Care Act.

This individual from Hankinson writes:

I am writing about the health care mess ObamaCare is creating. I am a retired teacher running a daycare with my wife. Hence, I am self-employed. I buy my own health care through Medica. Under the new ObamaCare rules, my monthly premium is going from $302 to over $500 per month.

I am 58 years old, not on any medications and have no illnesses. Because of this forced health care, I am supposed to pay a 60-percent increase in health care coverage. If I drop my health care coverage, the government will hunt me down and fine me. Please stop this ObamaCare boondoggle.

From Harvey, ND, a disgruntled grandpa who has to pay for maternity care:

The Affordable Care Act is an excellent example of an oxymoron. Since the Affordable Care Act was passed, my insurance rate has escalated an additional $4,000 per year, not the $2,500 reduction that President Obama speculated. I have yet to find anyone whose health care costs have declined. Oh, yes. I just received my cancellation notice from Blue Cross Blue Shield. Thank you very much. I was happy with my Blue Cross Blue Shield plan. I had a low deductible, prescription and hospital coverage, everything that I needed.

Now, as a grandfather, I will be paying for maternity, pediatric dentistry, contraception, drug, alcohol recovery, et cetera. The government has bloated my policy with useless fluff so my premiums will support others' subsidized policies.

The President said, "If you like your health care plan you can keep it. Period." The truth is, if you can't afford health insurance, you can afford ObamaCare if someone else pays the premium for you. Also all of these years I have paid taxes on things that I possess or purchase. Please explain why I have to pay a tax if I choose not to purchase ObamaCare.

From Fargo, ND, a retired couple faced with canceling their own wellness center membership to pay for ObamaCare. This individual writes:

Last week Blue Cross Blue Shield of North Dakota sent my wife and I a letter stating that the health insurance coverage we carry is no longer acceptable or allowable under the new health care law. It was a health insurance package that we had selected after retiring from the field of education 2 years ago. It was a great package for us since we are both in good health. It offers us lower premiums, a higher deductible, which, by the way, we wanted, and more than adequate coverage for us.

Now, we have to look at other more expensive health care packages which we do not want, some of which will include wellness center coverage. Well, we go to a wellness center here in Fargo, pay for it ourselves, and it costs us considerably less than any of the new packages that include it.

So if I have this right, the following needs to take place for us. 1. We can no longer keep our present insurance that we wanted to begin with. 2. We can, however, select another package that will cost us, at the very least, an additional $1,800 in premiums per year. Remember, this is being paid for out of our retirement check. 3. The plans include a wellness center option, which we currently have at our own expense at a cost of $600 a year.

So based on the law's requirements, it will cost us another $1,200 if we discount our current $600 wellness cost over and above what we now pay. All of this for insurance we do not want. There is an old saying from our neck of the woods: If you want something screwed up, give it to the government. Sorry, but this new law makes that old saying prophetic.

From Bottineau, ND, a couple faces cancer treatment and tripling costs with ObamaCare. This individual writes:

Here is my story on ObamaCare. I have a Blue Cross Blue Shield policy that I have had for many years.

In 2008 my wife was diagnosed with a very aggressive breast cancer. We did all of the treatments, surgeries, et cetera. The insurance paid all but the deductible and the coinsurance, just as it was supposed to. We had no problems. Our deductible has been $500, with an 80/20 copay up to an out-of-pocket maximum of $5,000.

Now my wife's cancer has reoccurred and we are starting all over. On the Affordable Care Act policy, to keep my premium close to what we have had, our deductible will be $4,000 each, and our out-of-pocket maximum will be $12,500 per year. By the way, the premium will be over $1,200 per month, an increase of over 140 percent. That is not affordable care.

So which policy is more substandard? A retired couple from Fargo, ND, writes:

Upon visiting with my Blue Cross Blue Shield rep, he informed me that our present affordable plans—we currently have two single plans, one for each of us—will no longer exist under the Affordable Care Act. We will have to switch over to Blue Direct, which does not allow single plans, but family plans only. This will then force us to pay $1,200 per month, or $14,400 per year, compared to our present cost of $6,000 per year.

Let me repeat that.

This will then force us to pay $1,200 a month or $14,400 per year compared to our present cost of $6,000 per year. What sense does that make? Why do I want to give up a plan that is one I selected for us, and is very affordable, and change it over for one that will cost us another $8,400 per year? I can definitely see where this is headed. It will send both my wife and I back to the workforce to be able to pay for a health insurance policy that we do not want.

So why can't I keep my health insurance policy that I already have? I like it. I want to keep it. But Uncle Sam says no. Why? I understand the need to take care of those who do not have insurance and cannot get insurance for medical reasons. But why take away from millions of us that do have insurance and want to keep it?

You have seen that in the numbers, right? I believe Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius testified in front of the House either yesterday or the day before and indicated that there are something like 360-some-thousand signups for ObamaCare. But the statistics are in the range of 4 to 5 million as far as the number of policies that have been reported as canceled so far since ObamaCare came into effect. These are the real stories behind those statistics. These are the real-life stories of people who have been impacted behind these statistics.

From Bismarck, ND, a young working family has seen their costs skyrocket.

Dear Senator Hoeven, I am a young pharmacist in Bismarck who graduated from North Dakota State University in 2011. I have the job I have always wanted, although it is with a small pharmacy, so my employer cannot afford health insurance for the seven employees who work there. So my family and I went out and did the responsible thing: Qualified medically, back when you had to, and bought what I thought was the perfect health insurance plan.

For the whole family, it was this easy. High deductible. No coverage except preventive, until we paid $2,500 per person or $5,000 per family. My premium started out at an amazing $666 a month in 2011, went up a few dollars in 2012, and increased by 12 percent in 2013 to $762.30 a month. Still quite affordable.

This year we had our third child, along with experiencing some health issues with one of our other children. My wife obviously met her $2,500 maximum and ended up needing surgery and nearly died from complications, and spent a couple of nights in the hospital. My insurance worked just like it was meant to. That meant that $7,000 was paid 100 percent. As of now, we have only paid $4,100 in out-of-pocket costs. I think that is pretty darn good coverage for that premium.

My policy does not qualify for the new Affordable Care Act regulations. So it will end at the end of April, according to Blue Cross Blue Shield. Fine. Whatever. But what really upsets me is that my current coverage, which assumes a lot of responsibility on myself, falls into the "gold" category on the ObamaCare exchange based on the maximum out-of-pocket limits.

We are a young, generally healthy family. I do not need to save nickels and dimes throughout the year to cover copays and whatnot. I need a responsible limit that I know I am not going to spend over. On the exchange, if I match my same premium, then I end up with a maximum out-of-pocket limit of $12,700—$12,700. How affordable is that?

If I want a plan similar to the plan I have now, then I have to spend over $900 a month, or $150 a month more. That is $2,000 per year more for coverage I do not like. This is very frustrating. Please fix this mess.

From Kensal, ND, this is from a family who is unable to afford the rising premiums.

I just got an insurance letter that said my family's monthly premium was going from $385 to $840 per month. I cannot afford that and keep the heat on this winter. That represents over half of my take-home pay. I am now thinking that I will have to get divorced just to keep my health insurance for my three children and my wife. Keep the government shut down forever if this is how you want to treat the hard-working class.

From Donnybrook, ND, self-employed family business owners see rising costs. They write:

My husband and I farm and have three children, ages 4, 2, and 7 months old. Because we are self-employed, we carry our own health insurance. Last week we received notice that our premium will be increasing by 43% due to the Affordable Care Act. We will also be losing the freedom to cater our health plan to meet our individual needs. We are very healthy non-smokers, and our children have yet to see a physician for anything more than a well-child check-up. Our health history is spotless. Our previous premiums were anything but "cheap," making this 43% premium increase unbelievable [to us, and unaffordable].

From Argusville, ND, self-employed face canceled policy. They state:

About a year ago, my husband left his job and started his own computer software consulting company. Contrary to what we have been led to believe, we were able to find affordable insurance for our family. We have three children under 18. We found a family policy for about $480/month. This past year (2013), it was moderately increased to about $520/month, which we thought was a reasonable increase. We were very happy with the insurance.

However, today, I received a letter stating that due to the new healthcare law, our insurance premium for the next year would go up to $918.21.

They are going from $520 a month to $918.21 a month.

Continuing:

This means we are facing a $400/month increase in our insurance premium. This amounts to a $4,800 tax increase for our family. We are a middle income/small business-owning family. This is an outrageous intrusion by the Federal Government into an area that it had no business going. It WAS possible for the self-employed to get their own insurance. There WAS a safety net through state and Federal programs for people who couldn't get insurance. The Affordable Care Act is not affordable, and was not ever necessary.

What we are seeing is people in all different walks of life in different situations, some working for themselves, some working for small businesses, some working for large companies, some retired, some with kids, and some elderly, but what is the consistent theme? What is the consistent theme? Higher costs, less choice, and not being able to get policies that fit their needs because of this standardization.

From Enderlin, ND, small business loses employee coverage. This constituent writes:

My husband is a Veterinarian who has been in practice for over 40 years. We have 5 employees for which we provide the best health coverage that money can buy. We pay all their premiums. Last week, we received a cancellation letter from the insurance company. We believed President Obama when he said that because we had insurance for our employees, and because we have less than 50 employees, we could keep our insurance. At no time did we receive information by letter or email or on the Internet about the fact that if you changed anything in your policy you would not be grandfathered in. We had one person retire, hired a new employee, and an employee's husband came onto the policy, changing the deductible, which has meant that we have now lost our insurance. This will mean a much larger premium! We work!

We are not happy about this situation. The President lied! This will mean no raises and we will not be able to hire anyone.

Park River, ND, rising costs for the young invincibles.

Our family has had health insurance all of our adult lives. My son, aged 28, also had his own health insurance with Blue Cross Blue Shield of ND. He is single. His policy was cancelled because of ObamaCare. His premiums are now tripled and his deductible will be over $6,400.00. That is unacceptable. No person can afford to pay a $6,400 deductible. If he fell into the poverty level to be eligible for the tax subsidy, then he could get better coverage for less money under this law. That is also unacceptable. We all have worked to afford health insurance on our own . . . and now it is not affordable, nor are the deductibles affordable. He was happy with his own policy, one that he could afford, and with better coverage for him. And now the government is mandating what he can afford. How is this acceptable?

I have one more I am going to read from a young family in Thompson, ND. In this case, the family's policy was canceled just before their baby was to be born.

They write:

My daughter and her husband are expecting their first child in January, and on Friday they received a letter from their insurance carrier stating that due to the new health law reform they would no longer be covered. So, in January, when the baby is to be born, they may have no health insurance. Our president stated on more than 28 different occasions that if you liked your health insurance, you could keep it. My question to you is: What are you going to do about it? Will you hold him accountable to his word?

We listen to all these real-life stories from people in my State—and they reflect stories from people across this country—and that is why it is so important that we do get the kind of health care reform that this country needs and that these citizens so very much want. It truly makes a difference. As we debate this important issue, I think it makes an incredible difference.

This isn't me saying "OK, we need to do it" or any one of us saying "OK, this is what we need to do." We are hearing from Americans—in this case, from my State of North Dakota. But as Members come down and speak on the floor on this issue, we are hearing from 300 million Americans across this free country. We are hearing real stories about real hardship and what they are going through.

I go back to where I started this discussion; that is, why it is so important that as we approach these issues we take a hard look at ObamaCare and the Affordable Care Act. It was passed with only Democratic votes, no Republican votes whatsoever.

It is as I said before: If we are going to get the kinds of policies that truly work for the American people, we have to come up with policies that can garner bipartisan support, support from both sides of the aisle. I truly believe they have to be the kinds of policies that empower our people, that empower our people to choose their own health care provider, that empower them to choose their own health care insurance.

I go back to the types of solutions I talked about earlier. These are the kinds of solutions that we have put forward in legislation, that we will continue to put forward in legislation, and we ask for Members of this body and the House to join us on a bipartisan basis and pass market-based solutions that truly empower people. These are such things as expanded health savings accounts combined with high-deductible policies.

Think about young people going out into that market and buying health care insurance, maybe for the very first time. Maybe they have been operating without health care insurance and they say: You know what. I have to get health care insurance.

Think about it. Think about what works for them. If we take a health savings account, a high-deductible policy, low premium—they are healthy, don't think they are going to get sick—that is the kind of thing that will encourage them to buy health insurance. If they have more choice and more competition, not only are they going to get it at a more affordable price, but they are going to have more options from which to choose. Likewise, let's make sure we provide for more competition across State lines so they are not only then looking at companies in their State but companies from across the country. More choice and more competition brings down prices.

As we look at health care costs, let's look at tort reform. There is no question that lawsuits are driving the cost of health care higher. We can do something about that.

Affordability is a huge issue we have to address as part of the right kinds of reforms for health care. When we talk about reforms, we have to reform Medicare to create the right incentives.

What do I mean by that? Now, under Medicare, if someone lives in a State where they have high costs, regardless of outcome, the Federal Government provides more reimbursement under Medicare in that State than they do in a State that has lower costs even though they may have better outcomes. Does that make sense? Think about it. Think about that for a minute.

A person has Medicare—and it is vitally important health care for seniors across this Nation, but the incentive is not to reduce costs. The way the program works, it actually increases cost because States with higher costs, regardless of outcome, get more reimbursement under Medicare than States with lower costs even if the States with the lower costs have better outcomes.

Let's reform Medicare to have the right kinds of incentives, to encourage savings, to encourage better outcomes, and to encourage preventive care. We can do that. That is a win-win. We get better care at a more affordable price, and we help address the debt and deficit of this Nation. Those are the kinds of reforms that work for Americans.

For Medicaid, Medicaid provided for individuals with low income, let's empower the States. Let's give the States more flexibility, more control. Rather than a Federal one-size-fits-all, give those States more control to truly not only improve health care outcomes but to do so at affordable costs, and reward them for controlling costs.

These are the kinds of solutions that will not only produce better health care that I believe our providers can get behind and support because it rewards them for managing costs and good outcomes, which is what we want, but it also truly is how we address the deficit and make sure we save these programs—Medicare and Medicaid—and keep them sound for the future so that we not only can rely on them today but for years to come. We make sure that we save and protect those programs by creating the right kinds of reforms. Those are the kinds of reforms that truly empower people and give them the opportunity—which I think we all want—to choose their own health care providers and their own health care insurance.

As we go through these issues, again, I want to emphasize the need—and I come back to the reason I am on the floor—not only to talk about the right kind of health care reform but to go back to the issue before the Senate today: the nominations that we face and determining how we come together as a Senate, as a body, and we get Members on both sides of the aisle who come together and say: OK, how do we make sure that we have bipartisan solutions, that we create a bipartisan Senate where we are making sure that, as we look at confirmation of these nominees, there is an investment from both sides in getting it right and that there is input, deliberation, consideration, and debate on getting it right for the American people?

Whether it is health care, whether it is energy, whether it is good ag policy, whether it is law enforcement, whether it is support for our military, whether it is anything else, how do we make sure that all of us—because it is incumbent upon all of us—how do we make sure we have protected what this institution has provided for since the inception of our country; that is, bipartisan consideration, deliberation, and debate that produces the best outcome for the American people.

We have nominations that we are going through now and that we will continue to go through. We have important policy matters we need to get done now for the American people, such as a budget, Defense reauthorization for the defense of our Nation, a farm bill that needs to be passed, and an energy policy that we need to address—all things that can truly move our country forward. As we do that, we need to come forward with solutions that will truly be bipartisan. To do that, we need to have a very sincere and direct dialog as a body and Member to Member to come up with solutions to determine how we are going to make sure we are doing the very best job for the American people. That is what this is all about. We are here to do the work of the American people.

And you know, we look across this vast, wonderful Nation, and there are people who are Democrats and people who are Republicans and people who are Independents, and we serve that whole spectrum. We serve them all. We are faced with a real challenge right now to make sure that bipartisanship continues in this Senate and in this Congress.

I am going to turn to another matter before us that is incredibly important. It is a matter that is truly bipartisan. It is bipartisan, and I am going to use this as an example of how bipartisanship can and does work in this body and in the House. It is a matter we should be voting on right now, and I sincerely hope we will be voting on it in a few short weeks when we return, and that is the farm bill.

I am a member of the Agriculture Committee, a member of the agriculture appropriations subcommittee, and I am also a member of the conference committee that is working to reconcile the differences between the farm bill that has been passed in the House and the farm bill that has been passed in the Senate. I bring up this example purposely, because we are focused on how we operate in a bipartisan manner to meet the challenges this Nation faces, and we are at a point where we need to redo the farm bill. We need to put a new long-term, 5-year farm bill in place. Right now we are operating under an extension. I use this as an example of a truly bipartisan approach.

I use the farm bill for another reason too. As we go through this process, where confirmation of nominations are now being done essentially on a partisan basis—not a bipartisan basis but on a partisan basis—and as we talk about ObamaCare, which was passed on a partisan basis—not a bipartisan basis—I want to bring up an example of how things should work on a bipartisan basis.

When we look at the farm bill, the breakdown in terms of how the votes have gone, it hasn't been Republican and Democrat. We have had both. We have had some Republicans and Democrats voting against it and some Republicans and some Democrats voting for it. It really is focused on what is the policy and what best serves this great Nation.

Here is the other reason I bring it up right now. We are trying to address the deficit and the debt this country faces; right? This year CBO says the deficit is going to be somewhere between $650 billion and $700 billion—the deficit. The debt is $17.3 trillion. We must address the deficit and the debt. So as we work on a new farm bill, we are not only reforming the current farm bill, which is operating under an extension, we not only make reforms that make for a better farm program, but we are going to save on the order of $25 billion to $30 billion to help reduce the deficit and the debt.

Isn't that what we should be doing across government on a bipartisan basis—coming up with better policy that actually reduces the deficit and the debt, controls spending, reduces spending and helps our economy grow? That is what we are doing with the farm bill, and that is what we should be doing in these other areas as well.

So as we continue to work on the farm program, I had hoped we could be to the point where we would be voting this week or next on the Senate floor and in the House as well. It doesn't look like that is going to happen, but we are very close. We can have a framework in place this week or next so that we can vote on it as soon as we return in January, and that is what we need to do.

The current farm bill, the current extension, expires at the end of the year, meaning we need to get a new farm bill in place—not an extension but a new farm bill. We have put the framework in place. We are there. We now just need to get people to agree and we need to get the bill to the House and to the Senate floor. I believe we are absolutely there. We just have to have the will to make it happen and to make it happen on a bipartisan basis. Not only is it vitally important we pass this farm bill, but it truly can be an example in terms of how we approach other policy as well on a bipartisan basis.

At this point, Mr. President, I see the leader is here and I would ask of the Chair as to my time allotment and also the time for the next vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has now expired.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Landya B. McCafferty, of New Hampshire, to be United States District Judge for the District of New Hampshire.

Mr. WICKER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. COCHRAN) and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 79, nays 19, as follows:

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. On this vote the ayes are 57, the nays are 41. The motion is agreed to.

NOMINATION OF PATRICIA M. WALD TO BE A MEMBER OF THE PRIVACY AND CIVIL LIBERTIES OVERSIGHT BOARD

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the nomination.

The bill clerk read the nomination of Patricia M. Wald, of the District of Columbia, to be a Member of the Privacy and Civil Liberties Board for a term expiring January 29, 2019.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will now be up to 8 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination equally divided in the usual form.

The assistant majority leader.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I yield back the majority's time on this nomination.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time is yielded back.

The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. President, I would like to speak on the nomination.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. President, I am glad to have this opportunity to come to the floor of this great body to talk about issues that are of great concern to the people of Ohio whom I represent and to the country. We are facing a lot of challenges right now. Certainly health care costs are on the rise, as we have seen, but jobs are also hard to come by.

There is a middle-class squeeze going on out there where paychecks are down and health care costs are up, and belief in the American dream, as a result, is on the decline. Some say for the first time since polling has begun people think that future generations are not going to be as well off as we are. This is sad, and there is work we can and should do to address this.

It starts with dealing with some of the gridlock in Washington and getting some things done. One of my concerns about what the majority has done in terms of taking away the rights of the minority to be heard on nominations is creating a very tough environment to break through that gridlock and get things done.

I think about the judiciary. Today we are talking about a court judge who is up for a nomination and the question is whether she is going to be confirmed. Right now, under the current rules that exist, Republicans have no voice, in essence, because the 50 votes from Democrats—and there are 55 Democrats—can put up a judge and get the votes and put anybody through they want.

Under the system that has prevailed in this body for decades, and one consistent with the intention of the Founders, you have to get 60 votes. In other words, the minority would have some voice, and specifically Republicans, in that there are 45 of us and we would have to supply about 5 votes. That makes a big difference in terms of the kinds of judges who are nominated and ultimately confirmed.

There has been a lot of discussion about what is going on here on the floor in terms of ending the ability of the minority to have their voice heard. I think we also need to focus a little on what impact this will have on the judiciary.

When someone is appointed to the D.C. Circuit Court—somebody was recently confirmed yesterday and the day before for that body—these are lifetime appointments. Instead of having to go through a process where you have to figure out how to get some Members of the other party to support you, right now—under the new rules that were done by breaking the rules, and again, inconsistent with the intent of the Founders who allowed their voices to be heard—they don't have to get the minority. They can do it with just 50 votes. Again, with 55 Democrats, there is no need to consult with Republicans or to get any support. In fact, they can allow five Democrats to vote the other way.

I worry this will polarize the judiciary. I think we are polarized enough in this place. I think Washington is becoming dysfunctional for a lot of reasons, but one is this increased polarization. Now to have this rule change only creates a difficult environment to get work done, but it will also put judges on the judiciary with lifetime appointments; these judges who, frankly, are more liberal under the Democrats and more conservative under the Republicans than they would otherwise be.

In States such as mine where there is a Republican Senator and a Democratic Senator, we work together to try to put judges forward. Democrats realize in the majority they have now, they have to get some Republican support, so they work with us. You tend to get center-left judges nominated and confirmed right now.

Again, under the new rules that Leader REID and the Democrats have insisted on, that will not be required. Why would you have to consult and work with your counterpart in your State or Republicans on the other side of the Chamber?

When there are 50 votes, you can put forward any judge you want. I do think this will result in judges who are not center left but left and not center right but right. This will polarize the judiciary more, and that concerns me.

I hope, as we are thinking about how we deal with our own procedures—and I know this is an issue that has been debated a lot in the last few weeks because of the decision the Democratic leadership made to take away this right—we also think about what impact this will have on the judiciary. Do we want a more polarized judiciary where some of these ideological differences make it difficult for them to operate just as it makes it difficult for the Congress to operate? I don't think so.

I don't think that is what the American people want, and I know it is not what the Founders intended when they gave the minority a voice in this body, and I hope we can get back to a regular order where we have a limitation on amendments that is reasonable with reasonable time limits so we can get our work done.

Let's allow amendments to be offered. Let's allow the voices to be heard. Let's allow—in the case of these nominations—input from the other side.

I am very concerned about where this is headed. The logical extension of what the Democrats have done, of course, is to extend this to legislation as well, which I think creates more of a problem than we have already in terms of legislation being passed here that is not reflective of the will of the people, that is not subject to the checks and balances we would have under a rule where we have to get 60, not 50, votes in order to pass legislation.

A prime example is ObamaCare. Let's be honest. The reason it got through the Senate was because a special provision was used called reconciliation, which is supposed to be used for budget matters, revenues, and spending.

I believe that was an inappropriate use of reconciliation as do many other observers who are objective observers and have followed this place for a long time.

ObamaCare was pushed through, not with 60 votes—because after the election of Scott Brown in Massachusetts, they didn't have 60 votes to get ObamaCare through because not a single Republican would support it because Republicans supported an alternative plan. So without a single Republican supporting it, Democrats chose to ram it through with 50 votes. That is all they needed because they used this so-called reconciliation provision that, again, is supposed to be for budget issues, not health care.

I think the results are now plain to see. We have law in place that is affecting my constituents and affecting the constituents of every Senator, that has very negative consequences. Did we need to do something to reform the health care system? Yes. Was the status quo acceptable? No. Is it acceptable now? No.

There are smart reforms to reduce costs, smart reforms add more choice, to allow markets to work better in health care, to not only provide for better quality and better choice but also lower costs. Those were not pursued. We still have the opportunity now to do that.

I talked earlier about the fact that health care is a big concern to the American people. It certainly is among my constituents in Ohio. We do a tele-townhall meeting periodically. We had a couple of them last month where I will get maybe 25,000 Ohioans on the phone at any one time and talk to them about the issues of the day and hear their questions and concerns.

During the tele-townhall meeting, we ask a poll question, such as what is the most important issue you think is facing the country? We ask whether it is national security and terrorism, energy policy and costs at the pump, health care and health care costs, jobs and the economy, or some other issue.

It is interesting in that every single tele-townhall meeting I have had over the past few years has always been that jobs and the economy is the No. 1 issue. Again, there may be 25,000 people at any one time. When we asked the poll question, that has been the No. 1 question. Usually the No. 2 issue is debt and deficit and spending.

The last two tele-townhalls we did last month—guess what the No. 1 issue was. It was not jobs and the economy or debt and deficit. It was about health care because people are so concerned about what ObamaCare is doing to them and their families.

I will let them speak for themselves. Some of us were on the floor a few weeks ago talking about this, but since that time I have received a lot of stories from people I represent.

Here is one from Susan from Batavia which is in Clermont County in southern Ohio. She says:

I am a single mom. I pay for my own health insurance. I am active and fit. I have cycled over 4,000 miles this year. I am seldom sick. In the 3 years I have paid for my own insurance, I went to the doctor once for illness. My rate was $146 a month. In September I received a letter from Anthem saying that my plan does not meet the requirements of the Affordable Care Act and will be discontinued as of January 1, 2014. I was offered the same coverage I had—not for $146 a month but for $350 a month.

To Susan from Batavia, thanks for your story and letting us know what is happening and how this is affecting you as a single mom who is taking care of herself, doing the right things, and had a plan that worked for her and was told, no, the government knows best. You can't have your plan. Here is the plan you have to have, and in order to have comparable coverage we are going to raise your rates by over double.

This is from Mike from Westlake in northeast Ohio. Mike says:

I own a small business. Our health insurance rates for single employees under 30 went from $198 per month last year to $650 per month this year. That is a 260-percent increase thanks to ObamaCare. This bill is going to put small businesses out of business.

We were paying $540 per month but received a letter from Anthem stating that the rates would increase to $662 per month beginning September 2013 and then $1,014 per month in September 2014 as a result of the requirements per ObamaCare. If that wasn't bad enough, our family doctor of 25 years informed us that he will end his practice on January 1, 2014. The reason being is the government requirements of ObamaCare just made it too difficult to continue.

That is William from Columbus, talking about an issue of price, obviously, going from $540 a month to $1,014 per month. But it is also about choice because his doctor is stepping out because of ObamaCare.

Rachel from Solon says:

My family owns a small business. We were notified that our current health care plan is substandard at $860 per month. To comply, we now must pay $1,880 a month. This is beyond outrageous.

That is what Rachel says. I agree with her: $860 to $1,880 per month—more than double—in order for her to have health care as a small business owner for her and her husband.

Jon from Dublin:

We currently have a high-deductible plan from Anthem and pay $331 per month. We are perfectly happy with our plan. It provides wellness visits for free, which is what we really need, and then catastrophic coverage in case of something very unpleasant. When I recently reviewed our coverage and tried to renew it, I asked what an equivalent plan would cost under the exchange. The quote I received was for $833 per month.

Remember, he was paying $331 per month. He likes his plan with wellness visits and catastrophic coverage. It goes from $331 per month to $833 per month.

Back to his letter:

The deductible even went up from $11,000 to $12,700.

So this notion that people have to get out of these plans because their deductible is too high—the one that is acceptable based on ObamaCare and this top-down approach is now a higher deductible.

He says:

My family simply cannot afford this plan.

Here is Sarah from Raymond, OH. Sarah writes—and this is painful. These are painful. But Sarah writes:

I am literally crying right now because of our insurance. My family's new monthly cost starting January 1 is $323.82 biweekly and $647.64 a month, a difference of $420 in what we currently pay, and the new plan offers less with more out-of-pocket expenses. The ACA has failed and it is hurting my family, not helping.

Here is Chuck from West Chester:

I tried to give this health care thing the benefit of the doubt. I went to the Web site and all the estimates are more expensive than my canceled policy. My canceled policy was not only cheaper; it was better, and I don't qualify for any subsidies. Do I have any choice besides paying more money?

Chuck, I am probably not qualified to give advice, but I will anyway. Your choice is to pay a penalty or pay more. That is what the government is telling you. That is what ObamaCare is telling you.

Cynthia from Canton, OH:

I am a substitute teacher. Recently I received notice that I was not getting jobs every day like I have been for most of the past 13 years. I am a good, dependable sub, and I work for $70 a day before taxes. I contacted the school system and was told that they are watching any sub to prevent over 30 hours a week because of the Affordable Care Act.

Cynthia's letter to me, unfortunately, is something that I am hearing all over the State of Ohio. It is that people are being told: We need to keep you under 30 hours. She is finding out as a substitute teacher in Canton, OH, that she can't get the jobs she used to get because they are telling her they want to watch the subs to prevent anybody getting more than 30 hours a week because of the Affordable Care Act. My colleagues probably know this: Under the act, if a person works over 30 hours a week, that person is considered full-time; therefore, the company has to provide the health care insurance that, again, this top-down approach insists on; not the health insurance you may want or your employer may think is appropriate, but the health care insurance that the Affordable Care Act thinks is appropriate. So companies are telling folks, as in the case of this substitute teacher—private and public sector—we need to keep you under 30 hours because we simply can't afford that kind of health care.

Here is Mark from Urbana, OH:

My wife and I are farmers. We have our own private health insurance, which is not cheap. We just learned that our insurer is canceling our plan and that the ObamaCare plan will double our premiums to more than $1,000 per month. My wife is 55 years old. We do not need maternity coverage or free birth control or so much other coverage mandated by ObamaCare. We are modest, middle income people. What we need in this country is a policy to make health care more affordable. We can do this if we let Americans determine their own health care needs and shop for the best and most affordable care. Why not medical savings accounts for everyone? They would be privately owned so that no one is chained to their employer-sponsored plan. Why not require that health care providers post prices of their services? We can come up with much better alternatives to ObamaCare. Please help us.

I agree with him. We can come up with much better alternatives, including letting people save money for their own health care. Why should we want to discourage that? By the way, those HSA savings accounts that Mark is talking about that he would like to see for everyone, those are made less attractive because they take away some of the health care tax benefit.

So we are moving the wrong way. We are moving away from people taking care of their own health needs and encouraging them again to focus on wellness and prevention, understanding that it is their dollar that is at stake and allowing them to build up a little nest egg if they are healthy and if they are able to avoid a health problem, and if they do have a problem, they have coverage, with a high deductible, and they have coverage to take care of it. People should be able to make that decision on their own if that is what is best for them and their family.

My family's Aetna plan has been canceled due to ObamaCare. My old plan was $454 per month with a $5,000 per person deductible. The same deductible policy to buy a new plan is $1,038 per month—more than double for Bryan.

Dean from Sandusky:

Ever since I lost my job in 2009, I have been purchasing my own health insurance. Last month, I received a letter in the mail stating that my plan is being canceled due to the ACA. I was told to look at plans on the exchange, which I did, and found a comparable plan that is over twice the cost of what I now have. In addition, this is over half of my monthly pension. I simply cannot afford this.

I have always been a responsible, hard-working, self-dependent person. Now, because of the actions of our government, for the first time in my life I will not have health care coverage. I am 59 years old now and I need this coverage. I am outraged, to say the least. How can our government do this to us? I will remember this come election time.

That is Dean from Sandusky. He lost his job and picked up a plan on the individual market that worked for him. He is now going to have to pay twice as much. He can't afford it. He is not covered. He is on a fixed income. It sounds as though he is going to go without coverage.

By the way, new polling data is out showing that a lot of young people are going to go without coverage. One number is 28 percent of them are; another number is closer to half. I don't know how many. But a lot of young people I talk to say they would rather pay the penalty and take the risk than be covered. That is a problem for them, but it is also a problem for the Affordable Care Act because it is based on those people coming into the system and, frankly, providing the ability for others to get coverage under the risk pools that are set up under ObamaCare.

So the stories I have told are real people facing real problems and they are problems that Washington created for them and their families. They were fine with their coverage. They liked their coverage. I know my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have their own stories about people who are getting coverage and benefiting from it, particularly those with preexisting conditions. I understand that. But these stories really obscure the question we should be debating on the floor. I agree we should cover people with preexisting conditions, and so do most Republicans. The question is how do we do it.

So when Democrats come to the floor and tell me, ROB, you have all of these stories about people who cannot afford health insurance anymore and are having a really hard time on the individual market, but we will tell our stories of folks with preexisting conditions, my answer is that I also believe we ought to cover those people. I don't dispute that. We want to get coverage for more Americans. That is not the question we are debating. The real question is whether ObamaCare, with its mandates, its top-down, centralized controls is the way to accomplish those goals.

If the President and my friends on the other side of the aisle believe that the only way to increase coverage is to make everyone pay more, to force millions of Americans to give up their insurance, to make people lose their doctors, then they should say that is what their plan is because that is what is happening.

A lack of honesty and transparency, in my view, is one of the great failures of the Affordable Care Act. I believe ObamaCare was sold to the American people under false pretenses. President Obama famously said, "If you like your health care, you can keep it." He said, "If you like your health care, you can keep it, period." But the one thing he could not do then was keep his word. He had to have known it then. All of the information coming out indicates that was knowledge he should have had, yet he kept saying it. What began as a broken Web site and cancellation notices has turned into sticker shock for millions of Americans who are seeing their health care costs soar under ObamaCare. By the way, as I said earlier, these rising costs are not a mistake in ObamaCare; they were intended in ObamaCare. Under ObamaCare, millions of Americans have to pay more for insurance in order for the program to work. The Web site can be fixed. I assume it will be at some point, although they are certainly having a tough time with it. But this basic premise that is the heart of ObamaCare that other people's costs have to go up, and pretty dramatically, cannot be fixed.

The reason goes back to a critical choice made at the beginning of the health care debate. There are different approaches to covering the uninsured, covering those with preexisting conditions. The approach favored by Republicans, at least many Republicans, including me, would create real economic incentives to bring the uninsured into covered access to health care while taking critical steps to reduce the costs of health care. One of the reasons people aren't covered is cost. The best way to lower the number of the uninsured is to make it easier and less expensive for people to get insurance in the first place.

The President chose to take a very different approach. He chose not to focus on the costs, which have gone up; not to focus on providing incentives for people to get coverage, but instead a top-down, centralized approach. He turned to mandates. ObamaCare requires that all Americans purchase insurance. It mandates what type of insurance that coverage includes, and it requires that private insurers accept all comers, including those with preexisting conditions.

Again, we all want to ensure that those with chronic conditions receive health care, but it also changes the way health insurance underwriting works. Normally, insurance works by pooling resources for some future harm. So for those who have preexisting conditions, obviously the harm is already present and their premiums are not going to be able to pay for their care, for the most part. That is why these high-risk pools in States are something I support and others support, providing tax incentives for that. But the offset is these often have astronomical costs. That is how ObamaCare was designed.

So this notion of these costs are going up and we didn't intend that—of course they intended it. It is exactly the way they intended it. ObamaCare needs more money than these policies would provide, so these private plans we talked about earlier—people in the individual market—many of which are high deductibles, low cost, catastrophic plans, many of the people who have these plans are young people who are relatively healthy. These folks were forced to buy insurance they didn't need because ObamaCare needed the money. The plans they had met the needs of those people—met the customers' needs—but, frankly, didn't meet the government's needs. So those plans were regulated out of existence, padded with extra benefits and consumer protections that many of those who chose this policy didn't want, as Mark from Urbana said, and will never use. Sometimes these policies are double or triple, and we have heard cases where they are five, 10 times more.

What we have seen in the individual market is only the beginning. Next year, the same mandates and government outreach that have hit the individual market will come to effect for the employer-based market as well, where the vast majority of us get our health care, through our employer. So at some point 80 million Americans will likely see their health plans canceled or sold and replaced by—when the employer-based market comes under the ObamaCare mandates, which, as we recall, is going to happen about a year from now, because it was put off for a year—that was the delay the President put in effect—we are going to see much more of this.

Again, there is a better way. There is a way to put this partisanship behind us and do this together. We talked earlier about the fact when you cram something through with all votes on one side of the aisle and ignore the other, we tend to get a policy that doesn't work for the American people.

That is exactly what we are seeing here. There is a better way, and we still need to pursue it. Instead of having less choices and higher costs for all Americans, there is a way to put together a plan that actually helps people.

This is something that Republicans and Democrats alike need to focus on. Instead of a top-down, centralized, government-knows-best solution, we need to go to solutions that actually reduce the costs of health care and provide more choice in health care. It can be done.

ObamaCare should be repealed and replaced, in my view, but it should be replaced. The status quo is not acceptable. I think the failures of ObamaCare point the way as to what we should do—reduce the costs. There are steps we could take today; for instance, remove the shackles of government regulations from the market. Let health care insurance and health care be less expensive. Let health care insurance be sold across State lines. That is something you can do with Federal legislation that will provide more competition. It will lower the cost. There are some areas in my State where there are only a couple plans. I am told under ObamaCare, in some States there are only a couple plans. You want to have more competition, not less.

We should give people the ability to get health care on their own. We talked about health savings accounts. We should help create a healthy, vibrant individual health care market by giving people a tax incentive to purchase health insurance comparable to incentives they would receive with employer-provided coverage where there now are tax incentives to provide health care coverage. Let's deal with these frivolous lawsuits. That reduces the costs.

So I appreciate the fact that one of my colleagues has joined me on the floor and is going to continue this discussion. But I wish to go back to where we started. It does not have to be this way. What we are doing in the Senate by taking away the rights of the minority is not going to help us with regard to getting better judges. It did not help us in terms of cramming ObamaCare through with 51 votes rather than the normal 60 that should have been required. It does not help for us to now continue down this track of a government, one-size-fits-all approach to health care. We have heard the stories.

We see what is happening and have not even hit most Americans yet because they get coverage from their employer.

Instead, let's work together. Let's provide more choice. Let's reduce the costs. Let's ensure that everybody has access to health care that works for them and their families. If we do that, the American people might regain a little bit of trust in this institution and in this town.

Madam President, I would like to yield the floor, if I could, for my colleague and your colleague from North Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. HEITKAMP). The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HOEVEN. Madam President, I thank the esteemed Senator from Ohio for his remarks and express my support for his remarks as well.

Myself and other colleagues have been on the floor today talking about the need to work in a bipartisan way. Obviously, the business before the Senate right now is nominations, and we want to emphasize again the importance of advice and consent in the nomination process but that it needs to be on a bipartisan basis.

The change that, of course, has been made is that now the majority party can vote through, confirm a nomination without any input, any consent, any debate from the minority party. That is an issue not only in terms of the nomination process, the confirmation process of advise and consent, but that is also very much an issue in legislation.

The importance of bipartisanship, whether it is in advise and consent in the confirmation process or whether it is in passing legislation, is seen because we have a country of more than 300 million people—Republicans, Democrats, Independents—but at the end of the day, if we are going to have broad-based public support for the work we do, for the legislation we pass, it has to be done in a bipartisan way.

My colleagues have been pointing that out in terms of the confirmation process. Also, they have been pointing that out in the context of the Affordable Care Act and ObamaCare. That is legislation that was passed on a partisan basis. One party, and one party only, voted for that legislation. What we have seen is that does not work.

To get broad-based support for any legislation—let alone something as important as reform of health care—both parties have to be part of that work product. That is the only way we are going to get broad-based support across this great Nation on the important issues we face.

Earlier today I read story after story from people from our great State expressing real challenges, real difficulties—the higher costs, higher deductibles, higher premiums, higher copays—they are facing as a result of the Affordable Care Act. I talked about the need to engage in the right kind of health care reform, the kind of health care reform that truly empowers individuals to pick their own health care insurance and their own health care provider; the need to pass the kind of legislation that will help us provide expanded health savings accounts tied with higher deductible policies that will encourage our young people to purchase health care insurance because they will be able to do so with lower premiums; the need for tort reform to help bring down health care costs; the need to increase competition across State lines so people have more choice, and with that competition, lower prices when it comes to choosing their health care insurance; and I talked about the need to reform Medicare, as the Presiding Officer knows, to provide the right incentives.

Look at our great State of North Dakota. We have lower health care costs than most other States, and we have very good outcomes. For that we get not more Medicare reimbursement but less. That is exactly the wrong incentive—providing more reimbursement to States that have high costs regardless of outcome and lower reimbursement for States even with lower costs and better outcomes; in essence, getting less reimbursement, getting penalized for good performance. That is exactly the wrong approach and why we so desperately need to make reforms that create the right approach.

These are the kinds of solutions we are advocating that we will continue to advocate to put in place for the American people. We need Members on both sides of the aisle to come together with a step-by-step, comprehensive approach, market-based approach, that will truly create more choice, more competition, and empower people—empower people—the great citizens of this country to take control of their health care decisions and make the decisions that best suit them and their families.

I see that my colleague from the great State of South Dakota is in the Chamber. As always, I am very pleased to see him, and at this time I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. THUNE. Thank you, Madam President. I thank my colleague from North Dakota—both colleagues from North Dakota who are here in the Chamber—and I appreciate his leadership as a former Governor, understanding these issues such as health care, which do profoundly impact the people whom we all represent in the Dakotas. There are some unique challenges, obviously, of meeting the health care needs of people in our States because we have a big geography, lots of wide open space. We do not have the big population centers that are in other places in the country, and so health care delivery and coverage of health care, health care insurance and access to it are enormously important to the people we all represent.

I would say it has become abundantly clear that the American people are rejecting ObamaCare, which is the law that was passed several years ago in the Senate, in the house, signed into law by the President. I remember being here at the time and voting on that on Christmas Eve. We were actually here. It was December 24, 4 years ago, I think now, in 2009. We were right up here until the end, and this was, I would say, jammed through the Senate.

The majority had the votes. They were not all that concerned about having participation or input from those of us who served in the other party—as a consequence of that just shoved this thing through right on Christmas Eve. I think that was an unfortunate way in which to conduct the business of the Senate, to enact major legislation. It is very rare around here that legislation of that consequence that literally impacts one-sixth of the American economy is shoved through on a partisan party-line basis.

So that is the way it was done. We said at the time—many of us were down here on the floor over and over predicting that because of the way this was structured it was going to lead to higher insurance premiums, it was going to lead to fewer jobs in our economy, a lot of stress on employers that were trying to create those jobs. All of that is coming to fruition as we hear now reports day after day after day across this country—from my State of South Dakota, other States across the country—from people who are feeling the very real and harmful impacts of the ObamaCare legislation, both in terms of higher premiums but also canceled coverages, higher deductibles, things that affect the pocketbooks of millions of Americans and issues that are discussed and debated at kitchen tables, but they are profoundly important to the economic well-being of people in this country.

When you are seeing the dramatic increases in premiums, the dramatic increases in deductibles, the loss of coverage, the canceled coverages we are seeing across the country right now, it is very disturbing to people. That is why I think you have seen this widespread rejection of ObamaCare.

Interestingly enough, yesterday Health and Human Services released new enrollment numbers for the exchanges for October and November. Over the course of those 2 months, in my State of South Dakota, just 372 South Dakotans—or less than one-half of one-tenth of 1 percent of my State's residents—signed up for health care on the exchanges.

Ten other States also had fewer than 1,000 people sign up.

Oregon, which embraced ObamaCare very early on, had just 44 enrollments. Think about that—44 enrollments to show for 2 months thanks to their Web site, which suffered an even more catastrophic failure than the Federal Web site.

In all, there were 364,682 enrolled in the exchanges during the months of October and November—not even one-quarter of the number the administration had projected after 2 months. To meet its goal of 3.3 million signups by December 31, the administration would have to sign up almost 3 million people in the next 3 weeks or more than 145,000 every single day.

Considering that the administration has averaged fewer than 6,000 enrollments a day over the past 2 months, I would not want to put a lot of money on them being able to meet that goal. It is obvious from the sluggish enrollment numbers that the American people are rejecting ObamaCare. But if anyone needs more proof, three new polls came out last week, all reporting strong opposition to the law among the American people.

The Pew Research Center poll reports that 54 percent of the American people disapprove of the President's health care law.

According to Pew's most recent survey, the percentage of Americans who think the health care law has “had a negative effect on the country” rose 11 percent just since September of this year.

In the Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll released yesterday, the President's disapproval rating reached an alltime high of 54 percent. When asked what issue shaped their view of the President this year, 60 percent cited ObamaCare.

The same Wall Street Journal poll also found the number of Americans who think the President's health care law was “a bad idea” reached an alltime high.

Quinnipiac University also released a poll yesterday that found that 57 percent of the American people oppose ObamaCare.

The President's health care law has never enjoyed strong popular support. But Democrats and the President argued that public support for the law should not be judged until the law's benefits were in effect.

The law is now in effect. People can buy insurance on the exchanges. Yet opposition to the law is not declining; it is the opposite that is happening. It is actually rising. Opposition to the law is increasing over time as more and more people become aware of the impact on their personal economic well-being.

Quinnipiac reported a 10-point jump in opposition to the law between October 1 of this year and December 11.

Meanwhile, support for the law, already low, dropped a further six points over the same time period.

Even worse for the President, it is not just Republicans and Independents who are fleeing the President's signature law. Many of the President's strongest supporters, those who initially supported his health care law and helped reelect him last year, are deserting the President.

The Pew Research Center found a 10-point drop in support among African Americans since September and a 9-point drop in support among Hispanic Americans—both groups who strongly supported the President in the last election.

The Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll also found “faith in Mr. Obama has dropped noticeably in recent months among young voters and Hispanics, two groups that had been among his steadiest supporters.”

So the question, I guess, is why are the American people and even the President's strongest supporters rejecting ObamaCare? Why, now that the law is mostly in effect, is opposition growing rather than declining?

Well, I think the answer is very simple. It is because the law has failed to deliver on the President's promises. From rising premiums, to canceled health plans, to lost doctors, ObamaCare is doing the exact opposite of what the President promised it would do. The President said his new law would reduce the cost of health care. In fact, he claimed families would see their premiums fall by an average of $2,500 a year. But that promise fell apart almost immediately after ObamaCare was enacted. In fact, what we are seeing out there is that the average family has seen its health care premiums rise by more than $2,500 since the law's passage. Now that the law is being implemented, those numbers are only going higher. Those families who are lucky enough to keep their plans have been receiving insurance renewal notices with staggering premium increases. Premiums are doubling or even tripling for many families, and deductibles are increasing as well. Imagine getting a $600-a-month increase in premiums. That is $7,200 a year. How on Earth is a working family, a middle-class family in this country supposed to be able to afford that?

The President would like you to believe that these Americans' updated, more expensive health plans are far superior to what they had before. But, in fact, many of these plans were as good or better than what these families are getting now. Many of these plans are falling short of people's expectations because they have higher deductibles. Of course, with all of the mandated coverages that are in many of these plans, there are all kinds of things that people who are subscribing, trying to get on the exchanges, are finding they do not need. I have had people in my State of South Dakota who are in their fifties and sixties who are asking why they need to have things such as maternity coverage.

You see that as these letters and emails and phone calls are coming into your office and people are finding out about the specifics—the details, if you will—of these various plans, they are rejecting them not only because they have higher premiums, but they are also plans that are not sufficient or adequate compared to what they are currently experiencing with the plans they had before. Now thousands of families around the country are going to be struggling to pay huge premium increases without receiving any additional benefit.

The situation is no better on the exchanges. While there are certainly plans with low premiums on the exchanges, many of those plans have deductibles that are so high that, barring some catastrophic illness or injury, the family might as well not have insurance at all. A family without insurance who typically pays $8,000 a year in health care costs may see no benefit at all from an insurance plan with a $12,000 deductible. In fact, they may spend more on health care because now they have to pay high insurance premiums as well. So you have higher insurance premiums, higher deductibles, meaning in many cases that they are not going to reach the threshold that would trigger a payment from their plan, and so they are getting no additional benefit, but they are paying way more for the same or worse coverage.

In addition to promising a new era of affordable health care, the President also promised that nothing would change for people who liked the health care they had. He repeated many times—we have all seen the videos of this—that if you like your health care plan, you can keep it. He even went so far as to say “You can keep it, period” to make it even more emphatic. “If you like your doctors, you can keep your doctor, period.” But Americans are now finding out that was not even close to being true. Millions of Americans have seen the health care plans that they liked canceled by insurance companies in response to new ObamaCare regulations. So far, more than 5 million Americans have lost their health care plans as a direct result of ObamaCare. In fact, today, millions more Americans have lost health care than have gained it under the President's signature law.

Millions of Americans are also realizing that they cannot keep their doctors or their hospitals. ObamaCare put in place scores of new regulations on insurance companies and the plans they offer. To meet all of the ObamaCare requirements while still getting their plans approved, insurance companies have been forced to drastically shrink their networks of doctors and hospitals. As a consequence, many families are finding that their new health care plans force them to give up doctors they have been seeing literally for years.

That may not sound so terrible to some of us if we do not have a close relationship with our doctors, but what if you are a cancer patient who relies on your network of doctors and oncologists to coordinate your life-saving care?

More than one cancer patient has spoken openly in the press about the struggle to find a replacement health care plan after having their original plan canceled as a result of ObamaCare, a plan that covers all of the doctors and the medicines they are currently using.

Joan Carrico, a nurse from Michigan and a cancer patient, published a heartbreaking column on CNBC yesterday updating readers on her struggles to find a health care plan that covers all of her care. I will let her words speak for her and the other Americans in her position:

I can't begin to describe how devastated I am. Many people like me, who are in a difficult health crisis and fighting to regain good health, are finding it very difficult—if not impossible—to make sure that we can keep our doctors and receive the chemotherapy and other treatments and medicines that are keeping us alive. . . . I'm scared and wondering what surprises are around the corner.

Well, Ms. Carrico brings up another thing people may lose under ObamaCare besides their doctors and their health care plans; that is, their medications.

Forbes published an article this week outlining the reasons ObamaCare may cause millions of Americans to lose access to the medications they are currently taking. The author points out that many exchange plans have steep cost-sharing requirements for prescription drugs. Purchasing a bronze plan, for example, the article points out, means you will likely be responsible for 40 percent of a drug's cost. That may not be so bad if we are talking about a common antibiotic, but that gets very expensive when we are talking about more sophisticated drugs, such as cancer drugs and other life-saving treatments.

The second reason patients may lose access to their medications, according to Forbes, is that some plans simply may not cover the prescription drugs that person has been taking. Out-of-pocket limits, the article notes, do not apply if the drug you are taking is not on your new insurance company's “approved” list of drugs. You may find yourself paying for a very expensive drug without any benefit at all from your new insurance plan.

In addition to higher costs and the loss of their doctor and health care plans, there is another reason Americans are rejecting ObamaCare. ObamaCare is not just bad for health care, it is bad for the economy. New health care regulations are discouraging businesses from hiring and expanding their businesses.

Earlier this week a CBS News article reported that “nearly half of U.S. companies said they are reluctant to hire full-time employees because of the law.” The Hill reported on a recent survey by the National Association of Manufacturers that found that 77 percent of manufacturers cite soaring health care costs as the biggest issue facing their business. The title of the Washington Post article on the health care law's impact on small businesses says it all: “Health care law's aggregation rules pose a compliance nightmare for small businesses.” That is the headline of the Washington Post.

Small businesses are responsible for a majority of the job creation in this country. If we look at some States around the country, my State of South Dakota being a good example, most of the jobs, a huge proportion of the jobs created in States like mine are created by small businesses, but the health care law is discouraging them from hiring, drowning them in regulations, and promising stiff new requirements if they have 50 or more employees. I can't tell you how many times, when I am traveling in my State of South Dakota—or, for that matter, traveling outside my State but specifically in my State of South Dakota—when I am talking to businesses, to people who are creating jobs, investors, the uncertainty associated with this health care law and the new costs because of its mandates and its requirements are making it more difficult and more expensive for them to create jobs.

So what are we seeing as a result of that? We are seeing a slower, much more sluggish economy; chronic high unemployment; and fewer jobs, particularly for people who are coming out of college. Younger Americans in particular are paying a dear price because of the slow economy. When businesses do not hire, the economy suffers. Every American who has spent weeks, months, or years struggling to find a job suffers too.

I know my Democratic colleagues here in the Senate know all of this. That is why some of them are starting to run away from ObamaCare too. Democrats in Congress may have supported the law, but now that they have seen how it looks in reality, some of them—particularly those running for reelection—are eager to distance themselves from it. No one running for reelection wants to be too closely associated with the law that is raising Americans' health care costs, taking away their health care choices, and hurting an already struggling economy.

The American people have spoken. They do not like ObamaCare. They do not want ObamaCare. They cannot afford ObamaCare. It is time for Democrats in Congress to start listening. I always think it is never too late to do the right thing. I hope that as more Americans start to weigh in and start to engage in the discussion about how this is impacting them personally, that will have such a profound impact on Members of Congress here in Washington, DC, that they will come to the conclusion that many of us reached a long time ago; that is, this is a bad, flawed bill, built upon a faulty foundation that is destined to fail, and that the best thing we can do is pull it out by the roots and start over in a way that makes sense for the American people, that addresses the challenges we have in our health care system in America today but does it in a way that does not require the government to take over literally one-sixth of the American economy and create political control—command and control from here in Washington, DC, over literally one-sixth of the American economy.

One out of every six dollars in our economy today is spent on health care. Think about that. There are very few areas where you can say that complete, total government intervention impacts that big of a swath of our economy. Unfortunately, government intervention is impacting way too much of our economy. As a consequence, we are paying a price in the form of fewer jobs, chronic high unemployment, and a slower, sluggish, anemic economy, which is making it more difficult for people to find jobs and more difficult for us to get ourselves out of what is a very difficult economy.

My hope would be that before this is all said and done—and I do not know when this will happen; hopefully sooner rather than later because I think the sooner we make that adjustment and decide this was the wrong course and reverse course and go in a different direction, the less damage we will do to people's livelihoods, to their personal economic circumstances, and the less damage we will do to the overall economy in this country. I hope that realization comes sooner rather than later. But I think what will drive it—I have maintained all along that ultimately the only thing that can really change this is the American people because clearly we have a President of the United States for whom this is his signature achievement. Unless he starts hearing from the American people, he is unlikely to change.

We have a lot of people here in the Senate—every Democrat here today who was here in 2009 voted for this. Not a single Republican who was here in 2009 voted for it. That is probably one of the reasons this is such a failed policy. It did not have input or buy-in from the other side. It did not get some of the best ideas coming to the forefront.

There was a much better way to do this. Many of us who have been around here for very long have been proposing solutions to address health care challenges that have been rejected by Democrats here in Congress.

We have talked a lot over the years about allowing people to buy insurance across State lines. Why wouldn't we create interstate competition? Competition in a free market economy generally, as a matter of principle and as a matter of practice, drives down price. If we create more competition and give people more choices, that tends to drive down prices. That is a fairly basic economic principle.

Why wouldn't we allow small businesses to join larger groups where they can get the benefit of group purchasing power and thereby put downward pressure on the cost of health care in this country?

Why wouldn't we allow for expanded opportunities for people to take care of their own health care circumstances by allowing for expanded, larger health savings accounts, opportunities for people to put money aside in an account, perhaps buy a catastrophic policy with a high deductible but tax free. They can put money aside that allows them to cover some of those health care costs that don't reach that catastrophic level.

What about finally doing something to reduce the cost of defensive medicine, which means we would have to reform our medical malpractice laws in this country and weed out a lot of the junk lawsuits that clog our legal system and make it so much more expensive to deliver health care. I talk to physicians all the time for whom concern about liability is a major issue. It creates overutilization. You take all this great technology we have in America today, and you have physicians who are worried about being sued. Of course, they are probably going to run duplicative tests. Anybody who is involved in the delivery of health care in this country knows very well about the cost of practicing defensive medicine. There have been many studies done on it, all of which conclude that it adds significantly to the cost of delivering health care in this country. There are differences of opinion about how much that is, but there is no question that it is a factor in the high cost of health care.

There have been proposals. There are a number of my colleagues on this side of the aisle who have suggested allowing people to have their own personal, refundable tax credit for the purchase of health insurance and to create equity between the tax treatment of health care that people can get through their employer with that which they would be able to get in the individual marketplace.

Again, the principle is greater choice, greater competition, and therefore lower prices. It is a fairly straightforward and simple formula when it comes to a market-based approach to how we deal with the health care crisis we have in this country.

Clearly, we have programs such as Medicare and Medicaid where the government is fairly heavily involved in the delivery of health care in this country. That too is an area where we need to be looking at how we can reform and make those programs work more efficiently, more effectively, in a way that hopefully maximizes the return the taxpayers get on those particular programs.

If we look at programs such as Medicare, there was a good example a few years ago, which was Medicare Part D, which is the only program I can think of since I have been here—or, for that matter, since I have been following policies that have been put in place over time—that has actually cost less than what it was projected to cost. Why? Because it allowed for competition. It created a private component where private insurance companies would vie for, would bid for the business of senior citizens across this country when it comes to their medications. As a consequence of that, we have seen those costs come down to a reasonable level. It actually has cost less than what was anticipated.

That is a principle we could start to apply in other areas. There are a number of things that could be done to reduce the cost of delivery of health care when it comes to the component of it that the government is heavily involved with.

But the point, very simply, is that whenever we create more choices, when we create more competition, it has a downward impact on costs. It drives costs down. So why weren't a lot of these things considered or incorporated into ObamaCare when it was passed? Well, we all know the answer to that. It is because the majority party, which had the votes, decided to do it their way. They decided to go their own way, and as a consequence we ended up with a bill, a piece of legislation, and now a huge new program that has been an utter disaster.

I think any objective observer would come to that conclusion based upon the rollout of the Web site and everything subsequent to that that impacts costs; that impacts people's ability to keep the plan they have and the doctor they have; that impacts to the economy, which is overburdened with the cost of regulation in the new law; as well as the many—and I say "many"—taxes that were included in the new law. There were many new taxes included, not to mention lots of cuts to Medicare, which, interestingly enough, were double-counted. That was allowed to be used as "savings" put in the Medicare trust fund, therefore extending the lifespan of Medicare. At the same time, that was going to be spent on the new health care proposal.

Only in Washington, DC, could someone get away with an accounting convention that would allow someone to double-count revenue, which is essentially what happened. We raised that question many times, and eventually we had a letter from the Congressional Budget Office that said: Yes, this is double-counting revenue. You are spending the same money twice.

Yet the majority party had the votes. Around here, it is a function of math: If you have the votes, you can do pretty much whatever you want. And that is what they did. We are paying a dear price for that, but the people who are really paying the biggest price are the American people, who are seeing these increased premium costs, increased deductibles, fewer jobs, slower economy, and lower take-home pay. That is the bottom line.

It boils down to basic economic terms. What we are talking about is a slower, more sluggish, anemic economy, chronic high unemployment, and lower take-home pay for middle-class America. In fact, if we look at average household income, which is something we use as a metric to measure people's overall economic situations, the average household income in this country, since 2009 when the President took office, has decreased by about $3,700 per family. There are a lot of things, obviously, that contribute to that, but I don't think it is any surprise that when you drive up the costs of something that everybody needs in this country—and by that, I mean health care—in the form of higher premiums and higher deductibles, it is inevitable that you are going to see a lot of people's household incomes impacted by that. Then you couple and layer on top of that the impact it has on the economy. When you have a sluggish economy creating fewer jobs, that, too, has a very devastating impact on people's personal economic circumstances and livelihood. So average household income, since the President took office, has gone down by about $3,700—lower take-home pay. That is another of the results and the outcomes and the ultimate impacts, if you will, of policies created in Washington, DC, that make it more expensive and more difficult to create jobs in this country.

As I said earlier, I think ultimately what will get us to where we really can change this, change course, change direction, take this thing which is headed for the cliff and turn it around and move it in the other direction, is going to be the American people. If every Senator, every Member of Congress, if the White House is hearing what I am hearing from people in South Dakota, perhaps there is some hope that we can persuade enough people in Congress that we have to change the direction we are heading.

I would like to share a few things that I heard from people in my State of South Dakota.

A male constituent from Sioux Falls, SD, wrote and said:

I just received notice that our health insurance will go up almost 60 percent due to the ACA, from $718 per month to $1146 per month. We will also lose our prescription drug benefit and office co-pay benefit until each of us reaches a $5,000 deductible. We have maternity benefits now and pediatric dental and vision care, although I am 64 and my wife is 59. This will cost us an additional $5,000 per year.

For somebody who is trying to make ends meet in this country, trying to get the mortgage paid, trying to put a little aside for their kids' education, $5,000 is real money. That is a tangible impact of this law on the economic circumstances, the standard of living, the quality of life this particular couple is experiencing in America today.

ObamaCare is sticking hard-working Americans with higher costs for unnecessary coverage. Families were denied the ability to keep their plans—the plans that best fit their needs, lifestyles, and budgets.

The following is a letter we received from a female constituent from Wilmot, SD:

My husband and I have four small children and purchase our own health care. My husband runs his own small business and I am privileged to stay at home. We are very healthy, so we have always purchased a plan with a large deductible, so we can afford a reasonable premium.

Today we received our letter from our health insurance provider letting us know that next month our premium will be jumping 232 percent! That's over $500 more a month—and we barely use our health insurance.

We currently live in an 1,800 square foot house and have been trying to find something bigger. This jump in our monthly health care premium could prevent us from being able to afford any kind of monthly house payment.

ObamaCare is cutting into the carefully planned budgets of American families, holding them back from the futures for which they have carefully budgeted. This is an example of a family who is trying to get by—four small kids—and they buy their own health care in the individual marketplace. The husband is self-employed, runs his own business, and the mom has been able to stay home and care for those four kids. They work very hard staying healthy and very rarely use their health insurance policy. They are going to see a 232-percent increase, over $500 more a month. They live in a 1,800-square-foot house. They had hoped to be able to find something a little bit bigger, and they aren't going to be able to because of the consequences of ObamaCare.

A female constituent from Spencer, SD, writes:

Thanks to ObamaCare, my monthly premium will increase over 100 percent, which equals 45 percent of my monthly income. My daughter lost her insurance, as well. The ACA is not affordable, and if I could tell the President so, I would. My private insurance did change.

The Obama administration has broken its promise that Americans who wanted to keep their plans could. We are also learning that this law simply isn't affordable for many middle-class families, such as this lady from Spencer, SD, whom the Obama administration said it would protect when they said: "If you like your insurance plan, you can keep it, period." A lot of Americans took that to the bank. Clearly, they should have known better. The double talk coming out of Washington, DC, is not only frustrating a lot of Americans, it is creating cynicism and a lack of trust and confidence, which is going to make it difficult to do big things in the future.

A male constituent from Rapid City, SD, wrote:

I know you did not vote for this—but I wanted to tell you. My health care premium went from $640 a month to $1080 a month. My deductible went from $3600 to $5000. I feel like the federal government has stolen over $5000 a year from me.

Thank you—

Americans feel betrayed by this law, likening the increased rates to theft by their own government. That is the level of frustration people across this country are feeling. They are frustrated, they are discouraged, they are despondent, and they want something to give. They want something to change. They know we can't continue down this path and expect that any of these families are going to be able to provide a better standard of living and a better quality of life for their children and grandchildren. The family has over a $400 increase in their monthly premium and a $1,400 increase in their deductible. That is the effect on this constituent in Rapid City, SD.

A constituent family from Watertown, SD, writes:

You need to know how ObamaCare is harming my life and health care. We were one of the families that lost their health care plan. We heard President Obama say, "if you like your health care, you can keep it." That was a lie. Our new health care plan is going to cost our family $21,600 a year compared to the health care plan of 2013 which cost us $7,335.96. That is a 300-plus percent increase. We are a healthy family of six people. We are outraged and upset.

Madam President, these letters and calls to my office echo similar complaints from American families back home in my State of South Dakota and all across the country. ObamaCare is costing this family more money and denying them the plan they want. That is the real life, real world impact.

If you think about it, this is really pretty staggering. This new health care plan is going to cost this family over $21,000 a year compared to $7,335 today. A 300-plus percent increase for a healthy family of six. You can't blame them when they say they are upset and outraged. Who wouldn't be. Who wouldn't be.

This is from a small business owner from Brookings, SD, who writes:

In the mail today was a letter from my health care insurance provider . . . and, well, guess what? Thanks to the great ObamaCare plan, my monthly premium almost doubled, and my deductible doubled. I'm a small business owner, and I would like to hire an employee next spring. . . . Well, that's not going to happen. When will those we elect to Washington ever do something to help people and small businesses?

Madam President, ObamaCare is not only slamming individuals, it is hitting the small businesses, the job creators that Washington needs to be protecting. ObamaCare is stopping employers from expanding their workforce.

In a bigger place, in a big city, this may not have the same domino effect or the ripple effect that it does in a small State such as South Dakota where you have a small business owner, such as this gentleman from Brookings, SD, who wants to expand his business, wants to hire another employee but is saying that is not going to happen, and the reason it is not going to happen is because of this huge increase in their monthly premiums—almost doubling the monthly premium, and doubling the deductible.

I don't know how an employer in this country today, who is trying to grow a business, expand the business and provide for themselves and their families, perhaps put a little aside to use for the kids' college education or perhaps put a little aside for retirement, deals with the doubling of probably one of their biggest costs of doing business, and that is the cost of health care. You double your premiums; you double your deductible.

This is from a mother in Garretson, SD, who writes:

Next year, our insurance is changing, and I will lose my family practice doctor of 22 years—the doctor that delivered all my children and that has cared for our teenage children all their lives. We will also lose all the backup doctors our family has seen when we couldn't see our regular doctor. I was happy with my insurance, and now I have to lose my doctor.

This is more testimony from people losing their plans and doctors, which the Obama administration—President Obama himself—repeatedly, over and over, told the American people they could keep. Families are losing their trusted doctors.

Whether it is a doctor, a hospital, or prescription drug coverage, these are all real life examples, real world examples of the impacts of ObamaCare that point to just one thing, and that is this law, No. 1, doesn't work, and No. 2, it can't be fixed. There is no way we will be able to address what most people care about when it comes to their health care—and that is the cost—when we require the people who provide that health care coverage to deal with more mandates, more requirements, higher taxes, all of which are going to get passed on and paid for by the very people in this country who are just trying to make ends meet and make a living and provide for their families.

Those are seven examples from my State of South Dakota. I could go on, because there are many more examples. There are examples from people all across the country. But I think the point that needs to be made here—and can't be made often enough—is that these are real world economic impacts that are affecting every day Americans in a way that is making it more difficult for them, making their economic circumstances more complicated and more difficult.

What, if anything, should we here in Washington take away from this? First off, as I said earlier, this doesn't work. Let's start over. Let's do this the right way. It is not too late to do that. It is never too late to do the right thing. We could, if we decided to pull this thing out by the roots and start over, come up with a whole series of reforms that would move us in a step-by-step direction toward the ultimate goal, and that is to address the health care challenge we face in America today; that is, the cost.

I don't think there is any American family, any individual, as they think about having to purchase health care—and particularly if you are a young healthy person, obviously, you don't want to pay a lot for it because you are probably not going to use a lot. Yet those are the people who will get hit the hardest. I can't tell you, if you are in your 20s, how much more you are going to have to pay to get health care coverage in this country, simply because the law requires what they call the community rating band be narrow so that people who are healthier and younger are going to pay much more to cover people who are less healthy. That is a reality in the legislation and it is a reality now in terms of the way it is being applied and being implemented.

So we are looking at a lot of people in this country—for sure younger Americans, but Americans of all ages as well—who are looking at higher cost because of these regulations and mandates and requirements that are being imposed upon the insurance companies and health care providers in this country. The new taxes, which I mentioned a little bit earlier, are also something that ultimately get passed on.

When we were debating this, the Democrats argued that we would have $½ trillion in tax increases and $½ trillion in Medicare cuts and that was how this was to be financed. It turns out when it is fully implemented the cost is much higher. What they did is they front-end loaded some of the revenues and back-end loaded the costs. When the Congressional Budget Office looked at it, in a 10-year window, they said there will be about a $1 trillion cost.

When it is fully implemented, and we see the full impact of the cost and the revenues together, the 10-year cost is more like $2½ trillion. So it was a massive expansion of the Federal Government—literally the largest expansion of the government in 50 years. It was literally a takeover of one-sixth of the American economy. That is what health care represents in this country.

So if we think about that in those terms, how much this thing is going to cost—and at the time they said: Don't worry, it is all paid for. It will not add to the deficit—we are finding out now more and more information, with more and more analysis being done, and it is coming to light that, in fact, it is going to cost way more than what was initially expected. I think this is the tip of the iceberg, the tip of the iceberg in terms of the cost to the American taxpayers. Again, this is financed by higher taxes, all of which get passed on to the very people in this country this is supposed to help.

The Medicare cuts that were proposed to help pay for this, many of us said at the time were cutting hospitals, cutting home health agencies, cutting nursing homes, cutting hospices—which is what this did. This was all designed to take $½ trillion. But again, when it is fully implemented, it isn't $½ trillion, it is $1 trillion, when you look at the full 10-year implementation. But taking this out of Medicare was, No. 1, going to help pay for all the new benefits that would happen under ObamaCare; and No. 2, somehow—somehow, don't ask me how—it was going to be credited to the Medicare trust fund, thereby extending the life of Medicare.

How do you do that? How do you, with a straight face, say we are going to take—let's just use the conservative number used by the Democrats on the floor—$½ trillion out of Medicare, use it to finance a new entitlement benefit and somehow be able to say we are going to credit the Medicare trust fund and that this is actually going to prolong the lifespan of Medicare? It was absolutely stunning at the time that we were having this debate and we raised these issues. But people would say: The CBO says this, the CBO says this. That is because CBO uses some pretty strange accounting conventions that aren't used anywhere else in the world. Anyplace else in the world you would be in jail for doing something like that, for double counting revenue—spending the same money twice. But that is essentially what happened.

Many of us at the time, as I said, raised this issue on the floor and tried to point out we are spending the same money twice. At that time it fell on deaf ears. To me, that is again a symptom of a process that is geared to get a result with a majority vote driven through here, jammed through here, forced through here on Christmas Eve. We all had that vote Christmas Eve morning, and all I can say, as someone who was here and observed that entire process, we tried our best to warn the American people about what was going to happen.

It is too bad we didn't at the time decide, as we usually do when we do major legislation—major legislation that has enormous consequence for the American people—to do it in a bipartisan way that incorporates the best ideas of both sides of the aisle and perhaps gets a big bipartisan vote. Usually, when you pass major legislation around here, you are sort of hoping for 70 to 75 votes, perhaps even more, because you have the buy-in, everybody has been involved in helping shape and formulate that legislation. But that wasn't the case when this passed.

Again, I understand. This becomes a function of math. You have the votes or you don't. That is the way this place operates. At that particular time, 60 votes was something the majority had the luxury of and didn't seem to care a whole lot about what Republicans had to say. The President was bent on getting his initiative through and getting it his way. Today, that is the reason, in my view at least, we are where we are, with a piece of legislation the impacts of which are now being fully felt by the American people, and their conclusion is what I think their conclusion should be: This is a really raw deal.

I can't tell you, as I think about the broader context, beyond just the world and the space of health care when it comes to public policy, how these decisions that are made here, major policy decisions, impact the broader economy. There is no question, there is no debate about the impact this is having on the economy.

If you talk to any small business person in this country, anybody who has the responsibility of providing health insurance for their employees, who has the responsibility for hiring and employing people and, hopefully, paying them a living wage and benefits that go with it, there is no question this is having a detrimental impact on the overall economy, which continues to sputter along at a 1 to 2 percent growth rate. The best thing we could do, if we want to really help the American people and really improve the standard of living and the quality of life for people in this country, is to first get people unemployed back to work; but, secondly, get the economy expanding at a faster rate.

We are growing at 1 to 2 percent a year instead of 3 to 4 percent, and that has a profound impact in not only the number of jobs created but also the wealth that is created. When we think about an economy that is growing at 3 to 4 percent versus an economy that is growing at 1 to 2 percent, the difference in the gross domestic product, the difference in the total economic output is substantial. In fact, it is dramatic.

What does that mean? It means a lot, not the least of which is that government revenues are a lot lower than they otherwise would be. If you had a more robust economy, growing at a faster rate, people are working, people are investing, they are making money and they are paying taxes.

We have this debate around here like it occurs in some sort of vacuum or static environment. Republicans come in here, those of us who believe in limited government, and we talk about doing what we can to make government more efficient and make it cost less.

Democrats believe that we ought to have more revenue, more taxes; and the problem isn't that we spend too much, it is that we tax too little. That is a fundamental philosophical debate that we have here on a regular basis. One of the reasons, by the way, why it is so hard to reach a significant budget agreement: There is a profound difference in the way we view the world and how we get our country on a more sustainable fiscal path.

There are those of us who believe in spending reforms, lower spending, a more limited role for the government and think that is what we ought to be doing. Democrats by and large believe that we just need a little more tax revenue. If we just raise taxes a little bit more, we could do more here in Washington for the American people. I happen to be of the view that the American people can do just fine for themselves if you allow them to keep more of what they earn.

The reality is that there is a third way, and that is to grow the economy. We can reduce spending, we can raise taxes. We ought to reduce spending. We ought to reform spending in a way that changes this fiscal trajectory which we are on today, which becomes increasingly problematic the farther we get down the road in the future.

But in addition to reducing and reforming our spending programs in this country, we also ought to be looking at growing the economy and actually making the pie bigger. Because that is a surefire way, a certain way of getting the kind of growth in the economy which would allow Federal revenues to go up rather than down.

We have seen this over time historically. If history is any sort of guide and we go back to the 1920s under Coolidge or to the 1960s under Kennedy, a Democratic President who understood the importance of reducing marginal income tax rates or Reagan in the 1980s or more recently in the last decade President George W. Bush, when you reduce taxes on income and investment, you don't get less revenue. You get more because it changes the behavior of the American people. People have an incentive then to invest, to go to work. That generates not less revenue but more and puts us in a situation where we are much better off, not only in terms of our economy and the opportunities it provides the American people but also to the fiscal track we are on as a Nation.

I see my colleague from Kentucky is here. I know he has some observations on this issue of ObamaCare, the economy generally, and other matters before us. But certainly one of the reasons we are here is because we have this rush to approve all of these nominees to these various agencies of government—many agencies which are guilty of the very overreach which has contributed to where we are with regard to ObamaCare. We have too many regulatory agencies with way too much power and are circumventing the will in many cases of the Congress to accomplish an agenda that is very contrary to the very things I just talked about, which are economic growth and job creation.

But through the Chair, I yield the floor for the Senator from Kentucky. I believe Senator PAUL is here to take up the measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. WARREN). The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. PAUL. Madam President, as we enter into the Christmas season, I think it is a good time to talk about stories to describe sort of pastorally where the Senate is. So I have a story today I would like to tell about how the Senate works—or doesn't work.

So it came to pass that the filibuster was dismembered, dishonored, and indefinitely detained.

With the end of the filibuster came the end of any semblance of comity and compromise on Capitol Hill. The party that never cared much for the rule of law broke the rules of the Senate to change the rules.

Senate rules for nearly 2 centuries allowed the filibuster. The filibuster was simply a requirement that 60 percent of Senators must approve nominations and legislation. This super majority requirement actually fostered more centrist solutions and compromises.

In order to change the rules, though, and kill the filibuster, it required a two-thirds majority to change the rules. However, the party which doesn't and hasn't concerned themselves with the rule of law simply broke the rules.

When the Chair said: That is against the rules, they said: We don't care if it's against the rules. The rules are whatever we say the rules are.

The best way to put this in perspective: You are watching a tennis match. The ball is clearly a foot out of bounds. The umpire says, "Out of bounds." Instead of going by the rules, you have everyone vote. So the audience at Wimbledon votes that it was in bounds when it was really out of bounds.

That is what we have here: We have no more rules and we have no more comity. We have no more compromise.

What we have is poison—poison that has been given to us by people who have no concern for the rules.

Historically, it has always required two thirds of the Senate to change the rules. But, for the first time, we break the rules to change the rules. So when the parliamentarian rules to Senate Democrats that: You're breaking the rules, they say: No, it really wasn't out of bounds. It was in bounds or we don't care that it was out of bounds. We don't care what the rules say. We want our way. We are impatient. We want our nominations, and we want them now. We don't care about the history of the Senate. We don't care about the history of the Congress. We want our way or we will pick up our toys and we will go home. We want it now. We want it now. We want all of it. We don't want to talk with the other side. We don't want compromise. We don't want discussion. We don't want negotiation. We want our way or the highway.

The rules, it seems, aren't binding upon the Senate Democrats. To them, the rules are living, breathing, evolving, and apparently optional.

We shouldn't be surprised, though. We shouldn't be surprised that a party that believes in a living, breathing, ever-evolving, whatever-you-want-it-to-be Constitution, might not think the rules of the Senate are important.

We shouldn't be surprised that the party that believes that morality is unfixed, unhinged, unchanged, unchained to any constants, that all ethics are a situation that this party might break the rules—we shouldn't be surprised.

Is anyone really surprised that such a party with no apparent concern for the burden of debt they are placing on every American family would break the rules to get their way?

We are told they are upset because the Senate just takes too long. They want their way, and they want it now. They want their people confirmed. They don't want to talk to the other side. They won the election. They want their way.

So now they have it. They have bullied and brayed, and they have won the day. The iron-fisted rule of the rule-breakers has now begun.

There will be no return. Are they going to return to the rules halfway, partway? No. I predict they will only go further. If they don't get their way, if they don't get it quickly enough, I predict they will break the rules further.

What passed for gridlock before this will pale in comparison to the poison that seeps from the hands of those who are careless and reckless with the law.

Where the filibuster once created conversation, the iron-fisted rule of the rule-breakers will stifle it. For you see, contrary to popular belief, the filibuster actually fostered compromise, dialogue, and often results. In exchange for the release of nominations, in exchange for the cooperation of the minority party with the majority party, often there were votes on legislation that not everybody wanted. There were discussions, there were amendments, there was dialogue, because we were forced to talk to each other because one side couldn't always get what they wanted. They couldn't slam their fists down in angry tantrum and say: My way or the highway. We want what we want. We don't care what 50 percent of America wants or what 47 percent of America wants. We want our way, and we want it now.

The tantrum used to not work. But now we will live in an era where the iron-fisted rule-breakers will throw their tantrum and they will get whatever they want.

Contrary to popular belief, the filibuster led to dialogue. Every week, the majority party talked to the minority party. There was a meeting each week in which the agenda for the week was set through dialogue and discussion and compromise, behind the scenes, not always out in public. But there was discussion and compromise every week, because the majority party could not rule with an iron fist.

But now, in the era of the iron fist, in the era of the iron-fisted rule-breakers, why will there be any discussion? Why not just roll over the opposition? Why allow debate? Why have debate? Why have discussion? Why have dialogue? Why have votes? It has been getting less and less—as the grip gets tighter and tighter, there is less debate. There is less voting. There are less amendments. I don't think the American public likes that. I think the American public disavows this place and is unhappy with Congress in general because of a lack of dialogue. But that is where we are headed. We are headed towards less dialogue, not more.

In the past, Republicans and Democrats would come together. They would agree to votes. They would schedule them for the week. They would agree to dialogue; they would agree to nominations; and they would agree to quick and easy votes for noncontroversial nominees.

But if there is to be no rules, what incentive is there for cooperation? If it is to be my way or the highway—if the majority party is simply to roll over, if they are to beat their iron fists upon the table and say: My way or the highway; we don't need you; we don't care that half the country disagrees with our policy, it is our way or the highway; that is the way it is going to be, then I think there will be less dialogue and less compromise.

Historically, the filibuster encouraged a reluctant President to cooperate with oversight from the Congress. This isn't a Republican or Democrat thing. This is about the separation of powers. This is about the checks and balances to power. This is about a President who might say—or not say—whether or not he would kill Americans with a drone.

This is about using the filibuster to get information from a reluctant President. This is about a filibuster that allowed Congress to get information and to force a President to say: I will not kill Americans with drones.

This is about a reluctant President being asked: Will you detain Americans? Can you put an American in jail without a trial? Can you send an American to Guantanamo Bay?

How do we get those answers from a President who is reluctant to answer? Through the filibuster.

The filibuster is an empowerment of Congress. It really isn't Republican versus Democrat. The filibuster is about Congress having power to counterbalance a Presidency. Information about malfeasance or transparency can be pried from a President in exchange for nominations.

Quite typically, holds on nominations were used to get information, were used to force people to testify. Recently, I had questions for the nominee for Homeland Security. I asked him: Does the Fourth Amendment apply to third-party records? This is a big constitutional question, and there are answers. I might not have agreed with his answer. He said he had no legal opinion on the Fourth Amendment.

I asked him: Can one warrant from a secret court apply to all telephone records? Can every American who has their records with a phone company have their records looked at through one warrant? Is that consistent with the Fourth Amendment?

And this nominee said: I really don't have an opinion on the Fourth Amendment. I really haven't thought that much about the Constitution. But he is going to lead one of the largest agencies in our government that may well have to do with spying on Americans, and yet has no opinion on the Fourth Amendment.

So what would the filibuster do? Historically, the filibuster would stop his nomination. What would a hold do? Would it be petulant? Maybe at times. But for the most part, holds were placed on nominees who wouldn't answer questions. So if you wanted answers from nominees and you didn't want them to get up there and say I don't recall, 49 times, I can't remember, I don't have an opinion today, sir, on the Constitution; then you would hold their nomination. You would hold their feet to the fire.

The filibuster, holds, about slowing things down—this is about the separation of powers. This is about the checks and balances. Currently we have a President who apparently thinks he is more than a President. He thinks he has a few monarchical powers. He believes more he is a monarch than he is a President because he thinks he can amend legislation. More than 20 times ObamaCare has been amended after the fact. They do not come back to Congress. So what would the filibuster do? What would a hold do? It would say to that President: You will obey the Constitution. We have no way to get him in court on these matters. It is very difficult to prove or disprove the constitutionality by a challenge. The beauty of our Founding Fathers is they separated the powers. One of the powers of Congress is the filibuster. It is placing holds. By doing that we check a rebellious or an adventurous President who thinks he can take this power upon himself.

Montesquieu, who is one of the people we look to about the separation of powers, once wrote: When you allow the legislative power to gravitate to the President, when you allow the President to take this power and he can legislate or do whatever he wants, you are allowing a tyranny. That is why Montesquieu wrote you have to separate these powers so no one body of people, no one grouping within government would assume or absorb too much power. That is what is happening here, by giving up our power for petty partisan reasons.

Let's be very frank with each other. The Senate Democrats have, for petty partisan reasons, taken away the power of Congress, taken away one of the checks and balances on a rogue Presidency. These checks and balances are not something we should stoop to the level of petty partisanship over. By allowing us to do so, what has happened is we have allowed ourselves to give up one of the great checks and balances that was one of the beauties of our Constitution.

The loss of the filibuster truly weakens Congress and it makes the executive, regardless of party, more powerful and less likely to be transparent and less likely to compromise. In short, when you give power to the party in the minority, when you have that power in the party that is in the minority, it works to coax compromise out of people.

In the era of filibusters and holds, someone such as myself who is new to the Senate could place a hold on the Federal Reserve Chairman and release it in exchange for a vote auditing the Fed. Auditing the Fed passed through years ago in the House. It is a transparency bill. We should know what decision happened. Congress created the Fed. People are getting personally wealthy off the policies of the Fed. There is a revolving door between the Fed and the Treasury and the people who sell the Treasury bonds. There are Treasury Secretaries who leave employment in government and make $160 million a year buying and selling the securities that are bought from a bank that we are not overseeing properly.

There are all kinds of reasons why we should audit the Fed. Every Republican in the House voted for it, 100 Democrats voted for it. You rarely have a bill that 350 out of 435 Representatives voted to audit the Fed. It has been over here for 3 years. It has been held hostage by the Senate majority. The only way the minority party ever gets any votes on anything is by using their leverage, by using the leverage of the filibuster, by using the leverage of a hold—I think often to get something good. There are a lot of things that need to be discussed that are never discussed in this body.

Whether your phone calls, the records of your phone calls, the records of your e-mail should be looked at by your government without a warrant, without an individualized warrant, is something that should have a debate here. We are, in the next week, supposed to go back on the Defense authorization bill. The Defense authorization bill, in 2011, allowed for the first time in our history an American citizen to be held indefinitely. It allowed for the first time an American citizen to be sent from America to Guantanamo Bay and held in a foreign prison in a foreign land, forever, without charge, without trial, without lawyer, without accusation.

When I had the debate on the floor with another Senator over this in 2011, I said, incredulously, you mean an American citizen could be sent to Guantanamo Bay without a jury trial, without a trial by a jury of his peers? He said, yes, if they are dangerous.

Who gets to decide who is dangerous and who is not? Are these questions we would want debated on the floor? One year ago we voted to get rid of indefinite detention; 67 Senators voted to get rid of indefinite detention. Then, secretly in conference committee, it was stripped out by a minority of one or two Senators. So this year we have been prepared for 6 months to have a vote on whether an American can be detained in prison without a trial. We will get no vote because of the iron-fisted rule of the rule breakers. The rule breakers have decided no debate, no dialog, no compromise, no discussion of questions until we tell you it is time—and it never seems to be time.

You have to think about this because there have been times in our history when we have detained Americans unjustly. You have to think about how important a jury trial is for everyone and you do not have to go far back in our history to see times when we made mistakes. Remember Richard Jewel, falsely accused, unfairly accused of being the Olympic bomber in Atlanta about a decade ago. If he had been a Black man in 1920 in the South, he might not have survived a day. Fortunately, he lived in an era when we believed in trial by jury, when we believed that no one should be detained without a trial by jury, no one should be kept in prison without a trial. For goodness' sake, can there be anything more American than that? Yet the law of the land says that is no longer true.

Anybody in our society who ever thinks they have been treated unfairly, whether one is an African American or Japanese American who can remember what happened to the Japanese Americans in World War II, should be horrified that our current law says an individual, an American citizen, can be detained.

The President says: I am a good man and I will never use it. He signs into law the authority for all Presidents for all time to indefinitely detain American citizens without a trial. Yet he says: I am not going to do it. That is not a lot of comfort to those of us who believe in the law. I believe the appropriateness or the ability for us to get to dialog and discussion is important; that the American people want it and that the filibuster actually aided that. I think it aided it. It forced us to have discussion. Without the filibuster, I do not think there will be discussion. I do not think compromise will occur. It was infrequent before. I don't think it is going to occur without the threat of filibuster. The Senate will now be run with an iron fist, a fist clenched so tightly, a power wound so closely that dissent will no longer be heard. Debate will be stifled and amendments to legislation will become nonexistent. They are already rare.

Washington described the Senate as the saucer that cools the tea that boils over from the cup of the House of Representatives. The Senate was that saucer that cooled the tea, deliberating, gave review and time for calmer minds to prevail. The Senate was one of those items that our Founders established to separate our Republic from the whims of an unrestrained majority, from the headlong dash of an unrestrained mobocracy. I think the public will be burned more often as the Senate becomes less saucer and more boiling caldron. The loss of the filibuster will lead to more enmity and less compromise. The death of the filibuster is the death of negotiation. Why negotiate if you do not have to? Through brute force and a disregard for the rule of law, Senate Democrats have found temporary victory—but at what cost?

We will now become the other House of Representatives. Will debate and amendment then become a thing of the past? Will an iron fist smash the saucer that once cooled the tea? Make no mistake about it, the death of the filibuster is the death of dialog. All power that is taken from the minority party is a leverage that is taken from possible compromise. One day I believe those who have seen fit to break the rules to change the rules will regret their actions. The question is, When cooler heads prevail, will there be anybody left with the spirit of compromise?

All one has to do, to see what happens when there is no debate, when there is no dialog, when there is no compromise—all one has to do is look at the health care fiasco. It was passed without any discussion with Republicans—no input, zero input from Republicans. Why? Because at the time, even though we still had the filibuster, Senate Democrats were 60 and Republicans were 40. They did not have to talk to us.

When the majority party does not have to talk to the minority party, they will not. So with ObamaCare, with the unaffordable health care plan he has given us, there was no discussion, no debate—60 Democrats, 40 Republicans. We got a bill that is completely and entirely their baby—no compromise.

The same thing in the House. It passed by brute force by a majority of Democrats and no Republicans.

What we have now is something that is completely unworkable and does not represent the American people. I will be the first to admit we are divided. Not everybody is Republican, not everybody is a Democrat. But the interesting thing is it is about 50–50. It is not 80–20. It is not that everybody or the vast majority in the country want it one way or the other, it is almost 50–50. But instead of having 50–50 solutions come out of here, what is coming out of here is my way or the highway.

You look back, about 1 month ago when the government was shut down, we were trying to open the government. Every day we tried to open the government. We said what about just delaying ObamaCare a little bit? What about delaying just the individual mandate? No way. We will not negotiate with a gun to our head, the President said. The President bellowed: I will not negotiate. You can't make me negotiate. I will not compromise.

Immediately after the government opened back up he did exactly the same thing we were asking for, he delayed the individual mandate. Of course he did it unconstitutionally and illegally because he did it without the approval of Congress. That is the way it has been from the beginning. This is something that we as Americans should be extremely worried about. This is the stuff of kings, this is the stuff of monarchs, and this is the stuff of tyrants because he thinks he can do the legislation by himself.

But if there is no recourse to come back to Congress, what happens? ObamaCare is a story of favoritism, it is a story of dispensing favors to your contributors, your friends. Should not we have a government where your campaign contribution buys you a different sort of scrutiny? It is no longer equal protection under the law, it is protection based on contribution history.

We have given waiver after waiver to special interest groups. You can see them with a big smile plastered on their face when they come out of the White House. There are special interest groups that have been to the White House hundreds of times. Meanwhile, the Secretary in charge of putting up ObamaCare and getting it started was there once. But hundreds of times special interests came. They paid first. They gave their campaign contributions. They paid, they got access to the White House, and they got a waiver.

Why would McDonald's get a waiver and not Burger King? Why would one business get a waiver and not another? Why would a union get a waiver and not another business that is not union? Is that equal protection under the law? Is that the way we are going to live? That is the way you will live if you allow all the power to gravitate to one person who has no checks and balances.

That is why we are supposed to have a separation of powers. That is why we are supposed to live under a rule of law. Legislation is messy and it takes a while. They no longer have the 60 votes to have his way or the highway. They cannot get everything they want so they do it by executive fiat. But realize that an executive can dictate for good and for harm or does one person always know what is best for the country? So we have been dictated to, all of these changes with ObamaCare, but the bottom line is more people are now losing their health insurance than are gaining it. Those who are gaining it, those who have been forced into ObamaCare, will recognize a few things. They are losing their freedom of choice and they are being forced to pay more.

There are two things that are irrefutable about ObamaCare: You have lost your freedom of choice and you are being dictated four plans. Where there was once hundreds of plans you could purchase for insurance, there are four plans left in America you can choose from, and they are more expensive. Why? Because you are told your kids have to have pediatric dental coverage. What if you don't have any kids? You are being told you have to have infertility coverage. What if you are not married? You are told you have to have pregnancy coverage. What if you are not married? The thing is that what has been outlawed is cheaper insurance policies.

Let's think back to the original problem. Eighty-five percent of Americans had health insurance, right? Fifteen percent of Americans didn't. Of the 15 percent who didn't have health insurance, one-third of them were eligible for Medicaid, and we could have helped them by fixing some eligibility with Medicaid or actually trying to help people sign up. One-third of the 15 percent who were uninsured, some reports said, were not here in the country legally, and then one-third of the 15 percent made between $50,000 and $75,000, but they did not buy insurance because they were young and healthy and decided to roll the dice and they perceived health insurance as being too expensive.

The main impediment to the body of people we could have gotten insured was expense. What have we done to help them? We made health insurance more expensive for them. If you are young and healthy, you should want a high deductible with few mandates. That is very cheap. What does ObamaCare give you? It gives you a high deductible and gives you a million and one things you don't need or don't want and it is very expensive. Really what we have done is taken away freedom of choice and given you something you don't want and made it more expensive.

This is the danger of having one-sided, one-party rule. There is no debate and no discussion. And that is what happened with ObamaCare—a lopsided result, a misbegotten legislation that doesn't work, can't work, and is leading to disaster.

Some have said: How can we fix it? Can we make ObamaCare less bad? I am not positive we can. Some are saying—and the President came back unilaterally and said: OK, I will give you another year. Look at it from the perspective of the insurance company. They can offer the cheaper policies for 1 more year. What incentive do they have? You are being told that within a year you have to buy more expensive insurance. Does the insurance company have any incentive to sell insurance that is less expensive again? If you are mandated to buy something more expensive, why would they do something less expensive? Now everybody in the country will be forced to buy something more expensive.

A lot of young people will say: Well, it is more expensive, and the penalty is not that bad for my income. Maybe I would be better off without insurance. Besides, now I can buy it anytime I get sick.

Other than the penalty—there is no incentive to buy health insurance when you are healthy other than the penalty.

Many people may say: I will just wait until I have chest pain, when I am rolling into the emergency room, or until I get in an auto accident, and then I will buy my insurance.

This is about choice versus coercion. We have one party that has decided they know what is best for you. They feel you are not smart enough to take care of yourself. They feel they should be—in a benevolent way—your parents. So you have a party that has decided they will take care of you from cradle to grave, but don't worry, it is free. No big deal. It is free. We are going to give you free health care.

Mark my words. There is nothing free about this. You will pay for this. If you had insurance before, you will pay for this with more expensive insurance premiums. If you didn't have insurance before, you will pay for this with more expensive insurance than you could have bought before.

The question is, How do you make it work? It only works now—if it is going to work at all—through coercion. You are forced to buy something. To me, that is antithetical to what the American Republic was founded upon. We were founded upon freedom of choice. You have freedom of choice every day in the things you purchase. Why is the one thing you are not allowed to have is the freedom of choosing your health insurance?

Realize what this stems from. This stems from allowing government to get so completely in one hand that there are no checks and balances. There are checks and balances between the branches of government, and there are checks and balances between the parties. If you let one party get too strong of a hold in Congress, you will get something that is not the product of compromise and not the product of discussion.

Also, if you weaken the body of the Senate—which was intended to slow down legislation—by taking away the ability to filibuster or to place holds on nominees, once you do that, you are going to get away from compromise.

I think it is important that people know, when they look at this and say: Well, that is just obstruction; Republicans with their filibusters and holds are just obstructing the process, if the process is to run headlong away from the Constitution or to run head over heels and trample the Bill of Rights, you would want things to cool off. You would want that saucer the Senate was that allowed the tea to boil over and cool off.

So the question we really have is, Do we want checks and balances? That is a big question. We have gotten to the point in our history where so much power has gravitated to the President—not just this President; Republican Presidents also. This is not a 4- or 8-year evolution; this is a 100-year evolution toward a stronger Presidency. We have now allowed Presidents to go to war without congressional authority. We have allowed them to trample over civil liberties without congressional authority.

We now allow regulatory regimes to write so many rules that your elected officials have little to say over what laws you live under. For example, we complained that ObamaCare was 2,000 pages. The Democratic leader in the House of Representatives said: Don't worry; you can read about it after we pass it. That was a mistake, and that is why so many people still don't understand this piece of legislation.

To top it off, this was a 2,000-page bill, but then 20,000 pages of rules were written. Unelected bureaucrats are writing most of the rules. For example, when ObamaCare passed, believe it or not, I think the original legislation would have let you keep your doctor, period. There was a regulation written 3 months after the bill was passed that changed it and said: You can keep your doctor, but you have to pay more, and it has to obey this rule.

Let's just say you can maybe keep your doctor if President Obama likes your doctor. This rule was not written by Congress. It wasn't part of the legislation. This is a rule that was written afterward.

About 3 months later, as they are writing 20,000 pages of rules, a rule comes up that says: If your insurance ever changes, it is not grandfathered in and you will lose your insurance. It will be canceled. You will be forced to be canceled.

The reason millions of people are having their insurance canceled is because the President authorized this through his bureaucracy without the permission of the Senate.

However, it gets more interesting. Occasionally, when a regulation is passed, we can try to stop it. So 3 months after ObamaCare was passed, they passed this regulation that says: You will be canceled. Millions of people were being canceled because President Obama and his team wrote this regulation.

One Republican Senator, Mr. ENZI from Wyoming, stood up and said: No, we will vote on this. We will vote on whether your policy can be canceled. So what happened? It came back. And guess what. The regulation that says your policy can be canceled if it ever changed—the regulation that is allowing millions of people to be canceled—every Democrat in the body voted for it, including a few of them who are running headlong away from the President. They can't get away from the President fast enough. They are running headlong away from the President and saying: Oh, I didn't know that rule was going to be there. I really thought you could keep your doctor.

Bunk. They all knew it. They all voted directly on it. Not only did they vote for ObamaCare, 3 months later they voted for the rule that is allowing millions of people to have their insurance canceled.

So these Senators who are saying: Mr. President, we might need to fix this, and I have a solution, all voted for the rule. We had a direct vote in the Senate on the rule that says: If you like your doctor, you can't keep your doctor. The whole idea when the President said: If you like your doctor, you can keep him, period—which we have now found to be false—we had a chance to fix it. We had a vote in this body. Every Senate Democrat voted to allow your insurance to be canceled. So if you are one of the millions of Americans who have had your insurance canceled, you can thank the Senate Democrats. Every Senate Republican voted to say you should not have your insurance canceled. Every Senate Democrat voted to allow your insurance to be canceled if it ever changes.

While some people have been wondering how many people are going to lose their insurance because of ObamaCare, the answer is everyone because insurance changes gradually over time. So within a few years everybody's insurance policy will change and you will be canceled. Everyone in America will lose their insurance. They will be canceled eventually, and they will have to buy ObamaCare. So people went from having hundreds of choices for insurance to having four choices in America.

Really what this debate is about is whether you believe in freedom of choice, whether you think you are smart enough to rule over your own destiny or whether you want a paternalistic government that makes these decisions for you. Are we so insecure as a people that we need the nanny state? Do we need the nanny state to take care of us? Do we not want choice? Why don't we extend it to all things? Health care is important, but so is food. Why don't we have the government decide what type of food we eat? Why don't we have the government decide how much we can charge? God forbid we charge too much for food. Shouldn't food be cheap and economical and affordable?

Maybe the government should own the farms. If the government can distribute health care and health care is so important, so is food and water. How can we let anybody in the private marketplace determine water? How can we let private people control water? Shouldn't we let the government be in charge of everything?

The bottom line is this: We shouldn't let the government be in charge of anything that can't be handled by the private marketplace, which means very little should be handled by the government. The reason you want minimal government is that government is not very good at stuff. I tell people that it is not that government is inherently stupid—although that is a debatable point—it is that the government doesn't get the same signals we get.

In the private marketplace, you get signals. You have to make a profit or you have to meet a payroll. So there are different signals that come. As far as health care and the government running it, there is no signal. They get no feedback. Right now they have a Web site that would have sent any private business into bankruptcy. This would have been a failed initiation, and the company would have gone bankrupt. No company could roll out something as bad as this, but no private company would. The private company is influenced by the marketplace, and they have to make good decisions. The government doesn't make good decisions because it is not required to. That is why when you have a choice on whether something should be done by government or the private marketplace, you want the private marketplace.

Milton Friedman often talked about this. This is a truism of all government: Nobody spends somebody else's money as wisely as they spend their own. The private marketplace will inevitably make better decisions because it is a cruel master. In the marketplace, you have to please consumers all the time, every day. They vote. You have heard the term "democratic capitalism." There is nothing more democratic than consumer and capitalism voting every day, and the people who are rewarded are those who give a product that people want to buy, and they do it in an efficient manner, so people are forced to be efficient. They are forced to have good consumer service.

The consumer is king only in the private marketplace. The consumer is treated as a stepchild if it is government. You are treated with reckless abandon by government. As a physician, I dealt with the government for decades and decades. You know what. It takes at least an hour to get someone on the phone. When you get them on the phone, they tell you they can only answer two questions. If they are not in a good mood, you have to call again. You have to get on the phone again and wait an hour to talk to another bureaucrat who may be surly and may have had a bad day and will probably get a bonus anyway.

If you want government to take over your health care, think of the case of Jonathan Beal. He worked for the EPA for 11 years. He told his boss that he was a spy and that he worked for the CIA. He took 6 months off at a time for years and years. He always got bonuses for good employment, good behavior, and good productivity for 11 years. This is what goes in government. Would that happen for a week or 2 weeks in a private industry? No way would that happen. The government is so big and vast, they have no idea who all is even working in government. We are going to turn that over, our health care system. The bottom line is it will not be efficient, it will not try to save money; it will try to spend money, and it will not lead to us having lower premiums, it will lead to having higher premiums.

Thomas Payne said that government is a necessary evil, and he was right. That sounds kind of harsh, but the thing is we need to have government, but because government is inefficient, we should keep what government does to a minimum. There are certain things we probably can't have private industry do, including a national defense, an Army, a Navy, an Air Force. Government needs to be in place for that. We have decided with most of our infrastructure to have government involved. We have some private entities involved as well. But do we want government involved in every one of our affairs? Do we think government is going to be distributing goods very well?

Think of it this way: Tomorrow we nationalize grocery shopping. We nationalize and everybody gets insurance and it will be subsidized. When people go to Walmart, they will just pay a $20 copay. Do my colleagues think they will buy less or more there? People will empty the shelves.

The other day—my colleagues may have heard that food stamp cards stopped working and they didn't have any limits; people just kept loading up thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of stuff. They trashed the whole place, carts were everywhere, and then someone turned the cards back on and there were limits and people had to leave the store. When there are no limits, people will spend without limit. The same goes with health care. So when government gives us something for free, the tendency is to use it. So what we find, for example, with Medicaid—a big part of ObamaCare is the expansion of Medicaid. I wish to help people who can't help themselves. There are a lot of people who are missing both legs and on dialysis and they have $10,000-a-month insurance. I think we can find a way to help these people. But we have now added able-bodied people to this, generation after generation of able-bodied people, so instead of a temporary hand up, a helping hand, we have turned it into something permanent.

But it is also the most rapidly rising cost in State governments, so State governments, I believe, will ultimately succumb to this burden. In our State it will be a 50-percent increase in Medicaid. In fact, for most of the people signing up around the country, three-fourths of them in my State are signing up for prehealth care. It is not truly free. We are going to pay for it. Anybody who is working will pay for it. But the thing is that what they are signing up for is free.

I think if we expand our safety net beyond sort of those who are not able-bodied or we expand it to make it permanent for people, what it becomes is a drag on the economy and a drag on everything and it disallows or prevents us from growing as an economy.

We have been having this debate for a while. The President has decided that people who are working just have too much money and he has to take from those who are working to give to those who aren't working. That is not how we get more jobs; that is how we make the pie smaller. If we keep dividing up the pie and shifting the pie from those working to those nonworking, it doesn't help anybody. It divides the pie smaller. There have been times in our country where we have greatly grown the pie, but we have to get beyond these petty things.

The President preaches fear and envy, class warfare. He preaches that if your neighbor has three cars, send me and I will take one of their cars. I will get some of your neighbor's stuff and I will give it to you. The problem is it doesn't make us rich as a nation.

There has been a discussion for thousands of years about whether it is good or bad to spend time coveting your neighbor's wealth. It isn't healthy personally or spiritually for our country. If I labor my whole day saying my neighbor has a Mercedes and I don't—I should instead be saying maybe my son or daughter will be working at the Mercedes dealer selling to somebody who is buying a Mercedes. Instead of feeling jealous and envious of others, I should be saying we are all interconnected and we want more people to rise and be part of the top 1 percent. Instead of taking a meat-ax to those who are successful in our society and trying to drive them down, we should try—in the 1920s, Coolidge took the top rate from 70 percent down to 23 percent. We had a boom. Employment thrived. He balanced the budget. We did it again under Kennedy in the 1960s. Unemployment was once again cut in half. By the time we get to Reagan, the rates had risen to 70 percent again, and Reagan said our economy will boom if we lower rates on everybody, and he did. He lowered rates from 70 percent at the top rate—the top 1 percent. He lowered their rates. He didn't raise their rates. He didn't say covet thy neighbor. He didn't say I will get you one of your neighbor's cars. He said lower the rates and the economy will boom, and it did. We lowered the rates from 70 on the wealthy to 50 to 28 and we had a decade-long boom with millions of jobs created.

We have to have this debate as a country. We can't say the debate is over. If we say the debate is over and that what we need to do is just divide it up, pass the money around, we are going to be talking about a shrinking pie that we pass around.

We also have a pie right now that has millions of people unemployed. So how are we going to grow this economy? Are we going to grow our economy by saying let's tax people more? It is exactly the opposite.

I was in Detroit last week talking about how we could help Detroit. We can't send money from Houston to Detroit and bail them out. It doesn't work. One, because it is just like when the President did his government stimulus. When the President chose to pick winners and losers, he wound up with a bunch of losers because no central planner knows who is going to win and who is going to lose. Nine out of ten businesses fail. That is why we don't want government choosing the winners and losers.

When they do that, they choose people such as Solyndra. One, it was a little bit unfair on the face of it. The guy who ran the company was the 20th richest man in the country. What business does the middle class—that the President says he is so proud of—what business does the middle class have giving money to the 20th richest man in the country? It turned out people didn't want his solar panels.

But that is the government picking winners and losers, many times based on campaign history and based on environmental politics. It is picking winners and losers and it doesn't work. Why? Because the marketplace, when it winnows out and finds who will be successful in business, who is a harsh task master, but it asks all of you—it asks 300 million Americans every day to vote on which businesses will succeed. So you get to vote every day. So there is a big difference between reducing taxes for those who are in business and trying to stimulate the economy and taxing people in Houston, bringing it up here, and then passing it out to people I think might be good at business in Detroit. No one knows that. No one has that knowledge. Only the marketplace can decide who is a good risk and who is a bad risk.

Banks are part of that, but the consumer votes every day on which businesses are good and should receive more money.

So my plan is basically economic freedom zones. Let's lower the taxes in impoverished areas. Let's don't tax Houston and bring a bunch of money up to Detroit and say: Here, you are going to succeed. The same thing will happen to that money that happened to the last 50 years' worth of money; that is, it was stolen, some of it was misappropriated, some of it was given to the wrong people.

But if we are to lower the taxes for the people in Detroit, I think we could truly help them. My plan would lower the personal income tax to 5 percent for everybody in Detroit. It would lower the corporate tax to 5 percent. We might find people in the suburbs who want to move back into Detroit if their income tax is 5 percent. That is a good thing. People would pay those taxes. Instead of being envious of these people, instead of saying they might buy another car, I might be saying they might buy that car from somebody selling it in Detroit.

The thing is that economic freedom zones and reducing taxes I think would help spur the economy.

There are 20 counties in eastern Kentucky that have unemployment 1.5 times the national rate. A large degree of our unemployment is due to the President and his war on coal. He always talks about a balanced solution, but he doesn't balance his hatred for the coal industry with jobs. He doesn't balance his so-called like for the environment with jobs. When we look at regulations, we should preserve the environment, and we have many Federal regulations that I do agree with on the environment. We shouldn't be able to dump chemicals in a stream. I agree completely with that. The Clean Water Act says you cannot discharge pollutants into navigable waters of the United States. I agree completely. But do we know what they have done over the last 30 years? They have taken that commonsense regulation, which we can probably all agree to, and they now say dirt is a pollutant and your backyard is a navigable stream.

So we have actually put people in prison for putting clean dirt on dry land. As a consequence, I think we spend less time protecting the Ohio River and more time meddling with some property owner. We have gone crazy with regulations because they are now written by unelected bureaucrats. They are not written by people we can unelect; they are written by bureaucrats.

We have to get back to some common sense with these issues. We have to look at how injurious this is. Even things that are well-intended, we think, well, gosh we have to protect the bald eagle and we have to have endangered species protected. I agree. I have two bald eagles in my backyard. They have come for the second year and they are fascinating. They live on the pond behind my house and it is fascinating to see them. But what we have done in the name of protection for the environment and protection for certain species is we have gone nuts with it.

In my State, we are protecting the Indiana bat. I had a guy come up to me and he said: The Indiana bat? They came up to my property and they took a survey and they found one bat. It was already tagged as a brown bat. The scientists had a big fight. Two of them said it was an Indiana bat and the other two said a brown bat, but did they tell me I had to do anything to help the bat? No. They just charged me money to cut down trees on my own land. So it isn't about the bat; it is about money. They charge $2,400 per acre to chop down your own trees.

Another city in my State, Grand Rivers, when it rained, the sewage was flowing into the river overflowing and they were overcapacity and wanted to have a new sewage plant. They couldn't do it because the EPA was saying we need to know how many pocketbook muscles there are. Are we going to stop the building on the planet? No. What it does is cause hundreds of thousands of dollars to be spent looking at this.

The bottom line is, remember, separation of powers is important, and the loss of the filibuster I think is leading toward a one-sided party rule and leaning toward less power here and more power in the executive branch, I think all to the detriment of the voter.

At this point, I see my colleague from Oklahoma has arrived, and I yield the floor.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank my good friend from Kentucky.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Since he was talking about the EPA, the overregulations there, I happen to have been privileged when we were in the majority to be the chairman of the committee called the Environment and Public Works Committee. It does a lot of very important things in terms of highways and roads and infrastructure. What the Senator from Kentucky was talking about is all the overregulations that come from that. I am very sensitive to that.

That is not why I am here tonight. In fact, I wish to talk a little bit about the nuclear option, about how this has changed things around here, and it is somewhat of a crisis level we have arrived at. Before I do, I wish to share something on ObamaCare. A lot of things have been said on this floor about the problems with ObamaCare. I wish to elaborate a little bit about that in a minute but not right now. I only wish to say that 2 months ago, when my good friend from Texas, Senator CRUZ, and 11 of us were concerned about trying to do something to stop ObamaCare and we took some pretty drastic steps—he actually stayed up and spoke all night—I did not, but I spoke during the evening and again in the morning. But I told a story at that time. It puts it into a context that people don't understand.

The story was this: Keep in mind this was 2 months ago. I said it has been admitted by Obama and by many of the leaders—even the leader of the Senate—that the ultimate goal of ObamaCare would be the single-payer health care system, very much like what was talked about back in the early 1990s when Bill Clinton was President and Hillary had her Hillary health care and at that time I think it was ultimately going to be a single-payer system. As my colleagues well know, a single-payer system by definition is socialized medicine, and that was what it was going to be at that time. I remember talking—and we ultimately did defeat it, but at that time I asked the question, I said: Wait a minute. You are talking about socialized medicine. It doesn't work in Denmark or Sweden or Canada or in the UK. Why do you think it would work if you were doing it? They never tell us this, but they say it may not work somewhere else, but if I were running it, it would work. We defeated that back in the 1990s.

Now, some time has gone by, and we have very much the same situation. We have a system that is edging into socialized medicine, a single-payer system. This is what they want. This is what liberals normally do want. They somehow think that government can run things better than people can.

So I told this story, I say to my good friend in the Chair. Keep in mind, this was 2 months ago. It had been less than a year before that when something happened to my wife—and my wife is just a year younger than I am—something happened, and all of a sudden she found out she had to have emergency open-heart surgery. It was a valve that was the problem at that time. We did some research. She immediately had open-heart surgery. It was successful. She is great now. They replaced the valve, and she is in really good shape.

But the point I am making is that if this had happened and we had been citizens of Canada—we went and checked—someone that age with that kind of an emergency would have to wait 6 months before they could determine whether they were going to allow them to have that operation. If it were in the UK, it would be 2 months. She would not have lasted that long.

That was to let people know that when it hits close to home, it really means lot more, instead of just talking about how many people are not happy with the enrollment and all this stuff.

Well, ironically, what happened to me 5 weeks ago was exactly the same thing. I ended up having to have emergency surgery. I had four heart bypasses. I got to thinking. Just a few weeks before, I had been talking about my wife. I would not be here now. That is how serious this is. Because those individuals who are talking about ObamaCare, they really want a system that the government is running, and it has not worked anywhere else in the world. In cases like mine, I would be on the waiting list and I probably would not have made it this far and would not have been here today.

I only say that—and I want to elaborate a little bit on that shortly, but I need to get in something very significant that is going to take place.

First of all, I do not like the idea of what is going on right now. I am very much upset that we had the nuclear option. I think most people—and it has been said over and over on the floor—constitutionally, we have a system that is set up that puts the Senate in a position where there has to be a supermajority that will ratify the various treaties and will confirm nominees. Well, the nominees who are confirmed are confirmed with a supermajority. Consequently, that would preclude one party from being able to control the confirmation of nominees.

Well, the makeup of the Senate today and for the next year is going to be 53 Democrats dominating, which means, of course, they can always get the 53 votes for confirmation but not any more, not enough to reach 60. So they changed all that, and that is wrong. They should not have done it.

So now we are going through this operation, and I decided that rather than to stay here during this Christmas season for the next few days just voting no on judges, I am going to say right now that I am going to vote against all the judges, but I am not going to be around here to do it. I will say this though.

JAMES NOMINATION

There is one vote that is coming up, and I am going to appeal to the leadership that I hope the confirmation of Deborah Lee James to be Secretary of the Air Force does not come up until this next week because I want to be here for that, and I would hope it could be postponed until Monday. The reason for that is I think that is a great appointment. I do not remember in the years I have been here—and I am the ranking member on the Senate Armed Services Committee—I do not remember anytime when we have had someone who is as qualified at the outset as she is. She has an incredible background for this position. I have met her. I have talked to her. I have talked to her about the concerns about the readiness, which is very serious right now. Our readiness capabilities are lower than they have ever been since World War II. I know she is the right person to be at the helm to take care of that.

It was not long ago that through the sequestration or preparing for sequestration they made a decision to ground one-third of the combat-coded Active squadrons. Now, let's keep in mind that she is nominated to be Secretary of the Air Force, so this is something she would directly be interested in and concerned about.

What they did was, in order to—I suppose at that time the motivation was to try to save money. They grounded one-third of the combat-coded Active squadrons. That was in April of this year. It was not until 3 months later that they decided this is not good because you have the idle airplanes, the idle pilots. Pilots were resigning; they were upset because they were not being used. So they reinstated the squadrons that had been closed.

General Welsh, a great general, the commander of the Air Force, made the statement, and made it in a very articulate way, that it is going to cost us more to reinstate and to requalify the pilots and to make sure the planes are back in flying order than just the amount of money that was saved during that 3-month period.

That is really quite a statement. It is very serious. He said it could cut the flying hours by 15 percent in the months to come—and it has—as a result of that closure.

Well, I have to say to Ms. James that I am convinced you are going to be confirmed as Secretary of the Air Force. I will do all I can to make sure you are confirmed. But you are walking into a hornet's nest. It is a real serious problem there. The things that are happening to our military, which I am going to talk about in just a minute, are very serious.

She has a background. She served with a technical defense contractor in Virginia. It was the SAIC Technical and Engineering Sector. She was the executive vice president for communications and government affairs and the senior vice president for homeland security. Prior to that, she served as vice president for international operations marketing at United Technologies. That was all the way from 1998 to 2000. She served as Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs from 1993 to 1998, overseeing all matters pertaining to the Guard and Reserve forces. So she has probably as much preparation, background, expertise, education, and knowledge as anyone who has ever been nominated to be Secretary of the Air Force.

I hope we will be able to have that vote maybe on Monday as opposed to some time in the next few hours since I want to be here. I want to be one of the first to congratulate her.

(Mr. COONS assumed the Chair.)

THE BUDGET

Mr. INHOFE. Let me say something about the budget. I try to think of things other people have not talked about. I do not even know right now whether I am going to be for or against this budget, but I had looked, and I was very alarmed. The minority staff on Armed Services did some research, and it came out that there are some parts of this act that we did not know were there. It would include an annual adjustment for retired pay and retainer pay for retired members of the Armed Forces under age 62. This penalizes current and future military members who have served our Nation for over 20 years.

Now, keep in mind, people go into the military quite young sometimes, knowing that the time they would serve would be for 20 years—many of them longer but most of the time 20 years. That is kind of a given. They do this predicated on the assumption that retirement benefits and all these things are going to be there. They are making a career decision, I say to the Chair, and that is very significant.

To come along with a bill that supposedly saves $6.2 billion—there are about 2 million retirees. Of those, just under half are under the age of 62. They would see a steady erosion of their retired pay, approaching 20 percent of their retirement pay by the time they reach age 62.

The 1-percent annual reduction to uniformed service retired pay cost-of-living adjustment—those are the COLAs—for those under age 62 will have a devastating, long-term impact for those who retire at the 20-year point. It implements an annual adjustment to retired pay of the “Consumer Price Index -1%'' beginning in December of 2015. What that means in summary is that you could have a gunnery sergeant retiring at age 42, and by the time he is 62, this bill would cause him to receive in his retirement pay approximately $72,000 less than he would otherwise. So it is a big deal.

This has not been discussed on the floor, and I think that as we get into the discussion we are going to have on the budget, we have to keep these things in mind. Again, I have not decided yet because I know it is not an easy job. I know we had a Democrat and a Republican working very hard on it. But that is one thing that I believe can be changed. In fact, it would have to be changed before I would support it.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT

Well, we went through something, and I want to talk a little bit about the National Defense Authorization Act. Every year we have a National Defense Authorization Act. That act is more important than anything else we do around here, in my opinion.

If you read the Constitution, it will say that providing for the Nation's defense is our major concern. This is what we are supposed to be doing. So we have always had—in fact, for 51 consecutive years we have passed an NDAA bill prior to January. It has always been that way. This is a budget that must take place.

This is very disturbing to me because the House passed an NDAA bill some time ago. We in the Senate Armed Services Committee, way back—was it May or June—we passed the NDAA out of our committee, not unanimously but almost unanimously, and it was bipartisan, had strong bipartisan support to come to the floor. Well, it never came up. And why it never came up is not that important right now. The fact is that we are now in a position where we have to do it and have to have one come up, and it has to be this coming week.

So, anyway, we put together a bill. There is something a lot of people do not understand because it is not very often used, but when the House and the Senate are not able to put something together, they go to the big four. They get the committee of jurisdiction—in this case, the Senate Armed Services Committee. So they had the chairman and the ranking member—the ranking member is the one who has the most rank from the minority, and that is me in the case of the Senate—and then the chairman of the House and the ranking member of the House. Four people. We sat together 10 days ago here in Washington and put together a bill, taking the best parts out of the House bill, the best parts out of the Senate bill, and put together this thing, and it is one that I think—when people understand it—it is one for which I do not know of anyone who would really oppose it.

The problem we are having is that the way it was done was not the way it should have been done. It should have been done as it has been done in the past; that is, to take about—in the last 10 years, it has taken 9 days on average to pass this bill, where we have all of the amendments processed and people come forth with amendments. Well, that did not happen this time. So what we did in this bill is we took 79 of the amendments that people had in the House and the Senate—Republicans and Democrats—we did 79; that is, 41 Republican amendments and 38 Democrat amendments. These are ones that had been submitted on the Senate floor, and we were able to go ahead and put these into the bill.

So we have a good bill. It is out there. We really need to do it. People are concerned about the process. I am concerned. We are going to get busy to make sure this does not happen in future years. We do not want it to happen. But we do not want our service people, who are in harm's way today, to be paying for the fact that we had a procedure that was wrong. We have a vehicle here. We have a bill. It will come up for consideration. It will come over from the House, and I anticipate in the first part of the week we will have this bill.

What does it do? First, it authorizes 37 special and incentive pays, including reenlistment bonuses and certain health bonuses. Here, we are talking about people who are considering reenlisting. Right now they are in the service.

I mentioned a minute ago some of the aviators. Well, this is mostly the Army and the Marines and the Navy. These people are making career decisions. They make career decisions predicated on what they anticipate is going to be out there, and what is going to be out there is what kind of a bonus they will get at the time. Of course, in the event this does not happen, they would not be entitled to these bonuses, if we do not pass this bill. That is how significant it is.

When you talk about certain health professional bonuses, they would expire also.

These health benefit bonuses are very significant, because these are the people who are the health providers for our Wounded Warriors, not just the ones that are in our hospitals today but also in hospice care. We cannot do that to them.

However, if we do not pass this bill, that is going to be a real serious problem. There has been a lot of talk about sexual assaults. We have two Senators, both Democrats, Senator GILLIBRAND and Senator MCCASKILL, who disagree with each other but who have amendments. So what we did is take parts of each one of those amendments—27 specific reforms to support victims and to encourage sexual assault reporting and an additional nine enhancements to the military justice system.

Arguably the one on the floor who knows most about this would be our friend Senator GRAHAM. I think he has looked at these and agrees that these provisions are really very significant, and things that are not going to be there otherwise. These would have been in the House bill and in the Senate bill in the regular procedure to pass these bills, but they will not be there if we do not pass this one bill. They are there.

Gitmo. I look around the Chamber, and it seems like there is such a diverse attitude toward what we have done in the past and will do in the future with Gitmo. That is Guantanamo Bay down in Cuba. I have often said from this podium that is one of the few good deals that we have. We have had Gitmo since the year 1904. It costs $4,000 a year. Half the time Castro does not collect it. So it is a pretty good deal which you do not often get in the government.

It is very expensive to house people there. But it does perform a function that cannot be performed anywhere else. So last year in the National Defense Authorization bill, we put a provision in there, fortunately at that time, that would restore the 1-year prohibition on transferring Gitmo detainees to the United States and to prohibit constructing any type of facility to house them if they are successful in doing that.

That was not good. It should have been forever. But it expires now. That means if we do not have this bill, we will cede that to the President. The President will have total control. If he wanted to take every one of these terrorists out of Gitmo and send them to Yemen or put them in the United States, he could do it. So that is probably one of the most significant parts of this bill.

So this restores the 1-year prohibition on transferring Gitmo detainees to the United States, and it prohibits the construction or modification of facilities in the United States to house Gitmo detainees.

Our training ranges. This bill provides DOD with access to millions of acres of Federal land. Keep in mind, it does not cost anything; it is Federal land—for military tests and training ranges that are really absolutely necessary for the readiness of our combat forces.

We have all heard about end strength. The Obama administration I have often said I think will go down in history as the most antidefense President ever. One of the things that we know is going to happen is the end strength will continue to reduce. This bill allows the Army and the Marine Corps' top people to make the decisions as to where this end strength is going to be reduced and by what amount. By doing this, they can accelerate the strength reduction and save a considerable amount of money. So they will have the flexibility to draw down faster, save money, do it quicker and do it better. Without this bill, they cannot do that.

Military construction. You know, no other military construction can take place. But what is worse than that is, on military construction that has already been started, that is new construction, they would have to stop that military construction. When you do that then you come back later and start it again, it costs millions and millions of dollars more, a lot more money.

Here is another good example of another area that would be a huge savings. Right now we are working on several aircraft carriers. One is CVN-78, the USS Ford. It is a huge project. It is 75 percent completed. We have already spent $12 billion on it. In the absence of this bill, that construction would have to stop. Now, I know that we would come to our senses and maybe in a few months come up with a CR that might have money that would go toward this.

But that is still—when you stop and then start up again, it would be millions, hundreds of millions of dollars of cost. That is corrected in this bill. Not to say anything about the number of people who would be immediately released: 4,300 ship builders who work directly on the ships, and about 1,500 who work indirectly. So it is an economic issue for a lot of people. That is important but not as important as the fact that it is going to cost hundreds of millions of dollars if we do not pass this bill.

The LCS. This allows the littoral combat ship construction to continue in the shipyards. That is in Alabama and Wisconsin. Again, it does not happen if this bill is not passed. That is not going to happen.

Special operations. I think we are all familiar with the special ops guys. I know the chair is very familiar with that. These are the ones who go out there in harm's way and take the risk and are specially trained. The commander there is Admiral McRaven. That is his No. 1 priority—the preservation of special operations forces and families after the 12 years of sustained combat by authorizing various human, resiliency and family care programs. In other words, these people, many of them have families. The families are cared for in a way that has been certainly well deserved by the fighter that they represent. Yet those programs would stop in the absence of this.

So I think that is very important. Just looking at the human end of it, the families, the mothers and the kids that are back there. They have special needs because of the sustained deployments that these great troops have. I would mention also, that in addition to some of the things that we have talked about in using some of the Federal land, this includes land use agreements to ensure special operations. That is what we were just talking about, so the special operations forces have sufficient access to training ranges, including the Chocolate Mountain Aerial Gunnery Range in California, which serves an indispensable role in training Navy seals.

In fact, when you go and you watch them, you see that you cannot train our Navy seals without this facility. So this takes care of that.

Lastly—I could mention a whole lot more—one of the significant things people are taking about is waste in the Pentagon. This provides for an audit of the Department of Defense. It requires a full audit of DOD no later than March 31, 2019. It will take a long time to do this. It has never been done before. This bill will call for the beginning of this process.

We all know about the nuclear triad. The nuclear triad gives us that nuclear capability in our bombers, ICBMs and our submarine-launched ballistic missiles. This bill prohibits the elimination of one of those three legs. We have seen a lot of programs. You could save so much money if you eliminate the submarine element of that.

But in order to adequately protect America, it is important that we have all three legs. So that nuclear triad—and remember that phrase. That is the one where one leg would be eliminated in the absence of this bill.

The prohibition on tech transfers with Russia. This would prohibit the transfer of some missile defense technology to Russia and strengthen the Congressional oversight of the administration's efforts with regard to the United States and Russia's missile defense cooperation.

You know, if we do not do it, the President is going to do it. I would hope that anyone who would be voting in this Chamber knows that is a key issue, and it should be a key issue. We recognize, if we do not continue to take control of that in the Congress, then that would automatically go to the President. I do not think we want that to happen. We all saw what happened in the first budget that the President had. I would never forget that, because I went over—I knew that he was going to be antimilitary, antidefense. So I went over to Afghanistan to respond to it, knowing full well that we were going to have to do something to let the American people know how bad that budget was on the military.

In that first budget of President Obama's, it was 4½ years ago, almost 5 years ago, he did away with our only 5th generation fighter, the F-22; did away with our new lift capacity, the C-17; did away with the Future Combat System, which is the only advancement we have had in about 30 years in our ground capability.

He did away with the ground-based interceptor in Poland. Now, let's keep in mind, the ground-based interceptor in Poland is one that we were putting there because we have currently 33 ground-based interceptors here in America, but they are on the west coast. That is where the threat was at that time. Now things have changed. We found out in the year 2007—it was not even classified. Our intelligence said that Iran is going to have the nuclear capability and a delivery system by 2015, and 2015 is just a little over a year away from right now.

So we knew that way back in 2007. We started building a ground-based interceptor in Poland, with a radar in the Czech Republic. I thought we were doing very well. We had to give them the assurance that we would not pull the rug out from under them if they would cooperate. Then that went out. That was withdrawn in the President's first budget 4½ years ago.

Now we are faced with that threat. Because if something comes into this country from Iran, it is going to come from the East. If there is a lucky shot from the west coast, that is fine. But I do not have that confidence that could happen. So I say that because it fits in with the missile defense. It directs the administration in this bill to make improvements and modernize the ground-based midcourse defense system. That is what we are talking about here.

Without this, that could probably—not probably, possibly—be the most significant thing that we have been talking about here, because now we are talking about an incoming missile to the United States.

The BRAC process, the Base Realignment and Closure Commission. We have had five of them since 1987. Whether you are for a base closure or not, that is not as significant as it is that we are at a time in history where we have the greatest need to put back some of the money that has been taken out by this administration into our defense system. As good as a lot of BRAC systems are, the fact is that the first 3 to 5 years of the BRAC, it costs money, it does not save money. That is what we cannot let happen. So we restrict the use of funds to conduct a round of base realignment and closures for the coming year, because people are talking about that.

Here is a big one too that means a lot. It means a lot to my son, Jimmy, who is real big time into Second Amendment rights. We are from Oklahoma. We actually believe that stuff. We believe in the Second Amendment to the Constitution, I say to my friend in the chair.

There is a treaty called the U.N. Arms Trade Treaty that the U.N. has. I am the wrong one to talk about this, because I have never seen anything good come out of the United Nations. But in this case it is worse than usual. The UN Arms Trade Treaty is one that our Secretary of State has already signed onto. But it has to be ratified by the Senate.

Well, in this bill, it restricts the funding to implement the U.N. Arms Trade Treaty without the Senate's advise and consent on the treaty. Well, that is important. In fact, it reminds me a little bit of what happened when we had the budget vote a few months ago. At that time, I am trying to remember now, but I think it was 5 o'clock in the morning. You would be surprised the kind of amendments you can get passed at 5 o'clock in the morning.

So at 5 o'clock in the morning, I had an amendment that said that we would not allow the United States to join—to be a part of the U.N. Arms Trade Treaty. That was good. But this reinforces that and says that—it restricts it. So if we were to do it, even if the Senate were to do it, it would restrict the funding so it cannot happen.

So I would say to all of my friends out there who believe in Second Amendment rights, who have been concerned that through a U.N. treaty you could lose the Second Amendment rights, do not worry about it because we would have it. If we pass this bill, you are going to be well taken care of.

So I feel very good about the provisions in this bill, I really believe that, when you stop and think about the fact that we actually had 79 amendments that were agreed to in this bill that we tried to pass before.

The Senate Armed Services Committee adopted its version of the NDAA by an overwhelming bipartisan majority in June, and yet we know what has happened. We know why it is necessary because this is the last shot we actually have at a bill.

The House, at 11 o'clock Friday morning, will go out of session. They will be adjourned for this year. The week after that the Senate will. That shows the time we have to get all of this done. That is why there are those individuals who say: You don't have to adopt a bill that the four of you put together. Even though it may be good, we want to have a lot of amendments and go through that process. Unfortunately, there is not time because if we did that it would have to go over to the House. They are already adjourned as of 11 o'clock Friday morning.

We are out of time and the only choice we have now is either to adopt this or not have a bill at all. As frustrated as I am about the process, we have a commitment to provide our military men and women the support that they require, and we have a bill that will do that. If we fail to pass the NDAA, it would send a terrible signal to all of our troops over there.

I have a card of some of the things that we would lose that I mentioned on that rather lengthy list may not happen until next year, may not happen until the first part of the year. Some of them would take place in February and some in March. What would happen is a question that was asked by our fine Senator FISCHER from Nebraska.

She said: What would happen at the end of this year on December 31. What provisions would we lose if we don't pass this bill?

The answer is there are several of them, and I will highlight a few of them. One would be the bonus for new officers in critical skills, the incentive bonus for conversion to military occupational specialty to ease personnel shortages. For those of us who have been in the military, that is called the MOSSs.

The incentive bonuses for transfer between armed forces. Someone who is transferred from one area to the other, we have the obligation to pay his expenses and without those bonuses, we wouldn't be able to do it.

Aviator officer retention. I mentioned a minute ago that one-third of the combat squadrons were deactivated, they were grounded and the pilots with them. I talked about that and how General Welch gave us a good documentation. That endured for 3 months. At the end of the 3 months the amount of that money that was saved by grounding that equipment was far offset by the amount to get people back up to the correct qualifications.

One of the things that would happen is the aviator officer retention bonus. This is to keep these pilots in the service, because it costs much less to retain a pilot than it does to retrain one and start from scratch. I know that. We have a couple of the Rangers in my State of Oklahoma in Vance Air Force Base where I will be tomorrow. That is one of the largest centers that we have training pilots.

Our problem is a pilot shortage. One of the reasons is because, as I just said, if they are grounding these airplanes these pilots finally say: If I can't fly, I am getting out of here.

There have been a lot of them who have left. The only thing that would hold them would be the existing aviator officer retention bonus. This gives a bonus for someone to re-up.

If anyone has been in the services, they will remember—as I do from the U.S. Army—that when they are trying to get people, to encourage people to re-up, it is a lot cheaper to retain someone than it is to retrain them. We give them bonuses. We did that when I was in the service. That is a bonus they would not get.

With already a serious problem with a shortage of pilots, we have to do something about that. That would abruptly stop December 31. That means the pilots making this decision may not even know this. They may decide they are going to do it and then they find out they don't have a retention bonus.

The assignment pay or special duty pay, this would be for transfers. This would be something you would not be able to do, as well as the hardship that would have to be borne by the military.

Healthcare professionals bonus. This is important. If we go out to Walter Reed and see the great job that is done by the professionals with our wounded warriors, it does impress people to see what is going on. I am very excited to see that program has been good. But these health care professionals operate on a bonus or special pay. That would stop December 31.

I know they are committed, they would stay as long as they could, but some of them couldn't afford to do that. This would stop on the January 31.

Reenlistment bonus for active members, that would stop also.

What I am saying is we are going to have to do this bill. It is absolutely necessary. I am not the only one who says that.

If we look at General Dempsey—talk about the deteriorating condition of our military now—keeping in mind that with this President over 4½ years ago, over this 10-year budget, he has taken over $487 billion out of the military, if we have Obama sequestration as it is designed now, that will be another $500 billion. That is a total of $1 trillion.

General Dempsey is the top military person in the military. He is the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

He said:

But I will tell you personally, if ever the force is so degraded and so unready, and then we're asked to use it, it would be immoral to use the force unless it's well-trained, well-led and well-equipped.

Admiral Winnefeld, the second in charge, the vice-chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said: "There could be for the first time in my career instances where we may be asked to respond to a crisis and we will have to say that we cannot."

Secretary Hagel, I opposed his confirmation when he was in. Actually, I think he has improved so much more than I thought he would since that time. He is not afraid to talk about these things. He said: "If these abrupt cuts remain, we risk fielding a force that over the next few years is unprepared due to a lack of training, maintenance, and the latest equipment."

It is America he is talking about. This is the Secretary of Defense.

Another thing General Dempsey said—in fact, I carry a card around with me because a lot of people don't believe this. General Dempsey at one time in February 2013, this year, told the Senate Armed Services Committee that: We are putting our military on a path where the force is so degraded and so unready that it would be immoral to use force.

General Odierno, the Commander of the Army, said: Additionally, it is unlikely that the Army would be able to defeat an adversary quickly and decisively should they be called upon to engage in a single, sustained major combat operation.

When we talk about a major combat operation, we are talking about one they used to call the combat operations where major contingencies are on a regional basis.

Our policy, since World War II, has been able to do this to defend America on two regional fronts. That has gone out the window and we are not able to do that anymore.

Secretary Hagel also said: "If sequester-level cuts persist"—which is what we are talking about, the second half trillion that Obama would be taking out of the military—"we risk fielding a force that is unprepared."

I can't imagine hearing that from our own Secretary of Defense, but it is there.

I wish to show us why our choices are down to only one choice.

On this chart if we look at December, today is the 12th. The House leaves at 11 o'clock Friday morning. They are gone, they are gone for the rest of the year. Anything we do that has to go to the House, they won't be there. It can't be done. We work for 1 more week starting the December 16, this coming Monday, and we go all the way through the week where we will be in session. Anything we would do or pass or amend could not go to the House, and that means we would go into December 31 without any kind of advance authorization. On that basis it is significant and that shows we actually have to do it.

I think I mentioned this. I have a chart, but I don't have it in front of me—show since 1970 we always have had our Defense authorization done before January. The only two exceptions to that were when they were vetoed by the President on two occasions and we had to override the veto. Nonetheless, that is why this month is the last chance we have to do it.

I would mention that there is such popular support for this around the country that we have extremes—not really extremes—but publications generally considered to be on the progressive or moderate side and some conservative.

This is one where both the Heritage Foundation and the Washington Post say let's pass the defense deal. It has to pass.

The Heritage Foundation has an extra paper that if there is time later on I may make some quotes from that.

The Washington Post says:

With the end of 2013 rapidly approaching, Congress has an opportunity to rise above a year of massive dysfunction and prevent major disruptions in U.S. defense operations. The leaders of the Senate and the House armed services committees have managed to fashion a bipartisan version.

That is what we are talking about when I say the big four, so this is what we are talking about.

Continuing:

It's a decent compromise that the leaders of both chambers ought to embrace and bring to a vote in the coming days.

A failure to do so would be a new political low for this Congress. The NDAA has been passed 51 consecutive years, even when much of the rest of government had to make do with temporary authorities. But much more than political symbolism is at issue. Though defense funding ultimately must be provided by appropriators, the authorization bill extends vital Pentagon authorities and ultimately sanctions new operations.

If no bill is approved by Jan. 1, combat pay and bonuses for U.S. troops in Afghanistan and elsewhere would be suspended; work on major weapons systems, including a new aircraft carrier, would be halted at considerable cost; and support for the Afghan army and the disposal of Syria's chemical weapons would be interrupted at a critical moment.

The bill also contains important measures to combat sexual crimes in the military.

We talked about that, but this is being editorialized, not by me on the floor of the Senate, but by the Washington Post.

They talk about Guantanamo Bay and they say:

... advance the closure of the Guantanamo Bay prison—

It could take place in the absence of this legislation.

Continuing:

Though a proposal was favored by Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand (D-N.Y.), providing for the prosecution of sex crimes outside the military chain of command, it was not included—did not receive a Senate vote—some three dozen other reforms in legislation would make the punishment of these crimes more likely while providing more protections to victims.

Let me conclude this editorial by reading the next-to-the-last paragraph.

It says:

Other measures in the bill ought to attract broad bipartisan support. The effects on defense of the so-called sequester would be eased by transferring money to operations and training from less essential accounts, such as construction and staffing in office headquarters. The Pentagon is still vulnerable to a $50 billion sequester cut in January unless a separate budget deal can head it off. But passage of the authorization act would prevent the worst disruptions of ongoing operations.

It goes on to say that this is in the House and the House, very likely, is going to pass it, and send it over to the Senate, and they strongly support it.

We have letters from all of the Armed Services to us and to the leader, Senator HARRY REID. This one is from Martin Dempsey. He is urging us to pass this. It is not only me and a handful of Senators, this is the military speaking. He is the top military personnel.

He said:

I write to urge you to complete the National Defense Authorization Act this year. The authorities contained therein are critical to the Nation's defense and urgently needed to ensure we all keep faith with the men and women, military and civilian, selflessly serving in our Armed Forces.

He goes on to say, "This is the most significant concern we have right now," that we may not be able to pass this bill.

We have a letter from General Welsh. General Welsh, if you remember, is the chief of the Air Force. He is the one who is so upset with the fact we had grounded some of our combat squadrons. He says:

The FY14 NDAA contains critical authorities that enable us to protect the American people while keeping promises to our active duty, Guard, Reserve and civilian Airmen. If this important legislation is not enacted I worry about significant impacts to Air Force operations that could jeopardize the missions we are tasked to perform.

He goes on to say how important that is; that it is a matter of life and death to many of the airmen who are out there.

We have the same thing from General Amos of the Marine Corps, who says:

... our hard-won gains on the Twenty-nine Palms land expansion will be threatened, and the construction of the next generation aircraft carrier, the USS Gerald R. Ford, will stop. Passage of the this vital legislation will prove to our Marines and Sailors our unwavering support.

That is what we are talking about because those are the guys who are out there.

I see my good friend from Arizona Senator MCCAIN, and I would say I have been talking about the degraded condition of our military right now and how much worse it is going to be if we are not able to do this bill that I have outlined in some detail. Hopefully, we will be successful in doing that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. I ask unanimous consent to engage in a colloquy with my friend from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCAIN. First, I thank the Senator from Oklahoma for his leadership and his dedication to getting this authorization bill passed. I think my friend from Oklahoma would agree with me there is no reason we are where we are today.

Is it not true this bill was passed out of the Armed Services Committee in May and here we are now in December just now contemplating bringing it to the floor of the Senate?

Mr. INHOFE. I would say to my friend that is true, but also, over in the House they did it the way it should be done. They passed it out of committee, they got it to the floor and passed it. Ours was passed by a huge bipartisan margin. We only had three or four vote against it, and that was way back in—I think it was the last of May or 1st of June. It should have been done back then instead of waiting until 1 week before we are out of here.

Mr. MCCAIN. With all due respect, one has to wonder about the priorities of the group and the leader who sets the agenda for the Senate. One of the real advantages of being in the majority is you set the agenda. So rather than take the bill to the floor, as we have for 51 years—for 51 years the Congress of the United States has taken up and passed a Defense authorization bill—we are now here in December, with the House of Representatives going out of session tomorrow, and we are faced with an unsavory parliamentary situation where we are having to maneuver in a way that a “message”—and my friend from Oklahoma can correct me if I am wrong—a message that cannot be amended, otherwise it would have to go back to the other body, which is going out of session, which would then take us into January.

I ask my friend from Oklahoma: Isn't that where we are, and isn't that a commentary on the concern my friends on the other side of the aisle, the majority leader, has about the men and women who are serving in the military?

We will talk a little about what a failure to pass a Defense authorization bill is. But we are now in a situation which is a disservice not only to the men and women who are serving but to all of us—to every one of the 100 Senators—because every one of these Senators would want to have an amendment to make this bill better and that will impart to the rest of the body their knowledge, their expertise, and their priorities. So what are we doing? We are asking Members on this side of the aisle and the other side of the aisle to accept a piece of legislation without a single amendment to it. That, my friends, when we are talking about the defense of this Nation, is absolutely outrageous.

Would my friend from Oklahoma agree?

Mr. INHOFE. It is right up here. It shows the House, on Friday, at 11 o'clock, is out of here. They are gone. They are adjourned. If something should happen—we were to amend something—they are not there. So it can't be done. This is where we are now. We only have these 5 days that are left.

A lot of people have said—and I would ask my friend from Arizona if he agrees with this—well, we can come back in January and do this. But then look at this. We come back on the 6th of January, and the CR—the continuing resolution—is here. I can assure you, from past experience, that will dominate the floor. They are certainly not going to have time to do it. So the only shot we have is up here.

But also important, I read a list of things before my good friend came in, that expire on December 31, and those are things that are happening right now to all of our pilots. My colleague certainly knows about that. They have bailed out. They are gone now. They are so upset with what is happening with the grounding of our squadrons. If we take away their reenlistment incentive, are we going to have any pilots left?

Mr. MCCAIN. So we have established, by the calendar and by what has happened since May, that, obviously, the majority and the majority leader had a higher priority for whatever the hell it is we did rather than the defense of this Nation. That is a fact. I would challenge anyone on the other side of the aisle to come and argue differently. It is outrageous.

Now that we have established that, could I ask my friend what happens—and I know he has gone through it—what happens to the men and women in our military if we do wait until January, if we do wait until February or March or don't act at all?

For example, one of the best examples I have seen is that right now a married sergeant in the U.S. military who is serving as a helicopter crew chief in Afghanistan, beginning on the 1st of January—please correct me if I am wrong—will lose $890 a month; is that correct?

Mr. INHOFE. That is correct.

Mr. MCCAIN. So we send people into combat, and while we dither around here we are going to keep the men and women who are serving in harm's way from getting the benefits they have earned and deserve and are theirs by law. But we are not going to act, at least until January, perhaps.

I know the Senator from Oklahoma has gone on with a very long list about the completion of ships, about the health programs, and about a number of other issues, but I wish to focus for 1 minute on one area with my friend from Oklahoma.

I think all my colleagues are aware, and the American people are aware, there is a serious issue in the U.S. military. It is a very serious issue and it is the issue of sexual assaults. It is the issue the Senator from Oklahoma has spent untold hours in discussions and debate and learning about this issue because it is a terrible thing that is going on in our military today.

Under the leadership of the Senator from Oklahoma and the distinguished chairman of the committee, Senator LEVIN, we have—and with the participation of every member of the committee, under their leadership—come up with a way to, at least to a significant degree, address this problem in the military.

There are still some controversial aspects of it that are not necessarily either side of the aisle but just a different viewpoint. But I would argue and ask my friend from Oklahoma, is it not true that we have made significant improvements in the Defense authorization bill on the issue of sexual assaults?

These changes, after hearings, after debate, after discussion were put into law and they were agreed to as being very necessary measures to try to bring this terrible situation of sexual assaults in the military under control. I ask my colleague from Oklahoma if this isn't, among many others, an issue that needs to be addressed.

Mr. INHOFE. I respond to my friend that it was addressed in the House bill and in the Senate bill, but the Senate bill didn't pass, so this is all that is left. Specifically, 10 days ago, we were meeting and putting this together—the big four, as they call it. It had 27 specific reforms in this area to support victims, to encourage sexual assault reporting, and, in addition, nine enhancements to the military justice system.

I mentioned our good friend from South Carolina, who is probably the expert in this area, and we consulted him, along with a lot of the other people, both Senator GILLIBRAND and Senator MCCASKILL had amendments and we have bits out of each one of those amendments they had. They are both better off than they were before. But without this, we got nothing—no changes at all.

So we have made great progress in this bill in the sexual assaults, as well as I mentioned Gitmo too which is a very controversial issue.

Mr. MCCAIN. Would the Senator agree that even though there is significant difference between Senator GILLIBRAND and Senator MCCASKILL, they were in agreement with the many provisions my colleague just pointed out, which, whether we address their disagreements or not, they were both agreed these are very important measures they both agree on, that the entire committee agreed on in addressing this issue of sexual assaults in the military.

Mr. INHOFE. That is exactly right. As you point out, they were apart on a lot of issues, but what we did was to take those areas that will improve the situation and adopted them, and they are a part of this bill. So the whole issue of sexual harassment will not be addressed at all in the absence of this legislation. Of two of the very significant provisions that are here, certainly that is one of them.

I mentioned a minute ago the other one. I know we have had differences of opinion between us on the whole Gitmo thing. Yet we have a provision in there now that I think satisfies us both until we all have time to sit down and work these things out.

The bottom line is this: We have things where it would cost huge amounts of money. If you just take the CVN-78, they would have to stop construction, after we have already spent $12 billion, and after it is 75 percent done. That cost would be tremendous, especially when we all know we will go back and reinstate it. But this wouldn't be just millions, it would be hundreds of millions of dollars. That is what is going to happen if we don't pass this bill.

Mr. MCCAIN. I know long ago both the Senator from Oklahoma and I served in the military, which is not too relevant anymore, but both of us keep track of the military. We visit our military installations, and we spend time with the men and women who are serving both here and overseas. We are in communication with them. It is part of our privileges as their representatives, whether they happen to be in our home State or serving overseas in harm's way. When you talk to these young people—and they are the bravest of the brave and we all know the best of America—they do not understand why, when they are serving in combat and they are entitled to some additional pay because of being in danger, that will not happen. They do not understand why the bonus of special duty and incentive pay will lapse. They don't understand why that should happen. They do not understand why we are not addressing the issue of sexual assaults in the military. Many of them are deeply concerned about that.

By the way, I would also add—and I think my friend from Oklahoma will agree—this issue impacts on recruiting the most highly qualified young Americans.

So here we are on December 12 and we have still not completed our duty, our obligation to the men and women who are serving. They rely on us. They rely on us to take care of them. They rely on us to provide them with the weapons and the capabilities and the pay and benefits and to take care of their families. They rely on us. I am getting feedback from them that they are now beginning to believe we don't care that much. Frankly, I can't argue with that because why are we here in December? Why are we here in December? The fiscal year ended on 1 October. They ask: Why is it that you in Congress can't act to provide us with the tools we need to carry out our mission of defending the Nation?

Frankly, I don't have a very good answer, but maybe the Senator from Oklahoma does.

Mr. INHOFE. My colleague is fully aware, because no one has spent more time over in these areas of hostility than my good friend from Arizona, that when you talk to these guys, and you sit in the mess hall with them, one of the things—and we know this is true because we have both had experience in the military—they are talking about is their careers.

They are talking about their careers. Right now our retention is as good as it has ever been. What is going to happen to our retention if all of a sudden we renege on the reenlistment bonuses that they all depend upon? They all talk to each other. About the time that stops on December 31, I have great fear over what is going to happen to our retention rate.

I talked about in the very beginning about what has happened in the military in the last 4½ years, and I read all of the statements from our commanders, from Dempsey, and actually even the Secretary of Defense, talking about what a crisis it is. They all said it is much more of a crisis if we don't pass this bill. This isn't going to help us like it should. We should be in much better shape than this even if we pass it. But we have to pass this or all those things we talked about which are going to be affecting our troops directly are going to take place.

Mr. MCCAIN. I finally say to my friend, I thank him for his leadership. I thank him for his willingness to really short circuit what should have been a 2- or 3-week exercise, where every Member of the Senate would have had the opportunity to propose amendments, to debate those amendments.

My colleague just mentioned the issue of detainees which is still something that deserves great scrutiny by this body. The issue of surveillance is clearly one that needs debate and discussion on the floor of the Senate. There are so many issues that we are not discussing in the slightest because we are now entrapped by a process which doesn't allow us to pass a single amendment to this absolutely vital piece of legislation.

I thank my friend from Oklahoma for understanding that even though we are placed in this incredibly unsavory situation where we are not able, every Member of the Senate who chooses to—and as the Senator from Oklahoma knows well, when we consider the Defense authorization bill, there are literally hundreds of amendments that we consider because of the interest and the commitment that all of our colleagues have. We are not going to be able to do that this time. But it seems to me too, at least we ought to get the bill passed so we can get our Defense Department and the men and women who are serving in it in the kind of condition they deserve.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank my friend from Arizona for coming down and showing what a traumatic situation we have right now. I hope two things come from this. First of all, that we go ahead and pass the NDA bill and then make sure that next year we are there to make sure this doesn't happen again in the same way it has happened.

I ask unanimous consent to have some testimonials printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OKLAHOMANS ARE HIT HARD BY OBAMACARE

It took me three days to sign up for ObamaCare due to website glitches. When I finally got through, I saw my own premium rise 20% and my out of pocket costs go up. But this is nothing compared to what Oklahomans are experiencing. In just a week's time, I received more than 400 stories from my constituents impacted by ObamaCare.

Julia in Broken Arrow said that to keep her family's current plan, they will pay an additional $1,400 in premiums and another $4,000 out-of-pocket.

Lloyd, from Tecumseh, says he is dropping his current insurance and choosing to pay the penalty after learning his monthly premium will jump from $592 to $1,952.

Stacy, a mother of three in Oklahoma City, shared with me that her family's health insurance premiums will increase 20%, with an additional $6,000 in out of pocket costs per person, up to $18,000.

Joy of Oklahoma City said her family's deductible is increasing by $2,000 and they will have to pay out of pocket for prescriptions. This will create significant financial difficulties for them as her husband is battling cancer.

Greg and his family, who live in Oklahoma City, are worried about having to choose between making a monthly mortgage payment of $1,100 or an insurance payment of $1,197.

Jim, with employer coverage in Choctaw, is facing a deductible increase of $4,000.

Janice is currently on a COBRA plan in Sapulpa. On a new exchange plan, she will be paying $240 more each month.

Paul, who says he is in good health and rarely requires a visit to the doctor's office, will be paying $70 per month.

Ralph, who has employer-based insurance in Durant, will pay $80 more each month.

David from Owasso let me know his family's premium and deductible will increase by $318 a month and $500, respectively.

Linda in Pryor says ObamaCare has doubled her deductible and increased her out of pocket costs by 30%.

Darrell, who has a group plan in Cashion, is expecting his premiums to go up 40% and his deductible to double.

Ed, a widow in Oklahoma City, will be paying $250 more in premiums every month.

Linda, from Chelsea, says her family's deductible has increased $700.

Roger, who is on a fixed income in Comanche, says his premiums have doubled.

Peggy in Boise City said her deductible has increased 250%.

An employer in Tulsa says he must choose between a 128% premium increase or a 500% increase in deductible for his staff.

A small business owner in Oklahoma City reports that the cost of the insurance he provides to his employees has gone up 41% and will cost him $1,000 per month more. Because of the mandate to have insurance, more of his employees are now electing coverage, which will drive his costs up even more.

A family of four in Shawnee is facing a 20% increase in premiums and a $1,500 increase in deductible.

A single father of two and small business owner in Lawton says he will be paying 24% more in monthly premiums.

A family of three in Miami is choosing to go without insurance and pay the penalty rather than see their premium double and deductible increase by $3,200.

Nancy from Oklahoma City said she probably should be one to support Obamacare due to her income, but can't because "it is not the right answer". She believes the government doesn't have the right to tell her how to live or define what is "affordable" for her.

Sharon from Oklahoma City went onto the website. Despite entering in her full name, social security number and address, her identity was not able to be verified. She said she spent 5 weeks trying to get someone to assist her and at this rate she is ready to give up and pay the fine.

Erin from Beggs is a wife and a mother of three. She was dropped from her insurance company and instructed to enroll in Obamacare. She has tried to access the website since it was "fixed" and has not been able to get past the first step. She is repeatedly kicked off and has to re-enter her information every time she goes on the site.

Janice from Sapulpa spent over 40 hours attempting unsuccessfully to apply for insurance on Healthcare.gov. She finally asked for them to send her a paper application and when it arrived, it was in Spanish.

The OKC Chamber of Commerce can no longer offer insurance plans to its members since the plans don't meet mandated requirements, impacting 1,400 businesses.

A 50-year-old female from Chandler said she and her husband were dropped from their insurance plan. The plan offered to her now includes maternity care and pediatric dental care—neither of which she needs—and will cost over 200% more per month.

Cyndee of Suphur lost her family's insurance plan while she was still in a critical time frame for treating her cancer. She called this a "scary" experience. She had this plan for 10 years until ObamaCare deemed it unworthy. Cyndee wrote to me about her new plan under ObamaCare and said: "No one wants affordable insurance more than me, but at $1,100 a month, just for me—one person—it's certainly not affordable."

A married father of two from Muskogee was also dropped from his insurance plan. The plan offered to him as comparable in coverage would cost him and his family 46% more than what they used to pay.

Another male, from Edmond, was dropped from his employer sponsored health care. The plan he had through his employer provided him with a 75% employer subsidy on his deductible and covered 100% of his medical bills.

Rockey from Enid said he and his wife's hours were cut at work to 25 hours a week because of the employer mandate. Now that they work part time, they are no longer eligible for coverage through their employer and Obamacare is not affordable for them.

Jessie from Moore said her husband's employer is considering dropping spouse and dependent coverage due to the rising costs of health insurance.

Debbie of Frederick said she is fortunate enough to still have insurance through her employers, but because of mandates in the Act, their family doctor of 30 years has had to eliminate hospital visits from his services. Any time Debbie is in the hospital, the doctor who knows her health the best can no longer be on the front lines of helping make health decisions with her in the most crucial circumstances.

Donna from Elgin said not only have her insurance costs gone up, but two of her doctors have left their practice. She cannot afford the new health insurance, and is having troubling finding new doctors.

Roderick from Shawnee said within a three-month period, three of his doctors have chosen to retire. He is worried about finding new doctors his insurance will cover.

This is devastating. We absolutely need to bring the cost of healthcare down, but ObamaCare is clearly doing the opposite. My colleagues and I have supported common-sense ideas like purchasing insurances across state lines or enacting tort reform. We could have started here, but instead, President Obama forced America down a destructive path that will likely end in a single-payer option. We must repeal ObamaCare and put common sense healthcare reform in its place. I'll continue this fight to ensure Oklahomans have quality, affordable health care options.

Mr. INHOFE. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, as we consider some of the nominations before us, we are reminded that one of the reasons we have all these problems around the country associated with ObamaCare and all our constituents are being impacted in such a negative way by higher premiums, higher deductibles, higher taxes, and fewer jobs is because of the overreach of government.

This is a perfect opportunity for us to discuss the fact that overreaching government—in this case, government which has literally taken over one-sixth of our economy—is causing great harm to the American people and that there is a much better approach most of us here advocated when this was debated. Of course, at the time we didn't have the votes. This was passed in a party-line, partisan way and, as a consequence, we are seeing now the results and the impact on the American people, all of which are very harmful to their own economic circumstances.

I have a personal example from the emails and letters coming into my office of the adverse impact of ObamaCare. This comes from a female constituent of mine in Wilmot, SD. She writes:

My husband and I have four small children and purchase our own health care.

My husband runs his own business and I am privileged to stay at home.

We are very healthy, so we have always purchased a plan with a large deductible, so we can afford a reasonable premium.

Today we received our letter from our health insurance provider letting us know that next month our premium will be jumping 232 percent! That's over $500 more a month—and we barely use our health insurance.

We currently live in an 1,800 square foot house and have been trying to find something bigger. This jump in our monthly health care premium could prevent us from being able to afford any kind of monthly house payment.

... ObamaCare is cutting into the carefully-planned budgets of American families, holding them back from the futures for which they have carefully budgeted.

This is just one example of the harmful economic impact ObamaCare is having on countless Americans from my State of South Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I realize Democrats want to deflect attention of the impact of ObamaCare from our constituents. That is one of the reasons we are having these nominee votes. But our constituents have the right to be heard, so I wish to share some thoughts from a constituent of mine in Owensboro, Cheryl Russell. Here is what she wrote:

We got a letter from our insurance company saying our current policy will not meet the affordable care act, which means it will go away.

According to our insurance company, we will have to take pediatric dental and vision insurance, [even though] we don't have kids. They said it was because of ObamaCare.

She goes on:

Another plan . . . will cost us over $150.00 more a month plus our deductible goes up to $5700.

Please keep taking a stand against Obama Care . . . not only are we going to lose our insurance, but when we go to a different policy we have to pay more. . . .

We are 58 & 56 years old. We will have to work the rest of our lives just to pay for our insurance. . . .

This isn't fair and it isn't right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. President, I wish to share a couple letters I received just today.

I was talking earlier in the day on some of these situations and again what happens when one side thinks they can do whatever they want to do and the consequences of that.

This letter is from Paul from East Prairie, MO, in the Missouri bootheel:

Upon hearing the potential changes coming January 1st, I decided to investigate the stories I heard. I learned that in 2014 my family's premium would go from $597/mo with two $5000 deductibles to $1119/mo with two $4300 deductibles. My cheapest option is $1,085.00/mo with a $12,700 deductible.

Not only was this unaffordable, it was pointless to have insurance.

Certainly, I agree with that. If your deductible is $12,700 and you are paying over $1,000 every month to get insurance, what is that? It is certainly not affordable health care.

Here is a letter from Tom in St. Louis, who said:

My company is a great company to work for, but unfortunately our health insurance policy went from $490 to $690/month. That is $200/month that I can't put towards my kids' education. That is a lot of money for a working guy to come up with every month. My co-workers are struggling with this increase too. I will look into all the options available and hope we do not have doctor changes. We are familiar with the plan we had and we liked it.

A third one from Sherri in Holts Summit, MO. She had a preexisting condition and was in the high-risk pool. She said:

I saw the price, the co-pays and the deductibles and I can't afford it.

So it looks like I will suffer on and have even less money while having a policy I won't be able to afford to use.

We are getting those letters every hour of every day. I think it is not what the American people thought they were going to get.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARKEY). The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, there is more wrong with the Affordable Care Act than just the Web site not working. In fact, the Web site is just a symptom of bigger problems.

Similar to my colleagues, I wish to share the problems Iowans have with the Affordable Care Act. So I come to the floor today to share just one of hundreds of emails, letters, and phone calls from my constituents in Iowa expressing sticker shock about the Affordable Care Act.

A working mother in Decorah, IA, who lost her employer-sponsored coverage for her family because of rising costs, wrote to me and said the following:

... comparable plans do not seem to exist on the healthcare exchange. The closest we can come (and still see our own doctors) cost almost $1050 per month. This represents a 247% increase in cost over our prior employer provided plan—and with much higher deductibles!

My husband is a self-employed small business owner. We covered our family of 4 on my group health plan, which includes a 21 year old adult daughter in college, who is not a legal tax dependent. If we receive any 'subsidy', it will be insignificant in relation to the total jump in our out of pocket costs related to the so called "Affordable Care Act".

The general public seems to believe that anyone who does not qualify for premium subsidies can easily afford a premium increase—no matter how outrageous. Yet an increase of almost 250% in our personal cost of providing an inferior policy for our family—which represents an increase in costs of roughly 20% of our gross income—can only be described as an absolute disaster.

I think this email from a real person who is really living this train wreck of a health care law speaks for itself.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MORAN. Mr. President, part of our job as Members of the U.S. Senate is to help people who have problems. This has been a very difficult time for many Americans and difficult for me as somebody who wants to be able to help people with a problem.

As my colleagues have indicated, the letters, the phone calls, the conversations, the emails continue to come. The one I wish to highlight to my colleagues is from a person who describes herself as a 62-year-old female retired teacher from Wichita. She says she considers herself a middle-class American.

She indicates in her letter that her current health policy expires at the end of this year, less than a month away. Here is what she says in her letter:

When I inquired why, I was told the policy no longer meets the guidelines under ObamaCare.

Yet, in the previous 2 years, my premiums have increased 25% and 28% respectively to which the answer from [my insurer] was that it was to help pay for ObamaCare.

Now I can't even have that plan any longer.

It had a $500 deductible and $1,500 Max out of pocket expense per year, with a $300 premium per month.

After over 20 hours online, and multiple calls and online chats, I finally was able to see some numbers for healthcare costs from the Obamacare Marketplace, only to learn that the premium is 1.5 times what I currently pay, and the deductible is 4.5 times higher (and it's a different insurer).

A plan [from my current insurer] was double the premium.

I will not qualify for tax credits, as my projected income for 2014, which includes some tax free interest income and social security, places this middle class retired American, over the threshold of any kind of subsidy.

I'm sad that my well laid plan for retirement, now will redirect my earnings to pay for healthcare, much of which I will never use.

At 62 and having had a hysterectomy, prenatal care is NOT an issue I will face, nor will I ever need female reproductive disorder treatment, as those parts are gone, but I will have no discount for not needing those coverages.

So I'm paying a higher premium for other women to have them?

I'm very frustrated at these changes.

It's the middle class that will be hit the worst by this mandate, and I fear that many will opt for the government fine because now they truly won't be able to afford the cost of healthcare.

One more question, how will folks who can't even make the premium payment, ever be able to pay the outrageous deductible?

Honestly, $6,500 out of pocket expenses per person per year?

That's crazy, who will be able to pay that? And then who will end up paying it? This is NOT a solution for the Middle Class Americans!

Surely we can develop a policy, a program of caring for Americans without doing damage to people who already had insurance.

I yield the floor.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. President, I am pleased to take the floor today and join my colleagues in opening the mailbag. All of us have received a lot of mail and email and faxes and texts from individuals who are being harmed by this law.

For example, Steve from Peoria, AZ, is looking at the premium for his policy through his employer going up in response to ObamaCare nearly 20 percent. In addition, his employers have told him to brace for more impacts like rising prices—all customers are going to get this—and falling salaries for new hires as well.

Leanne from Eager, AZ, is facing what she calls "sky high" rates now thanks to ObamaCare. If this is not bad enough, it looks as if she and her husband will have to put off buying their parents out of their family business. It looks likely that Leanne's parents are going to have to keep working for a while.

Cristian from Flagstaff, a young husband and father who has a young boy, says he might see his premiums actually decrease marginally. However, thanks to ObamaCare and thanks to changes his employer is making in response to ObamaCare, he is looking at higher copays, higher deductibles, and a decrease in the level of coverage. He is looking at "a large increase in my responsible portion of my medical bills."

ObamaCare is far from ideal for those in the workplace, those looking to retire, and for new families.

With story after story like these, we clearly see that the Affordable Care Act is a misnomer.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mrs. FISCHER. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on behalf of nearly 7,000 Nebraskans who have contacted my office with concerns about ObamaCare. The sticker shock has hit Nebraskans hard.

A woman from Palmyra writes:

This is the first time I have ever written my Senators. We just received our insurance letter telling us that they no longer would have our health insurance policy and the closest policy under the ACA would up our monthly premium from $590.14 to $932.24 for our family of 6. How is this affordable?

A constituent from Holdrege writes:

I cannot believe the letter I got from Blue Cross today. It informs me that I have to switch my coverage, and my new selected plan will cost me $1,116.74, per month. That's a $571.58 per month increase than what I have now. That's almost double my mortgage payment.

Also, why am I forced to carry coverage that I don't need or want? At 58, my wife and I are not going to have any more kids. I don't believe I'm going to qualify for any government subsidies. Our planned budget includes our current health care policy. There is no way we can afford the suggested new policies.

This law is anything but affordable.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I join my colleagues as one who has received tweets and hits on the Web site, emails, phone calls ringing the phone off the hook, written letters, responses that I hear as I talk to people back in Indiana. These are not Republicans, Democrats, liberals, conservatives; they are all of the above. They are not writing to say: Stand with the Republican Party. Stand with this. Stand with that. They are writing to say: Wait a minute. The President promised that we would not have an increase in our premiums. He promised that if we liked our doctor, we could keep our doctor. He promised this would be affordable.

Tell that to Deborah from Logansport, who said that her increases in premiums will strain an already strained budget. I think she speaks for millions of Americans, tens of millions of Americans—a lot of Hoosiers, that is for sure.

Doug, a small business owner from Bloomington, told me that he expects his company health insurance to increase over 30 percent next year and, he said, "this will preclude me from providing wage raises to our employees and will make hiring additional employees much less attractive, if not impossible."

The President promised a lot. The worst thing you can do to your constituents, the people you represent, the people who put their trust in you, is overpromise and underperform. This could be the biggest gap between overpromising and underperforming of anything any President has said in the history of the United States. And he punctuated his statements with "period," meaning "take it to the bank. Count on it. Trust me. Your premiums won't increase." It is sad.

It is sad, but it can be corrected. We can work. We can repeal this now. We can work together on a bipartisan basis. We can fashion a reasonable, affordable solution to providing Americans who are uninsured with insurance, creating the kinds of products through an open market system, a competitive system that will deal with this problem. We do not have to keep swallowing this so-called Affordable Care Act. It simply will not go down.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. JOHNSON of Wisconsin. Mr. President, last night I read a number of emails we received of the hundreds we received from constituents in Wisconsin specifically talking about the problems they have had in losing their coverage and certainly finding this law not being affordable.

They use words like "scared," "begging for help," feeling they were just collateral damage in this scheme that simply is not protecting patients or offering affordable care. They cannot fathom that this is actually happening to them because they knew it was not supposed to.

Today I rise to read an email received from Steve Walrath from Beloit. Steve writes: I am 54 years old, in good health and no prior conditions. I just received my health insurance renewal bill. I used to have affordable and user-friendly health care that cost about $290 a month with no copay. According to my renewal letter from Dean health care, my choices are now $854 a month with a 10-percent copay, up to $1,315 a month with a zero-percent copay.

Let me put that in perspective. He was paying $290 a month with no copay, so if he wants a similar plan he will now experience a 440-percent increase, up to $1,315. If he wants to pay a 10-percent copay, it will be a 285-percent increase. This was not supposed to happen. This is not what President Obama promised the American people, the citizens of Wisconsin.

Steve goes on to write:

Where is the promise of reduced insurance rates under the Affordable Care Act? What choices do you want me to make after January 1? Dental care or health insurance? An occasional night out or health care? Helping my kids get settled into home ownership or health care? What choice do you want me to make? This increase of over 300 percent is a betrayal of the laws you passed and promises you made. "Can't be denied coverage" doesn't mean we can afford it. Not when it's more than my mortgage payment. Which of the above choices do you want me to make after January 1?

That is just the sad fact. The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is not protecting patients, it is not providing affordable care, and it is not about choice. It is about coercion, and I am asking the President of the United States and I am asking our Democratic colleagues here in the Senate and the House to work with Republicans to start limiting the damage, to start repairing the harm that is being caused to citizens of Wisconsin and America.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, in Utah I have a program that I call the Mobile Office. It is a way for many of my constituents, many of whom live some distance from my two offices in the State, to meet with members of my staff in order to discuss various concerns they have with the Federal Government, concerns that arise from their interaction with any of various Federal programs and agencies. It allows us to help these constituents, and it provides vital information that I can use to better represent them back here in Washington.

At one meeting in Davis County, a man attended who wanted to tell us about his experience with ObamaCare. He owns two small food stores and a 7-Eleven. He is also an immigrant, having come to the United States just 12 years ago to seek a better life for himself and for his family. He gives back to his community. He contributes to his economy and provides jobs for people who live in his town. Now ObamaCare is threatening all of that. His insurance premiums for his family are going to be rising by $200 a month. This cost will destabilize his personal finances and may well force him to make cutbacks or to let some of his employees go.

These are the real human costs of ObamaCare. It is not what the President promised, and it is turning out to be an absolute, unmitigated disaster for families all across this country. It is time to start over and develop a health care system that works for everyone.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, the Affordable Care Act promised accessibility, affordability, and choice. As we heard from the stories told here tonight, it delivered on none of the above.

I join Senator LEE, Senator JOHNSON, and the others to call on Congress to come together. Let's fix this flawed program before it is too late and before we destroy health care in the United States of America.

I get constant communication from my State about the problems that are there. This one that I want to read from Beth Hatfield demonstrates the fear, confusion, and lack of accessibility the health care plan has at this time.

I have tried many times over the past few weeks to purchase a health insurance plan for myself on the healthcare Web site. I finally was able to complete an application, but have not been able to choose a plan yet. Twice I asked questions on the "live chat" option, but they were not able to answer my questions, instead they [told me to make a long distance call to the help desk. I did, but I couldn't get an answer there either]. I was disappointed to find out that in order to "compare plans" you first needed to enroll. In what other shopping experience do you have to sign up before you actually shop?

Now I saw on the news that my personal information may be compromised from the Web site. This makes me angry, especially since it seems they knew all along [this problem existed].

Is anyone going to be able to do anything about protecting my information? I need health insurance. I am not working and my COBRA policy is expensive [and runs out soon].

I need someone to help me, and I need them to help me now.

Thank you for the opportunity to be heard.

I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I just found out PolitiFact, which is a group who takes a look at what politicians say each year, just came out with what they are describing as the "Lie of the Year." PolitiFact, "Lie of the Year." It is none other than that of President Barack Obama, "If you like your health care plan, you can keep it," called by PolitiFact the "Lie of the Year."

It is not surprising that those of us from around the country are getting letters, emails, and calls from folks at home who are finding out they cannot keep it. They listened to the President, they believed the President, who has now had his statement listed as being the "Lie of the Year."

I have a letter from Cody, WY, from a man who said:

Just got a quote from my insurance agent on a Obama care insurance. From $860 that I currently spend per month for my family of 4, to $2,400 per month.

He said:

All with the low deductible of $10,000 per person per year. I'm not sure what planet they think I live on, but there is no way I can spend more than 1/2 of my monthly income on insurance. For the first time in my adult life I will soon be without insurance. What does it matter if my two 18-year-old children can stay on an insurance plan if I can't afford to keep one? Also, all the airtime to preexisting conditions is meaningless if I can't afford to keep a plan.

I feel greatly blessed to have the good paying job that I have. It puts me above the pay level that would allow me to get any subsidies. By the way, with the system in place this year I wouldn't have needed subsidies.

Because he was paying something he could afford.

I have never needed them in the past and would like to continue to never get a hand out from my government.

This is what I expect to hear from the people of Wyoming—not looking for a handout from the government and able to take care of themselves. They are rugged individuals.

What this constituent has gotten from a Presidential promise turns out to be the lie of the year. He sees an increase in his health insurance from $860 a month to over $2,000 a month.

He said:

I employ 35 people with my company. When we first opened about a year and ½ ago we were talking about getting some sort of coverage. It became very clear that we will not be able to do this, and have stopped any of our plans to provide this in the future. We also know for sure that we can not afford to ever employ more than 50 people, so as we continue to grow, there is an upward limit on how many people we will hire.

Here is an individual who has a business and has hired 35 people. He is not going to provide insurance because the costs are too high. He says that he is never going to have more than 50 employees. The opportunities may be there—wanting to put people back to work—but, no, there is a cap at 50. Why? Because of the health care law that has been forced down the throats of the American people. It was voted along party lines by Democrats in the House and in the Senate. So here we are, hurting the economy and hurting people's health.

He goes on:

Simple economics, Obamacare is a job killer in Wyoming.

ObamaCare is a job killer not just in Wyoming but all across the country.

He said:

It has never been easy to be in business, that is part of the fun of being successful. It is discouraging when our federal government limits the American dream for everyone.

I am thankful for your efforts, but from my chair in Cody, it is already too late.

A failed Web site is just the tip of the iceberg. Web sites can be fixed, but what can't be fixed is the destruction this health care law is doing to the health of America in terms of canceled policies. We now have over 5 million policies that have been canceled across the country. Five million people have letters saying: We are sorry, but your policy is canceled. Why? Maybe they didn't have the type of insurance the President deemed good enough for them.

I received a letter from a lady who lives in Newcastle, WY. She is a rancher. I talked to her at our Farm Bureau meeting in Wyoming. She said: I lost my insurance because the President didn't deem my policy good enough because it didn't include maternity coverage. She knows me and knows I am a doctor. She said: Doc, I had a hysterectomy; I don't need maternity coverage. She knows whether she needs maternity coverage. The President of the United States doesn't have a clue. Yet he is the one who determines what kind of coverage she needs because it is the President who decided that he will be the one who will decide what the American people need, not them. She knew what worked for her and her family and what they could afford as far as a deductible.

There are people across my State who have absolute levels of anger and anxiety, and it is reflected in the letters I continue to get.

The front page of yesterday's Wall Street Journal talked about the amount of deductibles. The deductibles in the bronze policy are the cheapest and average over $5,000 per person. A husband and wife will have a $10,000 deductible before they even get to the insurance. Yet they have to buy expensive insurance with these huge deductibles in order to comply with the individual mandate the Democrats have forced on the American people, that you have to buy it whether you call it a fee, a fine, or a charge. Call it what you will—a tax.

So we have the fact that the costs are too high and, of course, the deductibles.

I am going to continue to come back. I will be back later this evening with more letters, but I appreciate your attention.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I commend the Senate for confirming Judge Patricia M. Wald to be a member of the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board, "PCLOB". The Senate previously confirmed Judge Wald to this post on August 2, 2012. The President renominated Judge Wald to this position in March, and the Judiciary Committee favorably reported the nomination without objection months ago. Like many other nominees, her confirmation has been held up on the floor for months by Senate Republicans.

During her tenure on this important oversight board, Judge Wald has served with great professionalism and dedication. And last month, she received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the highest civilian honor that the President can bestow.

For the past several months, our Nation has been engaged in a national debate about the ever-growing need for limits on the government's surveillance powers. The House and the Senate are considering bipartisan legislation to rein in those expansive powers, in an effort to better protect Americans' privacy and to increase transparency and oversight. The PCLOB is also expected to issue an important report on the government's surveillance programs to the President and Congress.

Today's confirmation vote will ensure that the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board remains at full strength as the board continues this work to safeguard our constitutional rights. Democrats, Independents, and Republicans alike have supported the work of this non-partisan board. I commend the Senate for confirming this well qualified nominee, so that the PCLOB can continue to carry out its important responsibilities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All postcloture time has expired.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Patricia M. Wald, of the District of Columbia, to be a Member of the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board for a term expiring January 29, 2019?

On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE) and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

The result was announced—yeas 57, nays 41, as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

The bill clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on the nomination of Brian Morris, of Montana, to be United States District Judge for the District of Montana.

QUORUM CALL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair now directs the clerk to call the roll to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll and the following Senators entered the Chamber and answered to their names:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the nomination of Brian Morris, of Montana, to be United States District Judge for the District of Montana, shall be brought to a close?

The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. HEINRICH) is necessarily absent.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE) and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BEGICH). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 57, nays 40, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote the yeas are 57, the nays are 40. The motion is agreed to.

NOMINATION OF BRIAN MORRIS TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MONTANA

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the nomination.

The bill clerk read the nomination of Brian Morris, of Montana, to be United States District Judge for the District of Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will now be 2 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination equally divided in the usual form.

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it is my understanding there is 2 hours equally divided; is that right?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The leader is correct.

Mr. REID. I yield back 59 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time is yielded back.

The Senator from Florida.

SPACE LAUNCH LIABILITY INDEMNIFICATION EXTENSION ACT

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, as in legislative session, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 3547, which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 3547) to extend the application of certain space launch liability provisions through 2014.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, today, I am asking for unanimous consent to pass H.R. 3547, as amended, a bill to extend government liability, subject to appropriation, for certain third-party claims arising from commercial space launches. The bill supports the competitiveness of the United States commercial space industry.

This industry, which grew in part out of the successes of NASA, is vital both to the economy and to national security. Our U.S. space companies offer us new opportunities to send astronauts into space on U.S.-built vehicles and to continue launching communications satellites and conducting important scientific research on the International Space Station.

This bill helps to ensure the strength of the space industry by continuing to provide Federal launch liability protection from third-party losses for commercial launches. Congress first established this indemnification regime in 1988 and has seen the need to extend the policy many times since then. It is important to note that it has never cost the United States a single dime.

This indemnification helps domestic launch companies compete in the global launch market. Many international competitors enjoy similar protections in their various home nations.

However, indemnification protection is set to expire on December 31st of this year. Without indemnification, each company would "bet the company" every time they launch.

As chairman of the Science and Space Subcommittee, I have worked with other Senators to thoroughly consider this issue. In a hearing this May, we discussed indemnification in detail. It was clear that extending indemnification was necessary.

This bill therefore extends the indemnification for 3 years, until 2016, giving Congress the ability to continue to review this policy while providing the commercial space industry the stability it needs.

I would like to especially thank Senator THUNE and his committee staff for their work on this bill. I would also like to thank Senators CRUZ, FEINSTEIN, HEINRICH, KAINE, RUBIO, THUNE, MARK UDALL, TOM UDALL, WARNER, and WICKER, all of whom worked with me on this effort.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Nelson amendment which is at the desk be agreed to; the bill, as amended, be read a third time, the title amendment be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2544) was agreed to, as follows:

(Purpose: In the nature of a substitute)

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. LAUNCH LIABILITY EXTENSION.

Section 50915(f) of title 51, United States Code, is amended by striking “December 31, 2013” and inserting “December 31, 2016”.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The bill (H.R. 3547), as amended, was passed.

The amendment (No. 2545) was agreed to, as follows:

(Purpose: To amend the title)

Amend the title so as to read: “A bill to extend Government liability, subject to appropriation, for certain third-party claims arising from commercial space launches.”.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, what we have just passed is the indemnification bill on commercial space launches.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. NELSON. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HOEVEN. Mr. President, I and my colleagues stand here holding the floor in defense of fair and free debate, and the longstanding traditions of the Senate that promote consensus.

We are here working on nominations because the majority leader has determined that is the agenda for today. But there are important issues we need to move to: the Defense reauthorization bill, the Water Resources Development Act, the farm bill, the budget, and other vitally important legislation. We need to move to these bills and we need to deal with them in a bipartisan way. Instead, we continue to work on nominees. We are working on nominees without the discussion and the debate and the consideration and, most importantly, without that bipartisan consensus which has always been a hallmark of the Senate. Because of the unilateral change to the longstanding rules of the Senate, that consensus is no longer required for advice and consent; a simple partisan majority will do.

I would use time today to talk about need for bipartisanship, bipartisanship in nominations, but also bipartisanship in the important legislation that we need to address for the good of our country, legislation such as the right kind of health care reform. I have provided real-life stories from citizens from my State about the impact that the Affordable Care Act, ObamaCare, is having on them and their lives and why we need to replace it with market-based reforms, a step-by-step comprehensive approach that fosters choice and competition. We have put forward proposals to do that.

I have also used time today to talk about other important issues that we need to advance on a bipartisan basis; for example, the farm bill. We need a 5-year farm bill. We are currently operating under an extension. That extension expires at the end of the year. We need to get a farm bill in place, and a farm bill is a great example of how we do things on a bipartisan basis, not only in the Senate but also in the House.

I wish to talk about another subject that is vitally important to our country, to our economy, to job creation, and to national security, that also needs to be advanced and needs to be advanced in a bipartisan way, and that is energy.

I want to provide a specific example; that is, the Keystone XL Pipeline. I know the Presiding Officer wishes to see that project approved. That is the point. This is a project that will create jobs, create economic activity, it will create greater energy security, it is something that we can work on with our closest friend and ally in the world, Canada. It is something that goes to national security so we are no longer dependent on the Middle East for oil, and it is something that is supported on a bipartisan basis and there is strong support from the American people.

The polls show somewhere between 70 and 80 percent of the American public supports this project and wants to see it move forward.

It has now been more than 5 years since the permit applications were submitted to the State Department for the Keystone XL Pipeline project—more than 5 years in the application process and still no decision—an exhaustive review process, including five environmental impact statements, showing no significant impact to the environment. The most recently issued draft statement was only last spring. The consent of every single State along the route of the pipeline is in place. Every single State on the route supports and approves the project, with the backing of a majority of Congress. Legislation to approve the project has passed in the House and we have passed it in the Senate only to have the President turn it aside.

As I said a only minute ago, it has the support of the American people. More than 70 percent—in the most recent poll—of the American people support moving forward with this project. Despite all of this support, the Keystone XL Pipeline project is still awaiting decision from the President of the United States.

The long wait for approval is troubling enough, but it represents a larger issue for our Nation and begs a bigger question for all of us who serve our States and the American people in this institution: How will America ever build an all-of-the-above energy policy if the President takes more than 5 years to approve only one piece of a comprehensive plan?

The Presiding Officer has seen this issue before in his State when it comes to the Alaska pipeline, how for years and years it was worked on until it was finally approved. Once approved, not only is it a vitally important piece of infrastructure for the State of Alaska, but contrary to all the concerns that were raised in regard to the Alaska pipeline, such as the environmental concerns, it has proven to work and work very well.

They addressed the concerns and the project was approved. The same is true for the Keystone XL Pipeline.

To recount briefly, this $7 billion, 1,700-mile high-tech pipeline will carry oil not only from Alberta, Canada, to refineries in Oklahoma and the Texas Gulf Coast, but it will also carry growing quantities of sweet crude from the Bakken oil fields in North Dakota, my State, and also Montana—light, sweet, Bakken crude, the highest quality oil produced.

Even by modest estimates it will create more than 40,000 jobs. There have been a lot of estimates out there, some much higher. But the State Department itself, the administration's own State Department has come out after more than 5 years of study and said that this project will create more than 40,000 jobs. At a time when unemployment is still 7 percent, these are good jobs, jobs that put Americans back to work.

It will create more than 40,000 jobs, boost the American economy, and raise much-needed revenues for States and the Federal Government. It is not raising revenues by raising taxes, it is raising revenues through economic growth. That is the way to do it—not higher taxes but through economic growth.

Further, and perhaps most importantly, it will help put our country within striking range of a long-sought goal, a vitally important goal for our country, true energy security. For the first time in generations, the United States—with its friend and ally Canada—will have the capacity to produce more energy than we use, truly, North American energy independence, eliminating our reliance on oil from the Middle East, Venezuela, and other volatile parts of the world. This is something Americans very much want.

When we see in the polls they support this project by more than 70 percent, it is with a clear recognition of what are we doing getting oil from the Middle East when we should be getting it from ourselves in this country and from our closest friend and ally Canada. We absolutely can do it, we can do it to an extent that is beyond our needs, and we can do it in short order, easily within the next 5 years if we approve projects such as this one.

Now we produce about 60 percent of our fuel domestically. We still import 40 percent, much of it from the Middle East, and other areas of the world that are hostile to our interests.

The question is why would we want to import oil from an unstable region of the world when we can import it and when we can work with our closest friend and ally Canada, as well as move it from parts of our country that produce that oil, such as my State and others, and transport it to our refineries.

The 40 percent that we don't produce domestically has to come from someplace else. Why not from our closest friend and ally Canada. With a true all-of-the-above approach to energy development in this country, including projects such as the Keystone XL Pipeline project, I absolutely believe we can be energy independent within 5 years.

The argument has been advanced that the oil sands will increase carbon emissions and that failing to build the Keystone XL Pipeline will somehow reduce emissions.

Let us look at the facts. Let us look at this claim more closely. Today an ever increasing percentage of new recovery in the oil sands is being accomplished in situ. That means with technology that makes the oil sands carbon footprint comparable to conventional drilling.

In fact, the oil sands industry has reduced greenhouse gas emissions per barrel of oil produced by an average of 26 percent since 1990 and with some facilities achieving reductions as high as 50 percent—a 50-percent reduction in carbon emissions. Today heavy crude from the Middle East—and even from California—produces more carbon emissions over its life cycle than the Canadian oil sands.

Also, we need to factor in that if the pipeline is not built from Alberta to the United States, a similar pipeline will be built to Canada's Pacific coast.

What does that mean? That means from there the oil will be shipped on tankers across the Pacific Ocean, a much larger and more sensitive ecosystem than the Sandhills—which, of course, have been at issue in terms of the route of the pipeline. It will be shipped across the ocean to be refined in facilities in China with weaker environmental standards and more emissions than our refineries in the United States.

The United States, moreover, will continue to import its oil from the Middle East, again on tankers so that again has to be transported across the ocean. Factor in the cost of trucking and railing the product to market overland, and the result, contrary to the claims of opponents, will be more emissions, more CO₂ emissions, and a less secure distribution system without the Keystone XL Pipeline than we will have if it is built.

In fact, the administration's own State Department has released three draft Environmental Impact Statements finding "no significant impacts" on the environment.

Let me read that again. In fact, the administration's own State Department has released three draft Environmental Impact Statements finding "no significant impacts" on the environment.

What does the administration do? They delay and ask for another Environmental Impact Statement.

What is going on?

In its latest analysis in March, the State Department concluded that "there would be no substantive change in global greenhouse gas emissions" associated with the Keystone XL Pipeline.

That raises another important point. The White House has said repeatedly they "don't want to get ahead of the process," but the President effectively abandoned the process more than 2 years ago when he halted the project by executive action. Had he not, the State Department, in keeping with the usual process, would have issued a decision on the permit by December of 2011. That is according to a letter that was sent to me by Secretary Hillary Clinton, Secretary of State at that time, which she sent to me in August 2011.

I wish to point out that this body, the Senate, as well as the House of Representatives, has embraced the Keystone XL project with bipartisan majorities. Congress has expressed support for the Keystone XL with two majority votes in the Senate and several bipartisan letters to the President. The American people have also expressed overwhelming support for the project, as I have stated.

In a Harris poll released this summer, 82 percent of voting Americans voiced support for the Keystone XL Pipeline project. I want to emphasize that and say it again. In a Harris poll released this summer, 82 percent of voting Americans voiced support for the Keystone XL Pipeline project. According to Harris, 9 in 10 Republicans and nearly 80 percent of Democrats and independents believe the pipeline is in our national interest.

In July, Senator LANDRIEU and I led a bipartisan group of our colleagues to introduce a concurrent resolution declaring the Keystone XL Pipeline project in the national interest of the United States and calling on President Obama to approve it.

The resolution notes that every study conducted by the State Department, including the Department's draft Environmental Impact Statement issued in May, has found no significant impacts to the environment.

This is the text of S. Con. Res. 21.

Expressing the sense of Congress that construction of the Keystone XL Pipeline and the Federal approvals required for the construction of the Keystone XL Pipeline are in the national interest of the United States.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

July 31, 2013

Ms. LANDRIEU (for herself, Mr. HOEVEN, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. DONNELLY, Mr. BEGICH, Ms. HEITKAMP, Mr. THUNE, Mr. RISCH, Mr. COR-NYN, Mr. JOHANNIS and Mr. BARRASSO) [a bipartisan group] submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Expressing the sense of the Congress that construction of the Keystone XL Pipeline and the Federal approval required for the construction of the Keystone XL pipeline are in the national interest of the United States.

Whereas safe and responsible production, transportation, and use of oil and petroleum products provide the foundation of the energy economy of the United States, helping to secure and advance the economic prosperity, national security, and overall quality of life in the United States;

Whereas the Keystone XL pipeline would provide short- and long-term employment opportunities and related labor income benefits, such as government revenues associated with taxes;

Whereas the State of Nebraska has thoroughly reviewed and approved the proposed Keystone XL pipeline reroute, concluding that the concerns of Nebraskans have had a major influence on the pipeline reroute and that the reroute will have minimal environmental impacts;

Whereas the Department of State and other Federal agencies have conducted extensive studies and analysis over a long period of time on the technical, environmental, social, and economic impact of the proposed Keystone XL pipeline;

Whereas assessments by the Department of State found that the Keystone XL pipeline is "not likely to impact the amount of crude oil produced from the oil sands" and that "approval or denial of the proposed Project is unlikely to have a substantial impact on the rate of development in the oil sands";

Whereas the Department of State found that the incremental life cycle greenhouse gas emissions associated with the Keystone XL project are estimated in the range of 0.07 to 0.83 million metric tons of carbon dioxide equivalents, with the upper end of this range representing 12/1,000 of 1 percent of the 6,702,000,000 metric tons of carbon dioxide emitted in the United States in 2011;

Whereas after extensive evaluation of potential impact to land and water resources along the 875-mile proposed route of the Keystone XL pipeline, the Department of State found, "The analyses of potential impacts associated with construction and normal operation of the proposed Project suggest that there would be no significant impacts to most resources along the proposed Project route (assuming Keystone complies with all laws and required conditions and measures).";

Whereas the Department of State found that "[s]pills associated with the proposed Project that enter the environment are expected to be rare and relatively small" and that "there is no evidence of increased corrosion or other pipeline threat due to viscosity" of diluted bitumen oil that will be transported by the Keystone XL pipeline;

Whereas, the National Research Council convened a special expert panel to review the risk of transporting diluted bitumen by pipeline and issued a report in June 2013 to the Department of Transportation in which the National Research Council found that existing literature indicates that transportation of diluted bitumen proposes no increased risk of pipeline failure;

Whereas plans to incorporate 57 project-specific special conditions relating to the design, construction, and operations of the

Keystone XL pipeline led the Department of State to find that the pipeline will have “a degree of safety over any other typically constructed domestic pipeline”; and

Whereas, the Department of State found that oil destined to be shipped through the pipeline from the oil sands region of Canada and oil shale deposits in the United States would otherwise move by other modes of transportation if the Keystone XL pipeline is not built: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that—

(1) construction of the Keystone XL pipeline will promote sound investment in the infrastructure of the United States;

(2) construction of the Keystone XL pipeline will promote energy security in North America and will generate an increase in private sector jobs that will benefit both the regions surrounding the Keystone XL pipeline and the United States as a whole; and

(3) completion of the Keystone XL pipeline is in the national interest of the United States.

I have worked toward approval of the Keystone XL Pipeline—first as the Governor of North Dakota and now as a Senator—because I believe it is just the kind of project that will grow our economy and create the jobs our country so desperately needs, and it will do so with good environmental stewardship. At the same time, it will reduce our dependence on the Middle East for oil, which is what the American people have sought for decades.

The Keystone XL Pipeline project is long overdue. For the benefit of our economy, our environment, and our long-term energy security, this project needs to be approved and it needs to be approved without delay.

As I say, we can do these things. We can do these things and so much more, but it takes a bipartisan effort. It takes bipartisanship. We have to find a way to tackle these tough issues for the benefit of the American people and we have to do it in a way that has always been the hallmark of this institution—the Senate—and that is on a bipartisan basis.

Earlier today I read accounts I received from citizens of my State who have been impacted adversely by ObamaCare. ObamaCare is an example of what I am talking about, an example of something that was passed on a partisan basis rather than on a bipartisan basis. So when we look across this great country, it is very understandable why the public support is not there. This was a policy passed solely with votes from one side of the aisle, in the House and in the Senate. We need to pass legislation in a bipartisan way. We need policies for this country, particularly on these big issues, that can garner bipartisan support if we expect the American people to truly support the policies as well.

I would like to read several more accounts, true stories, that I have received in my office from people from our State about the impact that ObamaCare is having on their lives.

The first one comes from Crystal, ND. It is a frustrated senior, not eligible for Medicare, seeking ways to cut back to afford ObamaCare. This individual writes:

Just who is this health care reform law helping? My insurance broker, American Family, is no longer carrying medical insurance—so they lose. The average American that goes out and earns a paycheck—he loses. Doctors don't like it, so how many new doctors will there be? I just got off the phone with the insurance brokerage company that has taken over my former broker's customers. I learned that if I sign up before the end of the year, I can save by NOT having maternity coverage (what a laugh!). But, after 2014, I HAVE to have maternity coverage! Can you see all of us senior citizens walking around pregnant? So, with the cheapest coverage I WILL be paying $473 MORE per month than my current coverage, and my premium will be $1,288.00 per month! That's a 37% increase per month! Next year, the rate will increase to cover maternity. And, if you have children under 18, you HAVE to have dental, and maybe vision too. I already try to conserve on our monthly expenses, have heat set to 55—and when guests are here, I set it to 65. I turn lights off, don't smoke, don't drink (even quit drinking pop). I don't eat out, don't even go out to drive to get the mail every day, and don't buy new clothes, and don't go to visit family like I used to. What should I cut out of our monthly expenses? Take weekly showers? Get the mail once a week? Eat once a day? Hibernate? Get a third job? Cut out the grandkids' events? So, “affordable health care”. . . I wonder how many heart attacks there will be after Americans open up their health insurance bill in 2014, and even more in 2015! Cause it will be a shocker.

Here is another story from an independent North Dakotan in Minnewaukan who suggests seceding from the Union over ObamaCare.

I would like you to know what the health care reform law is doing for my family. The insurance company we have had since 1994 is no longer going to offer health insurance, starting April 2014. When I called to get quotes to replace my current health insurance policy, I learned I would have to pay $200 more for a plan with a deductible that is twice the amount that I currently have. Then, when I eventually have to go on an ObamaCare policy, I will have to pay for maternity, which I haven't had for 17 years and have not needed. Plus, I will have to pay for children's dental and vision, which my family won't be able to use because my children are 18 and 20 years old. The health reform insurance policy will cost me twice as much as I am paying now. So, please tell me how this is going to help me! The only thing this is doing is giving another freebee to those who choose not to work. This is very frustrating, and I am starting to believe that seceding from this Union and making our country much better for the residents of North Dakota. We certainly have enough of our own resources to take care of ourselves. I hope you are trying to change the health care reform bill.

Here is one from a hardware store owner who is unable to grow his business due to ObamaCare.

I just received my renewal from Blue Cross Blue Shield for my 5 employees, and the premium for the same coverage went up from $2,179.50 per month to $3,090.40 per month. I am a small town hardware store owner. Where is this money to come from? I am so frustrated by the lack of understanding that our country's government officials have regarding the policies they create. It appears we all need to go on welfare [to survive]. Most people [who] work and generate the money are feeling hopeless. I don't think you have a clue as to the frustration that is out here. I was looking to expand and grow my business, but the drain I believe ObamaCare will have on the already strained economy will be much greater than in the Great Depression.

So, as a small business owner, why should I invest in the future? So our U.S. Government can continue its “business as usual?” I think not.

I present these stories and others I presented earlier in the day, along with those from my colleagues, because they are real stories from real Americans across the country who are suffering because of ObamaCare. We have put forward the kind of market-based solutions to replace ObamaCare that empower people—empower them to choose their own health care insurance and their own health care provider—and we need to go to work to provide the right kind of health care reform. We need to do that on a bipartisan basis.

I think that by presenting these stories, it is not just a case of Members of the Senate or Members of Congress saying: Hey, this is what I think is happening. These are real stories. These are people telling us what is happening to them in their lives and we need to take heed and we need to address the very real and very valid concerns they are raising and we can do it. We absolutely can do it.

I come back to where I started my comments after our last vote. We are here today voting on nominations. Due to the change in the Senate rules by the majority party, advise and consent no longer requires participation or any votes whatsoever from the minority party. That creates a situation now where judges, other nominees can be approved solely by one party. We have seen what happens when one party and one party alone can confirm appointees or can pass laws such as ObamaCare. It doesn't work. It doesn't work for our country. That is why the Senate was set up to require bipartisanship, to require consensus so as we pass the important policies and laws that will help lift our country and move it forward, we have the broad base of support from both sides of the aisle across this great Nation. That is what is required to make things work.

That is why it is incumbent on all of us in this institution to reach out and find ways to make sure we have that bipartisanship so we create the kind of policies that will truly move our country forward. That is what the American people have sent us here to do.

I see my esteemed colleague from the great State of Utah is on the Senate floor and at this time I yield to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I have certainly enjoyed the remarks of the distinguished Senator from North Dakota. He has done a terrific job in the Senate and made a real difference, and I personally appreciate it very much.

We all know we are here for one basic reason: I believe our friends on the other side believe that by creating this kind of a fuss and problem, they can get off of the issue of ObamaCare, which is a disaster, and everybody knows it, including them.

The fact is that I think they have gone from one extreme debacle to another in their desecration of this body by getting rid of a rule that is absolutely critical to this body—a rule of protection to the minority.

I can hardly wait for those on the other side of the aisle, who have never been in the minority, to get in the minority and realize what they have done is basically destroyed the thing which has made the Senate the greatest deliberative body in the world.

The cloture rule—rule XXII—was put in place to allow the majority to end filibusters. In the early part of the last century they couldn't get anything done, so they came up with rule XXII so they could invoke cloture, end the debate, and get back to whatever the Senate decided was the appropriate business. It has worked amazingly well and it would continue to work amazingly well, except for the fact that our colleagues on the other side have made the Senate no better than the House of Representatives.

The Senate was always supposed to be different from the House of Representatives. It was supposed to be the body that would be more deliberative. It was Washington who said to Jefferson that the Senate is the saucer which cools the tea. They were right. The Senate is the saucer which should cool the tea. It should cool debates around here. But now it is just whatever the majority wants, and they vote in unison. They vote in unison because they are supported in unison by a number of very well-heeled groups, especially including the unions, which Democrats are basically afraid of crossing. It is a pitiful shame.

I would like to chat just a little bit about this filibuster because it is a time-honored instrument which both sides have used. But I think there have been gross misrepresentations of what the filibuster is by the leadership of the other side, and these gross misrepresentations should never have been spoken on the floor. I don't know how they keep a straight face when they do it.

On November 21, 2013, the majority used a premeditative parliamentary gimmick to change more than two centuries of Senate confirmation practice. As a result, for the first time since 1806, the minority cannot extend debate on any nominations except for those that go to the Supreme Court. Democrats accomplished this on a purely party-line vote and by a maneuver designed to avoid scrutiny.

It would be hard to imagine a crisis so grave, a conflict so intractable that the only option was to fundamentally alter the very nature of this institution and further politicize the very confirmation process. I am here to say that the crisis the majority said could only be solved that way never existed.

The majority leader claimed on November 21 that this crisis was, as he put it, caused by “unprecedented obstruction” of nominations to both the judicial and the executive branches.

More specifically, he said there had been 163 filibusters of judicial and executive branch nominations, half of them during the Obama administration.

By the way, that is totally false and they know it. I don't know how they can stand on the floor and make these bald-faced assertions.

The only solution to the problem, the leader said, was simply to ban nomination filibusters.

I notice the majority leader made no attempt to either define the filibusters he was counting or to identify the nominations on his filibuster list. That was an odd omission because doing so would surely have proved his point. Wouldn't it? No.

There was a very good reason the majority leader simply threw out a big number and did identify the filibusters he claimed justified rigging the confirmation process. If he had simply listed those filibusters, we all would have seen dozens and dozens of nominations the Senate had confirmed, many without opposition at all.

Since I took my first oath of office on January 3, 1977, the Senate has confirmed more than 1,700 nominations to the U.S. district courts, the U.S. courts of appeal, and the U.S. Supreme Court, and they have defeated two—two—in all of that time the last 37 years. We confirmed 78 percent by unanimous consent without any rollcall vote at all. Two-thirds of the rollcall votes we did take were unanimous. Think about that. Where is the problem?

No President gets every single appointment he or she wants, but every President gets the vast majority.

During his first term, for example, President Obama was 30 percent behind his predecessor in nominations. They were sloppy in putting forth nominations. But he ended up only 10 percent behind in confirmations. That could only mean the Senate handled his judicial nominations efficiently.

During his second term, so far the Senate has confirmed more than twice—twice—as many judicial nominees as it had by this point in President Bush's second term.

The Congressional Research Service says the Senate is confirming President Obama's appeals court nominees faster than the Senate confirmed President Bush's. In fact, President Obama has already appointed one-quarter of the entire Federal judiciary.

I can also comment on how executive branch nominations referred to the Finance Committee have been handled. Nearly 80 percent of the nominations sent to the committee during the 112th Congress have so far been confirmed.

Looking at executive branch filibusters overall, the same Democratic leaders who last month voted to abolish nomination filibusters voted to filibuster President Bush's nominees to be Assistant Secretary of Defense and EPA Administrators and twice voted to filibuster his nominees to be a U.N. Ambassador.

They must have thought very differently back then about whether the President deserves his team. We have heard a lot about that from current Democrats. Their actions then spoke more loudly than their words do today about whether they think all nominees do deserve an up-or-down vote. Look at the past. Look at what they have done. It is hypocritical.

However, the majority will not acknowledge those facts and others like them because those facts do not fit the spin they are putting on this.

It is hard, after all, to claim an obstruction crisis when so many nominees are confirmed and are being confirmed. So the majority instead makes a claim about what they call filibusters because that sounds bad to most people, and most people will not know whether the claim is even true. Calling something a filibuster does not make it so.

A filibuster occurs when the Senate cannot vote on passage of legislation or confirmation of a nomination because an attempt to end debate on it fails. That is why filibuster reform always focuses on making it easier to end debate.

The filibuster rule XXII came about after the turn of the last century because they couldn't get anything done in the Senate and they needed a way of bringing things to cloture so they could vote. We are headed into the same kind of disaster without this important rule.

It takes two steps to detect a filibuster—a cloture motion and a cloture vote. You can't have a filibuster without both. As we can see, a vast majority of what our leader has claimed are filibusters are not because they haven't had a cloture vote.

A cloture motion is a request to end debate and a cloture vote answers that request. A filibuster occurs when a cloture vote fails and debate cannot be ended. That is the definition of a filibuster.

Some people listening to this might already be wondering whether these details matter, whether the difference between a cloture motion and a cloture vote or the definition of a filibuster are all that important after all. I am here today to say these details do matter because the truth matters.

The truth matters when Senators claim there is a crisis that needs a solution when there isn't.

The truth matters when the majority prohibits the very tool they used so successfully in the past against Republican nominees.

The truth matters when the entire confirmation process is going to be rigged and the judiciary further politicized—such as the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals.

I have been on the Judiciary Committee 37 years. I chaired that committee. I was ranking on that committee. I can tell you never in the history of that committee has it been so brazenly ignored.

The truth matters because the American people need to know what their Senators are doing.

The truth was in short supply on November 21. The majority leader claimed 168 filibusters, but he was not counting filibusters at all. The majority leader was counting cloture motions, not filibusters. He had the habit of calling up a bill and almost immediately filing cloture as though there was a filibuster, when nobody intended to filibuster. Then, in prior years, he would fill the parliamentary tree so in the greatest deliberative body in the world we could not have amendments. The minority could not have amendments.

There is a time to fill the tree, but it is only after there has been a full and fair debate and amendments have had their opportunity to be brought forward. They do it to cut off amendments—unless the majority leader approved of whatever the amendments were.

I think it is nice to protect your fellow Senators on the majority side with legitimate ways of doing it, but this isn't one of them. That alone is causing a lot of discontent on our side because the majority leader was counting cloture motions, not filibusters, and claiming they were filibusters when they weren't. He was counting requests to end debate, not the answers to those requests.

Most people probably do not know that the majority leader files nearly all cloture motions—as he did just a few days ago—by adding 10 more to the list. So if the majority leader claims there are too many cloture motions filed on nominations, he has only himself to blame.

Under President Obama, half of the cloture motions filed on nominations do not result in a cloture vote at all. The rest just vanish into thin air, obviously, because they never should have been filed in the first place. Yet that is a scheme used by the other side, and then they claim this side is being obstructionists.

Two-thirds of the cloture votes that do occur on nominations pass. There has been no discussion of that by the other side. Two-thirds of them pass, preventing filibusters altogether.

Here is the filibuster fraud: The majority leader has been using the cloture rule more effectively than in the past—or should I say more obnoxiously than in the past—to prevent filibusters of President Obama's nominations while telling us about unprecedented obstruction. The truth is exactly the opposite of what he has claimed and what other Democrats on the other side of the aisle have claimed.

Perhaps the most astounding fact of all is that nearly 90 percent of Obama nominees to the executive or the judicial branch on whom cloture motions were filed have been confirmed. The majority told us that this was about obstruction, about how the minority was using the filibuster to prevent President Obama from appointing people. It is no wonder that the majority leader did not show the list of the nominations he claims have been filibustered. The claims are a fraud.

The majority created this crisis and damaged this institution by claiming that ending debate is really a filibuster and that confirming nominations is really obstructing them. Up is down, left is right, and confirmations are filibusters.

All of this is more than a little ironic since the Democrats were the ones who pioneered using the filibuster to defeat majority-supported judicial nominees. The first judicial nominee with clear majority support to be defeated by a filibuster was Miguel Estrada in 2003, one of the finest lawyers in the country. They didn't want him on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals because they knew getting on that court is a fast track to the U.S. Supreme Court. In fact, Democrats were so intent on keeping him off the D.C. Circuit that they filibustered Miguel Estrada, this Latino man, seven times—a record that stands to this day. I know. I was there. I was fighting for Miguel Estrada, as were all Republicans.

As of November 21, when the majority said there was an unprecedented filibuster crisis, there had been 12 cloture votes on Obama judicial nominations and 6 of them had failed. In other words, there was no obstruction. At that same point in the Bush administration, there had been 26 cloture votes on judicial nominations, and 20 of them had failed. Democrats used the filibuster to defeat Republican nominees to the Fifth Circuit, the Sixth Circuit, and the Ninth Circuit.

Three-quarters of all votes for judicial nomination filibusters in American history have been cast by Democrats, and they have the gall to stand on this floor and suggest that Republicans are using the filibuster to stop nominees.

The majority leader alone—at least before complaining of too many filibusters—voted no less than 26 times to filibuster Republican judicial nominees. As I said, the same Democratic leaders abolishing nomination filibusters today voted to filibuster President Bush's nominees to be Assistant Secretary of Defense and EPA Administrator and twice voted to filibuster his nominee to be United Nations Ambassador. I do not know what the majority understands the word “unprecedented” to mean, but this certainly is not it. This is why the truth matters.

As of November 21, when the majority leader claimed that there had been 168 nominations filibusters, only 56 cloture votes on executive or judicial nominations had ever failed and only 17 of those filibustered nominees had not been confirmed. The crisis that the majority claimed turns out to be a myth, a tale for the fiction section of the library. This is why the truth matters.

Let's not forget what the majority did on November 21. Rule XXII, the one that provides a way to end debate, is a written rule, a time-honored rule. It says what it says, and it says that ending debate on any matter before the Senate, with the exception of rules changes, requires three-fifths of all Senators. It said that on November 21, and it says that today. The technical term for what the majority leader did that day was to raise a point of order, but in practical terms, the majority leader asked the Presiding Officer to say that three-fifths actually means a majority vote. He might just as well have asked the Presiding Officer to say that Christmas is on December 29 or that the Nation's Capital is in Salt Lake City, UT. The Presiding Officer stated the obvious, that three-fifths means three-fifths, because that is what the rule says. That is what the Presiding Officer, advised by the Parliamentarian of the Senate, said—three fifths means what it says: three-fifths. That is what the rule says.

By a purely party-line vote, the majority said otherwise—that three-fifths is actually a majority—by overruling their own colleague in the Chair. This sounds absurd because it is. Now we are forced to act as if we cannot read, to suspend the most basic ability to understand the English language and set aside our common sense. We are forced to pretend that the rules of this body say what they do not mean and mean what they do not say. This, frankly, reminds me of “The Wizard of Oz,” where Dorothy and her friends were before the image of what they thought was the great and powerful Oz. Her dog Toto pulls on the curtain to reveal a little man frantically operating dials and buttons and speaking into a microphone. The image commands: “Pay no attention to that man behind the curtain.”

On November 21 the majority told each of us to pay no attention to the three-fifths in the cloture rule. That was quite a trick. The real question was why the majority would concoct such a fraud in order to rig the confirmation process. What could be so important that the majority would go through such contortions, peddle such myths, and play such word games? It certainly was not to solve a filibuster crisis, that is for sure. No, it was for a much more base political reason.

The President and the majority here in the Senate deliberately set up this political confrontation in order to implement a political agenda that could not get through Congress. That agenda requires actions and decisions by the two groups of Federal officials who are not directly accountable to the American people: bureaucrats in the executive branch and judges in the judicial branch.

The President appoints those two categories of officials but only with the consent of the Senate. For more than 200 years the process of deciding whether to give that consent included the right of the minority to slow things down and, yes, even block the most controversial nominees.

I have given you the numbers. Only 17 executive or judicial nominees who were filibustered were not eventually confirmed. But the majority wants it all. They want a clear path to stacking the executive branch with officials who will issue the rules and stacking the judicial branch with judges who will approve those rules.

The D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals is a perfect illustration of where much of the regulations are evaluated by the courts, and they want them decided in favor of President Obama. They want the courts to legislate from the bench that which they could never get through the Senate or the House of Representatives. This is a power grab—nothing more, nothing less. It appears that the ends justified the means, that short-term political gains justified long-term institutional damage.

I urge my colleagues, from the freshmen to the senior Members, to take some guidance from our own predecessors. Senator Mike Mansfield, a leading Democrat, majority leader in the Senate, had served in the minority and later became majority leader. In 1975, when Senators also proposed forcing a rules change by simple majority, he said that this tactic would “destroy the very uniqueness of this body . . . and diminish the Senate as an institution of this Government.” It would, he said, “alter the concept of the Senate so drastically that I cannot under any circumstances find any justification for it.” That was the Democratic leader in the Senate, a man of unquestionable integrity.

As I have explained here today, the majority has certainly not provided any justification for doing away with the filibuster rule either. There is no filibuster crisis. I think I have made that case. There is only a desire by the majority to win every time, to have everything they want when and how they want it. Most of the executive and judicial branch nominations the majority claims were filibustered were actually confirmed. Even in this town, known famously for masterful spin, that will surely go down as legendary. The majority abolished nomination filibusters by claiming nominations that were confirmed were actually obstructed—when they were confirmed. This amounts to filibuster fraud. That is why we are here today, because the truth matters. The integrity of the Senate matters.

I can only hope there is time for those two concepts to still prevail. What the Democrats have done here is not only extremely dangerous, it is outrageous. They have taken one of the things that really make the Senate the great body that it is and have desecrated it. They have done it because a number of the Democrats over here have never been in the minority. They do not realize how awful that rule-change is. They do not realize that the filibuster is a rule of freedom that protects the minority and makes the Senate debate on these matters.

I once said I would fight to my death for the filibuster rule because it is what makes the Senate different from the House of Representatives. The House of Representatives is the people's body. They can do anything once they get a rule and get 50 percent plus one of the votes—anything. It was structured that way. The Senate was structured another way. Our young new Senators on the other side don't seem to understand that.

I have chatted with a number of more senior Senators who have been through being in the minority, who have been through some of the battles here. Let me tell you, they are as concerned as I am that this body is totally damaged by this breaking of the rules, destroying the rules for purely partisan purposes. They can talk about how they just want the Senate to work all they want to. The Senate is never going to work as well without this rule. The minority will never be protected as well without this rule.

I have to say that I hope we can get this rule put back in place. Even though it is a disadvantage to Republicans right now because they now have three more liberal judges on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, which was divided four to four, Republicans appointees to Democrat appointees—four to four. Now they stack it, the most important court in the country as far as regulatory affairs are concerned and administrative law is concerned, so they can pass through that court the Obama administration's regulatory measures and desires without having to face real debate.

There was a reason why the Founding Fathers created the three separate governmental powers, because each of those powers is to protect our country. They are making it so that regulatory matters, administrative matters, and so forth there is really only one-sixth who are Republicans.

ORDER FOR CORRECTION

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, there was an incorrect reference to the House bill number in a consent agreement earlier today with respect to the Fallen Firefighters Assistance Tax Clarification Act. I ask unanimous consent that the previous order be modified to reflect the correct House bill number—H.R. 3458.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All postcloture time has expired.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Brian Morris, of Montana, to be United States District Judge for the District of Montana? On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. BLUNT), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK), and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 75, nays 20, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote the yeas are 58, the nays are 39. The motion is agreed to.

NOMINATION OF SUSAN P. WATTERS TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MONTANA

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the nomination.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Susan P. Watters, of Montana, to be United States District Judge for the District of Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Con. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will be now be up to 2 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination equally divided in the usual form.

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if I yield back 1 hour of the majority's time, what time would the next vote occur?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. At 9:15 p.m.

Mr. REID. I yield back 1 hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time is yielded back.

The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, we are now on Calendar No. 349, Susan P. Watters of Montana to be U.S. district judge for the District of Montana. I note on the Executive Calendar this nomination came before the Senate from the committee on September 19. It is my understanding that this nominee was cleared by our side of the aisle and could have been brought up on any Monday afternoon by a voice vote.

I think Members might be wondering and certainly people within the sound of my voice tonight might be wondering why we are spending time to-night in a protracted debate on three district court nominees—Landya B. McCafferty of New Hampshire, Brian Morris or Montana, and now Susan Watters of Montana to be confirmed—when there has never been a district court judge in the history of our Republic prevented from serving because of a filibuster.

To me, we have gotten to this point because of the heavyhanded overreach of the majority in trampling on the rights of folks on our side of the aisle. We find ourselves—temporarily, I hope—in the minority. That has a way of changing from time to time. But it is the sort of overreach that I am reminded of from 2009 when a supermajority in both Houses rammed through ObamaCare and caused all of the grief that we currently are facing and that real, live Americans are having with the so-called Affordable Care Act.

It actually might be in one way beneficial that we are spending this time on something that could have been done so quickly because it gives us an opportunity to point out that we should be right now, at this moment, working on the National Defense Authorization Act and also on the budget—two matters that are pending that must be addressed by this Senate before we can go home and take a day or two with our constituents and loved ones for the Christmas holiday. But it gives me an opportunity, as the budget comes over tonight from the House of Representatives, to point out one of the most onerous provisions in the budget, which has just passed with sweeping bipartisan support in the House of Representatives.

I will stand before this body tonight and say that I cannot vote and will not vote for this budget, and I hope that even yet Members of the Congress and the American public will listen to the broken promise that is contained in this budget that will be coming forward. We will perhaps get back to the nomination in a moment.

We should note two things about this budget. It asks for an additional contribution for pensions for Federal employees, but it does not do it to current Federal employees. As you enter the Federal service after the beginning of the year, you pay an additional amount that is withheld from your paycheck for your pension. That is hard to do, it is distasteful to do, but at least it is fair to the people who join the Federal service under one set of rules.

On the other hand, the budget that comes over to us from the House of Representatives and that I will oppose when it eventually does come up for a vote hopefully next week does to retired servicemen what we were persuaded not to do to Federal employees: It breaks a promise to retired service people who have already served their time. This is what it does. It says to every retired servicemember under the age of 62: You are not going to get your COLA anymore. Each year until you get to be 62, you are going to get your COLA, less 1 percent. I can tell you that this is not a matter of nickels and dimes to the people who have stepped forward, joined the military, volunteered for a career in the military, done their 20, and now are going to be told, if this budget passes next week: We are sorry. We are changing the rules way after the game has begun.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter to me from VADM Norb Ryan, U.S. Navy, Retired, president of the Military Officers Association of America.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEAR SENATOR WICKER: On behalf of the over 380,000 members of the Military Officers Association of America (MOAA), I am writing to express our strong opposition to the proposal within the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2013 which penalizes future uniformed service retirees and current retirees under the age of 62.

Even though the budget deal would help ease the harmful effects of sequestration for two years for the Department of Defense—something we support—doing so on the backs of service members who serve our Nation for over 20 years is just shameful.

Reducing working age retiree annual cost-of-living adjustment by one percent until they reach the age of 62 is simply a tax.

Service members who retire at the 20 year point would feel the full negative financial effects of the proposal by reducing their retired pay by nearly 20 percent by the time they reach age 62.

For example, an Army Sergeant First Class (E-7) retiring this year with 20 years of service would see an average loss of over $3,700 per year by the time he or she reaches age 62—a cumulative loss of nearly $83,000. For a Lieutenant Colonel (O-5), the average annual loss would be over $6,200—a cumulative loss of over $124,000.

This proposal also flies in the face of the principles that guide the ongoing congressionally-mandated review of military compensation and retirement.

Congress wisely removed the BRAC-like, “fast-track” rule so that the appropriate committees would have adequate time to assess impacts that any recommended changes to the retirement system would have on retention and readiness.

In addition, the guiding principles to the Military Compensation and Retirement Modernization Commission (MCRMC) include a grandfather clause to protect current retirees and service members from any changes to their retirement which this proposal blatantly disregards.

Currently serving members look at how they, their families, retirees, and survivors have been treated when making career choices. If Congress arbitrarily cuts the retirement benefit for those who have served their country for over 20 years, there could be an unintended impact on uniformed service career retention, and ultimately, national security.

Sincerely,

VADM NORB RYAN, USN (Ret),

President,

Military Officers Association of America.

Mr. WICKER. Let me point out what the retired vice admiral says.

On behalf of the 380,000 members of the Military Officers Association of America, I am writing to express our strong opposition to the proposal within the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2013 which penalizes future uniformed service retirees and current retirees under the age of 62. Even though the budget deal would help ease the harmful effects of sequestration for 2 years for the Department of Defense, something we support, doing so on the backs of servicemembers who served our Nation for over 20 years is just shameful.

I would interject at this point that I have to agree with that statement.

The vice admiral goes on to say:

Reducing working age retiree annual cost of living adjustment by 1 percent until they reach the age of 62 is simply a tax. Servicemembers who retire at the 20-year point would feel the full negative final effect of the proposal by reducing their retired pay by nearly 20 percent by the time they reach the age of 62.

This is the pertinent part of the letter I am having printed in the RECORD, and my colleagues should hear me on this:

For example, an Army sergeant first class, E-7 retiring this year with 20 years of service would see an average loss of over $3,700 per year by the time he or she reaches age 62, a cumulative loss of nearly $83,000.

That is what this bipartisan budget resolution does to the retired military enlisted people who have volunteered to serve our country for 20 years and who joined under one set of rules—$83,000 lifetime taken from this retired E-7.

For a lieutenant colonel, O-5, the average annual loss would be over $6,200 annually, a cumulative loss of over $124,000.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Would the Senator yield?

Mr. WICKER. I will yield on this, absolutely, to my friend.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. I know the Senator from Mississippi was on Active Duty in the Air Force for several years and has stayed in contact with many members of the military not just as a result of his service on the Armed Services Committee but because he is very keenly interested in the welfare of the men and women in our military.

If I am hearing the Senator from Mississippi correctly on this particular issue, what he is saying is that an E-7 who served in Iraq, served in Afghanistan, conceivably served multiple tours in Iraq and Afghanistan, maybe even was awarded major meritorious recognition, is now going to have the promise that was made to him about his retirement reduced retroactively. Do I understand that correctly?

Mr. WICKER. The rules, if this budget passes and is signed into law by President Obama, will be changed on this individual retroactively. The result will be that, instead of the retirement pay he signed up for and agreed to under the law when he did his duty, he will experience an $83,000 loss, lifetime.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, again if I may inquire of the Senator, you, as I say, have been very close to any number of military personnel through the years you have served in this body as well as your service in the Mississippi Legislature. Just by virtue of the fact of practicing law in Tupelo, MS, what is the opinion of the Senator from Mississippi as to the morale influence a provision such as this is going to have on our men and women in the military, not just those who are retired but Active-Duty military today?

Mr. WICKER. I can only imagine that it is a severe blow to morale. Also, it has to make people who are willing to step forward and risk their lives, be separated for months and years from their loved ones, it has to make them wonder, what else is being promised to me that is going to be taken away?

Mr. CHAMBLISS. The Senator also mentioned the reduction in Federal retirement pay—and we have to figure out ways to save money. We all know and understand that. There is a change in the pension for Federal retirees, but it is all prospective going forward.

Mr. WICKER. Right. We do not do anything to any other Federal employee retroactively, only the military in this budget. I cannot imagine how the public could think that is fair.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. I am very sympathetic, even though I never served on Active-Duty in the military as you did. But this is very strange. It is very difficult to understand why we would penalize the men and women who have worn or do wear the uniform of the United States versus a very similar provision for the men and women who serve the Government of the United States in a very honorable way, but we are treating them very differently, it seems like almost discriminatorily.

Mr. WICKER. I will tell you who else believes it is discriminatory. I have a list of members of the military coalitions listed in a letter to the Honorable HARRY REID and the Honorable MITCH MCCONNELL dated December 11, 2013. I ask unanimous consent to have this letter printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE MILITARY COALITION

Alexandria, VA, December 11, 2013.

Hon. HARRY REID,
Majority Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Hon. MITCH MCCONNELL,
Minority Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MAJORITY AND MINORITY LEADERS:
The Military Coalition (TMC), a consortium of uniformed services and veterans associations representing more than 5.5 million current and former servicemembers and their families and survivors, appreciates the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2013 which helps to ease the harmful effects of sequestration on the defense budget; however, we wish to express our grave concern and strong objection to the proposal within the Act that specifically seeks to penalize current and future military members who have served our nation for over twenty years.

The 1 percent annual reduction to uniformed service retired pay Cost of Living Adjustment (COLA) will have a devastating financial impact for those who retire at the 20 year point by reducing retired pay by nearly 20 percent at age 62.

While portrayed as a minor change, a 20 percent reduction in retired pay and survivor benefit values is a massive cut in military career benefits and an egregious breach of faith.

The Coalition believes that service in uniform is unlike any other occupation. Roughly one percent of the nation's population is currently serving and shouldering 100 percent of the responsibility for our wartime and national security requirements. The benefits connected with this service have been earned through 20 or more years of arduous military service.

Ending the harmful effects of sequestration is a top priority for our nation's security and military readiness, but to tax the very men and women who have sacrificed and served more than others is simply a foul.

Congress mandated the Military Compensation and Retirement Modernization Commission (MCRMC) in the FY 2013 National Defense Authorization Act and wisely removed the "BRAClike", fast-tracking rule so that the appropriate committees would have adequate time to assess any recommendations that could significantly impact retention and readiness. Moreover, any changes that the MCRMC recommends will grandfather the existing force and retirees to keep promises that have been made by our nation's leadership.

This radical proposal basically kills the grandfather-concern addressed by both Congress and the Administration and actually eliminates the appropriate review process failing to consider longterm readiness and retention outcomes in order to meet an arbitrary deadline so that Congress can go home for the holidays.

The Secretary of Defense succinctly warned on July 31, "It is the responsibility of our nation's leadership to work together to replace the mindless and irresponsible policy of sequestration. It is unworthy of the service and sacrifice of our nation's men and women in uniform and their families."

The Military Coalition shares the Secretary's concerns.

Currently serving members look at how they, their families, retirees, and survivors are being treated when making career decisions. If Congress arbitrarily cuts the retirement benefit for those who have served their country for over 20 years, there could be a lasting adverse impact on uniformed service career retention, and ultimately, national security.

Sincerely,

THE MILITARY COALITION.

Mr. WICKER. I simply say, in answer to the distinguished Senator from Georgia, here are the groups who are expressing outrage, dismay, and strong opposition to this provision:

The Air Force Sergeants Association; Air Force Women Officers Associated;

AMVETS; AMSUS; Association of the United States Navy; Chief Warrant Officer and Warrant Officer Association, U.S. Coast Guard; Commissioned Officers Association of the U.S. Public Health Service, Inc.; Enlisted Association of the National Guard of the United States; Fleet Reserve Association; Gold Star Wives; Iraq & Afghanistan Veterans of America; Jewish War Veterans of the United States of America; Marine Corps League; Marine Corps Reserve Association; Military Officers Association of America; Military Order of the Purple Heart; National Association for Uniformed Services; National Guard Association of the United States; National Military Family Association; Naval Enlisted Reserve Association; Society of Medical Consultants to the Armed Forces; the Military Chaplains Association of the United States of America; the Retired Enlisted Association; United States Army Warrant Officers Association; United States Coast Guard Chief Petty Officers Association; Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States; and Vietnam Veterans of America.

This distinguished list of organizations consisting of members and former members of the U.S. military have registered their opposition.

I can only hope at this point that Members of the Senate will listen. This is a so-called savings of $6 billion out of an $80 billion package.

Surely we could find $6 billion without putting an $80,000 penalty on the back of an E-7 retired enlisted person who is not rich, who served honorably under one set of rules and who has been now told sorry.

I have to say when people see the government not keeping its promises, I think it is destructive to our system of government. It is exactly the sort of thing we are seeing with ObamaCare. It is not being overly repetitive to remind my colleagues that the President of the United States, Barack Obama, repeatedly, over and over, promised the American people that they could keep their insurance.

For example, in a speech at the American Medical Association on June 15, 2009, President Obama stated:

That means that no matter how we reform health care, we will keep this promise to the American people: If you like your doctor, you will be able to keep your doctor, period. If you like your health care plan, you'll be able to keep your health care plan, period. No one will take it away, no matter what.

These are the words of the leader of the free world. Of course, we know from story after story of real people who are being hurt by this law that time after time after time again, in thousands of homes across the United States of America, that promise, just as the promise made to the servicemen, is being broken.

If the Senator from Georgia will indulge me, let me give one example of a family of real individuals, honest, hardworking Americans who feel that another promise is being broken in the form of the so-called affordable health care.

I received an email from a father in Greenville, MS, who is concerned about his 27-year-old son. For the past 6 years his son was covered under a policy provided by Humana. When the healthy 20-year-old first received coverage, the policy protected against a major medical emergency and the cost was only $70 a month.

The President told the American public: "If you like your health care plan, you'll be able to keep your health care plan."

According to this father in Greenville, MS, this policy is no longer available, and the plan available for his son will now cost just under $350 per month as opposed to $70 a month—a broken promise. The healthy 27-year-old who works in the automotive industry has been working since he was 20. He now questions whether he can afford to insure himself at all because his cost has quadrupled. His discretionary income will now taken a huge hit—as the discretionary income of these retired heroes will take a huge hit—and the higher premiums will cause uncertainty in his family.

I know my friend from Georgia may want to give some examples of some people in his home State. Once again, in this instance, a promise has been made, a very explicit promise. In a very blatant way that promise turned out not to be the case at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. I thank the Senator from Mississippi for giving me an opportunity to speak for a minute. I wish to get to some anecdotes, but first it has been nearly 4 years since the Democrats in the Senate and the House forced the passage of the President's signature law, the Affordable Care Act or what is commonly known as ObamaCare.

It is a title the President has embraced during the promising times and distanced himself from during the very difficult times we are going through now. It has been kind of an interesting dynamic to watch.

Instead of working in a bipartisan fashion to enact a health care law that would bring more competition into the private insurance market through market-based solutions, President Obama and the Democrats structured a deal behind closed doors across this hall that we are looking at on the west side of the Capitol. They structured that deal without any Republican input, giving the Federal Government more control over Americans' health care decisions.

The Senator from Mississippi and I were here on the floor, and we both fought tooth and nail to stop the passage of ObamaCare.

On Christmas Eve, 2009, we came to the floor of the Senate and voted against what I think is the worst piece of legislation that has passed in the Congress in the 19 years the Senator and I have been in Congress. I have been saying for years that ObamaCare caused more problems than it solved, and with the passage of every single day, that is being shown as the painful truth.

Although the White House has stood behind this terrible piece of legislation, some of my colleagues across the aisle have brought into question now the ability of it to stand on its own two feet.

Who can blame them. This has become a major political issue, not only expensive, but it is a political issue. The law continues to be marked by red flags. We have heard a few of the Democrats go as far to say even that it is a train wreck, and they are exactly right.

We have heard from the American people as well. They are rightfully upset that they have been repeatedly lied to and misled about this law by the President of the United States. The American people don't deserve a law filled with broken promises marked by disaster after disaster. The law is fundamentally broken and Americans deserve better.

I noticed yesterday, in a hearing, the Secretary of HHS reported that nearly 365,000 individuals have selected plans from the State and Federal marketplaces, a number that is far below the administration's goal. I think their goal—and the Senator may correct me—is 7 million by the end of March.

I notice also that the State of Oregon has spent $300 million setting up their exchange. As of this morning there were 40 people, 40 citizens of Oregon had signed up. The fact is that this law is not working. It is becoming more and more expensive every day. As we talked about in 2009, when we were debating this bill, it is going to be the largest mandatory expenditure that the U.S. taxpayer has ever seen.

The Senator is correct. I have a whole book of anecdotes and I wish to mention some.

First, Linda of Douglasville wrote to me about her dropped coverage. She said:

We lost our Gold plan. All of our costs will go up next year considerably. It is harder and harder for us to really retire!

My husband, who is 71, still has to work part time to pay for our rising costs.

Linda, from Hampton, GA, also writes:

In 1997 I retired from Motorola, Inc. after having a career there for almost 30 years. One of my benefits was a retiree secondary insurance plan, after Medicare, that provided coverage for medical and prescriptions; my monthly premium for that coverage was $127.

Effective January 1, 2013 Motorola withdrew their insurance coverage for retirees.

Under ObamaCare they simply could not afford it. I could go on and on. I know the Senator from Mississippi has some other anecdotes that he would like to mention, and I will engage on some others on my side shortly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WICKER. I thank my colleague from Georgia. Let me mention a husband and wife in Hernando, MS. They are small businesspeople. As the Chair is aware, that is how we create jobs in the United States of America. We love it when a big manufacturing plant moves in, but it is the small businesses throughout this great land that create the bulk of the jobs, and we appreciate it.

ObamaCare has hit the small businesses so hard and hurt their ability to create jobs.

This particular small business couple in Hernando, MS, tell me their private insurance plan that they have offered their employees in the past will not be grandfathered and the new plan they are forced to offer their employees will have a 7-percent premium increase in 2014—that is real money—and a 66-percent premium increase in 2015, according to their insurance agent.

Perhaps they believed the President when he said: "If you like your health care plan, you'll be able to keep your health care plan, period."

Perhaps they believed Members of the majority party, such as the distinguished majority leader from Nevada who said it not only means making sure you can keep your family's doctor or keep your health care plan if you like it but also that you can afford to do it.

Perhaps they believed that, but instead a 7-percent premium increase is hardly affordable at that and then a 66-percent premium increase, which is a blow. Their small group plan they offered to their eight employees currently costs $491 per month per employee. By 2015 the plan will cost this small business couple over $800 per month per employee.

These are real stories. These are real facts. It is going from $491 per month per employee to $800 per month per employee. I wonder how many jobs they will be adding to that small business. This plan doesn't include dental or vision.

They pride themselves, this small business couple, on providing their employees quality, affordable health care that they help supplement. But with the frequent changes the President is making to the law, they are uncertain whether they will be able to cover the enormous cost.

As small business owners, it is impossible for them to expand. They will not be able to hire additional employees with the uncertainty of the future.

Let me mention one other example and then perhaps Senator CHAMBLISS can have a moment to speak on some Georgians.

The next example is a family of four living in Corinth, MS, in the northeast corner of our State. They are full-time employed parents who currently do not have health care. They spent a month and a half trying to sign up for coverage for themselves and their two children. The least expensive plan they could eventually find after spending countless hours trying to navigate the Web site will cost them just under $800. For a working family in Mississippi with two young children to care for, this cost is an almost impossible burden on this family of four.

It may be that the Senator from Georgia has examples similar to these.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. The American people want affordable health insurance. The title of the law even centers on the word "affordable." I am not sure how anybody could possibly argue that ObamaCare is affordable when the letters I am receiving from constituents over and over every single day, time and again, reference a significant increase in their total health care costs. Virtually 100 percent of the letters we are getting indicate that not only are the monthly premiums going up, but the deductible is going up, their copays are going up, and it is simply going to be more out-of-pocket expense than either actively working individuals or retired individuals ever thought they would have to pay for health care.

Terra from Columbus writes to explain what is happening to her children.

I carry medical insurance for my two adult children because they cannot afford it on their own.

Let us remember, ObamaCare covers children up to 26 years of age.

Being one that has always had medical insurance and knowing the value of it if something bad happens, I have also made sure that they both had some type of coverage when they became adults. The sad part is I have gotten a letter on both and now their insurance will be canceled because I as their parent can no longer afford to pay it for them either. We received a letter which shows where their old policy covers everything and I mean everything, but because of ObamaCare's requirements to carry everything, a new policy will cost us twice as much each month. With me being unemployed and my husband the only one working we have no choice but to drop their coverage.

Wynell, from Roswell, GA, wrote:

My private coverage was superb. But now, my insurance premiums are going from $319 a month to $769 a month and not only that, my copay is increasing from $5 to $20 for my primary care visits and $5 to $50 for specialist visits. I will be responsible for $500 per day out-of-pocket cost if I am hospitalized (before my hospital costs were included) and I will also have to pay for any tests (before all my tests were included). And apparently, subsidies do not apply to me.

Loretta, from Canton, GA, writes:

I received a letter from my insurance company dated September 25, 2013. I had until November 15 to choose to remain with my current coverage until December 2014. My rate increased by 16 percent. According to the letter, the Affordable Care Act premium will increase by 139 percent. My former plan did not include maternity. I'm 60 years old. I don't need maternity. My new plan will include maternity. My old plan was great for preventive care. I paid nothing for immunizations including tetanus and flu shots. I paid a $30 copay for a doctor visit. My prescriptions have been very reasonable. The new plan requires a network of doctors and hospitals. The premiums were between 150 percent and 200 percent above what I'm paying now. I did not enroll but have received numerous e-mails reminding me to enroll. So far, I'm hoping I can keep my premium at the 16 percent increase for 2014. Otherwise, I will not have health insurance. I can't afford the new premium.

Kevin, from Roswell, GA, wrote:

We are a family of four. We have and want a catastrophic-only high deductible health plan with low monthly premiums and full coverage once we hit our deductible. We like our plan.

This is very typical of a lot of families who were promised by the President, if you like your plan, you can keep it.

We were paying $500 a month until July of this year. I had bladder cancer in November of 2012 which was successfully removed and I require no follow up treatment, just biannual checkups, so I expected an increase in my premium this year. In fact, our premium did go up to $560 a month in July. On November 1, I got the letter telling us our premium was now going to $902 a month, a 60 percent increase. After three separate calls, I got the information that the $902 a month change was "Option B," which is an ObamaCare-compliant plan which covers abortion, birth control and maternity care. Since we could not have children, we adopted two kids, so that coverage is 100 percent completely unnecessary for us. "Option A" we came to find out a few weeks later, was the option to keep our plan with an increase to $617 a month. This plan will be canceled on December 31, 2014, at which point we will be forced to get an ObamaCare-compliant plan costing much more and covering things we will never, ever need.

Now, I am sure the Senator from Mississippi has received dozens and dozens of these letters, just as we have in my office. Knowing the State of Mississippi has a lot of rural areas, as my State does—in fact, I live in a rural area—there is a huge discrepancy created by ObamaCare between insurance premiums in rural America versus insurance premiums in more urban areas. Many of these premiums and deductibles are so high that it defeats the purpose of having health insurance.

This really does hit close to home for me because I truly live in a rural part of our State. In two of the regions in Southwest Georgia designated by ObamaCare, there is only one insurer—one insurance company—that is offering coverage, and the premiums in that corner of our State are much higher than in the rest of our State. It is the poorest part of our State.

In region one, which includes Albany, GA, the least expensive silver plan for a 21-year-old healthy Georgian is $360 a month. That is the highest rate in the State. In region 15, which is also in that part of our State, the same plan is $330 a month.

You have to remember these are people who are paying zero today because they aren't covered. They are either going to have to pay a fine or they are going to have to take that coverage.

In metro Atlanta the cheapest silver plan for a 21-year-old is $179.20 a month, matching the rate in regions in northeast as well as northwest Georgia, which are more populated. That is half the rate of an individual in southwest Georgia where the average median income is the lowest of any part of our state.

So needless to say, households in rural southwest Georgia often do not have the same income as those in the northwest and northeast part of the State, yet they are being stuck with the highest premiums.

I could go on and on about these anecdotes and about the serious economic consequences ObamaCare is going to cause for individuals in my State, but I want to turn it back over to the Senator from Mississippi for some additional comments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, indeed, this does hit rural America much harder, but it hits all Americans hard.

I would ask unanimous consent if the Senator from Georgia and I may speak as if in a colloquy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WICKER. I didn't hear any debate during 2009, in the extensive hours I stood on the floor and listened to the other side propose this, explaining that in situations as in Georgia, folks in the metropolitan area would pay half the premium that folks down in rural southwest Georgia would pay. That was never something the majority party, in proposing this so-called affordable act, said: Now, we are going to have to live with this, we just want you to know that.

This is a total surprise, and one of the myriad unintended consequences of this unfortunate law. Did my colleague hear any warning about that to the American people?

Mr. CHAMBLISS. The Senator is exactly right. Obviously, we both spent an awful lot of time on the floor of the Senate debating this. As we talked about, we were here voting on Christmas Eve of 2009 against this bill when it passed with 60 Democratic votes. No Republican in the Senate voted for the bill. No Republican in the House of Representatives voted for the bill. It passed with all Democratic votes.

If the Senator will recall that famous quote by the then-Speaker of the House, Speaker NANCY PELOSI, she said: What we have to do is pass this bill and then we will figure out what is in it.

Well, guess what. What we are talking about here is just one of the myriad of consequences the American people are now finding out is in that bill, and they have every right in the world to chastise everybody who voted for that bill who didn't read it, because these are the real out-of-pocket consequences to hard-working, taxpaying Americans that were never talked about on the floor of this Senate or the floor of the House.

Mr. WICKER. My friend and colleague has very effectively gone chapter and verse into what this law is doing to families in Georgia, to small businesses in Georgia, to potential job creators in Georgia and all across the United States of America. But it is not just families and small businesses, it is also local governments.

The Senator from Georgia and I came here after the 1994 elections on a promise, among other things, that we would fight against unfunded mandates on local governments. What we are finding out about ObamaCare is that it is absolutely an unfunded mandate on, for example, small towns and small counties that make up the bulk of the population in my State of Mississippi.

Let me just give a couple of examples of what it is doing to municipal governments. A city employee in Batesville, MS, tells me he recently attended a meeting of city workers and their health care provider. They were told their premiums will rise over 9 percent because of the President's health care law. This will be an increased cost of $55,000 to $60,000 that the city will have to cover to provide health care coverage for their employees.

Presumably, they do not have a printing press in the back of city hall, so they are going to have to put an extra tax on the people of Batesville, MS, to cover the additional unfunded mandate the Affordable Care Act puts on the city of Batesville.

I could also mention, and will also mention, at the other end of the State on the gulf coast the city of Ocean Springs, MS, reported it will see a premium increase for their little budget of $47,000 to provide health care under the new improved ObamaCare. This is a 13 percent increase because of the President's health care law. The city currently covers 100 percent of the employee premiums. The mayor of Ocean Springs, who I know happens to be a Democrat, said:

We're going to have to find $47,000 from somewhere.

Presumably, it will come from the taxpayers of Ocean Springs, MS, and other small towns and rural counties around the State of Mississippi.

We are all human. I have made many mistakes during my life, and some of the mistakes I have made have been in my capacity as a legislator. I served in the State senate for 7 years. I have been in the U.S. House and Senate for some 19, along with my good friend from Georgia. I would hope that when I have seen mistakes that I have made legislatively I have been willing to go back and revisit those decisions and say: We are all human. We didn't get it right this time, and we ought to fix it.

That is one of the real disturbing things to me about this ObamaCare law. We see that the rollout was disastrous. We see that the effect on towns, counties, families and businesses is disastrous, and at the end of the day we are still going to have over 30 million Americans uninsured—the same amount we were targeting for coverage, supposedly, with the passage of ObamaCare. I would hope colleagues from both parties at this point would see where this has led us and agree there is a reason Congress meets every year. We can alleviate the problems that have arisen. We can correct the mistakes that have been made.

I appreciate people such as our colleague from Montana, Senator MAX BAUCUS, who at least said the law's implementation, he thought, was going to be a huge train wreck, noting that small businesses have no idea what to do, what to expect. I appreciate that sort of candor from one of the architects of the act.

It would seem to me, that being the case, it is incumbent on people who feel that way to say that we need to revisit this. We need to pull this law out root and branch and replace it with something that cuts the cost of insurance, that slows the growth rate of health care expenditures and uses market forces and competition, which we use in every aspect of our society except for health insurance.

I appreciate our colleague from West Virginia, Senator JAY ROCKEFELLER. He is retiring at the end of this Congress, but he said the health care law was beyond comprehension.

I think we would get over 60 percent of Americans agreeing with that. The law is beyond comprehension and the most complex piece of legislation ever passed by the Congress.

I appreciate that sort of candor as compared to the position that, as far as I can tell, is still held by the majority leader, the Senator who controls the flow of legislation on the floor of the Senate and who would have to be involved in bringing a corrected bill to the floor.

Our majority leader said this earlier this year: "This legislation is working, and it will be working better once we get the Web site up." Boy, how nonprophetic that was.

And I love this quote: "ObamaCare is wonderful for America," said the majority leader of the U.S. Senate, HARRY REID of Nevada. "ObamaCare is wonderful for America. Get over it."

I would hope I would be willing, if I had made such an egregious mistake, to say we need to come back and revisit this issue—for the benefit of American families, for the benefit of small businesses that want to create jobs, for the benefit of small cities that having to increase their taxes and do without other services to cover this unfunded mandate.

So I publicly implore my colleagues at this moment to agree that this didn't work. I never thought it would work, but some people did. But it hasn't worked. I guess it is the reason we have elections every 2 years. But I would hope that, even before the 2014 elections, Republicans and Democrats could come together and say: We got this wrong. We need to fix it, and we need to do it for the right reasons. We need to do it for the future of this country and for American families.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. The Senator from Mississippi mentioned the way this came about and the comments of the majority leader that I can't believe he really believes. It is hard for me to believe he thinks this is working. He is not a fool.

I also listened to the debate, as we talked about earlier, on the floor leading up to the vote on Christmas Eve 2009. I listened to the debate last night and today by some of our colleagues. I thought our colleague from Nebraska, Senator JOHANNIS, made a very profound statement.

We are fortunate to serve, in my opinion, in the greatest legislative body in the world. The Senator and I spent a number of years in the House, and that is a great institution also. They are both unusual from a constitutional legislative standpoint. But in the Senate there are certain rights of the minority that you don't have in the House.

The American people know and understand what has happened here; that is, 2 weeks ago the Democrats in the Senate broke the rules of the Senate to change the rules of the Senate, and they did so in a very arbitrary and almost mean-spirited way that basically ignored the arguments of the minority. The minority in the Senate has always had rights—up until this rule change a couple weeks ago.

The Senator from Nebraska said today that when we were debating on this floor during the late fall leading up to the vote in December 2009, that because the Democrats had 60 votes, they looked to the minority on our side of the aisle and they said: We don't care what you say. His direct quote was, "Sit down and shut up." And the Senator felt a very eerie feeling taking place 2 weeks ago during the debate on this floor, where the Democrats broke the rule to change the rule, and they looked on this side of the aisle and said: We don't care what the Parliamentarian says. We don't care what the rules of the Senate have been for decades and decades. We are going to change those rules, and you all can sit down and shut up.

I thought what Senator JOHANNIS said was pretty significant, and he was right on track.

I will mention one other major concern I have with this bill that I am sure my friend from Mississippi has also heard, and that has to do with the safety of personal information relative to this new health care system. ObamaCare opens the door to fraud and identity theft like we have never seen in a public program. When individuals visit the exchange and apply for health insurance coverage, they have to provide sensitive personal data, such as Social Security numbers and income and tax return information. This information is then stored in a Federal data service hub. The proper security safeguards for that Federal data hub and other components of the Web site have not been put in place. Despite repeated warnings about this, the administration insisted on moving forward.

If the rollout of healthcare.gov is an indication of what is to follow, then I agree with Americans who have serious reservations about the security of their personal information when applying for health insurance coverage through the exchanges.

The Presiding Officer and I sit on the Intelligence Committee together, and we hear during our daily briefings about cyber attacks taking place against the U.S. Federal Government, against private entities in the United States, as well as against individuals inside the United States.

I can only imagine, with all the problems we have seen with getting up and simply having this Web site of healthcare.gov running, that some 15-year-old sitting in his garage somewhere in America—or maybe Beijing or Teheran—looking to have some fun could hack into the computer system and retrieve all the personal information of any individual they wanted to, including their Social Security number.

Mr. WICKER. Or more than have fun; engage in real mischief and real harm to American citizens.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. The Senator is exactly right. And we obviously know what that would lead to. Those hackers attacking America today are getting proprietary information as well as financial remuneration, unfortunately, in too many instances. And to open your personal information book to the Federal Government is something that rightfully, in my mind, has the American people upset, and it is a provision in this health care plan that certainly is not popular. As NANCY PELOSI said, let's pass it, and then we will read it and figure it out. But here we go again. It is another provision in there nobody knew anything about. We had no debate, as the Senator from Mississippi referred to earlier about another issue of the floor of the Senate, regarding having to provide personal information.

Mr. WICKER. If I can underscore that, there is no question that because of the Snowden matter and because of other breaches of confidentiality and security, Americans are more and more concerned about this issue.

I note that our colleague from Maryland, Senator MIKULSKI, said about ObamaCare that it is causing fear, doubt, and a crisis of confidence. And I have to feel that some of the lack of confidence the American people have is the very real concern about security.

It is no wonder that a Pew survey released this week shows that 54 percent of Americans disapprove of the health care law and only 41 percent are in favor of it. Yet my friend mentioned the former Speaker, the current minority leader in the House of Representatives, who just this year said: The implementation of this law is fabulous. Fabulous. She compared it to the Declaration of Independence guarantee of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. According to the former Speaker, this is what this is all about.

I think Americans and more Members of this body are concluding that this law isn't fabulous, contrary to what the former Speaker said; that ObamaCare is not wonderful for America, contrary to what the current majority leader of the Senate said. I hope that we could even yet revisit this.

I think we only have about 5 minutes to go. If I may comment for one brief moment about the breaking of the rules to change the rules that occurred.

One would have thought that hardly any nominations were getting through. To hear our friends on the other side of the aisle justify the reason for changing years and years of precedent and for going back on an agreement we made midyear, an agreement we made back in January, and a Gang of 14 agreement made by some of the most distinguished people ever to have served in the Senate—as a matter of fact, the facts are these: Hundreds of executive nominations on this Executive Calendar have been approved with the slightest blip by this Senate, Republicans and Democrats. Only four nominees were felt to involve such extraordinary circumstances that we were determined to prevent those individuals from taking office for very good reasons, we thought, by the use of the 60-vote rule—only four out of hundreds this year. Yet that was given as an excuse to the American people to break the rules to change the rules.

It was a sad day. It is the kind of overreach we are seeing this week, which gets us back to the matter at hand and is the kind of very unfortunate overreach that has visited so much pain and hardship on the American people in regard to their health care and their health insurance coverage.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. I will close my comments with two additional anecdotes that really strike at what Middle America is all about and what suffering and economic pain Middle America is going through right now as a result of ObamaCare.

Michael from Dunwoody, GA, wrote in and said:

I had a really great policy for $277 a month. The premiums were paid by my Flexplan from my employer and the excess my employer paid to my flex each month kept my balance increasing. I now have about $35,000 accrued.

My provider cancelled that plan and my Flex now offers a lesser plan. The premiums went to $550 a month. I actually joined AMAC and used their service to find a plan from a different provider. I must now pay the premiums out of my own pocket as President Obama won't allow me to use my own money from my flex plan to pay these premiums.

HOW IS THIS LEGAL?

I thought it was my money; apparently it's only my money if I buy what Obamacare says I can buy. I had to choose a plan with a $5,000 deductible to make my premiums affordable.

Lastly, Mary from Powder Springs writes:

I am an educator with the Cobb County School System. As a reactionary measure to Obamacare, the State Board of Community Health gave state employees only one company option for our health insurance this year.

My premiums were going to be $1,800 per year higher, my deductible was going to be $2,000 higher, and the percentage of what was covered went down. We decided to go with my husband's company plan, but wonder what will happen to that coverage next year when the employer mandate goes into effect.

Michael and Mary are two average, ordinary Americans we ought to care about in this body. Yet we are throwing them under the bus with ObamaCare.

So as we move forward over the next year, I am in hopes we can continue to engage on this because these problems are going to get more frequent and they are going to get more disastrous from a financial and a lack of coverage standpoint. There is going to be an opportunity for this body to come together to look at really changing the ObamaCare plan that passed in 2009. Let's come together on a plan that is meaningful, that truly does provide affordable and meaningful health care coverage for all Americans.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KING). All time has expired.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Susan P. Watters, of Montana, to be United States District Judge for the District of Montana?

Mr. CHAMBLISS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ) is necessarily absent.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 77, nays 19, as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on the nomination of Deborah Lee James, of Virginia, to be Secretary of the Air Force.

QUORUM CALL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair now directs the clerk to call the roll to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll and the following Senators entered the Chamber and answered to their names:

--------	--------	------

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote the yeas are 58, the nays are 39. The motion is agreed to.

NOMINATION OF DEBORAH LEE JAMES TO BE SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the nomination.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Deborah Lee James, of Virginia, to be Secretary of the Air Force.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will now be up to 8 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination equally divided in the usual form.

If no one yields time, time will be equally charged.

The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

RULES OF THE SENATE

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, we are definitely proceeding in an unusual manner at this point in time in the history of the U.S. Senate. We are moving under regular order. Nominations are being processed in regular order. Votes are being held. Debate is being shut off by the appropriate procedures. But it is unusual from what we have been doing all year and what we have been doing historically. So I guess the question is, how did we get to this point? What has happened in the Senate that has caused the difficulties we now have?

I believe it is becoming clear to our colleagues that actions that have been taking place in recent days have altered the very nature of the Senate, have eroded the collegiality that makes this body work on a daily basis, the kind of actions in which people unanimously agreed to allow things to happen different from the regular order, that allowed things to be proceeded up and go faster and move forward. It has been done on a regular basis.

But we have had a conflict, an alteration in the rules of the Senate that is so serious that it impacts the very nature of this institution and causing great concern. We have a lot of new Members in the Senate, and they have not seen how the Senate operated just in the—what?—16, 17 years I have been here. I have seen the great change, and it is a concern to me, and it is even different from that more classical operation before I came here.

It is not healthy, it is not good, and it cannot be allowed to just happen without any discussion, without any full understanding of how the majority leader of the Senate has accrued to himself powers never before allowed to be held by the majority leader of the Senate. It has altered the very nature of the debate here and the processes that involve our constitutional responsibility.

So I believe we need to talk about it. I believe we need to understand it, and somehow we need to alter what has happened.

I remember when I came to the Senate. Senator Robert Byrd loved the Senate. Senator Robert Byrd said there are two great Senates: the Roman Senate and the U.S. Senate. He gave all of us new Members a lecture about the great heritage of which we are a part. He wrote a book on the rules of the Senate.

We have had rules for quite a number of years. The standing rule of the Senate is rule XXII. It is a clear, simple directive passed by two-thirds of the Members of the Senate duly chosen and sworn.

This is what rule XXII says. It is not confusing. It is very clear. It was adopted by two-thirds of the Senate.

It says: A motion signed by 16 Senators—that is, to negotiate something, to shut off debate, you have to have 16 Senators to file a motion—a motion signed by 16 Senators to bring to a close the debate upon any measure, motion, or other matter pending before the Senate—any measure, motion, or other matter pending before the Senate, which includes nominations—shall be decided by three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn, except on a measure or motion to amend the Senate rules, in which case the necessary affirmative vote shall be two-thirds of the Senators present and voting.

Crystal clear. The rules of the Senate are to be decided by two-thirds. To bring to a close debate upon any measure, motion or matter pending before the Senate requires three-fifths, 60 votes out of our 100. That is the rule of the Senate. That has guided us for generations. It has worked well. I am going to talk a little bit about this, and I could go into even greater detail and say that the process has been working very well.

Senators on the Republican side have treated the nominees of President Obama very well, far better than were the nominations of President Bush when he came here in 2000. When I was here in 2000, his nominees were hampered, filibustered for the first time in history, held by some of the same people who now with great outrage attack those who have blocked and filibustered a few of the Obama nominees—just a few.

So it is really almost unbelievable to me that we are at this point of the rules process of the Senate. So how did it happen? Precisely what happened? I think the American people need to know.

Senator REID, apparently irritated that he was not able to have three judges confirmed to the District of Columbia Circuit bench, decided that he was going to change the rules. Senator SCHUMER said he was going to get those nominees confirmed one way or the other.

I am the ranking Republican on the budget committee. This country is spending money it does not have on things it does not need on an absolutely regular basis. We are wasting taxpayers' money. So the actions of the President and the Senate majority that filled three seats on the District of Columbia Court of Appeals were scrutinized.

In my opinion, I believe it is uncontested that these positions did not need to be filled. They just didn't. They do not have enough work on that court to need these judges. The average caseload per judge on the D.C. Circuit was 149 per judge—149. Well, what does that mean? Is that a lot or not a lot? It is not a lot. It is the lowest number by far of any circuit in America. The caseload has been steadily declining.

I have been chairman in the Judiciary Committee of the court subcommittee that deals with these issues. Senator GRASSLEY was there before I came. I have been ranking member and am now ranking member on that subcommittee. We have been watching the D.C. Circuit. The cases continue to decline. So with 8 judges now active on that court, they are down to 149 cases per judge. Well, is that a lot? How about my circuit, the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, GA, covering Florida, Alabama, and Georgia? How many cases do they have per judge? Hold your hat: 740. That is how many my court handles per judge.

They say they do not need more judges. In fact, they prefer not to have the court get so large that there will not be a coherent court and be able to have consistency in the law. That has been their tradition for many years, more than 20 years. They do not want more judges. Actually, we know that the judges on the D.C. Circuit have said they do not need more judges. We know they took off last summer. They take off long summers, unlike any other court of appeals, from May 16 to September 16. They did not hold court from May 16 to September 16.

The next lowest circuit in America has almost twice as many cases per judge as the D.C. Circuit. I know that our frugal Presiding Officer, as Governor of Maine, as part of that Yankee frugality for which they are famous, he knew how to manage his money when he was Governor. It costs $1 million a year, we are told, to maintain a Federal judgeship. That is a lot of money. So we are adding three judges to the D.C. Court of Appeals who absolutely are not needed—absolutely are not needed.

This Senate refused to confirm them. We voted not to confirm these judges and blocked moving the final vote. They lacked the three-fifths vote to confirm those judges. But Senator SCHUMER said: We are going to get them done one way or the other. We do not worry about principle. We do not worry about law. We do not worry about the heritage of the Senate. We do not worry about whether we need those judges. We are going to put them in anyway.

Well, I did not pay much attention to that. I did not think he was serious about that, I have to tell you. I thought our Democratic colleagues would really understand that we have confirmed almost all of the President's nominees. Only two or three prior to that had failed out of the whole 6 years he has been in office. President Bush lost five on 1 day—good nominees—for no other reason than they had a classical view of restraint on the part of a judge.

We do not need these judges. As a matter of fact, Senator GRASSLEY and I offered and passed legislation that moved one of the D.C. Circuit judges to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in California, a liberal circuit. But that circuit wanted more judges and appeared to need more judges to handle the caseload.

We moved one. We have legislation to move others to someplace in America where they are needed because we are going to have to fill and add some judgeships around the country because, unlike the D.C. Circuit, some of the areas in our country are adding cases and are needing judges and are short of judges. So good management simply says that you take them from where you do not need them and you move them to places where you do need them and you serve the interests of the American taxpayer and you protect the money they send us. We have a holy charge to protect every single dollar extracted from every American.

The former Speaker, the Democratic leader in the House, NANCY PELOSI, said: We have cut all we can cut. We cannot find any more waste in our government. There is nothing left to cut.

Well, there are places left to cut. These three judges on the D.C. Circuit are just one of thousands, tens of thousands of places we could save the money we are spending that we do not need to be spending, that does not help America, does not make us stronger and does not benefit the rule of law.

So how did it happen? What happened that so upset Senator REID? The majority leader is one of 100, puts his britches on one leg at a time. He does not get to dictate to this Senate. He gets to stand right there, and because his Presiding Officer is selected by Senator REID—he is the majority leader—the Presiding Officer will always recognize him first.

It is done when Republicans have the majority. It is done when the Democrats have the majority.

He asked for recognition and received it. This is how he changed the rules of the Senate that require a three-fifths vote to shut off debate. Remember, a change of the rules of the Senate is supposed to take a two-thirds vote, 67 votes.

He said to the Presiding Officer at that point, the President pro tempore of the Senate, Senator PATRICK LEAHY, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, a man who is most experienced in all of these matters—this is what Senator REID said, and it makes the hair on the back of my neck stand up.

I talked to a reporter, an experienced, well-known reporter, the other day. He was talking about it, and he said—he didn't ask for confidentiality. He probably used my name.

He said: I didn't think he was going to do it, and when it started, everybody in the newsroom just stopped and we looked.

Wow. Because this was a big deal. This was a huge event in the history of the Senate. This is what Senator REID said and everybody needs to know how it happened.

He said, "I raise a point of order that the vote on cloture under rule XXII for all nominations other than for the Supreme Court of the United States is by majority vote."

The vote on cloture to shut off debate, he moved that under rule XXII. He said "under rule XXII" that the vote on cloture to shut off debate for all nominations "other than for the Supreme Court"—he thought of that, I suppose—"is by majority vote."

Rule XXII says, "... a motion signed by sixteen Senators, to bring to a close the debate on any measure, motion, other matter pending before the Senate ... shall be decided ... by three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn."

The majority leader of the Senate, knowing precisely what rule XXII said, stood right there and asked the chairman, the Presiding Officer, to pretend that this is not a rule of the Senate and that only a majority vote is needed. That is what he said.

What did Senator LEAHY say? The transcript shows Senator LEAHY is the President pro tempore of the Senate. He said, "Under the rules, the point of order is not sustained."

It is exactly right. Senator REID's petition that it ought to be decided by a majority vote couldn't be sustained because it is absolutely in violation of the rules of the Senate. Senator LEAHY so ruled, as he was advised, I am sure, by the Parliamentarian, also selected by Senator REID.

There is no question about this. There is absolutely no question about it.

But there is this little deal that on a matter where a Parliamentarian rules on matters dealing with the rules of the Senate, somebody can ask and appeal the ruling of the Senate, an appeal of the whole Senate to check to decide whether the Parliamentarian is correct.

They used this corrective measure to allow the will of the Senate to interpret the rules of the Senate, to break the rules of the Senate. That is what they did, lemming like, my Democratic colleagues, surely not understanding what they did, one by one they walked up and voted or voted from their chairs in support of Senator REID.

All but two of the Democratic colleagues voted—over 50, a majority voted—to say that the rules of the Senate don't mean what they say and they will just ignore them.

The net effect was that once that was ruled, then cloture could be shut off, debate could be shut off with a simple majority. That became the rule of the Senate in a way contrary to the rules of the Senate which say “—except on a measure or motion to amend the Senate rules, in which case the necessary affirmative vote shall be two-thirds.

“To change that rule of the Senate that says it takes 60 votes to shut off debate through a majority to shut off debate would take two-thirds. They just ignored that.

The reason it is so important is every other rule, tradition, and standard of the Senate is at stake. A very wise Senator, CARL LEVIN of Michigan, a longtime Democrat, chairman of the Armed Services Committee on which I sit, I have watched him work all the years I have been in the Senate and I have been very impressed. He and I don't agree on many of the substantive issues and how we approach spending, taxes, and regulations. He knows how to preside in a committee to give everybody a fair shake. He said we shouldn't do this. He pleaded with his Democratic colleagues not to vote in this fashion.

He said that if you can change a rule in this fashion, if you can alter the rules of the Senate this way, there are no rules. There is no power, no protection for the minority, other than the simple power of the majority vote. There is nothing in this Senate if we follow this precedent that can't be changed by a simple ruling of an appeal of the chair and all those rights that have always protected the minority.

That is a very dangerous thing. It was played with and talked about by the Republicans on one occasion when the entire ground rules of the Senate for confirmation of judges was altered. We found ourselves with a stunning filibuster of 10 of the first 12 nominees President Bush submitted for the court of appeals, but it was never executed. An agreement was reached to alter that.

Indeed, when this tension rose at the beginning of this year, Senator REID agreed that changes in the process gave the majority party and the President more power to expedite nominees and gave them more power over the minority. He was able to secure that agreement in a way consistent with the heritage of the Senate. He said at that time he was not going to seek to change the rules of the Senate again.

I wish to say this should not be looked at as a little matter. It is a very big matter. I am extraordinarily troubled by it. That is part of what is happening now.

I wish to mention one more thing on a chart I have that talks about the caseload for the D.C. Circuit. Look at these numbers. This is the Eleventh Circuit, 720 cases per judge, not 740, as I said earlier. Look at these caseloads per judge until you get down to the D.C. Circuit, 149 per judge.

We didn't need to add three judges. The existing, active judges, not counting the vacancy, just 8 active judges, only have 149 cases per judge. We don't need to add one new judge.

The President was determined to try to shove that through, and that he did, and got us into all of this turmoil when the Senate didn't agree—three-fifths of the Senate not agreeing to move forward to a final vote resulting in the lack of confirmation of those judges. That is where we are.

In the Fifth Circuit in Texas, there are 488 cases per judge; the Ninth Circuit in California, 472 cases per judge. The Second Circuit, handling some of the more complex cases in America, Manhattan in New York, there are 440 cases per judge. We can see the caseload averages around the country.

The average is 384 cases per judge. That is about 2½ times the number of cases that the D.C. Circuit has per judge. That is why there were objections to the nominees. I said when this happened most of these nominees would probably be confirmed, because if it hadn't been for the low caseload, that there was not a question—I suggested, without going into detail, the nominees were probably qualified and it would be unlikely that they would be filibustered because of lack of qualifications, although I was probably wrong in that for at least one of them. Pillard's nomination represents a judge whose views on the law are so outside the mainstream that I don't believe, having studied that record subsequent to those remarks, she should have been confirmed on the merits.

My basic view, as I stated from the very beginning, is not a question of the merits of the nominees. The question was do we need to spend $3 million a year for these three judges when we have other circuits that need judges and they don't need them there.

I will share with you what President Obama was looking for in his nominee.

Ms. Pillard went to Yale and Harvard. She also spent 6 years with the American Civil Liberties Union and the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund. She is a long-time member of the very liberal activist American Constitution Society. They believe in activist judges and advocate for that. In recent years an activist conservative legal movement has—she has been a professor at Georgetown. She has written many controversial articles and has a record exclusively devoted, it seems to me, as a very extreme, progressive, judicial philosopher who says judges do not need to be objective and are empowered to read the meanings of the Constitution to advance an agenda. It seems to be in harmony with President Obama's openly stated views about what he looks for in judges, and that is a judge who is empathetic. He has empathy.

What does that mean, “empathy”? What it means is he wants a judge not committed to law. That is what it means.

What is empathy? Feelings, ideology, politics—that is what it sounds like to me.

The American heritage of law is based on objective criteria, the rule of law. Judges take an oath to serve under the Constitution of the United States and the laws of America. They are under them. They serve the law. They don't write the law. They don't amend the law. They don't change the law. They don't change the meaning of words in our laws or our Constitution to meet some empathetic feeling they have, some political agenda they have. And the American people are on to it. They know this is happening too much. They do not like it. They want it to stop. They do not want this kind of judge on the bench.

But many of our great law schools, many of our judicial philosophers and writers think this is all great. They think we need this kind of thing. We need to advance the law. That is what they say, and the hero to them is the one who comes up with some gimmick to reinterpret the plain meanings of our Constitution to have it say what they want it to say at a given time—to help decide a lawsuit they would like to see helped to advance an agenda.

It is really part of a post-modern approach to life, to law. Senator REID's nuclear option execution is also a post-modern power thing. It is the result, it is the end, it is the ideology, it is the revolution. Advance the cause. No rules apply.

Some may say: JEFF, you are too hard. You shouldn't say that. That is exactly what it is, I have to say, in my belief. Remember, in 2001, when President Bush got elected, there were virtually no filibusters. A few judges had problems that were held up for a while, but there were no filibusters of judges. The Democrats met in retreat—Laurence Tribe, Marcia Greenberger, Cass Sunstein were there, according to the

New York Times, and they came out of the retreat with a decision, and the decision was to alter the ground rules of confirmations. They immediately accepted the two nominees President Bush had submitted that were Democrats. One of them hadn't been confirmed under President Clinton so he renominated them. They took those two and confirmed them. They blocked ten great judges, great nominees, and this went on for over a year.

There was vote after vote after vote, and they steadfastly—Senator SCHUMER, the leader—blocked those judges from being voted on by a filibuster, because there weren't 60 votes to shut off debate to effect cloture. So this went on for an extraordinary time, and at some point the threat was that the nuclear option would be executed. So a group of Senators met and said: Look, let's not change the rules of the Senate by breaking the rules of the Senate. Let's reach an agreement. And this is what they said. They said: You shouldn't filibuster judges any more unless there are extraordinary circumstances to justify it. Normally, you should just vote yes or no for the judge. In most cases yes or no should be the vote, and serious filibusters of nominees should not occur except for extraordinary circumstances.

I thought that was OK. I didn't really think we should filibuster, period. But it seemed to be a reasonable compromise in a political body that would do the right thing for the confirmation process. We have been operating under that since 2002, I guess it was when that agreement was reached. I thought it was pretty good, actually. I was sort of proud of the way that came out. Therefore, President Obama has had very few filibusters.

But when this gang of 14 reached their agreement, and it sort of was adopted by the Senate, there were ten judges being filibustered out of the first batch of judges President Bush had nominated. What came of it was that five were confirmed and five failed. So on one day, five judges were defeated without, in my opinion, anything like a justifiable basis to defeat those judges. But that is the way it was. We agreed to it. Five judges were blocked and never got to serve; five more were confirmed.

And who orchestrated that? It was Senator REID. He complained mightily when anybody would even think about ending the right to filibuster a judge, and Senator SCHUMER was leading the filibusters.

So when the three judges that were nominated for absolutely unneeded seats on the D.C. circuit were blocked, you would have thought this was the first time in history anybody had ever been blocked from being a judge in this Senate. And they went and changed the rules of the Senate. It is just unbelievable to me that we are at this point.

I truly believe that President Obama's nominees were treated fairly. I believe they have been evaluated fairly, and only a very few have been blocked.

On one day Senator REID filed cloture on 17 nominations. It was totally set up, and do you know what he said? He said it was because we were filibustering these. Every time he filed cloture he said a filibuster was occurring. None of these judges were blocked. All of these judges got confirmed. There was not even a vote on cloture for the 17. Yet when he claimed there was some unprecedented number of filibusters in the Senate, he is counting that. There has not been this situation.

So this is part of the tension we are involved in, and we remember that brooding over all of this is the Affordable Care Act—Obamacare—and how that legislation was opposed by a substantial majority of Americans, consistently 2 to 1. Virtually 2 to 1 consistently the American people rejected Obamacare. They told this Congress not to pass it. We did everything we could on the Republican side to keep it from passing. We pleaded with our colleagues not to do this.

But, oh no, they had to pass it. President Obama wanted it, and they were going to pass it. We would find out later what was in it. That was literally the gist of what happened.

Senator Scott Brown from Massachusetts—liberal Massachusetts, the home of Ted Kennedy, who believed in government's involvement in health care—was elected on a promise in Massachusetts to be the vote to kill it. There was a vacancy. Senator Kennedy's death had created this vacancy, and Senator Brown campaigned to kill and be the vote that would deny the Democrats the 60th vote, in essence.

So what did they do? They used the reconciliation budget process to pass this monumental policy change in America in a way that kept Scott Brown—and the American people, through the electoral process—from ending this piece of legislation that put us in the position we are in today, where you don't get to keep your doctor, you don't get to keep your health care, where deductibles are going through the roof, where the price of insurance is going up, where people are not being hired, where two-thirds of the people who get a job this year in America only get a part-time job, which is clearly being driven by business interests in trying to avoid being caught up in the obligations of the Affordable Care Act. But the Democrats insisted.

Senator REID has used every parliamentary maneuver possible to block any votes that would actually fix this bill or alter it in any way.

So I just have to say we are at a point where we have to wonder whether democracy is happening in the Senate.

So we go back home. People get elected to the Senate. They campaign, and they say they want to go to Washington and change ObamaCare. Have we had a single vote this year to change ObamaCare? No, because Senator REID knows how to fill the tree and block any votes and keep it from happening. We are not voting on it.

The House has repeatedly passed all kinds of legislation and sent it to the Senate, supposedly to cause us to respond to it, to review the legislation, to have votes, offer amendments and see what kind of response we would have to fixing the problems with ObamaCare. But what happens? Senator REID obstructs that process. He does not allow these votes to occur. They might as well have thrown their legislation down the well.

What good is it for the House to send a bill to the Senate if it never gets brought up on the most important issue facing our country today—health care? We can't even have a debate about it or vote about it. Is this the great Senate that Robert Byrd referred to?

What about the Defense bill? The Defense bill is over here now. It spends over $500 billion—about half of the discretionary spending the United States Congress spends. What are we told? We are told the Senate is too busy. We can't bring up the Defense bill and have an amendment. No more amendments. The two little amendments that were voted on in an entire week are all we are going to get. No more amendments will be accepted. We are going to pass the bill as it is or we can vote no on it.

Why? Why? Because Senator REID knows there are some very important issues involved in the Defense bill and they are controversial. People have different views about them, and some people on his side of the aisle don't want to vote on those because they have to stand up before their constituents and before America and before the world and actually cast a vote and be accountable for their tenure in the Senate.

Members on this side, such as Senator TOM COBURN, have ideas to fix the Defense Department and to save money. But Senator REID won't give him a vote on it, and he objects. Senator REID says: Senator COBURN, you are obstructing. You are one of those Republican obstructionists. You don't get a vote, Senator COBURN. I decide who votes here. I have filled the tree. I know how to fill the tree. I am the majority leader, and if you want a vote, you have to ask me, and I'm not giving you any more votes. I have had enough of you guys.

That is kind of the way it has been. It is the way it has been with the ObamaCare bill and with the Defense bill. The very idea that national security is at stake and we have a $500 billion Defense bill—now, I'm on the Armed Services Committee, and we tried to work together. We basically had an almost unanimous vote on it. Last year we had a unanimous vote on the Defense bill. But there are still matters we carry to the floor with the full understanding there will be debate and votes on those disputed issues and the whole Senate would get to vote on them. They are not being allowed to vote on those.

This is unusual, colleagues. This has never happened in the history of the Senate. There was a study that found in the last 28 years previous to Senator REID, the tactic of filling the tree to limit debate was done 40 times. Since Senator REID has been the majority leader, he has done it 77 times. It is every time, really. He is in complete control of the amendment process in the Senate.

We had a Democratic colleague who said he thought he had to get approval of the Republican leader, Senator MCCONNELL, before he could get his amendment voted on. Why? Well, Senator REID says the Republicans filed 20 amendments. Senator REID says: You can only have three. So he starts with Senator MCCONNELL, and Senator MCCONNELL says: That is not enough, Senator REID. You can get five, but I want to approve them. I suppose Senator MCCONNELL may say: How many are you going to have? I want to know what they are before I reach an agreement with you.

So I suspect it may be true that we have Democratic Senators having to ask the minority leader of the Senate for approval to get their amendments up.

That is not the way this should operate. It has never operated that way. Our history is open and free debate, unlimited debate in which the great issues of our time can be discussed here and actually voted on. And our constituents back home, if they don't like the way we are voting, can vote us out of office and send somebody else up here. So politics is driving it. There is no other reason.

The contention is that there wasn't enough time to vote on the Defense bill, but the Defense bill was on the floor an entire week. We could have had 10 votes a day, 15 votes a day easily on the Defense bill.

Senator INHOFE, the ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee, told Senator REID he had limited the number of amendments that Senators on our side had to 25, and those could have been done easily in a week. But what was also true, as Senator INHOFE noted, was that a lot of those votes would actually never occur because a person would realize they didn't have the votes to pass, the manager of the bill would agree to some of the amendments, or something else would happen. So it is very unlikely that many votes would have been cast.

But that is what we have done in the past. We have had 2 and 3 weeks of time spent on the Defense bill, and we have had multiple amendments—30, 40, 50 amendments—and that has just ended.

So here we are, at a time when our country has a crisis on its hands, the American people are suffering from a massive takeover of health care that was rammed through this body against their will, and they still remain steadfastly opposed to it. Those of us who share those same concerns and want to change and alter this bill that is damaging to our economy, that is hammering the middle class, we can't even get votes on it because we have a leader who has dictated how things are done here.

This has to end. It has to end. It cannot continue. I don't see how any Member of this body can go back home if they are a Democrat and say: I couldn't get up an amendment.

Why?

Well, Senator MCCONNELL wouldn't let me.

I go back home to my State, and others go back home to their States, Senator TOOMEY goes back to Pennsylvania and says: I offered all these amendments to improve ObamaCare.

His constituent says: Well, did you vote on it?

No.

Why not?

Senator REID wouldn't let me.

Where did this become part of the history of our country? Is this what we teach our children in grade school about how democracy is supposed to work? No. It has to end.

I appreciate the opportunity to share these remarks tonight. We are at a point where this Senate has to stand, reverse the trends that have been going on, and ensure that we operate in an open way. People have to vote and vote and vote so they can be held accountable to the people who sent us here. And when we make people mad, they have every right to vote us out of office. We don't have any right to come here and hide under our desks, not to expose ourselves, not to let people know how we really feel and how we have really been moving the country.

So I think the tea party rightly has concerns about that kind of thing, and I hope we can make progress to improve this situation that is essential for our country.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. TOOMEY. Mr. President, I rise as we consider the nomination of Deborah Lee James as Secretary of the Air Force, and I wish to touch on some of the points that were made by the Senator from Alabama.

I wish to state how much I appreciate his leadership, especially as the ranking member of the Budget Committee, his consistent leadership and fighting for fiscal discipline and putting our country back on a sustainable fiscal path, his commitment to an open amendment process, the opportunity to have vigorous debate in the Senate so that this body can work its will, and, of course, his work on the Armed Services Committee. I appreciate all of that, and I appreciate him being here tonight.

I do think it is important we have a discussion about how we got here, a discussion about the circumstances that have led to this completely unprecedented moment.

In the entire history of the Republic, we have never found ourselves in this circumstance where a majority party has decided that they alone should have sole say in who shall be appointed to the executive branch and who shall have the lifetime appointments to our Federal bench. I am one who believes this will very likely have very detrimental effects because when one party can ram through their choice without having to give any regard whatsoever to what the other party thinks, then what do we get? We get legislation like ObamaCare and we have extremes in the nominations that will eventually be confirmed.

Any President comes under pressure from the extremes within his or her party to put the most extreme people in positions of power, and the Senate has played a vital role in moderating that extreme, that tendency, that pressure, because it has virtually always been the case that neither party has 60 votes. Very seldom has it been the case that a party has had over 60 votes. So it has almost always been necessary that there be some broad bipartisan consensus on the people who will populate powerful posts as regulators and lifetime appointments to the bench.

That is no longer the case. There is no such check, and I fear that the consequences will be very detrimental: extremism in the regulatory agencies, volatility as we move from one administration to another and we have these swings, and probably the most disturbing of all is the real danger that the greatest source of pride Americans can have in their Federal Government, which has been an independent, non-partisan judiciary—that very judiciary becomes a creature of the political and becomes captured by the political branches of government. That is the danger, and that is why it is important we consider how we got here and why we got here.

It is particularly extraordinary when we consider the statements of some of the leaders on the other side of the aisle, Democratic leaders who for years were passionately opposed to doing exactly what they did last month. The majority leader himself just a short time ago said:

The right to extend the debate is never more important than when one party controls Congress and the White House. In these cases, a filibuster serves as a check on power and preserves our limited government.

Senator SCHUMER, the senior Senator from New York, put it this way:

The checks and balances which have been at the core of this Republic will be evaporated by the nuclear option. The checks and balances say that if you get 51 percent of the vote, you don't get your way 100 percent of the time.

That was Senator SCHUMER and Senator REID. There are many other quotes on the record in which they vigorously opposed the notion of denying the minority any say in the confirmation process when it was discussed but never implemented some years ago. So why would they have such a 180-degree reversal? Why would their opinion and that of the vast majority of my Democratic colleagues have changed to the point where they would actually take this absolutely unprecedented step?

Senator REID gave an explanation on the day he inflicted these changes on this body. I will quote from Senator REID's explanation. He said:

There has been unbelievable, unprecedented obstruction. For the first time in the history of our Republic, Republicans have routinely used the filibuster to prevent President Obama from appointing his executive team or confirming judges.

That is what Senator REID said. So it has been about Republicans obstructing the President from appointing his executive team and confirming judges.

Well, let's consider the case of judges to start. Let's take a look at this chart. Since President Obama has been President, there are some very simple, very easily verifiable facts we can look at.

The President has sent nominees for the Senate to consider since he became President. The Senate has confirmed 215 of those nominees, but the Senate has blocked 2 of his nominees. These are verifiable facts. They are not in dispute. These are the numbers. In total, the President has sent us the names of 217 candidates for judgeships, and 215 were confirmed and are sitting judges and 2 were blocked.

There is another category of nominees; that is, the executive branch nominees—the various agencies and regulatory bodies that are subject to senatorial confirmation. The President has sent us a total of 1,494 nonjudicial executive branch nominees. The Senate has confirmed 1,492. The Senate has blocked two.

The math is not that complicated. The President has nominated and sent to the Senate for our consideration a total of 1,711 altogether, and the Senate has confirmed 1,707. The Senate has blocked four. If you do the math, that is a confirmation rate of 99.8 percent.

So of all the nominees the President has sent to this body to be confirmed, we haven't actually confirmed every one; we have only confirmed 99.8 percent of them. Of the 1,711, we have blocked 4.

I would suggest that the power of advice and consent—the Constitution says advice and consent; it doesn't just say advice. If it just said advice, then that would clearly imply that the President could ignore the advice if he chose. But it doesn't just say advice; it says advice and consent. The power to consent clearly and obviously implies that under some circumstances that consent would be withheld. If not, there is no meaning to this at all.

So I would suggest it is patently absurd to suggest that a 99.8-percent confirmation rate is a pattern of obstruction, as we have been accused of. So that can't be the real reason, obviously. Obviously, this kind of record of almost universally approving Presidential nominees can't possibly be the real reason we had this unprecedented power grab and rules change.

So what was the real purpose? What was the real motivation behind this very dramatic development? I am here to tell you that I think it is very clear what the real motivation was. The motivation was to pack the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals so that a partisan group of judges would validate an agenda that this administration and many of our friends on the other side of the aisle want to impose.

That is an outrageous thing to say in some ways. Some people might think that is quite an accusation. What would be my basis for saying something like that? It would be the fact that Senator REID and Senator SCHUMER told us that was their reason. They said so. I will get to their quote, but let me explain why this has been done.

The fact is that elections have consequences. The President of the United States was elected. The Republicans have been enormously deferential in confirming his nominees, among other things.

But in 2012 the President wasn't the only person on the ballot. The entire House of Representatives was on the ballot, and the American people chose to reelect a Republican majority in the House of Representatives. Those elections have consequences as well, and one of the consequences of that election—the set of elections that produced a Republican majority in the House and left many Republicans in the Senate—is that the more liberal aspects of the President's agenda can't pass in Congress. They are not supported by a majority of the American people. They are not supported by majorities in Congress. Things like cap and trade, card check, the war on coal, and recess appointments don't have support. I don't think they have broad support in either body, certainly not enough in the House of Representatives to pass.

So what is a President to do if he can't get his legislation passed but he nevertheless wants to pursue an agenda? Well, one way a President could choose to do this—especially one who is not interested in working with the minority party—and let's face it, ObamaCare is the clear example that this President is not interested in the input of Republicans. That was jammed through without a single Republican vote in either the House or the Senate. There was no input from Republicans. There was no consideration for what the minority party considered. There was not a broad consensus.

It is not surprising that a very short time later there is a big majority of the American people who do not support this bill because it was never designed with enough input and enough buy-in to have that broad consensus. If a President is not interested in working with the minority party and he cannot get his legislation through because there are not enough members of his party in Congress, the alternative is to try to impose it through the regulatory process, through the agencies, through the regulators, through the executive branch, which has become enormous and enormously powerful.

There is only one big hurdle for a President to try to go down this road and that hurdle is that eventually people who are the victims of an overreaching group of regulators and administrators and agency heads, they have recourse. If they think that a given regulator is acting unfairly or illegally or unconstitutionally, they can go to court and in fact people do that. Guess what court ends up hearing the appeals and making what is very typically the final decisions, as a practical matter, regarding Federal regulations. Why, it is the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals. That is the way our Federal system works.

In fact, the D.C. Circuit Court has generally been upholding the laws. I believe the evidence is very clear that it is a capable, competent, nonpartisan group of talented judges who make decisions as they see fit. They call balls and strikes, as referees ought to. Among their decisions, for instance—I am sure I do not agree with all of them but they did block what I thought was an illegal overreach by the EPA, inconsistent with the laws regulating EPA. They did not believe the President had the right to decide when Congress was in recess and make appointments that suited him when we were not able to deny consent. That was the D.C. Circuit Court's decision. This, and several others, were completely unacceptable to some of my Democratic friends. It was unacceptable this independent, nonpartisan court might reach decisions that were inconsistent with the liberal agenda.

How do we know this was unacceptable? We have some quotes. The senior Senator from New York, Mr. SCHUMER, discussed this. He was speaking to a group of supporters. It is on the record. He complained that the D.C. Circuit overturned the EPA's ability to regulate existing coal plants. He complained the SEC cannot pass rules unless they do what is called a cost-benefit analysis. He complained they struck down the administration's illegal recess appointments to the NLRB. He told a group of supporters that Democrats "will fill up the D.C. Circuit one way or another."

That was the quote. It was pretty straightforward, I will give him that. It is pretty candid. We do not like the decisions that are coming out of this court so we will pack the court with people who agree with our ideology.

Senator SCHUMER was not the only one to make this case. Senator REID had this to say of the D.C. Circuit:

They are the ones who said the President can't have recess appointments. They have done a lot of bad things. So we are focusing very intently on the D.C. Circuit. We need at least one more. There are three vacancies. We need at least one more and that will switch the majority.

This is Senator REID on the D.C. Circuit: "We need at least one more," obviously referring to a judge. "We need at least one more and that will switch the majority." I think it is pretty clear what was going on here.

Now fast-forward to a few weeks ago. There was just one obstacle to putting the people who would agree with Senator SCHUMER and Senator REID on the D.C. Circuit Court and render the decisions they wanted. The obstacle was Republicans were not interested in going along with the scheme to pack the court for ideological purposes. They didn't think that was a very good idea. They thought it was probably better to have judges who were not there to try to advance a political agenda but believed their job is to apply the law as written and make sure it is consistent with the Constitution as opposed to pursuing a political agenda.

Despite the fact that Republicans had to that point confirmed 99.8 percent of all the President's nominees, that was going a little bit too far, to simply blatantly pack the D.C. Circuit Court, and we said no to the three nominees who were people they were intending to pack that court.

When we did, Senator REID, after publicly promising he was not going to change the rules this way just this past summer, nevertheless did exactly that. Despite the fact the Senate rules are very clear to change the rules requires a vote of 67 Senators, precisely so there would be a broad consensus behind the rules, Senator REID changed the rules with a mere 51 votes. He broke the rules so he could change the rules so the Democratic majority can now steamroll through and rubberstamp all of the President's nominees, including those necessary to pack the court so they can pursue the agenda they want to pursue. This is not my speculation. These are the quotes from the man who helped to organize this effort.

It is, frankly, very reminiscent in a lot of ways of ObamaCare: Steamroll through Congress, one party, no input from the other party, the minority party, and a complete disaster. By the way, the other big similarity is the broken promises. Senator REID clearly, unambiguously, unequivocally, unconditionally made the promise that he was not going to change the rules and then he did.

Then what have we been hearing about ObamaCare? One broken promise after another.

What I am going to do for the remainder of the time that I consume this evening is remind all of us of some of the promises that were made. Then I am just going to read a small sample of the emails that have been coming into my office from Pennsylvanians who have learned firsthand, the hard way, the painful way, just how untrue these promises were.

The first one is maybe the most famous of the promises. This is the President's repeated promise, echoed by many others, and I will quote: "If you like your health plan you can keep your health plan." I don't know how many times the President said it, but we have all seen it, we all know it. But what is particularly maddening is we also know something else. We know everybody who said this always knew this was not true. It was not true because the design of the bill forbids people from keeping health insurance plans in many cases—not all cases but many cases—and the authors of the bill and the supporters of the bill and the people who voted for the bill knew full well that one of the purposes of the bill was to establish government-approved standards for all insurance plans.

If your plan did not meet those standards, you were going to lose your plan. So this is what some folks have written to us about this promise, that if you like your health plan you can keep your health plan. This was just 2 days ago, a gentleman from Lancaster County from Pennsylvania wrote:

As my Congressional representative, you need to know how ObamaCare is harming my life and health care.

I work for a small construction company. My cost for family health care was already over $11,000 per year. We received notification that our policy was being cancelled since it did not comply with the requirements of the "Affordable Care Act."

Our company looked for the best rates they could find for comparable coverage which did comply. They chose a new insurance company. We just recently were given the costs for next year. My cost to cover myself and my family will be over $17,500 per year (a 59-percent increase). Even with that, the deductibles and out of pocket maximums are higher. This is not "Affordable Care." This would eat up a major part of my income.

I attempted to log onto the healthcare.gov website several times, but always get kicked out. I do not hold up much hope that I will get any better rates, because I do not qualify for a credit.

We were already struggling to live on my take home pay. We cannot afford to have it reduced by over $6,500. We may have to drop health coverage for my wife or kids, and pay the penalty.

I suspect this law will result in many more people losing their health care, at the expense of a few getting free or reduced healthcare.

Another from a gentleman from Cumberland County last week.

My wife Barb and I have been trying for almost three weeks to get signed up. . . . all income and health info and private information is on the unsecured Web site and the application is accepted . . . but we have not been able to get on and pick the plan or get our price. . . . so nobody has been paid. Thus our cancelled insurance ends on December 31st and we look to be out.

A BIG mistake by the folks that voted for this . . . I've had cancer a couple times, my wife has had cancer and we both see our doctors when needed. This ACA will ruin many families if we can't get on to an insurance plan.

These folks are not only losing the insurance they have, but they have not been able to get an alternative plan.

A woman from Lebanon County, Pennsylvania, last week sent me this email.

We had our healthcare discontinued, and after an appeal were able to get it reinstated, but only for this year. Currently we have a healthcare savings plan, with a deductible of $3,000 a year. . . . In the new plan, our deductible would increase to $12,000 . . . and our premiums would increase to $9,000 a year. How is a middle class married family supposed to pay for that?

This is absolutely ridiculous, and this is our situation. I hope every government worker has to purchase their plan through this plan.

A gentleman from Delaware County sent me this email last week.

I am 66 and I am on Medicare. My wife, Mary Ann is 63. Her insurance company canceled her "longstanding" policy due to the requirements of the ACA. Her "new" policy costs $350 more per month. We are on a strict budget. . . . We are the hard working middle class. Who stands for us?

A small business owner in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, December 3, 2013:

I am a small business owner with 3 employees looking for health insurance. My old policy is being canceled and was offered a replacement policy which is 68% higher than the old policy with higher deductibles. I went through the healthcare.gov site and was quoted an individual policy for my family which is 74 percent higher, with higher deductibles.

When do I see affordable health care for my family?

I have been self-employed for 19 years and have paid for my insurance all these years myself. With deductibles I am looking at $26,000 out of pocket for health insurance this year. Please Help!

Another promise that we heard—these were people, real people who were demonstrating how untrue was the promise that you could keep the health insurance plan that you have. But there was another promise we heard frequently and that promise was, "If you like your doctor, you will be able to keep your doctor, period." The President added that flourish at the end, "period," just to emphasize. These are the President's words: "If you like your doctor, you will be able to keep your doctor, period."

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Williams, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the Committee on Armed Services.

(The messages received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 10:33 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hanrahan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, without amendment:

S. 1471. An act to authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs and the Secretary of the Army to reconsider decisions to inter or honor the memory of a person in a national cemetery, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bills, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 1992. An act to amend the requirements relating to assessment of Israel's qualitative military edge over military threats, and for other purposes.

H.R. 2019. An act to eliminate taxpayer financing of political party conventions and reprogram savings to provide for a 10-year pediatric research initiative through the Common Fund administered by the National Institutes of Health, and for other purposes.

H.R. 2319. An act to clarify certain provisions of the Native American Veterans' Memorial Establishment Act of 1994.

H.R. 3212. An act to ensure compliance with the 1980 Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction by countries with which the United States enjoys reciprocal obligations, to establish procedures for the prompt return of children abducted to other countries, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

At 3:11 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mrs. Cole, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bills:

S. 1471. An act to authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs and the Secretary of the Army to reconsider decisions to inter or honor the memory of a person in a national cemetery, and for other purposes.

H.R. 2871. An act to amend title 28, United States Code, to modify the composition of the southern judicial district of Mississippi to improve judicial efficiency, and for other purposes.

H.R. 2922. An act to extend the authority of the Supreme Court Police to protect court officials away from the Supreme Court grounds.

The enrolled bills were subsequently signed by the President pro tempore (Mr. LEAHY).

At 8:22 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mrs. Cole, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 3695. An act to provide a temporary extension of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 and amendments made by that Act, as previously extended and amended and with certain additional modifications and exceptions, to suspend permanent price support authorities, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House agreed to the following concurrent resolution, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H. Con. Res. 72. Concurrent resolution providing for corrections to the enrollment of H.J. Res. 59.

The message also announced that the House recedes from its amendment to the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 59) making continuing appropriations for fiscal year 2014, and for other purposes, and agrees to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate.

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bills were read the first and the second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

H.R. 1992. An act to amend the requirements relating to assessment of Israel's qualitative military edge over military threats, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

H.R. 3695. An act to provide a temporary extension of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 and amendments made by that Act, as previously extended and amended and with certain additional modifications and exceptions, to suspend permanent price support authorities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. CARPER, from the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, without amendment:

S. 1360. A bill to amend the Improper Payments Elimination and Recovery Improvement Act of 2012, including making changes to the Do Not Pay initiative, for improved detection, prevention, and recovery of improper payments to deceased individuals, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 113-124).

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. UDALL of New Mexico (for himself and Mr. HEINRICH):

S. 1805. A bill to designate the Organ Mountains and other public land as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System in the State of New Mexico, to establish the Organ Mountains—Desert Peaks National Monument, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

By Mr. BROWN (for himself and Mr. PORTMAN):

S. 1806. A bill to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act with respect to membership eligibility of certain institutions; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mr. COBURN, Mrs. HAGAN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. TOOMEY, Mr. FLAKE, Mr. CORKER, Mr. BURR, Mr. RISCH, and Mr. MANCHIN):

S. 1807. A bill to amend the Clean Air Act to eliminate the corn ethanol mandate for renewable fuel, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

By Mr. LEE (for himself, Mr. VITTER, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. COBURN, Mr. RUBIO, Mr. HATCH, Mr. BLUNT, Mr. WICKER, Mr. RISCH, Mr. GRAHAM, and Mr. COCHRAN):

S. 1808. A bill to prevent adverse treatment of any person on the basis of views held with respect to marriage; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TESTER (for himself, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mrs. MCCASKILL):

S. 1809. A bill to amend chapter 77 of title 5, United States Code, to clarify certain due process rights of Federal employees serving in sensitive positions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

By Mrs. GILLIBRAND:

S. 1810. A bill to provide paid family and medical leave benefits to certain individuals, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. ALEXANDER (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mrs. SHAHEEN, and Mr. BEGICH):

S. 1811. A bill to amend title 49, United States Code, to prohibit voice communications through mobile communication devices on commercial passenger flights; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

By Mr. CORNYN:

S. 1812. A bill to provide emergency funding for port of entry personnel and infrastructure; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself and Mrs. BOXER):

S. 1813. A bill to establish a program to provide guarantees for debt issued by or on behalf of State catastrophe insurance programs to assist in the financial recovery from earthquakes and earthquake-related events; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. MANCHIN (for himself, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SCHUMER, Ms.

KLOBUCHAR, Mrs. MCCASKILL, and Mr. COONS):

S. 1814. A bill to encourage, enhance, and integrate Silver Alert plans throughout the United States and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BEGICH:

S. 1815. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to include occupational therapists as behavioral and mental health professionals for purposes of the National Health Service Corps; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

By Ms. KLOBUCHAR (for herself, Mr. LEE, and Mr. SCHUMER):

S. 1816. A bill to amend the Trademark Act of 1946 to provide for the registration of marks consisting of a flag, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States, or any State or local government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mrs. BOXER:

S. 1817. A bill to require the Secretary to implement standards for short-term custody of individuals held in facilities of U.S. Customs and Border Protection and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

By Mr. REID (for himself and Mr. HELLER):

S. 1818. A bill to ratify a water settlement agreement affecting the Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BEGICH:

S. 1819. A bill to amend the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act to provide eligibility for public broadcasting facilities to receive certain disaster assistance, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

By Mrs. SHAHEEN (for herself, Mr. COBURN, and Mrs. FISCHER):

S. 1820. A bill to prohibit the use of Federal funds for the costs of official portraits of Members of Congress, heads of executive agencies, and heads of agencies and offices of the legislative branch; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

By Ms. HIRONO (for herself and Mr. HELLER):

S. 1821. A bill to accelerate the income tax benefits for charitable cash contributions for the relief of victims of Typhoon Haiyan in the Philippines; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. DURBIN:

S. 1822. A bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to establish fair and consistent eligibility requirements for graduate medical schools operating outside the United States and Canada; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. MURPHY (for himself, Mr. JOHNSON of Wisconsin, Mrs. SHAHEEN, and Mr. DURBIN):

S. Res. 319. A resolution expressing support for the Ukrainian people in light of President Yanukovich's decision not to sign an Association Agreement with the European Union; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 204

At the request of Mr. PAUL, the names of the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BOOZMAN), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. COATS) and the Senator from Texas (Mr. CRUZ) were added as cosponsors of S. 204, a bill to preserve and protect the free choice of individual employees to form, join, or assist labor organizations, or to refrain from such activities.

S. 313

At the request of Mr. CASEY, the name of the Senator from Virginia (Mr. WARNER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 313, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide for the tax treatment of ABLE accounts established under State programs for the care of family members with disabilities, and for other purposes.

S. 411

At the request of Mr. ROCKEFELLER, the name of the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI) was added as a cosponsor of S. 411, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend and modify the railroad track maintenance credit.

S. 526

At the request of Mr. BAUCUS, the names of the Senator from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN) and the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. COCHRAN) were added as cosponsors of S. 526, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to make permanent the special rule for contributions of qualified conservation contributions, and for other purposes.

S. 583

At the request of Mr. PAUL, the name of the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. COCHRAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 583, a bill to implement equal protection under the 14th article of amendment to the Constitution for the right to life of each born and preborn human person.

S. 641

At the request of Mr. WYDEN, the name of the Senator from New Hampshire (Mrs. SHAHEEN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 641, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to increase the number of permanent faculty in palliative care at accredited allopathic and osteopathic medical schools, nursing schools, and other programs, to promote education in palliative care and hospice, and to support the development of faculty careers in academic palliative medicine.

S. 865

At the request of Mr. WHITEHOUSE, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 865, a bill to provide for the establishment of a Commission to Accelerate the End of Breast Cancer.

S. 912

At the request of Mr. MCCAIN, the name of the Senator from Rhode Island

(Mr. WHITEHOUSE) was added as a cosponsor of S. 912, a bill to allow multi-channel video programming distributors to provide video programming to subscribers on an a la carte basis, and for other purposes.

S. 994

At the request of Mr. WARNER, the name of the Senator from Delaware (Mr. CARPER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 994, a bill to expand the Federal Funding Accountability and Transparency Act of 2006 to increase accountability and transparency in Federal spending, and for other purposes.

S. 1005

At the request of Mr. PORTMAN, the name of the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1005, a bill to establish more efficient and effective policies and processes for departments and agencies engaged in or providing support to, international conservation.

S. 1011

At the request of Mr. JOHANNES, the names of the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) and the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. REED) were added as cosponsors of S. 1011, a bill to require the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of the centennial of Boys Town, and for other purposes.

S. 1046

At the request of Mr. SCHATZ, the name of the Senator from North Dakota (Ms. HEITKAMP) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1046, a bill to clarify certain provisions of the Native American Veterans' Memorial Establishment Act of 1994.

S. 1114

At the request of Mr. BROWN, the name of the Senator from Iowa (Mr. HARKIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1114, a bill to provide for identification of misaligned currency, require action to correct the misalignment, and for other purposes.

S. 1116

At the request of Mr. SCHUMER, the name of the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. BLUMENTHAL) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1116, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to equalize the exclusion from gross income of parking and transportation fringe benefits and to provide for a common cost-of-living adjustment, and for other purposes.

S. 1187

At the request of Ms. STABENOW, the name of the Senator from New Hampshire (Mrs. SHAHEEN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1187, a bill to prevent homeowners from being forced to pay taxes on forgiven mortgage loan debt.

S. 1406

At the request of Ms. AYOTTE, the names of the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. REED), the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) and the Senator from Vermont (Mr. LEAHY) were added as cosponsors of S. 1406, a bill to amend the Horse Protection Act to designate additional unlawful acts under the Act, strengthen penalties for violations of the Act, improve Department of Agriculture enforcement of the Act, and for other purposes.

S. 1476

At the request of Mr. REED, the names of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Ms. WARREN) were added as cosponsors of S. 1476, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to expand the denial of deduction for certain excessive employee remuneration, and for other purposes.

S. 1491

At the request of Ms. LANDRIEU, the name of the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. HEINRICH) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1491, a bill to amend the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007 to improve United States-Israel energy cooperation, and for other purposes.

S. 1505

At the request of Mr. THUNE, the name of the Senator from Florida (Mr. RUBIO) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1505, a bill to amend the Toxic Substances Control Act to clarify the jurisdiction of the Environmental Protection Agency with respect to certain sporting good articles, and to exempt those articles from definition under that Act.

S. 1610

At the request of Mr. MENENDEZ, the names of the Senator from Alaska (Ms. MURKOWSKI), the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. REED), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. BLUMENTHAL) and the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. WHITEHOUSE) were added as cosponsors of S. 1610, a bill to delay the implementation of certain provisions of the Biggert-Waters Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012, and for other purposes.

S. 1614

At the request of Ms. KLOBUCHAR, the name of the Senator from Vermont (Mr. LEAHY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1614, a bill to require Certificates of Citizenship and other Federal documents to reflect name and date of birth determinations made by a State court and for other purposes.

S. 1652

At the request of Mr. SCHATZ, the name of the Senator from Delaware (Mr. COONS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1652, a bill to amend the National Energy Conservation Policy Act to provide guidance on utility energy service contracts used by Federal agencies, and for other purposes.

S. 1659

At the request of Mr. DURBIN, the names of the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER) and the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) were added as cosponsors of S. 1659, a bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 regarding proprietary institutions of higher education in order to protect students and taxpayers.

S. 1697

At the request of Mr. HARKIN, the name of the Senator from Michigan (Ms. STABENOW) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1697, a bill to support early learning.

S. 1728

At the request of Mr. CORNYN, the name of the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. COCHRAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1728, a bill to amend the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act to improve ballot accessibility to uniformed services voters and overseas voters, and for other purposes.

S. 1759

At the request of Mr. SANDERS, the name of the Senator from Maine (Mr. KING) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1759, a bill to reauthorize the teaching health center program.

S. 1761

At the request of Mr. BLUMENTHAL, the name of the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. REED) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1761, a bill to permanently extend the Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009 and establish a private right of action to enforce compliance with such Act.

S. 1765

At the request of Mr. CORKER, the name of the Senator from Georgia (Mr. CHAMBLISS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1765, a bill to ensure the compliance of Iran with agreements relating to Iran's nuclear program.

S. 1766

At the request of Ms. AYOTTE, the name of the Senator from New Hampshire (Mrs. SHAHEEN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1766, a bill to provide for the equitable distribution of Universal Service funds to rural States.

S. 1779

At the request of Mr. TOOMEY, the name of the Senator from Montana (Mr. TESTER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1779, a bill to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act to exempt fire hydrants from the prohibition on the use of lead pipes, fittings, fixtures, solder, and flux.

S. 1797

At the request of Mr. REED, the name of the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. MURPHY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1797, a bill to provide for the extension of certain unemployment benefits, and for other purposes.

S. 1798

At the request of Mr. WARNER, the name of the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. PRYOR) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1798, a bill to ensure that emergency services volunteers are not counted as full-time employees under the shared responsibility requirements contained in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

S. 1802

At the request of Mr. DONNELLY, the name of the Senator from Missouri (Mrs. MCCASKILL) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1802, a bill to provide equal treatment for utility special entities using utility operations-related swaps, and for other purposes.

S. RES. 317

At the request of Mr. SESSIONS, the names of the Senator from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BOOZMAN) and the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE) were added as cosponsors of S. Res. 317, a resolution expressing the sense of the Senate on the continuing relationship between the United States and Georgia.

AMENDMENT NO. 2384

At the request of Mr. CORNYN, the name of the Senator from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 2384 intended to be proposed to S. 1197, an original bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2014 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe military personnel strengths for such fiscal year, and for other purposes.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mr. COBURN, Mrs. HAGAN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. TOOMEY, Mr. FLAKE, Mr. CORKER, Mr. BURR, Mr. RISCH, and Mr. MANCHIN):

S. 1807. A bill to amend the Clean Air Act to eliminate the corn ethanol mandate for renewable fuel, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to introduce The Corn Ethanol Mandate Elimination Act of 2013, a bill cosponsored by my distinguished colleagues: Senators TOM COBURN, KAY HAGAN, SUSAN COLLINS, PATRICK TOOMEY, JEFF FLAKE, BOB CORKER, RICHARD BURR, JAMES RISCH, and JOE MANCHIN.

This legislation would eliminate the Federal corn ethanol mandate from the Renewable Fuel Standard, RFS, while leaving the requirement that oil companies purchase and use low-carbon "advanced biofuel" in place.

Let me briefly explain why this legislation is necessary.

The Renewable Fuel Standard, a statute enacted in 2007, requires oil companies to use 16.55 billion gallons of renewable fuel in 2013. This annual requirement increases to 36 billion gallons in 2022.

Every year, the law directs that an increasing portion of this mandate be met using low-carbon "advanced biofuel" that is not derived from corn starch and lowers lifecycle greenhouse gas emissions by at least 50 percent. I strongly support this provision to lower the carbon emissions from our fuel supply.

However, 14.4 billion gallons in 2014, and 15 billion gallons each year after, of the RFS mandate established in statute is met using corn ethanol, which amounts to a corn ethanol mandate.

There are two major problems with continuing to mandate the consumption of more and more corn ethanol in the United States each year.

First and foremost, the policy has led us to divert 44 percent of the U.S. corn crop from food to fuel, about twice the rate in 2006.

As the Associated Press laid out in a recent detailed investigation, the use of corn for ethanol is artificially pushing up food and feed prices while damaging the environment. The investigation found conservation lands are disappearing.

Before Congress enacted the corn ethanol mandate, the U.S. Department of Agriculture Conservation Reserve Program grew every year for nearly a decade. But in the first year after the corn ethanol mandate, more than 2 million acres were removed. Since Obama took office, 5 million more acres have been repurposed.

The AP also found that farmers have broken ground on virgin land, which it described as “the untouched terrain that represents, from an environmental standpoint, the country’s most important asset.”

Using government satellite data, the AP estimates that 1.2 million acres of virgin land in Nebraska and the Dakotas alone have been converted to fields of corn and soybeans since 2006.

Since 2005, the AP calculates that corn farmers increased their use of nitrogen fertilizer by more than two billion pounds.

The nitrates from this fertilizer wash into our rivers and flow to the Gulf of Mexico, where they feed algae. When the algae die, the decomposition consumes oxygen, leaving behind a “dead zone.”

This year, the AP reports the dead zone covered 5,800 square miles of sea floor, about the size of Connecticut.

Using more and more corn for ethanol, in drought years as well as years with bumper crops, has had economic consequences as well as environmental effects.

Higher feed prices have cost our beef, poultry, restaurant, and dairy industries dearly.

According to recent testimony in the House of Representatives, from October 2006 to July 2013, poultry and egg producers have had to bear the burden of higher feed costs totaling over $50 billion.

Joel Brandenberger, the President of the National Turkey Federation, estimates that the RFS cost the turkey industry $1.9 billion in increased feed expenses last year.

According to a recent Price-Waterhouse-Coopers study, the federal mandate on corn-based ethanol substantially raised prices and costs throughout the food supply chain. If the RFS mandate were left unchanged, it would increase chain restaurant industry costs by up to $3.2 billion a year.

But the damage has probably been greatest in California, where dairymen are drowning under a combination of low milk prices and high feed costs.

The milk producers’ group Western United Dairymen reports that more than 400 dairies have gone out of business in the past 5 years, including 105 in the past year alone.

“California’s remaining 1,500 dairies are fighting for survival,” the group said in a recent statement.

The bottom line is increased feed prices associated with corn ethanol have bent this industry to its breaking point.

But the corn ethanol mandate in the Renewable Fuel Standard also presents an additional problem.

As Corporate Average Fuel Economy, CAFE, Standards required by the Ten in Ten Fuel Economy Act drive down gasoline consumption, oil companies face a “blend wall” as the RFS mandate exceeds the limit at which ethanol can be blended into the fuel supply—determined to be 10 percent of total gasoline consumption.

This blend wall is about 13.4 billion gallons of ethanol—well below the 2014 corn ethanol statutory mandate of 14.4 billion gallons.

According to EPA: “EPA does not currently foresee a scenario in which the market could consume enough ethanol . . . to meet the volumes . . . stated in the statute.” This situation is likely to increase gasoline prices.

While EPA has proposed using a creative statutory interpretation to reduce the RFS volumes in 2014, unfortunately EPA’s proposal would reduce the advanced biofuel side of the RFS mandate by more than 41 percent, while it proposes to reduce the corn ethanol portion of the mandate by only 10 percent.

The Corn Ethanol Mandate Elimination Act would address the blend wall directly, thereby allowing EPA to continue increasing volumes of low carbon advanced biofuel.

This legislation would eliminate the corn ethanol mandate, but it’s important to point out it would by no means eliminate the corn ethanol industry. Refiners will continue to blend corn ethanol into the fuel supply in the absence of a mandate for two reasons.

First, ethanol is the preferred octane booster used to increase the efficiency of gasoline.

Second, the wholesale price of ethanol is currently 65 cents per gallon less than the wholesale price of unblended gasoline, meaning blenders lower their costs and increase profits when they add ethanol to gasoline.

The multi-billion dollar corn ethanol industry will compete directly with oil based on price without a mandate, and the economic benefits of mixing corn ethanol into gasoline would remain.

I am aware that the advanced biofuel industry is working to scale and commercialize their technologies, and their investors seek regulatory and economic certainty during this period.

I am also fundamentally committed to the vitally important public health protections provided by the Clean Air Act.

That is why I would like to make it crystal clear that this legislation is a narrow bill repealing the corn ethanol mandate. Senator COBURN and I jointly made this clear when we agreed to the following statement:

“We are opposed to a mandate on the use of corn ethanol and plan to introduce the Corn Ethanol Mandate Elimination Act to repeal this unwise policy. The bill’s language will explicitly clarify that the legislation has no effect on the low-carbon advanced biofuel provisions in the Renewable Fuel Standard, and we are both committed to opposing any amendment to the bill that would broaden its scope to amend, revise or weaken the advanced biofuel provisions or other public health protections provided by the Clean Air Act.

If provisions threatening public health were successfully added to the Corn Ethanol Mandate Elimination Act, we would no longer support the bill.

I also understand that some in the advanced biofuel industry argue that legislative changes to the corn ethanol portion of the Renewable Fuel Standard could reduce certainty for their industry.

Respectfully, I disagree. The current law is not providing this industry with the certainty it needs.

While EPA has some flexibility under the RFS statute to adjust RFS mandated volumes, most of that flexibility rests in EPA’s power to reduce the amount of “advanced biofuel” mandated under the RFS.

EPA’s ability to reduce the corn ethanol mandate under current law and current circumstances is far from clear. Its proposal to reduce the corn ethanol mandate in its recently released draft rule for 2014 will be subject to aggressive legal challenge.

EPA’s lack of discretion has led EPA to propose a rule drastically reducing volumes for advanced biofuels, including biodiesel, by 41 percent, while it proposes only a modest 10 percent reduction in corn ethanol volumes.

Unless The Corn Ethanol Mandate Elimination Act is enacted, EPA will likely carry forward its proposal to dramatically reduce “advanced biofuel" volumes in order to address the blend wall. We believe eliminating the corn ethanol mandate is a much more responsible alternative.

This legislation has strong support from the prepared food industry, dairy, beef, poultry, oil and gas, engine manufacturers, boaters, hunger relief organizations and environmental groups. I would like to list all the organizations that have expressed support for this bill:

ActionAid USA; American Bakers Association; American Frozen Food Institute; American Fuel & Petrochemical Manufacturers; American Meat Institute; American Sportfishing Association; Americans for Prosperity; BoatU.S.; California Dairies, Inc.; California Dairy Campaign; California Poultry Federation; Clean Air Task Force; Competitive Enterprise Institute; Dairy Producers of New Mexico; Dairy Producers of Utah; Environmental Working Group; Freedom Action; Georgia Poultry Federation; Grocery Manufacturers Association; Idaho Dairymen's Association; Indiana State Poultry Association; International Snowmobile Manufacturers Association; Iowa Turkey Federation; Marine Retailers Association of the Americas; Michigan Allied Poultry Industries, Inc.; Milk Producers Council; Minnesota Turkey Growers Association; National Cattlemen's Beef Association; National Chicken Council; National Council of Chain Restaurants; National Marine Manufacturers Association; National Restaurant Association; National Taxpayers Union; National Turkey Federation; Nevada State Dairy Commission; North American Meat Association; North Carolina Poultry Federation; Northwest Dairy Association; Oregon Dairy Farmers Association; Oxfam; South Carolina Poultry Federation; South East Dairy Farmers Association; Southeast Milk Inc.; Specialty Equipment Market Association; Taxpayers for Common Sense; Texas Poultry Federation; The Poultry Federation; Virginia Poultry Federation; Washington State Dairy Federation; Western United Dairymen; and the Wisconsin Poultry & Egg Industries Association.

The Corn Ethanol Mandate Elimination Act of 2013 would fix both of the problems with the current Renewable Fuel Standard.

First, it would eliminate the unnecessary pressure on corn prices and corn production, allowing the multi-billion dollar corn ethanol industry to compete directly with oil based on price, not mandates.

Second, it reduces RFS mandated volumes below the blend wall.

The bill addresses both problems while maintaining the RFS provisions that encourage the development, deployment and growth of cellulosic ethanol, algae-based fuel, green diesel, and other low carbon advanced biofuels, maintaining a market for the innovative, nascent, domestic industry that this statute was designed to build up.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1807

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Corn Ethanol Mandate Elimination Act of 2013".

SEC. 2. ELIMINATION OF CORN ETHANOL MANDATE FOR RENEWABLE FUEL.

(a) REMOVAL OF TABLE.—Section 211(o)(2)(B)(i) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7545(o)(2)(B)(i)) is amended by striking subclause (I).

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 211(o)(2)(B) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7545(o)(2)(B)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i)—

(A) by redesignating subclauses (II) through (IV) as subclauses (I) through (III), respectively;

(B) in subclause (I) (as so redesignated), by striking "of the volume of renewable fuel required under subclause (I)," and

(C) in subclauses (II) and (III) (as so redesignated), by striking "subclause (II)" each place it appears and inserting "subclause (I)"; and

(2) in clause (v), by striking "clause (i)(IV)" and inserting "clause (i)(III)".

(c) ADMINISTRATION.—Nothing in this section or the amendments made by this section affects the volumes of advanced biofuel, cellulosic biofuel, or biomass-based diesel that are required under section 211(o) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7545(o)).

(d) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall promulgate such regulations as are necessary to carry out the amendments made by this section.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date that is 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. MANCHIN (for himself, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SCHUMER, Ms. KLOBUCHAR, Mrs. MCCASKILL, and Mr. COONS):

S. 1814. A bill to encourage, enhance, and integrate Silver Alert plans throughout the United States and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to reintroduce the Earthquake Insurance Affordability Act.

This bill will help families and communities quickly recover after major earthquakes by encouraging local investment in mitigation and insurance coverage.

You see, in California, the State with the greatest exposure to earthquake damage, only about 1 in 10 homeowners has insurance to pay for earthquake damage. Other States, including Washington, Oregon, Alaska, Tennessee, Missouri and Arkansas, also have significant earthquake risks and low rates of earthquake insurance.

Insurance coverage rates are so low that many believe it has now become a national crisis.

Because when homes aren't structurally sound, and insurance is lacking, local earthquake recovery costs quickly become America's costs.

The math is simple: less insurance means more Federal spending after a disaster.

For example, the August 2011 Virginia earthquake was devastating to homeowners in and around Spotsylvania County. Most of those homeowners did not have an insurance policy that covered earthquake damage.

Mr. CANTOR, the House Majority Leader, summed it up: "Obviously the problem is most people in Virginia don't have earthquake insurance. That is going to be a hardship. If there needs to be money from the Federal Government, we'll find the money."

Congress did ultimately find that money. A Federal disaster declaration was made, and homeowners received more than $16 million to cover uninsured losses.

But with bigger disasters come bigger uninsured losses.

Consider the costs of Hurricanes Katrina and Sandy.

The GAO estimates that the federal government provided about $26 billion to homeowners who lacked adequate insurance in response to Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma.

Congress provided $16 billion housing recovery for Sandy victims.

The bottom line is this: Uninsured homeowners drive up federal disaster spending. So if we can find a way to convert uninsured homeowners into insured homeowners, we will lower federal disaster spending and save American taxpayers millions each year.

The Earthquake Insurance Affordability Act will do just that. It will make earthquake insurance more affordable and expand access to coverage. It will dedicate non-federal funding to earthquake loss-mitigation programs to make houses and communities more resilient.

At its core, this legislation would authorize a private-market debt-guarantee program. The U.S. Treasury would guarantee certain debt issued by eligible state earthquake insurance programs following a catastrophic earthquake.

The debt would be limited in amount, and pre-arranged, and the eligible State programs would be highly credit-worthy.

By definition, this legislation is designed to promote the use of private capital to finance earthquake risk. So this means that private capital, not Congressional appropriations, will support rebuilding homes and restoring communities.

The Federal guarantee will assure that qualified insurance programs can sell debt at reasonable rates, even during difficult post-disaster market conditions.

By lowering interest rates, insurance programs can spend less on interest and reinsurance, and instead invest that money on rate reductions and mitigation.

Rate reduction is the key goal; because uninsured homeowners overwhelmingly attribute their lack of insurance to the high price of these policies.

The California Earthquake Authority, the largest earthquake-insurance provider in the state, estimates the Earthquake Insurance Affordability Act will allow them to lower premiums and direct millions of dollars into mitigating homes.

That means the bill will not only lower insurance rates, but thousands more homes would become more earthquake-resistant.

Every homeowner who benefits from this legislation is one less homeowner who will rely on Federal disaster benefits after a catastrophic earthquake—that's millions of taxpayer dollars saved.

I know some of my colleagues will be concerned about putting the full faith and credit of our Federal Government behind insurance programs that are working to pay off catastrophic damages. I shared these concerns; and that is why the bill mandates strict criteria for determining how and when an insurance program can access a Federal guarantee.

First, the program must be an independent, State-run program.

Second, the program must be not for profit. The benefits of a Federal guarantee must go to policyholders, not shareholders.

Third, and most importantly, only financially sound programs are eligible. Before any Federal guarantee is offered, the Treasury Department must carefully confirm, then certify, that the program can repay the debt it incurs.

What is more: as a condition getting approved by the Department, the program must cover all actual and expected costs of conducting these credit reviews and administering the program.

Because of these key features, initial estimates from Congressional Budget Office staff affirm that this legislation brings no budgetary impact.

An independent assessment by the RAND Corporation also found that a program such as this would likely save tens of millions of dollars during a major disaster.

The bill brings other benefits to the taxpayer as well. Under a new provision added to the bill this year, participating State insurance programs must dedicate 2 percent of their Federal guarantee toward mitigating vulnerable properties and providing earthquake-hazard education.

Again, these mitigation funds will bring real benefits to homeowners, without appropriating Federal funds.

According to the United States Geological Survey, there is a 99.7 percent chance that a magnitude 6.7 earthquake will strike California within the next 30 years.

Even more concerning—the USGS forecasts a 46 percent chance that a much more devastating magnitude 7.5 or higher earthquake will occur in California during the same period.

The question is what are we doing to prepare?

Will we stick with the status quo; a system where the Federal Government comes in after the fact and spends billions to try to clean up the mess but leaves the community just as vulnerable to the next disaster?

Or will we apply the lessons from disasters like the 1994 Northridge earthquake where we spent the equivalent of more than $10 billion, and transition to a system where homeowners are encouraged to share the financial burden by purchasing earthquake insurance and making their homes stronger?

In the current budget environment, the choice cannot be simpler. We cannot continue to spend billions on disaster relief when reliable, cheaper options are available.

With a few simple steps, the Earthquake Insurance Affordability will create an affordable mechanism to help our country prepare for, and recover more quickly from, the major earthquakes that we all know are just around the corner. I urge my colleagues to quickly adopt this critical legislation.

By Mr. DURBIN:

S. 1822. A bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to establish fair and consistent eligibility requirements for graduate medical schools operating outside the United States and Canada; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1822

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Foreign Medical School Accountability Fairness Act of 2013".

SEC. 2. PURPOSE.

To establish consistent eligibility requirements for graduate medical schools operating outside of the United States and Canada in order to increase accountability and protect American students and taxpayer dollars.

SEC. 3. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Three for-profit schools in the Caribbean receive more than two-thirds of all Federal funding under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1070 et seq.) that goes to students enrolled at foreign graduate medical schools, despite those three schools being exempt from meeting the same eligibility requirements as the majority of graduate medical schools located outside of the United States and Canada.

(2) The National Committee on Foreign Medical Education and Accreditation and the Department of Education recommend that all foreign graduate medical schools should be required to meet the same eligibility requirements to participate in Federal funding under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1070 et seq.) and see no rationale for excluding certain schools.

(3) The attrition rate at United States medical schools averaged 3 percent for the class beginning in 2009 while rates at for-profit Caribbean schools have reached 26 percent or higher.

(4) In 2013, residency match rates for foreign trained graduates averaged 53 percent compared to 94 percent for graduates of medical schools in the United States.

(5) On average, students at for-profit medical schools operating outside of the United States and Canada amass more student debt than those at medical schools in the United States.

SEC. 4. REPEAL GRANDFATHER PROVISIONS.

Section 102(a)(2) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1002(a)(2)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking clause (i) and inserting the following:

“(i) in the case of a graduate medical school located outside the United States—

“(I) at least 60 percent of those enrolled in, and at least 60 percent of the graduates of, the graduate medical school outside the United States were not persons described in section 484(a)(5) in the year preceding the year for which a student is seeking a loan under part D of title IV; and

“(II) at least 75 percent of the individuals who were students or graduates of the graduate medical school outside the United States or Canada (both nationals of the United States and others) taking the examinations administered by the Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates received a passing score in the year preceding the year for which a student is seeking a loan under part D of title IV.”; and

(2) in subparagraph (B)(iii), by adding at the end the following:

“(V) EXPIRATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority of a graduate medical school described in subclause (I) to qualify for participation in the loan programs under part D of title IV pursuant to this clause shall expire beginning on the first July 1 following the date of enactment of the Foreign Medical School Accountability Fairness Act of 2013.”.

SEC. 5. LOSS OF ELIGIBILITY.

If a graduate medical school loses eligibility to participate in the loan programs under part D of title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1087a et seq.) due to the enactment of the amendments made by section 4, then a student enrolled at such graduate medical school on or before the date of enactment of this Act may, notwithstanding such loss of eligibility, continue to be eligible to receive a loan under such part D while attending such graduate medical school in which the student was enrolled upon the date of enactment of this Act, subject to the student continuing to meet all applicable requirements for satisfactory academic progress, until the earliest of—

(1) withdrawal by the student from the graduate medical school;

(2) completion of the program of study by the student at the graduate medical school; or

(3) the fourth June 30 after such loss of eligibility.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 319—EX-PRESSING SUPPORT FOR THE UKRAINIAN PEOPLE IN LIGHT OF PRESIDENT YANUKOVYCH'S DECISION NOT TO SIGN AN ASSOCIATION AGREEMENT WITH THE EUROPEAN UNION

Mr. MURPHY (for himself, Mr. JOHN-SON of Wisconsin, Mrs. SHAHEEN, and Mr. DURBIN) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 319

Whereas, according to a poll conducted in November 2013, a majority of the people of Ukraine supported signing an historic trade and political agreement with the European Union;

Whereas a closer association between Ukraine and the European Union has been supported by Ukrainian civil society, business leaders, and politicians across the political spectrum and would bring lasting political, democratic, and economic benefits to the people of Ukraine;

Whereas Ukraine successfully passed much of the legislation required to conform to European Union standards for signing an Association Agreement;

Whereas, on September 22, 2012, and November 18, 2013, the Senate unanimously passed resolutions calling for a demonstrable end to selective justice in Ukraine and expressing its belief that Ukraine's future lies with stronger ties to Europe, the United States, and others in the community of democracies;

Whereas the experience of countries such as Poland, Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia provides a positive example of increased economic opportunity, enhanced personal freedom, and good governance, which can also be realized by Ukraine;

Whereas the Government and people of Ukraine have the sovereign right to choose their own foreign policy and economic course, and no other country has the right to determine their political and economic orientation, nor decide which alliances and trade agreements they can join;

Whereas, on November 21, 2013, President Viktor Yanukovych suspended Ukraine's preparations for signing the Association Agreement one week before a critical European Union Summit in Vilnius, Lithuania;

Whereas the abrupt reversal on the eve of the summit following Russian economic coercion and to protect the narrow interests of some officials and individuals in Ukraine prompted hundreds of thousands of Ukrainians all across the country, especially young people and students, to protest the decision and stand in support of furthering Ukraine's Euro-Atlantic integration;

Whereas international nonprofit and non-governmental organizations provide essential care to needy Ukrainians, yet face direct threats and challenges to their existence and administrative and regulatory impediments, including challenges to operating with the tax-exempt status necessary to maximize the use of funds on the ground and threats to the fabric of civil society vital to democracy in Ukraine;

Whereas, on November 30, 2013, at Independence Square in Kyiv, special division police dispersed a peaceful demonstration of students and civil society activists who were calling on President Yanukovych to sign the Association Agreement;

Whereas approximately 35 individuals were detained or arrested, and dozens were hospitalized, some with severe injuries;

Whereas, on December 9, 2013, raids were conducted on three opposition media outlets and the headquarters of one opposition party;

Whereas, on December 11, 2013, Ukrainian authorities conducted an overnight police operation in an attempt to forcefully take control of Independence Square, but were resisted by brave Ukrainians who filled the square and rebuffed the police action;

Whereas all three former Presidents of Ukraine have underscored the need to refrain from violence and the importance of engaging in a dialogue with the opposition; and

Whereas Ukraine faces an impending economic crisis that can only be solved with long term economic reforms: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) stands with the people of Ukraine and supports their sovereign right to chart an independent and democratic future for their country;

(2) urges leaders in the United States and the European Union to continue working together actively to support a peaceful and democratic resolution to the current crisis that moves Ukraine toward a future in the Euro-Atlantic community and a long-term solution to Ukraine's economic crisis;

(3) encourages demonstrators and members of the opposition and civil society in Ukraine to continue avoiding the use of violence and engage in a dialogue of national reconciliation;

(4) urges all political parties to refrain from hate speech or actions of an anti-Semitic or other character which further divide the Ukrainian people when they need to be united;

(5) calls on the Government of Ukraine to refrain from further use of force or acts of violence against peaceful protestors, and to respect the internationally-recognized human rights of the Ukrainian people, especially the freedoms of speech and assembly;

(6) condemns the decision by Ukrainian authorities to use violence against peaceful demonstrators on November 30, December 1, and December 11, 2013, and calls for those responsible to be swiftly brought to justice and all detained nonviolent demonstrators to be immediately released; and

(7) notes that in the event of further state violence against peaceful protestors, the President and Congress should consider whether to apply targeted sanctions, including visa bans and asset freezes, against individuals responsible for ordering or carrying out the violence.

Mr. TOOMEY. This was also something that everybody who had anything to do with this bill knew was going to be untrue. Insurance plans differ. Some cover certain doctors, others cover other doctors. Since some plans were certainly going to be canceled, inevitably some people were going to lose the plans that covered their doctor. This was no great mystery, and it was not some unintended and unforeseeable consequence. It was part of the design of the bill. Yet people were told: If you like your doctor, you will be able to keep your doctor.

I got this email from a woman who lives in Westmoreland County. She says:

I have been self-employed for 13 years and have never been without health insurance. 3 years ago I was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis. Having an expensive preexisting condition was not a problem for me as I had never let my insurance lapse. My medications cost (without insurance) $4,000+ per month. I received notice several weeks ago that they were going to cancel my plan and were doing so as of Jan. 1 and I had to sign up for new coverage through the health insurance exchange.

My staff reached out to this woman to see if we could help. It turns out that where she lives and given her circumstances there were two different plans available to her. One plan covered her doctors, the other plan covered the medicine she needed to treat her multiple sclerosis. Neither plan would do both. What kind of a choice is it that this woman is going to have to make?

I have another email that arrived last week:

I finally got to where I could compare plans on the government website, only to find that my insurance premiums would go from $512 per month for a plan with a $500 deductible/$2500 out of pocket plan to $799 for a plan with a $500 deductible and a $2700 out of pocket expense.

Where is the savings? None of the plans include my current doctor, whom I want to desperately keep. Obamacare is such a disaster!!! Please stand firm and continue to work towards REPEALING it.

Finally, there is one more false promise—I am going to give some examples of responses I have gotten—and that is the promise that premiums for a family would decrease by $2,500 per year. In fact, the data I have seen suggests that on average premiums in the individual market have been increasing. Consider the case of some of the people who have reached out to my office from Pennsylvania.

This is a small business owner from Carbon County, PA, who sent me this email last week. He said:

I have had an HSA high deductible plan . . . for several years for my employees. I have paid 100% percent of the premiums and contributed 50% of the deductible every year that they paid the other 50% percent. I just received notice that my insurance premiums are going up 100%.

What can be done to enforce the president's statements that we can keep our current plans? There is no way I can pay this new premium. My employees will be the ones hurt the most. They loved the coverage they had and I hate that we can no longer provide this benefit.

Here is an email I got from a father of two from Bucks County, PA.

I received notice last week that my healthcare will more than triple. Currently I am paying $265 a month for me and my two young sons . . . my monthly premium will go up to $836 a month!!!

The president promised "you can keep your plan" and "families will save $2500 per year" . . . I can keep my plan. I just can't afford it . . . I do qualify for subsidies . . . $80 bucks a month.

I got this email from a man from Mercer County, PA, 2 days ago.

I just became another Obamacare victim. Because my employer's health plan costs are going up almost 100% I will have $400 less in my pocket each month. At 58 I will have to cut way back on how much money I can put into my local economy. Obamacare needs to be scrapped.

This email is from a man from Crawford County, PA:

I am a small business owner, and I speak with many vendors in my field. One of said vendors says that his monthly cost would increase to $9.00 an hour on insurance alone. Another said he feared he would not even be able to stay in business because of the insurance costs. My own situation is just as dire. Currently, I personally pay about $1,500 a month for insurance, and under Obamacare I have seen costs go up by $375. On top of that, my wife, who is an insurance agent, fears that she will lose her coverage next fall due to the law.

Here is an email I got last week from a father from Luzerne County.

Please keep fighting the disaster that is happening to the thousands of working men and women that will be losing their health care along with some of us retired folks.

Our son is one of them and the alternative is unthinkable—his plan cost doubled to $300 a month . . . but the deductible is $4500. Now how can anyone say everyone will have affordable health care insurance on top of the statement no one will lose their plan or doctor if they are satisfied with them? Your fight is hard, but our prayers are with you.

Here is an email I got from a small business owner from Cumberland County, PA. He writes:

I am a small business in the Carlisle area. We have been in business for 30 years . . . I offered insurance to the full time employees for many years . . . If it weren't for the rising costs of health care I could hire another employee because we could use the help but with the anticipated increases I won't be able to. I have been told by our insurance carrier that we can expect up to 50% increases.

Finally, a small business owner from Chester County, PA, wrote this email last week:

We just got our Insurance coverage options for my small business. Previous rate was $470.00 per month with $0.00 deductible, a good plan. The new plan is $692.00 per month with a $2,000.00 deductible, a bad plan. OK, I cannot keep my plan. To get close to the one I need to pay more and incur a ridiculous deductible.

This is not free market. I don't like the government telling me what is best for me.

I have several older employees and their rates are up over $1,000.00 per month each. I cannot pay for their insurance and they cannot afford to either. I am forced to drop the plan or remove them from employment.

This is out of control.

This is a small sample of the emails I have gotten. I am one Senator from one State. The fact is the vast majority of people who experience these problems don't send an email to their Senator.

So we have this tiny little sliver of the hundreds of thousands—actually millions—of Americans who are suffering from the direct consequences—and I would argue intended consequences—of this bill. They are unable to keep their health insurance plan, unable to keep their doctors, not experiencing savings but, rather, experiencing increases in costs. These are just a few of the terrible consequences of Obamacare.

There are many others I could cite, but I was just focusing on broken promises tonight. There are too many to list.

I do want to also stress that these are symptoms of a completely and impossibly flawed bill. The real underlying problem of Obamacare is something that Friedrich Hayek warned us about; he called it the fatal conceit. This is the idea that a small group of really smart people can know more than the combined, accumulated knowledge and wisdom that is disbursed across an entire population. It is an absurd notion. Yet it is at the heart of all kinds of big government plans, socialism everywhere, and it is clearly at the heart of Obamacare.

The idea is that these Mandarins who are so smart and know so much, they should be able to force their will on everyone else. It is an extraordinarily insulting premise that this is based on, but it is.

The premise is that individual men and women across America are certainly not qualified, they are certainly not smart enough to know what is good enough for them. They should not be free to decide what kind of health plan they want to buy for their family.

There are tradeoffs that you make when you buy something like a health insurance plan, such as how important is a higher deductible versus lower premiums or the importance of having maternity coverage or the importance that someone might attach to a particular doctor.

All of those judgments, which are so personal, are taken away from individuals in ObamaCare. That is not for Americans to decide. You will take the plan that is available to you and approved by the government, period. By the way, you are breaking the law if you don't, and you will be assessed a fine.

This is outrageous. This is not the society we have always been, but it is really just the most recent and egregious example of this warning that Hayek gave us—this arrogance of big government. I would argue that it is an offensive affront to the freedom of the American people, and it is predictably and sensationally a failure.

I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BOOKER). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

(Mr. MURPHY assumed the Chair.)

(Mr. DONNELLY assumed the Chair.)

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KING). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak until the top of the hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PRYOR). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I come to the floor today, as I have over the past several years, to talk about issues affecting this country. I know there is a nomination we are discussing on the floor, and I have concerns about the issues related to that nominee and the way that nomination has been brought forward because it was done by what I believe to be an abuse-of-power move in a way that resulted in voting in the middle of the night, discussions in the middle of the night—all, in my opinion, to distract from the disaster of the Obama health care law.

The Obama health care law continues to affect people all across the country. What we saw on October 1 in the great debacle of the rollout of the Web site was really just about a Web site on October 1. But come January 1, it will be about real people who have lost their insurance who are going to be hurt personally in terms of their own health by this terrible law.

So I come to the floor, as I have week after week since the law passed, to talk about concerns I have as a doctor, someone who has practiced medicine in Wyoming for 24 years as an orthopedic surgeon, taking care of people from around the State, and someone who as a medical doctor was director of a program called the Wyoming Health Fairs aimed at giving people low-cost blood screens, having health fairs people can attend from around the State where they can check their blood results and visit with doctors and nurses and others in the community about issues of heart disease, diabetes, all aimed at preventing disease, early detection of problems, and lowering the cost of their care.

So I had great interest when this health care law was proposed and while watching it unfold. The concerns I had as it was passed continue today, and I think more and more Americans are seeing that those concerns are being realized in their own lives. And that is what it is about—people's lives.

The Web site failures are just the tip of the iceberg. What people are seeing now all across the country are higher premiums, and there are stories rampant around the country.

I still recall the President of the United States saying that by the end of his first term, insurance premiums would be down $2,500 per family. Instead, families are paying much more for health insurance. There are concerns, obviously, because of canceled coverage. Around the country, over 5 million folks, I understand from recent accounts, have received letters saying that they have lost their insurance, that their insurance will be canceled effective January 1.

The President promised: "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor." But now we are seeing that many people aren't keeping their doctors. Even though they like their doctors and want to keep their doctors, they can't.

There are issues of fraud and identity theft that we are hearing about on a daily basis. The chief of staff of one of the Members of the Senate was applying on the Obama health care Web site, the government Web site, trying to get insurance just this Monday, and it sure looked like the Federal Web site and he thought he was on the Federal Web site and was putting in information. Then it goes to a screen where they wanted to know his bank account number and his PIN number.

He said: This can't be right.

He called the help line and spent over an hour on the phone, and they ultimately said: No. Get off of that. It can't be the Federal Government Web site. Get off of it.

He was focused enough to think, this can't be right, but the fraud is going to be rampant, we know that, and identity theft as well.

And then we are seeing huge problems with higher copays and deductibles.

I have with me a couple articles. Wednesday's Wall Street Journal has their recent poll numbers. "Health Law Hurts President Politically." The sub-headline is that the disapproval rate of Obama's job performance rises. "The disapproval rate of the President's job performance now rises to an all-time high of 54 percent," it says, "even as Americans are upbeat on the economy." So it is not the economy that has people so disappointed and disapproving of the President.

Let me read a couple paragraphs because this is about the President of the United States and what we would want in a President of the United States in terms of credibility with the American people.

The Federal health-care law is becoming a heavier political burden for President Barack Obama and his party, despite increased confidence in the economy and the public's own generally upbeat sense of well-being, a new Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll suggests.

They go through how the poll was conducted, but people across the country believe the NBC/Wall Street Journal poll is a true reflection of what is happening nationwide.

It says:

Disapproval of Mr. Obama's job performance has hit an all-time high in the poll, at 54 percent, amid the flawed rollout of the health law. Half of those polled now consider the law a bad idea, also a record high.

This is a big-time survey of 1,000 adults, and this is really a disturbing part for us as a nation and should sadden all America:

The survey of 1,000 adults conducted between Dec. 4 and Dec. 8 found a sharp erosion since January in many of the attributes—honesty, leadership, ability to handle a crisis . . .

These are abilities we want in a President. We want a President who is honest and who is perceived by the public as honest. We want a President who can handle a crisis and is perceived by the public as being able to handle a crisis. But they say there has been "a sharp erosion since last January in many of the attributes—honesty, leadership, ability to handle a crisis—that had kept Mr. Obama aloft through the economic and political turmoil of his first term."

The poll goes on and asks: In terms of the impact of the President's health care law, is this going to have a positive impact on you and your family? Fewer than one out of eight people in the country today believes this health care law will have a positive impact on them and their family. We are changing the entire health care system of the country, and only one out of eight people believes it is actually going to help them?

The performance of the President is considered to be very bad, a significant disapproval, and it is because of the health care law.

People look at this and they say: What does this mean to me? How is this going to affect my life? Those are the issues we talked about here. People are being hit with the incredible increased costs. They say: Well, there are some policies that may be a little bit cheaper, the so-called bronze policies. So the New York Times took a look at that. Again, these are articles from just this week.

This is from Monday, December 9: "On Health Exchanges, Premiums May Be Low, but Other Costs Can Be High." This is by Robert Pear this Monday, a well-known writer who does his research and gets the facts. He says, "But as consumers dig into the details . . ."—boy, that is a key phrase because I believe that so many people who voted for this health care law never looked into the details, didn't know what it meant, didn't know what was going to be in it because NANCY PELOSI famously said: First you have to pass it before you get to find out what is in it. Well, Americans are now looking at it, digging into it.

Robert Pear in the New York Times said:

But as consumers dig into the details, they are finding that the deductibles and other out-of-pocket costs are often much higher than what is typical in employer-sponsored health plans.

So what they actually have to pay out of their pockets is much higher than in employer-sponsored health plans.

Well, people really care about what they have to pay personally for things.

The same day, the Wall Street Journal, Monday, December 9, page 1.

"High Deductibles Fuel New Worries of Health-Law Sticker Shock"—the same information that we have seen there in the New York Times.

It says the average individual deductible for what is called the bronze plan on the exchange, the plan I was talking about a little earlier, which is the lowest priced average deductible is $5,081 a year, according to a new report on insurance offerings in 34 of the 36 States that rely on the federally—Washington-run—online marketplace. That is 42 percent higher than the average deductible last year on plans that were purchased. This is before the Federal law took place. "High Deductibles Fuel New Worries of Health-Law Sticker Shock."

I heard the President say the States that have done it have done it very well. It is astonishing. When you turn to the second part of this article, page A6 says "Deductibles Fuel New Worries of Health-Law Sticker Shock." What about the States doing their own plan? The headline above that: "Health-Site Snafus Plague Maryland," a State that has decided to do their own Web site.

This is from Monday:

Maryland is struggling to fix its troubled health-insurance website more than two months after it opened, showing how technology woes are affecting more than just the federal system.

We see it is not just the Web site—one article about the bad Web site, the next article is about higher copays and deductibles. Interestingly, the official in charge of Maryland's insurance marketplace resigned after criticism of her decision to take a vacation in the Cayman Islands during Thanksgiving week. New statistics released Friday showed just a trickle of customers signing up for private coverage in the State.

It is interesting that States are having problems and the Federal Government is having problems. People wanted to keep their insurance. They wanted to keep their insurance. They liked their insurance.

I talked to a woman—a rancher in Wyoming—at the Farm Bureau meeting. She lost her insurance. Her insurance worked very well for her and her family, but she lost it because it didn't meet President Obama's criteria of the 10 different standards that had to be met. She knows me and called me Doc because I had known her, and I am a doctor in Wyoming. She said it is interesting that the reason she lost her insurance is because it didn't include maternity coverage.

She said, Doc, I had a hysterectomy. I don't need maternity coverage. She said, I know I don't need maternity coverage, but apparently President Obama believes she needs maternity coverage. The Democrats in the Senate believe she needs maternity coverage.

The question is, Who is the best judge for you and your family? Is it the government or the Democrats who believe they know better than you do or the freedom-loving Americans who believe they can make their own decisions about their lives and their families and what insurance they want or do not want.

People wanted to keep their insurance. They weren't allowed to, but the President said they could. Time and time again, the President said people could keep their insurance if they liked their insurance. I think that is one of the major reasons the President's credibility has dropped.

As a matter of fact, there is a non-partisan fact checker called PolitiFact, and each year they go through lots of comments and lots of statements that are made, and they came out last night with their lie of the year. They do this every year—the lie of the year. The lie of the year that came out from PolitiFact for the year 2013 was: If you like your health care plan, you can keep it. We all know who said it—the President of the United States.

They go on to say he didn't just say it once. We counted dozens of times that President Barack Obama said if people like their health plan, they can keep it. They go on to say:

It was a catchy political pitch and a chance to calm nerves about his dramatic and complicated plan to bring historic change to America's health insurance system. "If you like your health plan, you can keep it," President Barack Obama said many times, but the promise was impossible to keep.

This fall, as cancellation letters were going out to approximately 4 million Americans, the public realized the President's breezy assurances were wrong and, therefore, they have given it the lie of the year.

People saw this coming. Republicans saw this coming. My colleague from Wyoming, Senator MIKE ENZI, saw this coming. That is why he came to the floor years ago and said: People are going to lose their coverage. People are going to lose it. He brought a resolution to the floor because he actually reads the Federal Register, and he saw the regulations that came out.

He came to this floor with legislation to say: Wait a second. If you truly believe people can keep their coverage, you have to adopt this piece of legislation so people truly can keep their coverage. Yet we saw Republicans vote with Senator ENZI, saying let people keep their coverage. We saw Democrats say, forget it, Senator ENZI, we don't believe you are right.

The President was wrong; Senator ENZI was right.

There was a letter to the editor in the Powell Tribune in Powell, WY, with the headline "Enzi saw ACA impacts beforehand, shows value of Senator ENZI."

Dear Editor: Fox News had a very interesting and informative program Tuesday evening Nov. 6 on "The Kelly Files with Megyn Kelly."

As anyone who watches Fox News knows, they are covering the beginning effects of the Affordable Care Act, also known as ObamaCare, as it is being implemented. Megyn Kelly began her program stating she had a special guest who had predicted three-and-one-half years ago almost exactly what will happen when the ObamaCare law guess into effect this October.

Her special guest was our own Wyoming senior Senator MIKE ENZI and he had made his predictions in a speech on the Senate floor three-and-one-half years ago. He was then called a fearmonger by the Democrats and a radical rightwinger. Senator ENZI was probably one of a very few elected officials who had actually read the bill.

Senator ENZI reads all the bills. He understands the bills and the implications and then reads the Federal Register so he knows what is in them. He then brings to the floor thoughtful pieces of legislation to actually make things better for the American people, not worse.

What we are now seeing is that people can't keep their insurance. They are losing their insurance, their doctor, and losing their hospitals. It is interesting in terms of being able to not even keep your doctor, not being able to go to the hospital you prefer.

I would like to talk for a few seconds about the doctor-patient relationship and why when the President says: "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period," that actually caused comfort for people. But, again, that is another broken promise. It is not necessarily ranked by PolitiFact to the level of, "If you like your coverage, you can keep your coverage," because people have gotten the letters. Next year we will see more and more people who will not be able to keep their doctor.

As a doctor, I wrote an article that appeared on Wednesday of this week in Investors Business Daily called "ObamaCare Disrupts the Delicate Relationship Between Patient and Doctor." I would like to share parts of it now specifically because this past weekend on one of the Sunday talk shows Rahm Emanuel's brother Ezekiel Emanuel, who was one of the architects of the President's health care law, which was written behind closed doors, was on one of his talk shows responding to a question about the President's comment, "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor." Can you really keep your doctor?

What I wrote in this column December 11 was:

A central architect of the President's health care law admitted this week that the often repeated promise that "if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor" simply isn't true.

Instead, Dr. Ezekiel Emanuel explained that if you like your doctor, you will simply need to pay more to keep your doctor.

As a physician, I know firsthand how this will hurt many Americans.

I write about how families look to doctors as trusted friends, confidants, counselors, and turn to them for advice in making life-and-death decisions.

In Wyoming, patients have included me in graduations, weddings, and asked me to serve as a pallbearer at funerals. They have asked me to pray with them, referee family disputes, and provide reassurance when a doctor they didn't know was called in to consult.

Norman Rockwell's painting "Doctor and Doll" tells the story. A little girl holds up the doll as the trusted family doctor listens with a stethoscope. A caring and compassionate physician takes the time to reassure a concerned little girl.

The doctor-patient relationship is a very special bond. It requires faith and trust for a patient to allow me to cut into their body to remove a tumor, to replace a wornout joint, to fix a broken bone, to repair a torn ligament, and above all else, to do no harm.

The President knew of that special relationship between people and their doctors. That is why when he was trying to gain support for the health care law, he made a clear and simple promise to the American people. The President said: "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period."

Now people all across the country are finding out that they can't keep their doctor. The same law that has caused millions of Americans to lose the health insurance that worked for them is now causing them to lose their doctor.

People who are shopping for insurance on government exchanges are being forced to purchase insurance for things they don't want, don't need, and will never use. To keep costs down, many of these policies limit the doctors and hospitals that patients can use.

Some of the Nation's premier hospitals—including the Mayo Clinic and Cedars-Sinai Medical Center—are excluded from many insurance exchanges in their networks. Some of the best children's hospitals in the country are also excluded from the exchanges. This means a child with cancer may lose access to his or her doctor and their specialty hospital. Why? Because of the law.

In New Hampshire, 10 of the State's 26 hospitals are excluded from the only carrier that offers insurance in the exchange. The head of the medical staff at one of the excluded hospitals in New Hampshire has learned that her plan does not even let her, the chief of staff of the hospital, seek treatment at her own hospital.

The situation can be equally bad for seniors on Medicare. Thousands of doctors caring for seniors on Medicare Advantage have been dropped from their networks. Those Medicare patients are now going to be challenged to find a new doctor to take care of them.

The President's health care law is making it harder for doctors as well as for patients. Doctors know their patients. They know their health history, they know their lives, and doctors value the personal relationship as much as the patient does.

People become doctors in the first place to take care of their patients. Even if someone is able to keep their doctor, they will not necessarily be able to spend as much time with them as they might like to. That is because nearly two-thirds of doctors expect to have to spend more time on paperwork under the requirements of the law.

This isn't at all what the President promised the American people. People all across America put their faith and their trust in Barack Obama when they elected him President. It is the same kind of faith and trust they have in their own doctor. When patients lose trust in their doctor, as citizens they are now losing faith in their President, it is extremely difficult to regain that trust.

So I continue to hear from my patients in Wyoming. They have always had my home phone number. They are anxious. They are angry. They know what they want from the health care reform. They want access to quality affordable care. That is not what they got with this law. Now many face losing the doctor who has always been there for them.

If President Obama wants to regain the trust of the American people, he will sit down with Republicans to deliver reforms that will help all Americans and fully protect the doctor-patient relationship. After all, President Obama has his own doctor at the White House, a doctor who is dedicated to the President's care. I am sure the President values his relationship just as much as other Americans value their relationship with their doctor.

I continue to come to the floor. I see my colleagues are arriving. I would call their attention to this issue, as they say we have to make the coverage for all these things, they feel they know what is best for American patients, we need to provide psychiatric insurance an coverage, and I have voted to provide parity for psychiatric care, but yesterday's New York Times article by Robert Pear, "Fewer Psychiatrists Seen Taking Health Insurance." So the insurance the President is providing for people doesn't actually help them. It maybe makes the President feel better, but it is not helping people get care.

The President has been very confused and used the word "coverage" when he should have been talking about actual health care for people, providing physicians to take care of them so people can get what they need in health care reform, the care they need, from a doctor they choose, at lowers costs.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question occurs on the nomination.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Deborah Lee James, of Virginia, to be Secretary of the Air Force?

Mr. BARRASSO. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BOOKER), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON), the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI), the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. ROCKEFELLER), and the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. SCHATZ) are necessarily absent.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. ALEXANDER), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. COATS), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. CORKER), the Senator from Idaho (Mr. CRAPO), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM), the Senator from Utah (Mr. HATCH), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. ALEXANDER) would have voted "nay."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEVIN). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 79, nays 6, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I have an announcement. I realize everyone is tired, anxious, and some are a little concerned about everything.

I have had, especially late last night and early this morning, conversations with Republicans and Democrats as to what we should do this weekend.

The next set of votes will come shortly before noon today. Then we will have another set of votes this afternoon. Absent consent, the Senate will vote late Saturday, about 10:30 or thereabouts, on confirmation of Jeh Johnson to be the Secretary of Homeland Security.

The Senate has already received a budget bill from the House. We expect momentarily to receive the Defense bill from the House. I wish to have the Senate process these important bills as quickly possible. I plan to move to proceed on these bills as soon as we can. That would be as soon as we handle the pending nominations that are now before this body.

Thereafter, there are certain things we need to do before Christmas break. We need to do those two important bills, the budget and defense. We have to do the Chair of the Federal Reserve system. There is an Under Secretary of State that is very urgent, according to John Kerry. We have a Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security, Under Secretary of Department of Interior, the head of the Internal Revenue Service, and the remaining judge on the D.C. Circuit. There have been requests from everybody—I shouldn't say that—lots and lots of people to do other things, but we are limited as to what we can do before next weekend. There are some other nominations that we are happy to discuss with individual Senators.

So it would be my suggestion that we go ahead and do this vote; during this vote, and prior to the next series of votes, I will meet with the Republican leader to see if there is a way we can give some time, especially to the staff, over the weekend. These people have worked extremely hard, and I haven't heard a complaint from a single one of them, quite frankly.

I went up last evening and visited the court reporters. We have 18 court reporters, and up on the 4th floor they have been sharing—for a little respite—two beds and taking naps, or at least trying to lie down and rest for a bit. They are working in 15-minute shifts, and they have been doing that for days now. So if we can work that out, I would be happy to do that.

My goal is we would wind up at the same place on Monday in the evening as we would wind up if we did all this stuff over the weekend. So I am happy to be as cooperative as possible. Christmas is on its way, and there are certain things we need to have done. There are lots of other things we need to do, but we are probably not going to be able to do those.

So I have laid out for everyone a broad scope of the schedule. I will meet with my friend the Republican leader and see if there is some way we can do this; otherwise, we will just proceed on.

The good news is that following the vote this afternoon, we wouldn't have anything until tomorrow night under the schedule as now listed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate be brought to a close on the nomination of Heather Anne Higginbottom, of the District of Columbia, to be Deputy Secretary of State for Management and Resources.

The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON), the Senator from Oregon (Mr. MERKLEY), the Senator from Florida (Mr. NELSON), the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. ROCKEFELLER), the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. SCHATZ), and the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI) are necessarily absent.

Mr. CORNYN. NOMINATION OF HEATHER ANNE HIGGINBOTTOM TO BE DEPUTY SECRETARY OF STATE FOR MANAGEMENT AND RESOURCES

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will now report the nomination.

The assistant bill clerk read the nomination of Heather Anne Higginbottom, of the District of Columbia, to be Deputy Secretary of State for Management and Resources.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the provisions of S. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will now be up to 8 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination, equally divided in the usual form.

Who yields time?

If neither side wishes to yield time, the time now will be equally divided.

The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I wish to take a short time here to discuss a situation which I think is gaining some attention in the actual news media on a continuing basis.

But with the Affordable Care Act and what we are doing or not doing here on the floor of the Senate with regards to the 51–50 controversy, perhaps we overlooked the number one obligation we have as Members of this body, and that is our national security, the defense of our individual freedoms, and the part we play in determining the same kind of objectives—liberty and freedom—all throughout the world. I am talking about foreign policy, and I am talking about the very dangerous situation that we face with regard to Iran.

On November 24 the United States, Germany, France, China, Great Britain, and Russia signed an interim agreement with Iran regarding its nuclear weapons program. The President and Secretary John Kerry, former colleague, have applauded this deal.

The President has claimed: We have opened a new path forward toward a world that is more secure. The Secretary of State, who came before us this week and gave Senators a briefing, argues: This is why we had sanctions in the first place.

With all due respect, I disagree. The world, it seems to me, is not a safer place, and in 6 months I do not believe we will be one step closer to dismantling Iran's ability to produce a nuclear weapon.

This administration is asking us to trust a regime which has been clear on its intentions, quite frankly, to wipe Israel off the face of the planet—their words—and, is the world's largest state-sponsor of terrorism, sponsor of the Assad regime, Hezbollah, and Hamas.

I don't think that represents a step toward security. I think that is misguided at best. This, to me, is not a good plan. I would even reverse that to say it is a bad plan.

At this moment, the administration is asking—rather pressuring—Congress to back down from additional sanctions which many of us have supported and think would certainly a better thing to do at this particular time. At any rate, this is not a request that I can oblige. Sanctions are, indeed, the reason that Iran has decided to come to the table. But coming to the table and honestly negotiating are certainly two different things.

If the reports are true, the administration has been holding secret talks with Iran for months. I do not know what was discussed during those talks. I am not sure that anyone in the Senate really does know. What did the State Department, the Treasury Department, and the President offer to bring Iran to the public stage? It seems to me that should be transparent. So I think the Congress and the American people are left to wonder with regard to transparency what was arranged before this deal or this peace plan?

The bigger problem is that it has taken painstaking effort on the part of those like myself and others in this body who care about our Nation's security and the security of our allies to implement sanctions to the strength that we have today. It has taken a decade. It has taken six actions by the Security Council of the United Nations, 10 years of work, and a tremendous effort to finally get people on board. But now the President is asking us to back off after we have gained the support of the international community and just begun to make inroads.

The administration is offering to cut back now on these sanctions and to allow the Iranian government to continue enriching the uranium. Why? It is widely accepted that the Iranians have no real use for enriched uranium to use for nuclear power because Russia provides fuel supplies for its sole operational nuclear power plant. But they do have use for enriched uranium to contribute to the assembly of a nuclear weapon.

Why should we back off and only get promises? Why should we not keep applying pressure on Iran through sanctions until they give up their entire program? It seems to me that it would be in our best interests that Iran would commit to several things for this deal to be a true step for security. I am just going to mention a few. No. 1, let's just get to the heart of the matter: Public acceptance for the Jewish State of Israel and to allow for the peaceful co-existence of the Israeli people in the Middle East. Nobody in Iran has agreed to that. That is the main issue, the right of Israel to exist. That should be the foundation that we have to start all talks.

Then we should have reporting and inspection access to the Parchin facility, and full details of the undeclared nuclear activities.

Third, dismantling of Iran's plutonium-producing heavy water reactor at Arak. Fourth, the construction of new centrifuges has to stop. Last, an end to all enrichment. Unfortunately this agreement fails to include any of these points.

If the purpose of sanctions was to get Iran to the negotiating table, how did we walk away without getting what we need, a complete end to Iran's nuclear program? Difficult, but certainly the overarching and primary goal. For a decade, Iran has openly disregarded the tenets of the nuclear nonproliferation agreement, legally binding resolutions passed by the United Nations Security Council, and mandatory inspections by the International Atomic Energy Association, the IAEA. All of this, completely disregarded by Iran's regime.

But the President believes we should trust them. Why? Because Hassan Rouhani has been elected President? On the international scene he certainly is a smiling presence. It is well accepted, however, that the Supreme Leader, Ayatollah Khamenei, does actually control everything in Iran, including its nuclear policy, meaning that Mr. Rouhani's election equates with no change in Iran, except in regards to its public face.

It seems to me this is why we cannot back off now. Many of my colleagues, in particular—Senator KIRK and Senator GRAHAM—are working on a new phase of sanctions. They are tough sanctions and I am right there with them.

I do not have any faith with regard to where the Iranians claim they will be in six months. Israel's Prime Minister,

Benjamin Netanyahu, has called this a "dangerous blunder." He has warned "Israel has the right and the obligation to defend itself by itself against any threat."

It concerns me that the administration has no Phase II plan in place for the end of this 6-month period. If in fact we ease the sanctions, which we are doing, and people take advantage of easing those sanctions and are doing business with Iran, to put those same sanctions back in place, or tougher sanctions back in place, is going to be very difficult. One of my colleagues described this as once the toothpaste is out of the tube you can't put it back. Ten years, six different attempts in the Security Council finally taking a stand—how do you put back the sanctions that we have had in place that brought Iran to the table if in fact at the end of this period no progress is being made? Not to mention the tougher sanctions that we have proposed.

It is a real concern. The administration's hope, of course, is that this leads to a stronger long-term agreement. I hope this works out but I am highly skeptical. When the interim agreement is up, I think Iran will remain capable of producing a nuclear weapon in a mere few weeks because we are not asking more of this regime. At that moment we must have very strong sanctions in place to make sure that Iran does not weaponize with regard to its nuclear capability.

I fully support a new round of sanctions, and I will continue to work with my colleagues to ensure that these are passed before the 6-month period is over. Unfortunately, if we do not take this kind of action, Iran is set to gain everything while the United States loses, not just the United States but Israel and Europe as well. Ending Iran's nuclear weapons program entirely is what I consider a path toward a world that would be more secure.

In today's issue of the Wall Street Journal, there is an editorial called "Mood-Music Diplomacy On Iran." Basically, it simply states more sanctions would strengthen the United States leverage with Tehran. It closes by saying that Secretary Kerry "now likes to quote Ronald Reagan's 'trust but verify' mantra for dealing with Iran." But it goes on to say, "But the Gipper's real legacy was to show resolve when it counted. The Obama administration and their opposition to new sanctions with a delayed trigger feeds suspicions," according to this editorial, "that it is eager to accept just about any agreement with Iran." And it states, "Members of Congress from both parties who want a good and credible deal can help by passing this sanctions bill."

I think that is advice well taken.

I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KAINE). If there is nobody who seeks recognition, the time will be equally divided.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I yield back the Democrats' time on this nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All Democratic time is yielded.

Mr. PRYOR. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COATS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. HIRONO). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COATS. Madam President, we are now in about the third day of a somewhat tortured process that was the result of a power grab that has changed the tradition of the Senate, a tradition which held for about 225 years.

Republicans are frustrated with the successful attempt made by the Democratic Party under its leader to change the rules—to break the rules to change the rules. So we end up with no rule, no rule relative to protecting the rights of the minority.

I know it is easy for those who have been elected in recent years and who have never served in the minority because they simply don't have the experience of what it is like to be subject to a leader and a party which basically says: We don't care what you think, we don't care what you say, we don't care what you do, none of it will be allowed unless we give you consent to do it. I know a lot of my friends across the aisle have said: It is your party that is holding things up and you are making the Senate a dysfunctional institution. What they haven't done is ask: Why are you doing this?

First of all, I don't believe we are the ones making it dysfunctional, but even if one thinks that, the question has not been asked: Why are you doing this? We are doing this because we have 3 years, or more, of pent-up frustration under the leadership of this majority leader who has essentially turned the Senate into the House of Representatives.

People say: Well, what is wrong with that? Majority vote rules on just about everything else we do, so why shouldn't majority vote rule here? The Senate was not set up that way. It is famously known that the Senate was set up to be a place where tempers could be cooled, passions could be cooled, something could be debated and worked on. And if major legislation is passed that affects this country significantly, it is passed in a bipartisan fashion, following thorough debate. And we have always had a provision which basically says those in the minority will have their right to participate in the debate and have their right to offer amendments.

We have been shut down from offering amendments, and there has been growing frustration on our side because this is not how the Senate has worked traditionally. This has not how it has worked historically. This is not how it has worked according to the Founding Fathers' determination of protecting the Senate, giving Members an extra long term, giving Members the opportunity to use the agreed-upon rules to allow the right of someone in the minority to speak up.

Democrats are going to rue the day when they made this move, when they jammed this down our throats and said: If you don't like it, tough. Because at some point the pendulum will swing, and I think maybe sooner than a lot of people think; 2014 looks like a turnaround year. If it is, they are suddenly going to find themselves in the minority, and we will see what happens and whether they will learn what it is like to be denied the opportunity to be elected to the Senate and be a Member of this body, to be 1 of 100 people who are chosen to represent their States and represent the United States of America, and yet be shut down from having any opportunity whatsoever to have a voice in what goes forward here, shut down from offering your thoughts, your amendment, and the ability to represent your State, and to be told by the majority leader: I will decide whether you can have an amendment. And, by the way, I will use procedures to make sure you can't have your amendment debated.

I have had the privilege of serving on two different occasions. I came in early 1989 and served 10 years in the Senate. I don't recognize the Senate today. I came back in 2010, 12 years later, and I don't recognize this place. This is not the Senate I joined in 1989. It was under Democratic control, like today, but it is different now. George Mitchell was the majority leader at that time. The Democrats had the majority. They controlled the Senate. I had served 10 years in the House of Representatives, along with my colleague from Kansas, Senator ROBERTS, who is here listening to me speak, and I appreciate that. We have gone through this same experience. But when I served before under Democratic leadership I realized what the difference was between the upper Chamber and the lower Chamber.

Under the genius of our Founding Fathers, the lower Chamber is elected every 2 years to represent the immediate concerns of the people of their State or their districts, and the Senate is given the opportunity to step back and take a broader look and work to fashion bipartisan support so something major that impacted the American people and impacted our constituents was debated and worked out through the process and gave us an opportunity to say: Wait just a minute. Do we want to rush to judgment or do we want to just step back and look at the larger picture?

So as a minority Member of the Republican Party in 1989 and following all the way up to 1995, I enjoyed and revered the opportunities I had to represent Hoosiers. Former Members of the House would ask me: What is the difference between serving in the House and serving in the Senate? And I would say: In the House, the majority party rules and you are lucky if you can get the Rules Committee over there to allow you to have an amendment on a particular bill.

Every once in a while it would happen and you would say: Wow. This is special. But in the Senate, every minority Member can offer any amendment to any bill at any time.

That is a great privilege that had been afforded to us and a necessary privilege. Because without it, you get stuff rammed down your throat that doesn't have bipartisan support, and you are denied the opportunity to participate, to amend, to adjust, to be a part of fashioning something that can be accepted by the American people with support from both sides.

So this boiling-up frustration that has been happening is increasing under the leadership of this majority leader, who simply says: I am going to turn this into the House. I am going to change the 225-year tradition of this institution to something entirely different, and forget it, you guys on the other side, you in the minority. You don't have the rights you once used to have.

I respected majority leader George Mitchell. He was tough. He ran this place like clockwork. We were in late at nights a number of times, but every Member of the minority had the opportunity and the right to offer an amendment, the right to participate, and the right to be heard. George Mitchell, as majority leader, recognized those rights and he would say: Guys, ladies, you can offer any amendment you want. We will take it up. We will have a vote on it. You may win, you may lose, but you have that right.

So the reason we are frustrated, and the reason we are using some procedures now, which are denying all of us a lot of sleep to make plans for the Christmas season with our families is that this frustration with the majority leader has boiled over. The last insult was basically saying: Forget it. Forget the rules, forget the procedures, and forget the courtesy. Forget the privilege. Forget the rights you have enjoyed for all these years in the Senate. We are going to turn this into a different place and you just take it or leave it. So we are kind of left with very few resources in being able to express how we feel.

I think there is an easy solution to our problem, and it starts, No. 1, with an understanding of the frustration each side has, but it has to include the understanding of why they are frustrated. It is not just the Democrats who are frustrated with the Republicans trying to use techniques that will allow us to at least have a say in how things are working here but also frustration among Republicans. We're frustrated that bill after bill, time after time, we have amendments we would like to offer, amendments that represent the wishes of the people of our States, our constituents and we are being denied that opportunity by the majority leader.

Mr. ROBERTS. Would the distinguished Senator yield?

Mr. COATS. Not everyone calls me distinguished, but I am happy to yield to someone who does but also a good friend.

Mr. ROBERTS. There is a good reason for that. We both came to the House at the same time. We were sorry to lose the Senator to the Senate.

I truly appreciate what the Senator has said. It reflects conversations we both have had to try to educate, to get to know or understand a little better what our colleagues across the aisle are doing and why this is taking place and describe what our frustrations are. But the Senator has summarized them very well.

I urge my colleagues across the aisle to take the Senator's suggestions—and plea on behalf of us all—to heart and would encourage everybody who has nothing else to do around here to read the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and the Senator's remarks and take them to heart.

I remember so well, when I came to the Senate in 1996—and the Senator was here—I had an amendment I wanted to offer. Being a Member of the House for 16 years, what we had to do in the House was to check with the chairman. We served in the minority and then the revolution came in 1994 and things changed. But then, we had to go to the Rules Committee, which the Senator has pointed out was a very unique experience. I remember then what I had to do to get anything done in the House is I basically had to find a Democratic colleague—a friend who was serving in the majority—to co-sponsor the bill which I had, put his name first, and then go to the Rules Committee to make it in order so that my bill and his bill could work. My partner in this effort was Congressman Charlie Stenholm.

When I first went to the Rules Committee in the House, I had not been to the Rules Committee and I thought the debate would be about germaneness or whether this bill should be considered or was it timely, et cetera. I find out it was just a debate all over again on the merits of the bill. On a partisan, party-line vote, they would deny any Republican amendments.

So Stenholm was a partner in that effort with that bill. I can't even remember which one it was at this particular time, but it was my first big attempt and it was on the farm bill. We had mutual concerns and we thought it was a good amendment. It was the Roberts-Stenholm bill. It didn't take me very long to figure out that the Roberts-Stenholm bill was going nowhere. So Charlie leaned over and said: It might be a good idea if this was the Stenholm-Roberts bill or maybe just the Stenholm bill, and I said: I think you have got a pretty good idea.

So for a while it became the Stenholm bill, and it was made in order. Then, on the floor, Charlie Stenholm, being the kind Member he was, all of a sudden it became the Roberts-Stenholm bill again and it passed and, voila, my first amendment on the floor of the House.

So I had another amendment, this time in the Senate—and I know the Senator remembers well, because we were standing right about down here and I was asking him—I had checked with the ranking member and the chairman. At that time we were in control and we had the majority. I had a very simple amendment. I will not go into it, but it was referred to the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee. I was checking around with the ranking member and whom-ever, and they looked a little surprised that I was even checking with them.

The chairman of the committee, a Republican chairman, indicated: I would just as soon you wouldn't do that because we have a completed bill. We'll put it through the committee. I think your amendment has merit.

I knew I had bipartisan support for it and I knew it was a very easy amendment that would pass. But he told me: Just wait. We will take that up sometime down the road.

"Down the road" in the Senate means way down the road. So I was sort of grumpy, and you asked me what was wrong. I said: The chairman doesn't like it. You said: Listen. This is the Senate. You can offer any amendment at any time whether it is germane or not. This is the Senate. You have rights.

I knew that. I had gone to the Robert C. Byrd lecture as a new Member. He lectured me on minority rights and how we should conduct ourselves. He was the institutional flame of the Senate.

Then Senator COATS urged me to offer the amendment. I should have done it, but I thought: All right. I will wait. I will defer to the chairman's advice. I have often regretted that. Later—I am talking about 2 or 3 years later—the same subject came up. I happened to be on the floor, and Senator Ted Kennedy was in charge. They had taken back control. He knew about the amendment. He said: Would you like to get your amendment passed? He was standing on the floor and there was hardly anybody else here and, bingo, using the parliamentary procedure that you could do in the majority, my amendment was passed. It was not the Kennedy-Roberts bill, by the way. It was still the Roberts bill that was authorized. We didn't get too much money for it, but at least we made the effort.

I have gone into a long personal history just to demonstrate exactly how this works.

Now we have a farm bill that has been hung up for over 2 years. We have a farm bill that the principals are meeting on in secret. There are 37 of us who are also on the conference wondering where on Earth is the farm bill. The House has just passed by unanimous consent an extension of the current farm bill as we did last year.

Last year, we passed a farm bill. Last year, the majority leader in a discussion with me said: If you can get it done in 3 days, I will let it happen. Note, "I will let it happen." Chairperson STABENOW certainly was working extremely hard on her side, I was working on my side, we were going to the steering committee and said: I think we can get regular order. I think you can get your amendments up. Nobody believed me.

We had 73 amendments. We did it in 2½ days. Once that tipping point hits and people start withdrawing amendments, you get your work done. But the minority had every opportunity to offer amendments.

So one year ago, considering the farm bill, the first amendment was by Senator RAND PAUL considering the Pakistani who helped us with regard to the Osama bin Laden raid. He was in prison, and so Senator PAUL thought it would be a good idea to hold the aid to Pakistan until they released the prisoner.

What did that have to do with the farm bill? Nothing. It was the first amendment considered. It didn't pass, by the way. But many other amendments that came from folks who had never had the opportunity for an amendment to be brought up and discussed, well, those amendments were discussed in the farm bill. I would say that probably, of the 73 amendments that were considered, there were 300 offered. People would get up and they would have their say. They discussed the amendment. They knew probably it would not pass, and they would withdraw it. But they at least had an opportunity to present their opinion and represent their States and their constituents and we made sure they had that opportunity.

This year's farm bill wasn't 73 amendments. We only voted about 10 times. Senator THUNE, a respected Member of the Agriculture Committee; Senator JOHANNIS, former Secretary of Agriculture, Senator GRASSLEY, and myself, we all together had a total of about 12 amendments. We withdrew those from consideration during the committee markup and said we will take them up on the floor—except, on the floor, the majority leader cut debate off, saying: Time out. No more. So none of us got those amendments.

As the former chairman of the Agriculture Committee in the House and the ranking member last year, I have to wonder, what is that all about? You have a farm bill, you have people on the Agriculture Committee, they have pertinent amendments with regard to the direction of the bill—and, bingo, you are cut short. That causes a lot of frustration, to say the least.

I have gotten into the weeds on this simply because of our friendship and the Senator's advice to me, which I treasure. But the Senator's willingness to come and speak from the heart to demonstrate to our colleagues on the other side of the aisle: Think about this. Think about why we are doing this. Why we are doing this is because if you break the rules—which they have—to change the rules, it can't be upheld. More especially on nominations, what is happening is we are packing the District Court in Washington, which is the appeals court—probably more important than the Supreme Court in deciding on all the regulatory matters that come up; i.e., the President's Executive orders, the President's waivers, the President's interim final rules or any agencies interim final rules—we have government by regulation today. We do not have government by legislation today. We have government by regulation and this court becomes the Senate.

We had an even number of judges, and now we are going to have three more. Consequently, the President—who says he can't work with the Republicans but in fact it is he who will not work with Republicans—is going to have his way because this is going to be jammed down our throats.

When the Senator goes back to Indiana and when I go back to Kansas, one of the top issues we hear about from any economic sector of our economy is: What on Earth is going on with all these regulations? Somebody holds up a piece of paper and says: PAT, are you aware of this regulation? No, I am not, but I will check on it. What is our ability to deal with that? Almost nothing.

So we have government by overregulation.

That is what this is about. The agenda by the President to add more regulation to get his agenda done is being challenged and going through the courts as opposed to the Senate of the United States. That is why we are faced here with this situation. That is why I was here from 8 to 9 talking about Iran. The Senator is talking about the issue at hand, and I truly appreciate it.

I thank the Senator for coming to the floor. I thank the Senator for making these comments. I just wish people would understand why we are feeling this frustration and have a more accurate reflection of what is going on here. I know that is not reflected much in the media. I understand that, but that is simply the case.

Mr. COATS. I thank my colleague from Kansas. I am glad he mentioned his own personal experience and our experiences together.

It is more than about the Senator from Indiana or the Senator from Kansas. It is about this institution. It is about the future of the Senate. What kind of a body are we going to be? Are we going to be the Senate which has been the Senate for 225 years, with the rights of the minority being able to be expressed?

How the majority leader can look across the aisle and say: The former chairman of the Agriculture Committee, the former Secretary of Agriculture can't have a say in the farm bill. It is a treasure trove of experience, it is a treasure trove of knowledge of the whole agricultural sector, and the majority leader whimsically just simply says: Because I am in power and I can tell you what you can do and what you can't do, forget it. Forget your adjustments to this.

But that leads us right into the most egregious power grab of all, and that was when, under total Democratic control both in the House and the Senate and at the Presidency in White House, Democrats decided they were going to tell us how we should reshape our health care system and readjust one-sixth of the entire U.S. economy and, by the way, we have all this expertise—or we think we have this expertise—and we will wrap all this up in one 2,000-plus page bill and we will run it down your throats without any input from the other side.

Oh, we had input. But the rules were adjusted, the vote was changed, and it was passed by a simple majority and, therefore, had no constructive impact from those who did not think this was the right way to address our health care system. Now look at the mess we are in.

We have been talking for days about calls—not reflecting just our views but calls from constituents saying: What in the world have you done?

The reason I ran in 2010 is I was so upset about two major things: One, the way the Democrats have essentially taken this health care bill: Don't worry about reading it, as NANCY PELOSI said; we will find out later. Boy, are we finding out about it later. Frankly, those who wrote it are finding out about it later. The people it has been imposed upon, the people we represent are now finding out about it later.

I have a whole packetful of responses. I don't know if they are Republicans, Democrats, liberals or Conservatives. All I know is they are my constituents—I represent all of them and am trying my best to represent them—and they have flooded my office with tweets and Facebook and all this social stuff that I have a little trouble grasping right now—but emails and letters pouring in, phone calls jammed, people saying: What have you done to us? What are you imposing on us?

I can go through and read horror stories about people and the broken promises. I think as the Senator from Kansas knows—we have both been in this business here for a while—you better be careful if you fall into the trap of going home and promising what you can't deliver.

It is so easy to walk in front of groups and say what they really want to hear so they will like you and vote for you in the next election. It is so easy to go home and promise something that makes people feel good so they will feel good about you, but you better be careful because if you overpromise and underperform, they are going to say: Wait a minute.

No one has overpromised and underperformed more than this President of the United States regarding health care. He said, "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period." I bet the President wishes he had not said "period."

I am sure he wishes he had not said, "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor." Thousands of people in Indiana are saying: I can't keep my doctor. Mr. President, you promised, and you said "period." What does "period" mean? Hey, take it to the bank. Count on it. Finally, finito, no more questions need to be asked. I am telling you: If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, period. Nothing more needs to be said.

The same was said about: Don't worry, your premiums won't go up. Don't worry, you can keep your plan. If you like your plan, you can keep your plan.

I don't know how many hundreds of letters I have received from people who say: I love my plan. Why do you think I chose it? If I didn't like my plan, I wouldn't have selected my plan. Now those people are getting letters saying: Your plan is no good. You have to go into the government's plan. You have to go into the ObamaCare plan, and this is going to be affordable. Don't worry, folks, no money will be spent.

Were we told about the $400 million that was spent just to fashion the Web site? Can you imagine how they screwed up the Web site. After 3½ years they cannot even put out a Web site. I am getting horror stories about the Web site, which are continuing, by the way.

If you can't do that, how are you going to manage the program if you do get people signed up? On and on it goes. But this idea of promising, and now having these promises broken, just feeds into the cynicism and the lack of trust among the American people and in the institutions of government, their elected representatives, and in their President. That is just a cancer in this country. If you can't put your faith and trust in the promises of what is said by the people who represent you and who are making the laws you have to comply with, that is a sad day.

I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. When the President said if you like your doctor, you can keep him, period, that isn't really what he meant. Really he meant, if you like your plan, you can keep it—semi-colon—if I like it. He really meant: If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor if it is possible and we think it is all right.

Mr. COATS. If I could add to what the Senator said, if you don't like your plan and if you want something different, we will tell you what you have to like and what you don't have to like. It is no longer your choice. We will tell you what we think you need, but you can't make that decision for yourself.

So here is our plan: If you look at our plans, you can pick one of those, but if you want something different and if you want to go to the insurance company for you or your employees or employee-sponsored plan, forget it because we know more than you do. We wrote the law, and we wrote the law because we don't think you have the intelligence or ability to figure out what is best for yourself.

Mr. ROBERTS. These were called lemon plans, shoddy plans, substandard plans, plans that were denigrated even though the families involved had a plan they liked. I am sure the same is true in Indiana as it is in Kansas. More people have lost their insurance after they have signed up.

We understand that we have a lot left to do with health care reform, and I would say that almost every Senator has a 5-point plan on what they would like to do, and it is certainly more market oriented.

I will tell you what also isn't working, as opposed to the rollout, is the advertising for this. Some of it is unbelievable. Thank goodness the media is now watching and paying attention to this issue. There is a rap group that is on television that said it is cool to sign up for ObamaCare. Why on Earth are the taxpayers paying for that when every day Secretary Sebelius is changing the game, along with the President?

The President changed this plan about 17 times. Maybe that is a low number now, but if that's what he wants he should come back to the Congress for that. I think a lot of these changes are unconstitutional. At least he should come back to the Congress, which gets me back to my friend's basic point.

What would have happened if we had gone ahead with regular order and sworn in Scott Brown as the new Senator from Massachusetts and then it would not have been on a one-vote margin with regard to ObamaCare, or the Affordable Care Act, or whatever it was called back then, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. The acronym for that, by the way, is PPACA, which I think pretty well sums it up.

At any rate, had that happened, they would have had to have some kind of bipartisan agreement, which is really what we are talking about when we talk about breaking the rules now. They didn't have to do that because they would not swear in Scott, and so there we were on Christmas Eve.

None of us knew what was in the bill because it was in HARRY REID's office. As a member of the HELP Committee, I was privileged to consider this bill. We worked hard. I had three amendments on rationing—I am still worried about rationing. There are four rationers that I will not get into now.

IPAB is the No. 1 issue I am worried about. They decide the reimbursements that your hospitals in Indiana will get, and that my hospitals will get, and that is why we are trying to do the SGR reform and the Doc Fix.

We were in the HELP Committee, and we had three amendments, and all three were defeated by a party-line vote. That mark—I don't know where that bill is now—I think it is collecting dust. Then my amendments were considered by the Finance Committee. Then I wanted to offer the amendments on the floor.

I did this because we are going to have a lot of problems with the rationing boards making decisions as opposed to individual patients and their doctors—if they can even have their doctor, period.

So we get back, again, to regular order. We get back to respecting the minority's rights. We get back to protecting minority rights. Had we had those amendments, I think this bill possibly could have been worked out. I now believe that this bill was proposed by those who really prefer national health insurance, and this was a stalking horse for national health insurance. I don't think anybody on that side of the aisle realized that this bill would be like Thelma and Louise going off into the canyon, but that is what happened. So now we have this mess on our hands and every day we learn about something new.

The Secretary came out with something yesterday with additional changes. It doesn't really mean anything because she is just simply urging the insurance companies to go back and talk to those folks the Senator from Indiana was talking about—about the plan they would like to have or the plan they would like to keep. She is just saying to the insurance companies: We urge you to do that.

What is that all about? The toothpaste is out of the tube. I don't know how on Earth you can get that done. There were other suggestions. I am getting off subject here because my friend started out talking about the rights of the minority, and the health reform bill didn't pass with any Republican votes and very little Republican input. I think, in part, that is why it has crashed and is burning right now.

If we had just had regular order input during that particular time, I think there would have been a better product. I probably still would have voted no because I don't want national health insurance. I feel a lot better that I expressed my rant to my friend from Indiana, and it has been a better morning as a result.

I think anybody listening to us could finally understand the depth of our frustration. We want to be a part of this Senate and we have a right to be a part of this Senate, but that right and privilege everybody had for 225 years has now been taken away.

It will be interesting when, in fact, the pendulum does swing back and Republicans are in control. What will we do? Will we go back to the 225-year precedent or will we say: Well, what is good for the goose is good for the gander? Will we seek a pound of flesh or two? I don't know what we will do. I hope that we will go back to the 225-year precedent. It would be the right thing to do, but it will be interesting to see.

I thank the Senator from Indiana for allowing me to share his time.

Mr. COATS. The Senator from Kansas is a long-time friend and someone I have had the privilege of serving with and getting to know on a personal basis—he and his wife and family. We are both here with some experience under our belts, and unlike many of our colleagues who may see only one side of the story, we have been on both sides.

I had my differences with Senator Robert Byrd of West Virginia. There was no greater defender of the rights for the minority than Senator Robert Byrd, a Democrat who served his lifetime in the U.S. Senate.

I wish there had been some respect for what Senator Byrd said. I can see him standing on the floor saying: It doesn't matter how partisan this is, these privileges are engraved in stone. We have learned from our Founding Fathers, and they learned through their adverse experiences throughout history about denying the minority a voice, a right to participate. This never would have happened if Robert Byrd were here.

I know there are new Members who have just not experienced what it is like to be told to sit down and shut up. We will tell you what you can say and what amendment you can offer, if any. To be told time after time after time—and you know it builds. As all the bills come up and you have five things you would like to get done this year on behalf of your constituents, and you wait for the next bill to be brought up and you say: Mr. Leader, can I have an amendment on this bill?

Sorry, no more amendments. I filled the tree. It is done. We are going to move forward.

OK. I will go to the next one. Can I have it on the next one?

Here we are at the end of the year and the cycle is over—done. Sorry. You can't represent your constituents with what you think they want to do.

Maybe my amendments wouldn't have prevailed, but at least I would have been in the fight and people would have had the opportunity to put their yes or no vote on it. That way I could go home and say: I gave it everything I had. I didn't win, but I was fighting for you, and I was allowed the opportunity to do it.

As it is now, we go home and say: I wasn't even allowed to express your interest—you, my constituents' interests—through offering an amendment to the bill as a Member of the minority. I mean, the history of this place, the history of Democratic leaders when they had power, is a respect for that right, for the right of the institution. It is not about Senator COATS or Senator ROBERTS. It is not about the current state of the Republican Party in the Senate. It is about this institution. It is about what goes forward. Do we want to turn this thing into a "we got the power and you might as well just go home." That is what the frustration is. I hope the new Members who look at this and say this should be a more efficient place and we shouldn't have to go through all of this—we wouldn't have to go through all of this if they would just give us a chance to participate. But how else can we express our frustration other than at least having the opportunity to slow things down here so maybe we will be listened to?

Maybe they will go to some of—I wish they had listened to Senator LEVIN, who has been here a long time and who is a respected Democrat and chairman of the Armed Services Committee. Senator LEVIN came to the floor and said "we should not be doing this" to his own colleagues. He made a compassionate plea, a compelling argument that we shouldn't do this.

I think back to the Republican leaders and the Democratic leaders, whether they were majority leader or minority leader, and both came to the agreement that these rights need to be protected, whether it was Bob Dole, George Mitchell, Trent Lott, or Tom Daschle. I mean, all of a sudden we are cast into a situation here, which is, sit down and shut up. We have the votes. Tough.

That is our frustration. And I would tell my colleagues, think about this. Think about how we can get back to what the Senate has been for 225 years, and think about what it might be like for them when they are in the minority. They are going to want to go home and tell their constituents: I am sorry, the other party rules and I don't have any power at all. I don't have any ability to represent you at all. I can't offer any amendment expressing your wishes, and we won't have a chance to get it to a vote.

Senators will have to go home and say: I was denied the opportunity to even put it up for a vote.

I remember—of course, Senator ROBERTS knows this well—how Bob Dole would say: Look, this is the U.S. Senate. We have to take tough votes. We are not going to win every one. Members are going to have to go home and explain those votes. But this isn't just a deny, don't take tough votes because we don't want to explain them back home. Step up, debate it, and vote. We might win, we might lose, but we are here to vote. We are here to give everyone a right to have a vote on how to best represent their constituents. We didn't come here to avoid votes, to hide behind a desk and say: Oh, this might affect the next election.

I really came down here to talk about the debacle of ObamaCare. I have all of these letters. All one has to do is turn on the television or the radio or read the newspaper or talk to a neighbor. Unfortunately, the word is not spreading about this situation through the media, but I think even the media is realizing what a debacle this whole thing is. But all one has to do is talk to a neighbor at the bowling league or church.

I got my termination letter, and I don't know what I am going to do.

I have tried 21 times to get in the Web site. I can't get in.

No one is talking about the fact that, ironically, those who wrote the bill—the President of the United States and his executives—are fortunate that they don't have to go into ObamaCare. I don't know why this hasn't been more publicized. Is this the ultimate in hypocrisy? To the American people: We have decided this is good for everybody except us, by the way, so we are exempting ourselves. The President of the United States, all his Cabinet Secretaries, his political appointees, his major staff, and even some of the staff who wrote the bill exempted themselves. How can they write reasonable legislation, impose it on 300-and-some million Americans and say: Well, that is not for me. It is for you, but since I am writing the bill, I can write an exemption for myself.

I don't know why the media is not all over this. I don't know why we haven't had an amendment from the Democratic side saying: This is wrong. How do we go home and tell people that my President and my majority leader's staff is exempt and it will not be imposed on all of us?

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam President, if the Senator will yield, it isn't as if we haven't tried.

Mr. COATS. No, it is not as if we haven't tried.

Mr. ROBERTS. As the Senator knows, Senators are under that obligation—and their staffs. The committee staff is different, the leadership staff is different, and as the Senator pointed out, the executive is different. What is that all about? It should be uniform or not all, and it should be uniform for everybody who had a hand in this debacle.

I even thought about an amendment saying that those who didn't vote for it—I voted against ObamaCare three times: Once in the HELP Committee, once in the Finance Committee, and once it came out of HARRY REID's office. My colleagues said: Did you read the bill? Nobody read the bill because it had been changed, so then we had to wade through it, and then, as different events came about, one problem led to another problem, that problem led to two problems, and those problems led to other problems, so we are still finding out about that.

But back to the point of the Senator from Indiana, we can name Senators who said: Look, let's make this uniform. If it is good enough for Americans, it ought to be good enough for us. And that just has not happened.

Mr. COATS. Well, it has happened to us, and I spent tortuous hours trying to sign up on the DC exchange.

We all have to go through this as Members. People don't understand this back home. They think we are exempt. We are not. I went through this tortuous process for two hours because of all kinds of technical problems. I hit the confirm button. Error—not enrolled. I had to do it all over again. The second time I got a confirmation. I told my staff to print it—you are enrolled in the DC exchange; you are part of ObamaCare now.

I got the piece of paper, my secretary goes down to the disbursing office to confirm it, and they say: Senator COATS is not enrolled.

How about this piece of paper?

They say: Well, I know it says you are, but maybe there is a technical difficulty.

Does that ring a bell for anybody? And there are horror stories I have heard from people who have tried not just 2 times or 10 times but 21 times.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam President, if the Senator will yield.

Mr. COATS. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. My wife is much more adept at the social media capability, and so it was up to her. I thought we were confirmed, only to find out almost before the deadline—it was midnight, and there was a desperate attempt on the part of my staff and myself. I needed help to get this done, so I had to redo it. Then the thought occurred to me, we are going to have two PAT ROBERTS in there: one that my wife did and then the new attempt. I hope that is not the case. I think maybe we have it cleared up, but I am not sure, so we will find out. I hope we don't have to work to find out, but we will find out.

I think that is just a duplication of what everybody in the country is going through. And then what do you do if, in fact, you can't have insurance and you find out about copays and deductibles and all of this. I am repeating a sad story that I think everybody knows.

I thank the Senator from Indiana once again for his heartfelt plea to make the other side understand the error of their ways. I hope we can fix this. I hope they can see fit to fix this down the road. I doubt that will be the case, and I don't think the country will be better off as a result.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. COATS. I thank the Senator from Kansas. He mentioned signing up here and the frustrations so many people had.

Kathleen from Mooresville, IN, called my office in Indianapolis and said: Help. She said this: I have spoken to someone at the 1-800 number helpline for the Federal exchange 21 times since October 21—when she first began to try to enroll on the healthcare.gov Web site.

Twenty-one times she had tried this, so she called our office in desperation and told us: Well, at one point I asked if I could be transferred to this advanced resolution group—which was some other group set up to help people who couldn't get into the Web site, I guess—and the customer service representative said that he did not know how to transfer her to that site.

She said: Well, I need help. How can I get it?

So she finally then called the insurer directly to try to enroll, and they said: Well, the only way you are going to get this done is if you bypass the whole ObamaCare Web site because we can't do it either. So they finally figured out that she had enrolled through the insurance company, but she felt she needed to let the government site people know so they would not put her on the list that she hadn't enrolled.

Mr. ROBERTS. Right.

Mr. COATS. So she called up there and finally got through to somebody, and he said one word—"fine"—and hung up. Well, he probably was so frustrated.

Mr. ROBERTS. Will the Senator yield for one more observation.

Mr. COATS. Yes.

Mr. ROBERTS. I was watching the news last night, and many more millions of dollars are now being spent to hire more navigators, so the Senator's constituent should have had a navigator. In many cases they want navigators, and now they are being hired from various community organizations, some of which I really wonder about. But in some States where only hundreds have signed up, there will be more navigators than people who have signed up. So obviously it has gotten to the point where everybody has a problem, where insurance ought to have a navigator. This is at considerable expense—I don't remember now how many millions it totals—and a brand new group of navigators is being hired at considerable expense to make this work. And the advertising rolls on, and then the news media discovers more and more about all the problems.

I appreciate the Senator bringing this to the attention of the American people.

I note the distinguished Senator from Nebraska is here, and he even has a chart that will educate the American people.

Mr. COATS. He is. I am happy to yield to him, but I have about 5 more minutes left, I want to wrap up with one more story from Doug from Indiana.

After 2 weeks of trying to get on the Web site, he finally was able to at least create a log-in name and password. Then he had to try for another week to secure coverage, never successfully getting through, but he finally completed the form, submitted it, and then had the security questions sent back to him so they could verify that he is who he said he is.

He received four questions.

Question No. 1: Our records indicate you lived on the following street in the last 2 years. What city is this in?

Well, the street they listed is where his sister lives, and she doesn't even use the same last name, so I am not sure how they came up with that. Doug had never lived there or had any financial dealings with that property. So how do you answer—I am quoting him—how do you answer a question as stupid as that?

They said: Well, we can't verify you because you didn't give us the answer.

He said: I have never lived there. That is my sister.

Question No. 2 was about which county he lived in, and I think they got that right.

Question No. 3 was to include his previous employers. Well, the only previous employer listed that was accurate was misspelled, so Doug said: Well, how do I answer that?

Question No. 4: Our records indicate that you purchased pet insurance in the last 2 years. What is the name of your pet?

I mean, you can't make this up. If "Seinfeld" were still going, this would be a great episode. This would be one of the greatest episodes ever.

Doug had not had a pet for over 10 years, and he has never purchased pet insurance, but they said: What pet insurance do you have?

I have a dog, but I don't have insurance for it. Maybe I should. But they didn't ask me that question, so maybe I am OK.

So he put down "none of the above," and since he did that, they said: Sorry, since you didn't answer the security questions, we can't enroll you in ObamaCare.

I mean, you can't make this up. It is a Hollywood scriptwriter's dream for a soap opera or for a comedy such as "Seinfeld." If "Seinfeld" were still on, this would be unbelievable.

Of course, every night on the late night talk shows we hear about all of these horror stories and so forth and so on. It is comical, but it is sad. It is sad. It is an overreach by government. There are limits to what it can do and what it can't do, and we clearly have reached the limit on this one. I think an apology is due to the American people. I think we ought to step back and say: Let's do this over and do it right. Let's do it with bipartisan support. Let's do the sensible things that are affordable and will allow people to keep their doctor, that will allow people to keep their health care plan if they like it, and will provide means by which we can address the uninsured, the preconditions, and those who need insurance but do it in a way that is based on tested free market principles, not on a nanny government that says: We know better than you. Boy, have we proved that is not true.

With that, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. JOHANNIS. Madam President, I will start by thanking my colleagues from Indiana and Kansas for their discussion on this very important issue. I say this somewhat facetiously, but I have been reading the stories about the rollout of ObamaCare just like the rest of us have. What an incredible embarrassment. If there is a State out there that epitomizes the embarrassment of all embarrassments, it is the State of Oregon. Recently, they had not signed up a single person through their exchange—not one. Not a single person in Oregon could get through that. That is notwithstanding that the Democratic Governor supported it, embraced it, notwithstanding that the U.S. Senators in this body supported it, embraced it. They could not find a single person.

Well, I just read an article; I think it was this morning. I was catching up on some reading. Somehow, some way, they went out there and they found 44 people in Oregon who have signed up successfully. After all of these weeks since this rollout occurred, they probably went door-to-door in Oregon and found 44 people who they believe have signed up successfully. We will see whether they actually have insurance.

Well, maybe we could offer this for that poor State: Maybe we could offer that if they signed up successfully, they get a picture with their Governor and their U.S. Senators—their own individual picture. Madam President, 44 people would not be too many to get through in a picture line. They probably have fundraisers that are twice that big or three times that big, where they do pictures with everybody. I think those persistent citizens of the great State of Oregon deserve something more than just a mention that they are 1 of 44 in some newspaper somewhere, that they successfully navigated the site. I would offer that I think they need a picture.

Mr. COATS. Autographed.

Mr. JOHANNIS. An autographed picture with their U.S. Senators and their Governor.

Let me move on to something far more serious, and I am going to talk about ObamaCare too. I am going to tie that into why I believe this process we are going through relating to our constitutional right to advise and consent the President of the United States when it comes to his appointments—I am going to tie that into why I believe that has all happened and why we find ourselves here today because of this failed ObamaCare system.

Yesterday when I was on the floor, I talked at some length about the history of filibuster changes. I mentioned that I have a tremendous amount of respect for a Senator who passed not all that long ago, who served in this body for a long time and probably knew the body better than anybody who ever served in the history of the Senate. That would be Senator Bob Byrd.

I came here, and he was in failing health by the time I arrived in the Senate about 5 years ago, but what a wonderful man. I got to know him a little bit. We actually participated, worked together on a climate change amendment. The knowledge this gentleman had of the Senate was always amazing to me.

On the 200th anniversary of what is called the Great Compromise, when the whole concept of the U.S. Senate was created, some people went to Senator Byrd and convinced him that speeches he had given on the floor of the Senate and historical writings he had done should be put together in a book. It would be commemorative of the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Senate—the Great Compromise. So that was done.

When I first got to know Senator Byrd, I became so impressed with the man that I decided that my Senate office needed that historical record from him. Well, I thought I was buying a book. I was not buying a book at all. I was buying four books—four books filled with beautiful information about the Senate, its history, people who had served here, people who stood up for the U.S. Senate and therefore stood up for the people they represented in the United States of America.

I talked a little bit yesterday about that history leading up to filibuster changes. It was the system here originally in the early part of our country—in fact, until the early 1900s—where basically there was not a way to end debate. So if a debate was going on, an individual Senator could come to the floor and literally take a bill down a path where it may never become law. Somehow, some way, through the years the Senate figured out a way to operate with that kind of unusual situation where a single Senator could take a bill down that road.

Along came World War I. If you think about World War I, there were many Members in the body who had pretty close relatives in Germany, and this was a challenge because they had to debate and decide issues relating to that war and that country. As we might expect, it became very difficult to get things passed.

A piece of legislation came forward, and you can imagine what happened. It got carried down this road of never seeing the light of day, and they could not get that legislation passed although that legislation was considered very important by many in our country, maybe the vast majority of the people in our country.

The country reacted to that, and there was a big debate. I think people in this body and people in the country came to the conclusion that kind of this open-ended process where debate may never end—and there was no vehicle or mechanism to end that debate—well, that had to end; that somehow, some way, the wisdom of the individual Members in this body had to be brought to bear on how to allow Senators to have their day, have their say, be able to come here and debate the great issues and offer amendments. How could we allow that to happen and give them their rights as Senators while still having an ability at some point to stop the debate and cast a vote? The Senators, in their wisdom, decided they had to find that way, and they did.

Originally, if I remember the history correctly, and I may have this piece not quite accurate, but I think they agreed that two-thirds of the Senators could vote at some point to end debate and then vote on the legislation. But Senators still had the right to offer amendments. They still had the right to come to the floor and debate. They still had the right to work through the day and the night and build coalitions to get their amendments passed, to shape a piece of legislation, to make that legislation maybe better for the country or for their individual State. All of those rights continued to exist because, after all, everybody recognized that the power of an individual Senator to do that was significant to our country. It was important to our Nation, not only then but in the future.

That process went on for a number of decades following that decision. Then in the 1970s a decision was made again by this body under its rules, and that decision basically said: When 60 Senators come to the floor and they agree to end debate, that they would get themselves to a point where that debate would terminate and they could vote on passage of the bill, they could vote on getting that bill done. So in the 1970s, 60 votes became the norm.

An important point to mention is this: The rights we have as individual Senators representing our constituency—which in my case is the great people of Nebraska, and the people of the United States of America, for that matter—those rights were intended to exist in every respect. In other words, I could come to the floor as a Senator, under the rules, and if a piece of legislation was there and I had an important issue I wanted to bring to the attention of the country or this body, I could offer an amendment, and, except under certain circumstances, that amendment did not even need to be germane.

I remember, for example, that when this health care bill was passed there was a provision that if somebody in business bought over $600 worth of items, they had to file forms with the IRS, a 1099, and give a form to the vendor.

That is a mess because you never know if the first purchase on January 1 is going to be the last purchase or the first of a series of purchases that get you over $600. I wanted to get that out of the bill. It did not make any sense. Even the citizens' advocate for the IRS was saying: Well, gosh, we have looked at this. It does not make any sense.

So we started working, and on every piece of legislation that would come forward I would offer that amendment to get rid of the 1099 requirement in the health care bill. Originally, I was nearly laughed out of the Chamber. Democrats who had passed the bill were basically saying to me: You want us to change our bill? Get lost. I came back a second time. I came back a third time. I came back a fourth time. The business community got involved, and small businesses started calling their Senators and saying: Senator, please, look at what MIKE is offering. This is sensible. This needs to happen. We offered it a fifth time. At some point, the President of the United States in his State of the Union—I was sitting right there, about two rows back from where he was. Madam President, I was not any farther from the President of the United States than I am standing from you today. He mentioned that it was time for this provision to go. So we offered it a sixth time, and then we offered it a seventh time, and we finally got it done.

Do you know what? I did not go out and crow: My goodness, I must be the smartest Senator in the body or I must be the best Republican and those evil Democrats. I did not do that at all. I went out and I said to public: This is very important for small businesses. I am glad my colleagues agree with me, and we can all take credit for this. Go back home and tell people you supported it.

There were very few who voted against it in this body. So an issue that started out with basically no support to speak of in a bipartisan way not only got huge bipartisan support—over 80 votes—it even got a mention by the President of the United States in his State of the Union Address as something that needed to get done. And we could all take ownership of it then and today.

Why do I mention that point? I mention that point because those rights continued after those filibuster changes. This body came to the conclusion that under the Senate rules it was appropriate to somehow get to a point where we could say: OK, everybody, you have had your day. It is time to bring the debate to an end, if we can, if we can get sufficient votes. If we cannot, well then we cannot. This bill is probably not going to go any further. That has been the history of this institution literally from its beginning. Read Bob Byrd's books. He will explain that to you. As you read what he is saying there, you begin to feel the admiration that he felt for the Senate. But the other thing you will begin to feel as you read through these books is this: You will begin to feel how deeply he cared about the individual rights of each Senator, whether they were in the majority, whether they were Democrats, whether they were in the minority, whether they were Republicans. You see, Senator Byrd understood that the pendulum does swing. There will be times where Republicans will be in control of the Senate. The voters will decide that. There will be times, therefore, that Democrats will be in the minority.

He also understood that there would be times when Democrats would be in the majority and Republicans would be in the minority and that as our country would go through various transformations and various political processes, we would end up with a different Senate depending upon what happened in each election cycle.

But the one thing Senator Byrd wanted to emphasize and hold as a sacred constant in our system of government was that each Senator had rights. Each Senator could come to the floor and exercise those rights whether the person they called leader was Democrat or Republican. He wanted to make sure the tyranny of the majority would never silence those rights of the minority or the individual Senator.

With that context in mind, let me review the events of the last few weeks. With that context in mind, I am hoping that is instructive relative to what happened here. As I said yesterday during my comments on the floor, I guess we would all like to probably think we are the smartest Senator who has ever served in the body. We are not. Some of the giants of this great country have served in this body. Some of the intellectual giants who have ever lived in the United States found their way to the Senate.

They not only worried about what was happening in their period of history, they worried about what the Senate would be 10 and 20 and 100 and 150 years in the future. Keep in mind, this body has been here over 200 years. In many respects, as Senator Byrd points out in his book, the rules we operate under are similar. Why? Because they were smart in the beginning and they are smart today. They have served us well for over 200 years.

As I said, I guess we probably all like to think we are about the smartest Senator who has ever served. I can tell you, during the vote right before Thanksgiving, there were some Senators who were kind of crowing about the change that had occurred. I even read some newspaper articles that, boy, their day had arrived.

So what happened? Let me tell you what did not happen. Under our rules that govern how we operate, how we pass laws, how we debate the important issues of the day, we can amend our rules with 67 votes, a two-thirds majority. It is right there in the rules. What a thoughtful provision.

The whole idea behind that provision was you do not want the tyranny of the majority to crush the minority. You do not want the tyranny of the majority to crush the rights of the individual Senator, whether he is from Nebraska or California or Florida or wherever.

So in those rules it takes 67 votes. Did that happen before Thanksgiving? Did Members who wanted to see this done come over here to this side and say: You know, MIKE, think through this with me. Please join with me in trying to get this done. I cannot get it done with 55 Democrats. I need your help to get to 67. That is going to take Democrats and it is going to take Republicans and it might even take an Independent or two to get this rule change done.

Is that the way this happened? No, not the way it happened at all. So what did happen right before Thanksgiving? The majority leader, in essence when you cut through everything, asked for a ruling from the Chair. The ruling by the Chair was consistent with the rules of the Senate. Then the majority leader said: I will appeal the ruling of the Chair. What does it take to overrule the Chair? It takes a majority vote.

All of a sudden on executive appointments, circuit court judges across the United States of America—a lifetime appointment, I remind you, there is no way they can be removed except by the impeachment process once there—and Federal district court judges across the United States of America, the rule was changed.

By a two-thirds vote as the rules would contemplate? No. By appealing a correct ruling of the Chair and overruling it with a majority vote. Like I said, there are probably many here who would like to think: I thought that up. I must be pretty much the smartest person who ever served in this body. I cannot imagine why somebody did not think that one up before. Do not fool yourself.

That was thought up many times. Read the writings of Senator Byrd. Read the writings of any great intellectual who has looked at the Senate and how it operates and understands the rules. We have known for decades and decades and decades, maybe since the beginning, that you could appeal a ruling of the Chair and make reality out of a majority vote even though the Chair ruled correctly. That is what happened.

I spoke of the tyranny of the majority. The Senate was never intended to be a majority-based body. Let me get back to the Great Compromise. I mentioned that when Senator Byrd decided to put all of this information together in that four-volume set, it was to honor 200 years of history of the Senate or, stated another way, 200 years since the Great Compromise.

The Great Compromise came about because when we as an infant country decided there were going to be two Houses in our legislative process, almost immediately our Founders decided that one House, the House of Representatives, would be population based and majority ruled. If you are California or New York, as it turns out, that works pretty well; if you are Nebraska or South Dakota, not so well. Why? We have three Members in the House. It seems to me every day of the week California is going to outvote Nebraska. New York is going to outvote Nebraska. Florida is going to outvote Nebraska. Darn near anybody in the country is going to outvote Nebraska.

Although we have this very large land mass, our population is 1.7 million to 1.8 million people. It is spread out across this very large land mass called the great State of Nebraska.

Our Founders looked at that and said: It does not take much to figure this out. This is not going to work out very well over time. It is a majority-based body. So political parties have been a feature almost from the beginning of our country. So if you are in the majority, you are always going to win. You are also going to beat the minority as long as your team sticks together.

But they wisely said: The Senate is going to be different. The Senate is going to be that body where every State gets two. You see, in that regard, Nebraska is just as powerful as New York. We are just as powerful as Pennsylvania. We are just as powerful as California. We are just as powerful as Hawaii. Why? Because we each get two.

Then the Senate was structured in a way, as I have pointed out, where literally from the beginning one could debate a bill right down to a pathway where it was not going to get passed and thoughtfully and carefully. But under the rules of the Senate what was happening is as we decided to limit debate at some point in the process, you had to get this supermajority

Senators knew they could appeal a correct ruling of the Chair and reverse it. But they knew that option should never be used. It did not get its name "nuclear option" by accident. Most recently when Republicans were in control, the threat was made: We might go to the nuclear option to get our judges confirmed.

Oh, my goodness. Democrats in this body rose up. They were offended that those words would even come out of a Senator's mouth. They were fighting tooth and nail to stop that because it so changes what happens in this body. Now what has happened? The worm did turn. They are in power. All of a sudden, well, I reserve the right to change my mind.

So just before Thanksgiving, a correct ruling of the Chair was overturned on a pure party-line vote, where Democrats said to each individual Senator who is a Republican, where Democrats said to each individual Member who sits in the minority if a Republican: Sit down and shut up.

That is what this rule change does. It relegates my voice as a Member of a minority party in the Senate on district judges, executive appointments, and circuit court judges—two of those being appointments for life—it renders my voice absolutely, positively meaningless.

No Democrat has to cross that line and come over here and say: MIKE, I want you to look at this judge in wherever—let's say Arkansas—because I think they are qualified and I want you to think about voting for them. They do not have to do that anymore. They do not need me. They can just outlast me, just like they are doing right now. They can bring this to a vote, and on a straight party-line vote they can appoint the entire judiciary of the United States in the district courts and in the circuit courts with absolutely no involvement whatsoever from the minority. None. That is what their rule change did.

Let me take that rule change and think out loud about where we have put ourselves as a country. I wonder who was the first Senator in our history who came to the floor and said: My fellow Senators, I have thought about this, I have contemplated it, maybe I have even prayed about it, and I believe the day has arrived to end slavery in the United States, and I will be attaching an amendment to every bill to end that horrific practice.

I will bet they were a very lonely Senator at that point in our history. But I am also guessing that Senator, and tenacious other Senators along the way, exercised their rights as a minority and as an individual Senator to continue to force that issue. What a courageous, remarkable thing to do.

So let's think about where we are headed. We now have a precedent. As Bob Byrd pointed out in his writings, precedents voted on by Senators have significant binding effect in this body. It is not something you do one time, tear up and throw away. It is something that becomes a part of the heart and soul of this body. It is something that is a method of operation, a rule, if you will, by which future decisions are made within the Senate.

What is this precedent? This precedent is not that Democrats or Republicans have to cross the aisle and get 67 votes together to change the rules. This precedent now is that you can ask for a ruling of the Chair, the Chair can correctly deliver a ruling, and you can then get your team together, Republican or Democrat, and you can vitiate, overrule, and annihilate the correct ruling of the Chair to get a different result.

So for the first time in our history we are now confirming judges in the circuit court, in the district court, and executive appointments under a majority rule—for the first time in history. Why? Was it because 67 Senators said: Look, let's do it this way. No. It is because the majority leader asked for a ruling from the Chair, the Chair gave a correct ruling, and then the majority leader stepped in and said: I will appeal that. He kept his Democrats together and successfully appealed it and, all of a sudden, we are off in a different direction.

So let's think about this. Let's say you are a Democratic President and the Senate is Democratic—maybe it is evenly divided, but you have the Vice President in the Chair so you can break ties. You are in the last 18 months of your time in office and you have already won a reelection so you are term limited. In 18 months you move on down the road. Let's say you have a Supreme Court where four of the members are conservative, four are what would be regarded as liberal and you have one member kind of right in the middle. So whenever there is a major argument before the Supreme Court everybody is trying to guess which way the one in the middle will go. Will he or she side with the liberals on this one? What has he or she done in the past? Will that Supreme Court Justice side with the conservatives? What has he or she done in the past on these kind of issues? You can kind of get a roadmap of what they might do on this major constitutional issue.

Now, for whatever reason, that Supreme Court Justice dies in office, becomes ill, can't perform the duties, decides to retire, decides: Look. I have been here a long time. It is time for me to move on. Maybe they even have an inkling they want this President to appoint their replacement. My goodness, this is a pretty important issue. You have that one vote that kind of moves back and forth, and this is pretty darned critical for the next 10, 25 or 50 years in the United States. It could make all the difference in the world.

Let's say the President of the United States takes a look at that and says: 18 months. I am not sure I can get this done. The President calls his friend, the majority leader in the Senate, and says: My friend, how do we move this Supreme Court nominee whom I am going to announce tomorrow before I leave the White House? We need to get this done. Maybe it is not even 18 months, maybe it is 12 months or 6 months. How do we get this done?

The majority leader says: Mr. President, you know, under the current rules change we did in 2013, right before Thanksgiving, we took the voice away from the minority. So on circuit court or district court I could help you out, but we didn't apply that rule to the Supreme Court.

Maybe it is even further down the road and parties have switched. There is a Republican in the White House and the Senate is Republican and the majority leader is Republican. The Republican President calls and says: How do I get this done?

My friends, let me remind us again the precedence is set. Let me remind us again, as Senator Byrd points out in his very scholarly analysis of the Senate, that a Member-voted change appeal of a ruling of the Chair is a big dang deal. It is how we operate.

So the majority leader says: Let me think about it. He calls the President back and says: Here is how you get there. I will ask for a ruling of the Chair at the appropriate time. I don't know exactly when that will be. But at the appropriate time you have my commitment, Mr. President, just like they did right before Thanksgiving in 2013, I will ask for a ruling of the Chair. The Chair is going to rule against me, I want you to be aware of that. So if you are watching the proceedings, don't faint because this isn't over. But I need to have you go to work, as President Obama did in 2013, and make sure Members are in line. I will go to work and I will turn my whip team loose and we will keep our team together.

Let's say it is a Republican situation and all of a sudden you have the ruling and the majority leader says: I want to appeal that and the team stays together and so now we can change the complexion of the U.S. Supreme Court because the precedent is set.

I had somebody from the Democratic side say to me yesterday: Well, MIKE, I would never agree to that. I thought about the comment he made. In fact, I was trying to get to sleep last night and I thought about that comment, and it was just so obvious to me I wish I had said it to my friend and colleague. I wish I would have said: You won't have a voice because you are in the minority. Under the precedent set right before Thanksgiving, your voice was silenced. You were told to sit down and shut up because of the passage of this rule.

So huff and puff all you want, go to the floor and scream, cry, yell, threaten to do whatever you are going to do, but at the end of the day you don't have a voice because my team is together on this, and by a majority vote we are going to overrule a correct ruling of the Chair and we are going to pave the way for a new Supreme Court Justice who will decide cases based upon our philosophy. You know what. We are going to go a step further. We think those four Republicans there or four Democrats there, they haven't gone far enough. So we are going to get somebody who is really out there.

You know what. The precedent is set. You have the pathway to get it done.

Is there anybody in this country who believes for a moment that temptation will not be just too darned great? Look. How many times did my colleagues on the other side of the aisle during the last debate on this a few years ago say: Never do this. It will destroy the Senate. We aren't going to do this. They signed letters, and those same people voted yes to break the rules to change the rules. Those same people came in and—of course, they had a reason. Of course—they came in and said: Well, you know, these evil Republicans. I really don't want to do this. I feel so badly about doing it, but they are so darned bad, they are so evil, and they are such obstructionists, when there was no evidence to support that.

The reality is it is not what is happening these days, it is not what is happening over the next year on circuit court appointments or district court appointments or who is going to be the Under Secretary or the Deputy of something in the USDA; it is what is going to happen next when that President has that short a period of time to leave a lasting imprint on this great country and they can't pass up the opportunity. So all of a sudden the precedent is set and you are off to the races.

Some may be thinking: MIKE, if that ever happens, I am going to call my Senator—who is in the minority, whether Republican or Democratic—and I am going to chew on them up one side and down the other side. I am going to point out to them that if they don't do something about this, I will run against them or I will find somebody to run against them because this can't happen to our country; because Supreme Court appointments, you can't get rid of them once they are there, unless it is some kind of impeachment process. This is a lifetime appointment. Once done, it is over.

Do you know what that minority Member will say to all those calls? They will come in by the hundreds and thousands, if not the tens of thousands. Thank you for your call, but I have been silenced. I have no ability to stop that. I am in the minority.

It will not be a situation where that Senator will be able to say: I am just not persuasive enough. I don't think I can build the argument.

It will be a situation where they say: I am in the minority. My voice has been silenced. So we have a situation where the precedent is set, and that Member now has no voice.

Let's think about this in the last minutes that I have, because it doesn't end here. Again, keep in mind the precedent is set.

Let's say again that there is a very important piece of legislation. Maybe it is a health care bill, maybe it is a climate change bill. Maybe it is a bill to do whatever. I could think of a whole bunch of bills on either side that people would like to see get done. All of a sudden, the majority, working with their President in the White House, realizes the only way it is going to get done—because they can't get the 60 votes necessary—is try to change how things operate.

Not to worry, because the precedent has been set: Ask for a ruling of the Chair. The Chair will correctly rule. Keep your team together. Overrule the Chair and, by a majority vote, we now pass legislation by a majority.

Many in the Chamber who are majority or minority would say: Well, MIKE. I don't like that. Gosh, I am not going to let that happen. I have heard that before. Because the same people who voted for this argued forcefully just a few years ago: We can't ever let this happen. This would destroy the Senate. This would destroy the purpose of the Senate.

But then they came in here and voted for it. Of course it will happen. The precedent is set, and then you have a different country. Let's think about that.

I have traveled all over the world in my roles as Governor and as Secretary of Agriculture trying to sell our ag products. There were certain parts of the world where markets were open and the economy was working and people were employed. They were good markets for our products. There were other parts of the world where, my goodness, even today not much is going on. People live in poverty. They live in crime and filth and disease. It is just horrific. There are a lot of reasons for that. It is complex.

But one of the constants in that was the political instability of the country. Whoever won got the spoils. So they would throw out everything the last group passed and they would pass a whole bunch of new things because they had the majority. Then the voters would rebel and say: Oh, my goodness. Did we make a mistake on this. Let's get rid of these fools. Then a whole new group would come in on the other side and they would throw out all the laws the last group had passed and they would pass their own laws. Why? Because they had the majority. On and on it went.

Businesses would look at that and say: How do we ever invest there? You are asking me to build a $25 million warehouse to do my work when I don't know what the laws are going to be 2 or 4 years from now? Because the elections would determine that.

In the United States of America we have had this remarkable economy for over 200 years. It has had good times and bad. I am not Pollyannaish about this. But jobs have been created, small entrepreneurs—and I could name them—built businesses that grew into remarkable companies. It is just incredible. Who are the next ones? What an amazing country we live in.

I will acknowledge, there are a lot of reasons for that. We are blessed with enormous resources, and I could go on and on. Our education system. But one of the reasons it has worked is we have tremendous governmental stability. Whether we want to or not, every administration is kind of in a position where they build upon the shoulders of the last administration.

What is the constant there? The White House can change every 4 years. It has to change every 8. The House of Representatives can change every 2 years, and it often does. Sometimes it doesn't. It is a majority-based body. So a new group comes in, they throw things out; a new group passes new things. It is kind of always moving and shaking. That is what the House was intended to do. What has been the constant in all of this? The Senate.

I know people get frustrated. They look over here and say: Geez, MIKE. I wish you could pass something. Why can't you get more done? Why is this pace so frustrating? I will tell you, as a former chief executive, a mayor, a Governor, a Cabinet member, I sometimes come in here and go: My goodness. I am going to be 80 before this law ever passes, and I will not even recognize it.

It is the give-and-take of the Senate. It is exactly what was contemplated, and no one was going to come in and throw this out in 2 years and put this in and then 2 years later throw this out. Why? Because the Senate said: Wait a second. Not only are we going to call this the Great Compromise, but you are going to have to reach across the aisle to get things done.

Sometimes in our history that hasn't happened. At other times in our history it has happened. But through pandemics, world wars, crises, attacks upon our Nation, this body found a way to function and a way to stabilize the United States.

So when a young entrepreneur went out there and said: If I build this software, according to the tax laws we have now, will those laws be there 2 years from now? Yes, we can say they will be. We don't change the Tax Code very often. I am one of these people who argue we need reform in our Tax Code. But having said that, I know I am going to have to get it done in a bipartisan way.

But the precedent is set. We know now that if the majority leader asked for a ruling of the Chair and the Presiding Officer decides correctly, under the rules of the Senate, in consultation with the Parliamentarian, how that issue should be decided and decides it correctly under the rules, we know now what we feared over the last decades; that is, that the majority leader can say to the Presiding Officer: I want to appeal your ruling. I want to appeal your ruling. I want to get this Supreme Court Justice on the Supreme Court and a lifetime appointment.

I want to appeal your ruling because I am sick and tired of the other side not cooperating with me on what I want done. I have had enough of it. I am going to get my way. My team is together, and they are all going to vote just as I will. Even though your ruling was correct under our rules, we are going to set that aside, we are going to vitiate it, and we are going to get our way because my team—my team—is in control.

That is where we are today.

These rules have been changed over time. They were changed in accordance with our rules.

I see the leader is here. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that if cloture is invoked on the Patterson nomination, that at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, December 16, all postcloture time be considered expired and the Senate then proceed to vote on confirmation of the Patterson nomination; that upon disposition of the Patterson nomination, the Senate proceed to vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the Johnson nomination; that if cloture is invoked on the Johnson nomination, then all postcloture time be yielded back and the Senate proceed to vote on confirmation of the Johnson nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Madam President, we are going to have two votes at noon today. After that, the next vote will be at 5:30 on Monday. There will be a series of votes on Monday.

As I indicated this morning, the Republican leader and I have spent some time together and I think we have had a productive discussion on the schedule. This schedule has been extremely difficult for everyone.

We have worked out a schedule that allows for the next set of votes which will occur at noon today to be the last votes of this week. We agreed on Monday evening the Senate will vote on the matters that we would have voted on the rest of today and this weekend.

So on Monday at 5:30 in the afternoon, the Senate will vote on Patterson, Johnson, one would be on the cloture on Johnson, and then it will be confirmation. We are doing our utmost to finish our business here a week from today so we can go home for Christmas.

So we will be in session Sunday afternoon. There will be no votes on Sunday. The next rollcall, I repeat for the third time, will be 5:30 p.m. Monday. On Tuesday, we will begin consideration of the budget and Wednesday the Defense bill. After that, we will address further nominations of which the most important one is Janet Yellen to be on the Federal Reserve. The others, I will work with Senator McCONNELL filing a number and see how many we can get done.

I personally thank Senators for their cooperation this week and next week as we work through these important matters. I know there is a lot of work we have to do to get back to regular order. We will see what happens with the Defense bill we are going to vote on and the budget bill. But I am satisfied we have made progress.

ORDERS FOR MONDAY, DECEMBER 15, 2013

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until 1 p.m. on Sunday, December 15, 2013; that following the prayer and pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, and the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day; and the Senate convene for legislative business only.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I want to make sure everyone understands that we have votes today.

The distinguished Senator from Nebraska was speaking and I interrupted him. I relinquish the floor. If he has more to say, he may certainly do so. I have no right to suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. COCHRAN. Madam President, the Senate has had an opportunity to be given an update on the status of our negotiation on the farm bill. It is my pleasure to announce that since our first conference committee meeting in October, we have been working to reach an agreement on a new 5-year farm bill. This is a bill we can take to the House and Senate. By working in collaboration and through our differences, we made progress and established a framework for our agricultural sector to continue to contribute in an important way to the economic life of our Nation. I am pleased to say we are making progress, but there are still some decisions that lie ahead of us. I am hopeful that on both sides of the aisle, in both bodies, we can come together on a farm bill agreement that will reform and modernize programs and produce budget savings at the same time as well as provide certainty about the government's role to producers and consumers alike.

I might also add that related to this is an interest many homeowners have in flood control insurance protection and government assistance. There is a reform bill, the Homeowner Flood Insurance Affordability Act, that I am pleased to have cosponsored that would delay premium rates temporarily until we can review and make sure these changes are going to serve the interests of homeowners and landowners in areas that are threatened by natural disasters. We don't want to a Federal Government Agency to draw a line on a map arbitrarily without fully considering all of the ramifications.

We must put the Flood Insurance Program on a path to fiscal solvency, and one way to do that is to ensure that it is a good deal in terms of investment and prospective return on investment for individuals as well as communities.

On another subject, I recently had an opportunity to review some correspondence and notes about calls my office received from constituents on the subject of the Patient Protection and Affordability Care Act. This is a major piece of health care legislation, as everybody knows. It affects insurance companies, it affects individuals, it affects the entire country, and it is a very important area of concern.

In order to comply with the law's requirements, a family could see their monthly premiums increase from $700 to almost $1,400, which is an increase of more than 90 percent. To put it in perspective, it is more than $16,000 per year that a family would have to spend on health insurance premiums alone. These figures are just not affordable for most Americans. So there is sticker shock associated with this misguided effort to help improve and expand our Nation's health insurance programs. These figures just signal to us how serious the implications are, and we must address this problem and seek proposals with very serious care and diligence.

Monthly premiums, for example, do not include copayments or out-of-pocket expenses. It does include the cost of several health benefits deemed "essential" by the administration, regardless of the fact that many people do not need or want to pay for these services. One constituent posed an interesting question to me, which is, Why can't we, the policy owners, decide what benefits and deductibles we want? I think they are right. They ought to have that right, and they ought to be given that choice.

Choice is what families should have when it comes to health insurance. Unfortunately, the freedom to make a decision based on what is in their best interests is no longer an option for millions of Americans who have to search for new insurance coverage, pay for benefits they will not use, and potentially even give up the doctors they know and wish to keep.

Despite assurances by the President that people who like their health insurance will be able to keep it, we have learned that the administration has known for at least 3 years that millions of Americans would lose the health insurance they currently have and would like to keep, as advertised.

Reports indicate there are an estimated 15 million people facing a potential coverage gap because many currently have insurance from the individual market but have received cancellation notices because their policies don't meet the law's requirements.

Since the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act was enacted—incidentally, without a single Republican vote—in 2010 the administration has struggled to meet its own deadlines for implementation of the law. The ongoing problems with the law's enrollment Web site conspicuously foreshadowed the more significant failures that can be expected as this law is implemented.

The most recent marketplace enrollment report, which was released by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid, states that less than 365,000 individuals have selected plans from the State and Federal marketplaces since October 1. It has been estimated that more than 47 million nonelderly Americans were uninsured in 2012. This means that less than 1 percent of the uninsured population in the U.S. has selected a health insurance plan by way of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

We are told that it is likely that on January 1 of this next year, more Americans will be uninsured than were uninsured at the time the health care law was enacted. This law's primary intent was to expand coverage, to encourage insurance, but it seems to be failing on both counts.

Implementation of the law's mandates reveals that the legislation will fail to reduce health care costs as well. In 2013, we are projected to spend $2.9 trillion on health care in the United States. This is approximately 18 percent of the entire U.S. economy. National health care expenditures are expected to increase substantially in the years beyond that.

Health insurance is just one component of our Nation's very complex health care system, and we could do better, should do better, and I think we can do better than this initial work product. We should get together and find common ground to improve the quality of health care in our country, to improve access, and reduce overall health care costs. We owe that to our constituents, our national economic interests, and to the future of quality health care in the United States.

Madam President, I invite other Senators to come to discuss this or other issues we have identified as important for our consideration. In the meantime, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. CORKER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DISCUSSIONS IN VIENNA

Mr. CORKER. Madam President, I thank the Senator from Hawaii for the way she has dealt with us since she has been here.

I rise today to talk about discussions that have been taking place in Vienna over the last four days relative to the Iran P5+1 discussions. I know each of us in this body focuses on different topics based on the committee assignments we have. I wish to point out that reports have come out today and last night that the technical experts who have been meeting around the deal that has been announced still are having difficulties trying to understand how to implement this deal that was written down on four pages.

I say this to talk about the fact that there are many in this body on both sides of the aisle who would like to weigh in on this issue. I realize the administration has expressed concerns as to what type of weighing in they think might be harmful to the discussions. I think there are many of us who understand those things and have tried to figure out a way to weigh in in an appropriate way.

(Mr. Kaine assumed the Chair.)

To bring people's memories back into focus, one of the concerns we have all had leading up to the announcement of this deal has been the amount of time, if you will, that remains before Iran reaches a status of being a nuclear armed state. So it was very important, I think to all of us, as we heard the announcement of this interim deal, that we actually understand the timeframes that were involved.

I know many people were alarmed—were alarmed—by this interim agreement because, in fact, there was a tacit understanding that Iran—which has been a rogue nation—no doubt, if this agreement continues to go through, is going to be a state that will be allowed to enrich uranium, much in the face of the 123 Agreements that we negotiate around the world, trying to establish a gold standard with countries to keep them from doing that.

This agreement—let's face it, I think that Wendy Sherman, yesterday, in testimony to the Banking Committee, and, I can assure you, every single Iranian official who has been involved in these negotiations, understand that what the United States of America, with other countries, has agreed to is to allow Iran to be able to enrich uranium at some level when a final deal is actually done.

I think one of the concerns that many of us have right now is that this interim deal either becomes the norm or—as the previous nuclear czar to the Obama administration, Gary Samore, has said—that we really just begin a series of rolling agreements and we never get to the place of establishing an end-state.

I hate to say this, but yesterday Wendy Sherman—I think many of us have certainly conducted discussions with the White House and have been in classified briefings, and one of the things we have really wanted to put in place—and I think CARL LEVIN in a meeting at the White House spoke most clearly to this—and that is, in order to alleviate that kind of thing occurring, we need to have a firm beginning date and a firm end date. He said that end date should be 6 months, which is, by the way, what the agreed announcement said.

I think what is dismaying to many people in this body is we are now finding out that not only is there not an end date, but addendums that can be mutually agreed to. In other words, there is no end date to this agreement.

We are now finding out, based on testimony yesterday from Wendy Sherman, we do not even know when the start date is, that officials cannot even agree as to when the beginning of this agreement is going to be and when the implementation begins.

It is pretty amazing to me that we could spend months negotiating over an issue that is so important to us and so important to the world and yet, after it is concluded, we do not even really know when the agreement begins, and we certainly—because of the text of the agreement—know that it does not have an end date.

I have tried to listen to the concerns that the administration has. I think I have demonstrated since I have been here that I really want to seek understanding, No. 1, but also try to use that understanding to solve problems.

So our office has worked hard to develop an amendment. It is an amendment that establishes a firm end date. But it also describes the end-state. That is what this amendment does.

I think people on both sides of the aisle—I do not think it; I know it because of public expressions—have been very concerned that this interim agreement already violates the U.N. Security Council resolutions that this administration agreed to back in 2010, as did the other members of the Security Council. Many people are concerned that if we start with an agreement that, no doubt, expressly violates the U.N. Security Council resolution, and it does not have even a clear start date or end date, there are a lot of concerns, as you can imagine, that we will never get to that place that countries have agreed to back in 2010 as it relates to where Iran's end-state should be.

Another concern that people have is, as we begin lifting these sanctions—and let's face it, Congress, the administration, and the international community actually have done a very good job together trying to figure out a way of appropriately implementing sanctions that have put pressure on Iran and have brought them to the place where they now are.

But I think the concerns—and as a matter of fact Senator JACK REED, yesterday, expressed these concerns in a Banking hearing—once you begin to basically say that Iran is not a rogue nation, that they are being brought hopefully into the international community, once you begin lifting even a minor portion of those sanctions, countries and companies around the world are going to clamor to do business because they see that in the very near future additional sanctions are going to be lifted. Just by virtue of that occurring, the sanctions begin to dissipate at a rapid pace. This is something, again, that has been expressed in a bipartisan way.

So I have an amendment. I am the ranking member on the Foreign Relations Committee, which means nothing other than I spend a lot of time on these issues and working with colleagues on both sides of the aisle to find solutions. As a matter of fact, we have not passed anything out of our committee yet that has not been bipartisan.

We have coming over, I understand, an NDAA bill that has typically been the vehicle on which we all express ourselves on these kinds of issues. It is my understanding that the majority leader has decided himself—I will say, much to the consternation of my friends on the other side of the aisle, but certainly to the consternation of people on my side of the aisle—that he is not going to allow any amendments, that he himself has decided what is best for this body.

So after spending months and months, and just coming from the region recently, working with the Presiding Officer and others on so many diplomatic and foreign policy issues together in a bipartisan way, I am now serving in a body that has the vehicle that typically is used to express ourselves on foreign policy issues and I do not have the right to raise an amendment to it. The body, by the way, may decide they do not support it. That is what happens around here. You debate issues and you decide whether you want to support them. By the way, the amendment I am offering does not add sanctions. All it does is define when the end is going to be, which, by the way, every world leader has stated is very, very important because of what is occurring on the ground in Iran, and it establishes a minimum end-state, which is what the U.N. Security Council resolution already says.

I am one Senator, I realize, and there are 99 others, and I am sure there are many people in this body who would like to express themselves on issues that are not deemed to be partisan or deemed to be political, but just to express themselves on policy they believe to be important to the country. But the majority leader, on his own, has decided that is not going to be the case.

Yesterday I was riding the elevator with a Senator who I came in with. I came in with nine Democrats and one Republican. I was the only Republican, excuse me. I did not come in with any other Republicans. I was it. We have had a lot of fun, and we get together once a year and talk about that. Candidly, relations between us, generally speaking, have been very good for the 7 years I have been here.

This one Senator, who I have actually worked with more than others of the group on so many issues, said to me that what happened on the Senate floor a few weeks ago, where the majority overruled their own Parliamentarian—their own Parliamentarian—overruled with a simple majority vote, which means there are no rules in the Senate anymore—this person said to me: Look, BOB, it was not personal.

What is amazing to me is that the way this Senate is run is not personal to my friends on the other side of the aisle, the fact that, like lemmings, in so many cases, they would just follow, follow the majority leader, and let him decide what this body is going to vote on, and let him decide what policies this Senate is going to put in place. I do not understand that.

We have all worked hard to be here, and we all work hard to represent our constituents. I think we all work hard not to disrespect ourselves, not to disrespect the office we hold, not to disrespect—I will not say we have all worked hard not to disrespect this institution because I believe what happened greatly disrespected this institution—and certainly, hopefully, we work hard not to disrespect the citizens with whom we serve.

But what I find myself in total dismay over is that my friends on the other side of the aisle do not deem it personal that on the one vehicle that we typically express ourselves most on foreign policy issues—and at a time when we have so many foreign policy issues that in a bipartisan way people have concerns about—that they would decide to just let the majority leader decide what we are going to vote on, when we are going to vote on it, and if it is even appropriate to have a vote at all.

So here we are. We have witnessed the many problems that have dismayed both sides of the aisle relative to the rollout of the health care bill. I think everybody in this body would recognize I have not been down here taking cheap shots at that. Look, I am concerned about the citizens of our State and what they are dealing with relative to this policy, and hearing the distress calls of people who have had their insurance canceled and maybe have had a quadruple bypass and are concerned about getting on, and I know all of us are involved in trying to help those citizens who are in dismay and are very concerned they be successful in actually being able to get on the exchanges.

But here right now, seriously, we are watching a major foreign policy issue be rolled out by this administration with many of the same problems. We do not have a start date. We do not have an end date. We have not even broached the toughest issues with Iran over what the end-state is going to be.

I think that is a tremendous disservice to our Nation. It is a tremendous disservice to the countries with which we work all around the world. It is a tremendous disservice for this body not to express its will.

I know that the chairman of the committee had acted as if he wanted to participate in this somehow, making sure that Congress was heard on this in a way that does not blow up the negotiations. I think everyone here wants to see a diplomatic solution—everyone here. I do not know of anybody in this body that does not want to see that happen.

But I also know, and I think the administration knows this as well, that the actions of this body, candidly, over the years are the main reasons that we are where we are. But, again, I will close; I know I am getting redundant. Our majority leader in his wisdom—and I know the majority leader decides who serves on committees. He decides who the chairman is of those committees. I realize that with that you have a great ability to keep people from expressing their will or rising and really wanting to do something in a bipartisan way.

I am coming to understand, especially in recent weeks, what bipartisan means to our majority leader is whatever he decides is “bipartisan.” Even though the majority of the people in this body would really like to weigh in on this policy, to do so in an appropriate way so that we do not, in fact, do something that does something to harm the negotiation, but does something to strengthen our hand in these negotiations.

That will not occur. To me, that is a disservice to this body. It is a disservice to every Member. No doubt, when each of us do not have the opportunity to express ourselves through amendments, what that really means is the folks we represent back home have no rights to have their concerns expressed or voted on.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRAYER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the order of February 29, 1960, the hour of 12 noon having arrived, the Senate having been in continuous session since yesterday, the Senate will now suspend for a prayer by the Senate Chaplain.

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Sovereign God, ultimate judge of the leadership of this Nation, thank You for loving us and calling us to be Your people. Make us worthy of the honors You have bestowed upon us. Today, give to our lawmakers Your grace and peace so that they may use their talents to empower people to live lives of purpose.

Lord, invade the thinking of our Senators with insights and inspiration that they could not produce on their own. May Your omniscient wisdom guide them as You strengthen them to do Your will.

We pray in Your sacred Name. Amen.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All postcloture time has expired.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Heather Anne Higginbottom, of the District of Columbia, to be Deputy Secretary of State for Management and Resources?

Mr. RUBIO. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER) and the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. SCHATZ) are necessarily absent.

Mr. CORNYN. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. ALEXANDER), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN), the Senator from Idaho (Mr. CRAPO), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM), the Senator from Utah (Mr. HATCH), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. ALEXANDER) would have voted “nay” and the Senator from Utah (Mr. HATCH) would have voted “yea.”

The result was announced—yeas 74, nays 17, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 272 Ex.]

NOMINATION OF ANNE W. PATTERSON TO BE AN ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the nomination.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Anne W. Patterson, of Virginia, a Career Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Career Ambassador, to be an Assistant Secretary of State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Res. 15 of the 113th Congress, there will now be up to 8 hours of postcloture consideration of the nomination equally divided in the usual form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

GUN VIOLENCE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it seems hard to believe that tomorrow will be the anniversary of the deaths of 20 little boys and girls in Newtown, CT. Not only those little boys and girls, but six educators, whose lives were taken by an unspeakable tragedy at Sandy Hook Elementary School.

Their names are Allison, Avielle, Charlotte, Daniel, Olivia, Josephine, Ana, Dylan, Madeleine, Catherine, Chase, Jesse, James, Grace, Noah, Jack, Emilie, Caroline, Jessica, and Benjamin.

These little boys and girls were 6 and 7 years old. They were murdered. Although their years were few, their lives have touched and will continue to touch us all.

As it did a year ago, my heart goes out to the families of these little angels, and to all those affected by this tragedy. I honor the ultimate sacrifice of Victoria Soto, Dawn Hochsprung, Mary Sherlach, Lauren Rousseau, Rachel Davino, and Anne Marie Murphy—teachers and educators who died trying to safeguard the children in their care.

These six educators devoted their lives to teaching Newtown's children how to read and write, how to add and subtract, how to be good boys and girls, and how to grow into good men and women. They gave their lives to keep those children safe. They are a source of hope in a world that sometimes seems hopeless.

It is hard to comprehend the type of tragedy that occurred at Sandy Hook, let alone to recover from it. But I am inspired by the families in this community who have found purpose in the face of despair.

There is a Tibetan saying that says, "Tragedy should be utilized as a source of strength."

The Dalai Lama says that whatever trouble you have experienced, and however deep your heartbreak, "If we lose our hope, that's our real disaster."

The families of Newtown have channeled their pain into activism, raising awareness about gun violence and mental health issues in this country.

I have met with them on a number of occasions, and their bravery in the face of such pain is truly an inspiration not only to me but to all of us.

I am proud of how hard my caucus fought this year to pass safeguards that would keep guns out of the hands of felons and people with severe mental illness. That is why 85 percent of the American people agree with us. Why should someone who has a severe mental illness or someone who is a criminal be able to purchase a gun? They shouldn't. Those who are trying to stop that legislation from going forward should be embarrassed and ashamed of themselves.

I personally am happy with my vote to keep military-style weapons off the streets and to improve our mental safety. But at a time when more than 30,000 Americans are killed by guns each year, it is shameful that the Senate can't pass gun safety legislation that would protect our most vulnerable citizens—our kids, our children, our babies.

So I told the families of the 26 innocents killed a year ago in Newton, and the 173 children killed by guns since December 14, 2012, that Senate Democrats will not give up on them, and that is still the fact. We will not give up on the victims of 26 school shootings that occurred since the Newtown massacre, including one in Sparks, NV, where a young man came with a gun. Who stepped forward to save the children? A teacher. He was killed. Two others were injured in that assault. I will not give up on the families and friends of those gunned down at a movie theater in Colorado, a Sikh temple in Wisconsin, a shopping mall in Oregon, and every day on the streets of America's cities.

Last December I promised the families a meaningful conversation about how to change America's culture of violence. I want everyone within the sound of my voice to know that the conversation is not over.

The American people will prevail on this issue. When 85 percent of the American people believe in an issue—when 85 percent of the American people believe in not only an issue but in a quest, in fairness, it is going to happen. It is only a question of when it happens.

I urge the families and friends of those killed in Newtown to never lose hope. Never lose hope.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, John Adams, America's first Vice President—and second President—and whose bust sits right above us looking over the Senate every day, once said:

Facts are stubborn things. And whatever may be our wishes, our inclinations, or the dictates of our passions, they cannot alter the state of facts and evidence.

It has been more than 3 years since President Obama signed the Affordable Care Act into law. In that time, its opponents have made every effort to misinform the American public about this law and the vital benefits it provides the American people.

But as Adams said, facts are stubborn things, and I want to make sure the facts about the Affordable Care Act do not get lost amongst the criticism and false claims.

So here are the facts.

Thanks to the Affordable Care Act, 100 million people have received free preventive care, more than 7 million seniors have saved nearly $9 billion on prescription drugs, and 25 million people who lacked health insurance will finally be able to get the coverage they need.

The Affordable Care Act has also helped slow the growth in health care costs. National health care spending grew by 3.9 percent each year from 2009 to 2011—the slowest rate on record.

I can remember not too many years earlier the annual rate increase in health care costs was in the neighborhood of 6, 7, 8, 9 percent a year. It is a dramatic reduction.

That means we will save huge sums of money down the line. For example, the CMS projection of national health care expenditures in 2019 has dropped by $574 billion in 3 years. That is $574 billion in reduced projection of national health care costs in the year 2019.

While there is more than just the Affordable Care Act at work in those savings, it certainly has played a part.

The health insurance marketplaces are open for business, and every day we hear how the Web site healthcare.gov is working better. It is picking up steam. It is handling more and more consumers.

The New York Times reported on Tuesday that—and I am quoting—“the number of applicants who dropped a plan into their virtual grocery carts was climbing at a rapid clip.”

Those are the facts. The Affordable Care Act is helping millions of people. It is improving millions of lives.

But frankly, I think the American people are a bit tired of hearing politicians argue over the law. I am sure every one of my colleagues has spoken at length about it here on the Senate floor or back home. I know I have.

I think it is time to change the conversation. I think it is time to hear from the American people—hear from them—about how they think the law is helping them. I think it is time to hear what the New York Times called the “voices of quiet optimism and relief amid the uproar over the health law.”

Take these two stories.

Claire He is a college student whose parents have never been able to afford insurance. She and her brother lived most of their lives without coverage. She told the New York Times that if they got the flu “we just stayed home and waited it out.”

But when Claire and her family sat down to look at their options under the Affordable Care Act, here is what they found: They found a high-quality plan that will cost them only $30 a month.

Claire said of the ACA’s critics: “I see so much negativity behind this. . . . But in reality there’s a lot of families who are like mine.”

Then there is the story of Bruce Kleinschmidt, a lawyer who lives in Louisville, KY. Bruce had insurance through his employer until he stopped working full time.

Bruce is 61—not yet eligible for Medicare. In another era, his health problems would have made it impossible for him to find insurance. But using Kentucky’s new health marketplace, Bruce found a generous plan that saves him $300 a month in premiums. Bruce called it a “godsend.”

There are hundreds of similar stories in newspapers all across the Nation—the San Jose Mercury News, the Las Vegas Sun, the Hartford Courant, the Palm Beach Post, the LA Times, and many more.

Not only do we read these kinds of personal stories in newspapers, we receive letters with them every day. Here are a few examples from letters I have received from Montanans.

John wrote to my office with his family’s story. What did he say? John’s daughter recently beat cancer. She is under age 26, so thanks to the Affordable Care Act she is still covered under her parents’ insurance.

And there is more. When she does turn 26, she will have a guaranteed right to coverage. No insurance company can turn her away because she had cancer. John said they are counting on the Affordable Care Act to help them find an affordable plan.

Marge wrote to say that the Affordable Care Act has been an enormous relief for her. She has battled emphysema for years—despite the fact that she is not a smoker. A doctor once told her she could never leave her job because no one else would ever insure her.

So for Marge, the Affordable Care Act means she can breathe again—that she does not have to live in fear of losing her insurance or falling into bankruptcy because of her medical costs.

We all know—because many, many told us before the act—how many people went into bankruptcy because one of the leading causes of bankruptcy was health care costs.

Jillian wrote to say how excited she was to be able to shop for coverage in the marketplace.

Jillian is married, and she and her husband are expecting a child. But her husband’s employer-sponsored plan does not pay for her coverage.

Here is what she wrote: “I am looking to make a more affordable choice for me and my baby-to-be. . . .”

Letters like these come in every day. They tell the stories of how the Affordable Care Act is working for them, it is helping them, and in the end that is what matters—not the punditry, not the polls, not the political points. What matters is that the law is improving the lives of millions of Americans.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SENATE RULES

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I have been engaged in the back-and-forth for many years concerning the rights of the minority to oppose legislation or nominations for Senate advice and consent, which, obviously, as we all know, is part of the Constitution of the United States.

After investing all of those hundreds of hours in compromises, both when Republican leadership wanted to act to curtail the rights of the minority and when Democrats were doing it—I fought hard. A short time ago Senator LEVIN and Senator SCHUMER and others changed the rules to try to expedite the consideration of legislation for a whole lot of reasons, including the fact that a majority of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have never been here in the minority.

We have now acted in a draconian fashion and, in my view, have fundamentally, historically damaged this institution. Among other things, for the first time since the Senate has been a body, we have now changed the rules to 51 votes rather than 67. First time in history. Unfortunately, the repercussions will be that we are moving a step—a very significant step—toward a majority-rule body.

As my friend from Michigan Senator CARL LEVIN quoted Senator Vandenberg, a former Senator from Michigan and a highly regarded individual in this institution, we have now broken the rules to change the rules. On the night we changed the rules, I read a letter from Senator Robert Byrd—who was one of the most outstanding leaders and clearly the expert on the Constitution and this institution—cautioning against it.

The reason I come to the floor today is not so much to revisit that because it is done. I wish to point out that I see the first manifestation now of the majority-rule vote. I have been a member of the Homeland Security Committee, and I have been involved in these issues for many years. I was also involved in the so-called Gang of 8, where we came up with a comprehensive immigration reform bill which was passed through this body. We still hope that the other body will address, at least in some way, the issue of comprehensive immigration reform.

I come from a border State, as my colleagues know. Our border is not secure. In fact, the majority of drugs that still come across our southern border come across the Arizona-Sonora border in Mexico. My constituents, many who live in the southern part of the State of Arizona, have home invasions, people crossing their property. In one case a rancher was shot and killed, and a Border Patrol agent was killed. In fact, the reality is that they don’t have the same security in the southern part of my State as the rest of our citizens do in other parts of the country.

Border security was a fundamental and vitally important issue in the hundreds of hours of debate and discussions that I and my seven colleagues engaged in as we shaped the comprehensive immigration reform legislation, which was largely passed intact in the Senate.

I went back to my constituents and I said there is a very vital and important provision in this bill; that is, when this legislation is passed, we will embark on the goal of achieving 90 percent effectiveness at our border. We can never get complete control of our border—we all recognize that—but 90 percent effective control through surveillance, through hiring new people, through capabilities that we have—we can achieve 90 percent effective control.

Then comes the nomination hearing of Mr. Jeh Johnson for Secretary of Department of Homeland Security. I asked Mr. Johnson a simple, straightforward question. The question was: Mr. Johnson, when you are Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, will you provide this committee and me, Senator MCCAIN, with a description of the measures that need to be taken in order for us to achieve what we have turned into legislation—at least in the Senate—90 percent effective control of our southern border?

His answer was no.

His answer, believe it or not, was no, that he could not provide that information. In fact, I was so astonished that I wrote him a letter and received a response, which I will read:

November 19, 2013.

Dear Senator MCCAIN,

I regret that in my current posture as a nominee and private citizen, I am not now in a position to commit to provide the information you seek from the Department of Homeland Security.

At this point, I must respectfully refer you to the Department's current leadership. I know this was a matter of discussion between you and Secretary Napolitano, and I understand your frustration. As I believe I have demonstrated to you and others on the Senate and House Armed Services Committee—

Why he said Senate Armed Services Committee, I am not sure.

—I have a strong respect for Congress' oversight role. If I am confirmed, and if your request is still outstanding at that point, I promise that addressing your letter will be a top and immediate priority for me.

This is the November 19, 2013, letter from Mr. Jeh Charles Johnson.

In other words, the nominee for the Department of Homeland Security, who has direct responsibility for securing our borders, direct responsibility as outlined in legislation passed by this body, the comprehensive immigration reform bill, refuses to give me and this body the information. I hope there are other Senators who might be interested in what is necessary to achieve 90 percent effective control of our borders. He refuses to give me that information.

Thanks to the good offices of my beloved friend CARL LEVIN and my dear friend Senator CARPER, I just came from a meeting in my office with Mr. Jeh Johnson. Mr. Jeh Johnson again repeated to me that he could not give me the information of what is necessary, what tools are necessary to ensure 90 percent effective control of our border.

Allegedly, he is being prevented from doing that by the White House. It is stunning. Why would the White House prevent the nominee for Secretary of Homeland Security from providing this to Members of the Senate and members of the committee that has oversight of homeland security, which is fundamental information if we are going to achieve effective control of our border?

I go home to Arizona and I say: Yes, it is in the law, my friends. It is in the law that we are going to have to get 90 percent effective control of our border, but I don't know how we do it because the agency that will be required to do it will not give me the necessary information to do it.

My friends, we will voting on Monday to confirm Mr. Johnson. He will be confirmed. There is no doubt about it now that we have majority vote. We have now deprived Republicans of their advice and consent responsibilities and authority. We have not only changed the rules of the Senate, we have abridged the Constitution of the United States because the only way that I could have received this information from Mr. Johnson was if I had said: I can't approve of your nomination until you provide the information which, by any objective observer, I am entitled to—not only entitled to; it is my responsibility to know that. It is my responsibility. That is why we have a committee. That is why we have a committee, the homeland security committee, that has oversight of the functions of the executive branch. That is how equal branches of government are supposed to function.

Mr. Johnson will be confirmed, and the message will go out, believe me: You don't have to answer a question by a Republican Senator. You don't have to respond to a straightforward question.

There was nothing devious about the question I asked Mr. Johnson. There was nothing complicated. They certainly should have the information of what steps and measures are necessary to ensure 90 percent effective control of our border—which is a requirement in the law, if it is ever passed. Certainly the requirement was passed by the Senate.

It is kind of a sad day. It was a sad day for me when we changed the rules. It was a sad day for me to see people who have been here a very short period of time basically shatter the comity which exists and which is vital to doing business in the Senate.

I also would point out to my colleagues—particularly those who are new and who drove this change in the Senate rules—what goes around comes around and what goes around will come around. To their deep regret, some day—I say to the President and I say to my colleagues who voted for it on a party-line vote, for the first time in history changing the rules of the Senate from 67 votes to 51 votes—they will regret it.

The people who will suffer greatly from this are the American people because this place is largely dysfunctional anyway. If we think it was dysfunctional before, wait and see. I say that with deep regret because I value and treasure my relationships with my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. Some of the best friends I have are on the other side of the aisle. But to expect to do business as usual when I can't even get a straight answer for a question that—now by not having the answer inhibits and in many ways prohibits my ability to respond and carry out my responsibilities to the citizens of my State—cannot go without being responded to.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. HEITKAMP). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I now yield back all time on the Patterson nomination.

VOTE EXPLANATION

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I was unable to attend the rollcall vote on the nomination of Heather Anne Higginbottom to be Deputy Secretary of State for Management and Resources and the rollcall vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the nomination of Anne W. Patterson to be an Assistant Secretary of State. Had I been present for these two votes, I would have voted "aye."

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO GREG JONES

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I come to the floor today to recognize the retirement of an upstanding citizen from the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and to pay tribute to his career of service to my home State. This month, Greg Jones concludes over 21 years as executive director of the non-profit Southeast Kentucky Economic Development Corporation, SKED. His daily presence at the helm of the organization will be sorely missed, but his legacy will endure in the thousands of jobs he helped create and the increased economic vigor he helped bring to the region.

When he first took the job at the behest of Congressman HAL ROGERS in 1992, Greg oversaw a two-person staff and commanded a $75,000 budget. Under his leadership the organization has grown to its current staff of 10 professionals and a budget of nearly $2 million. Throughout his tenure as executive director, Greg marshaled SKED's resources to help start and expand businesses, provide training for entrepreneurs, and attract new industries to the corporation's 45-county service area. Under Greg's watch, SKED has unquestionably lived up to its stated mission—"to foster economic growth and vitality in the region."

I ask my Senate colleagues to join me in recognizing Greg's exemplary career as well as wishing him a happy retirement with his wife Belinda and son Christopher.

An article about Greg Jones's retirement from SKED recently appeared in an area newspaper, the Commonwealth Journal. I ask unanimous consent that the full article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objections, the article was ordered to be printed as follows:

SKED EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR GREG JONES
RETIRING IN DECEMBER
[From the Commonwealth Journal,
Oct. 13, 2013]

SOMERSET, KY.—Greg Jones, executive director of Southeast Kentucky Economic Development Corporation (SKED), will retire in December after more than 21 years of service to the nonprofit organization and to Southeast Kentucky.

The longest serving executive director in the organization's 27-year history, Jones is credited with strengthening SKED's mission of job creation and making it the premier economic development agency in the region. Beginning with a $75,000 budget and two-person staff in 1992, Jones and his current staff of 10 professionals now operate with an annual budget of nearly $2 million.

"I've had the privilege to lead SKED and our amazing team of professionals for over two decades, and I am extremely proud of our successes," Jones said. "I shall forever be grateful to Congressman Hal Rogers and the incredibly supportive and talented individuals on the SKED Board of Directors for giving me the opportunity to be a part of this remarkable organization. And, finally, I wish to thank the dedicated staff of SKED for their loyalty and friendship over these many years."

It was Congressman Rogers who asked Jones to head up the grassroots effort he began, in 1986, back in 1992. At the time, Jones was working as executive director of the Somerset-Pulaski County Chamber of Commerce.

"Over the last two decades, Greg Jones has worked tirelessly to recruit thousands of jobs and expand the industrial portfolio of southern and eastern Kentucky," said Rogers. "Greg's foresight to address vital infrastructure upgrades, recruit high-tech companies and support entrepreneurial growth will continue to benefit economic development in our region for years to come. While he is moving on from daily operations at SKED, I have asked Greg to remain in close contact to offer guidance for the organization that he has helped mold for success. My wife Cynthia and I wish Greg and his family many blessings in his years of retirement."

As SKED executive director, Jones has been responsible for the marketing and industrial recruitment activities for the 45-county SKED service area, managing a $10-million loan portfolio and providing economic and community development assistance to local communities in Southeast Kentucky.

Under his leadership, SKED has successfully assisted more than 100 businesses and industries in starting or expanding their operations in the region. These companies now employ more than 7,700 workers and have invested an estimated $500 million in Southeast Kentucky. He has successfully prepared loan and grant applications totaling more than $26 million to support the organization's job creation activities.

Building partnerships has been Jones's mantra for the past 21 years. Whether it was with local community leaders or state and national funding agencies, Jones worked tirelessly to form strong alliances across the region, state and nation. One of those key partnerships is with the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC).

Earl Gohl, ARC federal co-chair, has worked with Jones on several key projects in recent years.

"Greg's leadership has made SKED what it is today," Gohl said. "What he has accomplished with the SKED entrepreneurship program and the Valley Oak Technology Complex has laid the groundwork for what Eastern Kentucky can be tomorrow."

Jones led SKED to receive designation as a Community Development Financial Institution (CDFI) in 1999. As a result, the organization received funding to implement several innovative regional projects including the Valley Oak Technology Complex, the Somerset Rail Park, the Southern Kentucky Information Technology Center and the Enterprise Center.

SKED received the National Association of Development Organization's (NADO) 2002 Innovation Award in recognition of its technology initiatives.

In 2009, SKED became a Certified Development Corporation (CDC) by the U.S. Small Business Administration. This designation authorized SKED to process SBA 504 loans throughout the state of Kentucky. The 504 Loan Program is the SBA's economic development tool to provide small-business financing and create jobs all across America.

To date, some 250 people have received entrepreneurial training from SKED thanks to a grant from the ARC in 2011. SKED established the Entrepreneurial SMARTs program designed to offer nationally acclaimed entrepreneurship classes at a reduced rate. A CDFI grant provided the funding to hire a professional to teach the classes.

SKED is governed by a 12-member, volunteer board of directors. Over the past 21 years, Jones has worked with a number of successful men and women on the board, each with different areas of expertise and from a variety of career fields, but all leaders in their own communities. As board members, they share SKED's mission of job creation in Southeast Kentucky.

SKED President Tim Barnes is one of those community leaders. President and CEO of Hometown Bank, he's led the SKED Board of Directors for the past three years.

"Greg has been the face of SKED for so long, it's hard to imagine ever being able to replace him," Barnes said. "Let's just say there will be no replacing Greg. He's one of a kind. His legacy of caring professionalism will live on through the lending programs and other initiatives he's worked so tirelessly to develop over the past two decades. We wish him all the best in his future endeavors, and speaking on behalf of all board members past and present, I say a hearty thank you."

The SKED Board of Directors plans a national search for Jones's successor.

A native of Laurel County, Jones has served on numerous boards and commissions both locally and nationally. These positions include being past president of the Appalachia Development Alliance. He is currently on the board of directors for both TOURSEKY and the National Institute for Hometown Security. He was named East Kentucky Power Community/Economic Development Professional of the Year in 2007.

He earned his B.S. in industrial technology at Morehead State University in Morehead, Ky. He also holds a master of public administration degree from Southern Illinois University—Edwardsville. He also attended the Institute for Organization Management and Economic Development Institute.

In 1995, he received the Certified Economic Developer designation from the American Economic Development Council.

He is married to Belinda Taylor Jones and they have a son, Christopher.

REMEMBERING THE NEWTOWN TRAGEDY

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, this Saturday will mark 1 year since one of the most horrific tragedies in our nation's history: the murder of 26 innocents at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, CT on December 14, 2012. All of us remember the shock we felt when we heard the news reports. Twenty first graders—only 6 or 7 years old—were gunned down in their classrooms, and six educators were killed while trying to protect their students from harm.

The events of that day were heart-breaking. As we come upon the grim 1-year anniversary of that event, our thoughts and our prayers are with the families and friends of the victims. Many of them stood in a nearby firehouse on that day waiting for first responders to bring them any word about their loved ones in the school. One by one, the first responders brought down children and teachers to the firehouse to reunite them with their families—until the families of the victims were the only ones left. Then it became clear that no more would be coming.

These families have suffered immensely. But in the face of their grief and loss, they have shown incredible strength and courage. They have supported one another with a strong sense of community and faith, and they have dedicated themselves to the cause of sparing other families what they have gone through.

I have met with many of these families over the past year. They have come to meet with Members of Congress, and with lawmakers in many States, to share their ideas for how to reduce the devastating toll of gun violence. I salute them for their courage, and I thank them for standing up on behalf of so many families across America who have lost a loved one to gunfire.

Over 11,000 Americans are murdered with guns each year. If we count suicides and accidental shootings, the death toll from guns rises to more than 31,000 Americans each year. This epidemic of gun violence is unacceptable. We cannot simply shrug our shoulders and write off these shootings as the cost of living in America.

In my home State of Illinois, I have met too many grieving mothers who have lost their children to senseless gun violence—mothers such as: Annette Nance-Holt, who lost her son Blair in the crossfire of a gang shooting; Mary Kay Mace, whose daughter Ryanne was killed in her classroom at Northern Illinois University; Pam Bosley, whose son Terrell was shot and killed outside of church; and Cleo Pendleton, whose daughter Hadiya was gunned down at a bus stop where she was seeking shelter from the rain.

I do not want to go to another funeral for a police officer like Chicago Police Officer Thomas Wortham IV, who was killed by gang members with a straw-purchased gun. I do not want to hear about any more killers who couldn't pass a background check but still were able to buy guns through a private sale—such as the man who murdered Ricky Byrdson, the former Northwestern University basketball coach, in Skokie, IL.

We need to take proactive steps, consistent with the Constitution and the Second Amendment, to stop these situations from happening. We need to reduce this high number of violent shootings. We can do this by working for better gun safety laws—laws that will spare other families what these families have gone through. No matter how long it may take, no matter how challenging the road may seem, this is a goal worth fighting for.

We have seen some positive steps forward when it comes to gun safety in the past year. For the first time ever, the Senate confirmed a director to head the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives. We have seen an end to the federal funding restrictions on research into the causes of gun violence. We have seen significant growth in crime gun tracing, especially with the eTrace program that has helped catch criminals and gun traffickers in Illinois and nationwide, and important new gun safety laws have passed in States such as California, Colorado, Connecticut, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, and my home State of Illinois, where universal background checks and mandatory reporting of lost and stolen guns are now the law.

We know that more needs to be done. Earlier this year, we failed to get the 60 Senate votes we need to ensure that a criminal background check is conducted on every gun sale. The Senate also fell a few votes short when it comes to toughening our laws against straw purchasing and illegal gun trafficking. Of course, the House of Representatives has not even tried to pass legislation to reduce gun violence.

I know it is frustrating to many Americans when Congress fails to act on commonsense steps such as these. It is frustrating for me too, but I am not giving up. The goal of reducing gun deaths in America is worth fighting for. We may not have the votes we need in Congress today, but if the American people speak out and work hard for commonsense reform, we will achieve it.

I salute my colleagues in both parties who have worked hard this past year to push for commonsense gun safety laws especially the Senators from Connecticut, Senators BLUMENTHAL and MURPHY, who have become such admirable leaders on this issue. I also commend Senators MANCHIN and TOOMEY, who have crafted a balanced background check bill to make sure that we aren't selling guns to criminals; and Senators LEAHY, KIRK, COLLINS and GILLIBRAND, who have worked with me on a bill to crack down on the straw purchasers and gun traffickers who supply criminals with weapons.

The votes haven't been there yet, but we will keep at it. It may not happen right away, but we are in this for the long haul. The families from Newtown are going to keep working for these reforms, and so must we. I am confident that working together, we will pass commonsense reforms that save lives.

REMEMBERING MICHAEL JOSEPH O'SHEA

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, as I often point out, our country is a country of immigrants. And the City of Chicago, almost without rival, is a city of immigrants.

Earlier this week, Chicago lost a wonderful adopted son.

Michael Joseph O'Shea—"Joe," as his friends and family called him—was born in Ballynacally, County Clare, Ireland in 1937.

He came to America in 1959, when he was just 18 years old, and like so many sons and daughters of Ireland before him, he quickly made Chicago his home.

You knew Joe O'Shea was Irish before he ever opened his mouth. To borrow a phrase from Eugene O'Neill, he had the map of Ireland all over his face. And his face was rarely without a smile.

There's an old Irish saying: "Bricks and mortar make a house, but the laughter of children makes a home." Well, there was a lot of laughter in the home that Joe and his wife Mary made on the South Side of Chicago.

Joe and Mary were blessed with four children: Michael, Daniel, Colleen, and my friend Sean, through whom I got to know Joe.

In addition to the laughter of children—and later, grandchildren—the O'Shea home was filled with something else almost as beautiful: the sounds of Irish music.

Joe O'Shea was a past president of the Chicago Irish Music Association and he was one of the best Irish accordion players you have ever heard, or ever will hear.

In 2000, Joe was honored to play for President and Mrs. Clinton at their annual St. Patrick's Day celebration at the White House. In the audience were many of the leaders of his adopted land as well as the Prime Minister and other visiting dignitaries from Ireland. It was a proud moment that Joe treasured.

Joe's love of Irish music and dance and his masterful, joyful performances will help to keep that part of Chicago culture vibrant for many years to come.

Like many Chicago families, the O'Shea family has split loyalties when it came to baseball. But they are united in love and support for each other.

Loretta and I wish to express our deep condolences to Joe's wife, Mary, their children and their two beloved grandchildren, Declan and Delaney O'Shea, and to Joe's many friends in this Nation and in Ireland. May your cherished memories comfort you in this time of sorrow.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE EXTENSION

Mr. HARKIN. Madam President, today I wish to speak about one of the most important jobs the Senate must do before we go home for the holidays—extend Federal unemployment insurance benefits. This is a program that has helped tens of millions of Americans weather the storm of the difficult economy over the last several years. It has helped workers put food on the table, kept a roof over their heads, and kept millions out of poverty.

But this program is at risk. If Congress fails to extend it, then just 3 days after Christmas on December 28, 1.3 million Americans will be abruptly cut off from their vital unemployment insurance benefits. But it does not stop there: by the end of next year another 3.6 million Americans will be cut off from unemployment insurance. That's a total of 4.9 million Americans—including 35,500 Iowans, who have spent 6 months or more trying to find new work, going out and pounding the pavement day after day, who will now have to spend this holiday season worrying about how they and their families and children are going to survive. How will they pay their heating bill, their rent, or their mortgage, much less afford gifts for their family?

Congress has a moral responsibility to continue the Federal unemployment insurance program to ensure that Americans and their families can survive while trying to get back on their feet and find new work. It is simply unacceptable for us to return to our home States to celebrate the holidays without answering our constituents' call to keep this critical lifeline going. They are depending on us.

Unfortunately, some people seem to think that the misfortune of losing a job means that these hardworking folks are to blame, or that they do not deserve this basic lifeline. But they are not. In fact, participation in the unemployment program requires that workers have a significant work history, which means they have paid into the system and earned these benefits. Collecting benefits also requires workers to have lost their job through no fault of their own, and to be actively looking for work. The fact is times are still tough and jobs are hard to come by. For every job opening there are three job seekers. That is why so many millions of workers have been searching for new work for such a long period of time. Our economy still needs more jobs, and in the meantime, we must make sure that workers who are out of luck in this economy have some basic income to make ends meet. We cannot abandon them now.

These benefits are crucial for keeping households afloat. For many, this is their last lifeline. If Congress fails to act, millions of people will face real economic devastation. The Council of Economic Advisers found that in 2012 unemployment benefits kept 2.5 million people from falling below the poverty line, including 600,000 children.

By helping families to make ends meet, unemployment benefits are a help not just to jobseekers and their families, but to our economy as a whole. After all, one of the best ways to grow our economy and to create jobs is to support spending power. And that is exactly what unemployment benefits do. When unemployed workers can continue to pay their bills, businesses can continue to make sales and provide services, and the economy grows. The Congressional Budget Office finds unemployment benefits to be one of the most efficient fiscal policies to improve economic growth. If Federal unemployment benefits are extended through 2014, it would increase GDP by 0.2 percent and create 200,000 jobs. Those jobs could be lost if we do not extend this program.

It's important to remember who is most affected by long-term unemployment. Unfortunately, it is older workers. In a cruel state of affairs, those who have been working for decades, but who are not yet at retirement age, have the hardest time finding new work. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, over half of jobseekers between ages 55 and 64 have been searching for work for over 6 months. That is compared to 42 percent of those between 25 and 54. These older workers can't yet afford the luxury of retirement. They need to continue working to support their families and hopefully one day save enough to retire with security.

Congress has a long history of acting to ensure basic security for working people during tough economic times. Over the last 50 years, during seven different economic downturns, Congress has provided Federal unemployment benefit programs to assist workers when unemployment is high. The current program was put in place in 2008 by President George W. Bush when the unemployment rate was 5.6 percent. While unemployment is falling, it is still at a high rate, 7 percent. Long-term unemployment has been at record highs for years. Currently 37 percent of unemployed workers have been looking for new work for at least 6 months. Congress has never allowed Federal unemployment benefits to expire while the long-term unemployment rate was above 23 percent. Our economy is recovering, but we are not there yet. While the duration of Federal benefits has appropriately been scaled back as the recovery has progressed, there is no question that American families are still depending on Federal unemployment benefits, and there is no justification for letting the current program expire now.

We cannot let vulnerable Americans be cut off from their unemployment insurance during their time of need. We cannot turn the lights out on millions of Americans. Working families deserve peace of mind and our continued support while they look for jobs during these tough times. I urge the Senate to act to extend unemployment benefits, so that families do not have to wonder how they will survive in the New Year.

MAJOR MEDICAL FACILITY LEASE AUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2013

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, I am pleased that the Senate is scheduled, hopefully, to pass H.R. 3521, the Department of Veterans Affairs Major Medical Facility Lease Authorization Act of 2013, known as S. 1740 in the Senate, which I proudly cosponsored. The treatment of our country's veterans is of great importance to me, and I believe that it is the government's duty to honor the promises made to our veterans.

My constituents have written to me many times regarding the worsening conditions of the VA outpatient clinic in Tulsa. The building currently lacks the space to care adequately for the large number of veterans that receive their medical treatment at the facility. Due to the size of the facility, services such as the behavioral health services were located several miles away. Additionally, the parking lot capacity was not acceptable. It is because of my constituents that I have worked vigorously to ensure that their voices were heard.

With the passage of this bill, there will be funding to improve and expand this clinic. The new VA outpatient clinic in Tulsa would include primary care, women's health, imaging, specialty care, physical therapy, audiology, optometry, mental health, prosthetics, dentistry, and a pharmacy. The facility would then be able to provide the services that were promised to our men and women who were willing to make the personal sacrifices necessary to serve in the defense of our country.

HOMEOWNER FLOOD INSURANCE AFFORDABILITY ACT OF 2013

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Madam President, I rise today to join my colleagues from Louisiana and New Jersey—who know as well as anyone about all the struggle of rebuilding after a major disaster—in calling on the Senate to pass the Homeowners Flood Insurance Affordability Act before the Senate adjourns next week. I am deeply dismayed that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have objected to allowing the Senate to vote on this common-sense and bipartisan bill to help homeowners.

I want to especially thank Senator LANDRIEU for her strong leadership and support for families who took the worst of Superstorm Sandy—a massive storm that claimed the lives of 61 New Yorkers, shattered countless others, damaged or destroyed 300,000 homes, and hurt a quarter million businesses.

While the road to recovery is long and hard, New Yorkers are strong. I know we will rebuild better and stronger. But we in Congress have to continue to do our part. And to this day, more than a year later, homeowners are still struggling to rebuild, facing costly repairs to storm damage and what could be even costlier flood insurance premiums.

They survived Sandy, are trying to put their lives back together, but the premium increases mandated by the Biggert-Waters Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012 is what threatens to force many New Yorkers out of their homes and the communities they love.

We can and must prevent this—by passing our legislation to prevent a spike in flood insurance premiums until after FEMA fulfills its responsibility, and reports to Congress with a plan to make these rates more affordable. That's just common sense, and it's the right thing to do for homeowners across the Northeast, who are still putting their lives back together in the wake of this storm. The last thing they need is another burden like this.

I hope our colleagues reconsider their objection, and allow us to vote on this bipartisan bill and join us in helping these families rebuild and stay in their homes.

HUMAN RIGHTS IN HUNGARY

Mr. CARDIN. Madam President, earlier this year I chaired a Helsinki Commission hearing on the situation in Hungary. Today, I would like to revisit some of the issues addressed by our witnesses.

Since the April 2010 elections, Hungary has undertaken the most dramatic legal transformation that Europe has seen in decades. A new Constitution was passed with votes of the ruling party alone, and even that has already been amended five times. More than 700 new laws have been passed, including laws on the media, religion, and civic associations. There is a new civil code and a new criminal code. There is an entirely new electoral framework. The magnitude and scope of these changes have understandably put Hungary under a microscope.

At the Helsinki Commission's hearing in March, I examined concerns that these changes have undermined Hungary's system of democratic checks and balances, independence of the judiciary, and freedoms of the media and religion. I also received testimony about rising revisionism and extremism. I heard from Jozsef Szajer, a Member of the European Parliament who represented the Hungarian Government at the hearing. Princeton constitutional law expert Kim Lane Scheppelle, Dr. Paul Shapiro from the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, and Sylvana Habdank-Kolaczowska from Freedom House presented compelling testimony.

Unfortunately, developments in Hungary remain troubling.

Even though Hungary's religion law was tweaked after the Constitutional Court struck down parts of it, it retains a discriminatory two-tier system. Moreover, the Parliament is empowered with the extraordinary and, for all practical purposes, unreviewable power to decide what is and what is not a religion.

This month, the government announced it is launching an investigation into the Methodist Evangelical Church, a church persecuted during communist times. Today, the Methodist Evangelical Church is known for its outreach to Roma, work with the homeless and is one of the largest charitable organizations in Hungary. As I noted at the Helsinki Commission hearing in March, it is also one of the hundreds of religious groups stripped of official recognition after the passage of Hungary's new religion law.

The church has now complied with submitting the necessary number of supporters required by the law and, as a reply, the government has announced an unidentified "expert" will conduct an investigation into the church's beliefs and tenets. This step only reinforces fears that parliamentary denial of recognition as a so-called "Accepted Church" opens the door for further repressive measures.

Veneration of Hungary's wartime regent, Miklos Horthy, along with other anti-Semitic figures such as writer Jozsef Nyiro, continues. In November, a statue of Hungarian Jewish poet Miklos Radnoti, who was killed by Hungarian Nazis at the end of 1944, was rammed with a car and broken in half. At roughly the same time, extremists staged a book burning of his works along with other materials they called "Zionist publications." At the beginning of December, two menorahs were vandalized in Budapest.

Reflecting the climate of extremism, more than 160 Hungarian nationals have been found by Canada this year to have a well-founded fear of persecution. Almost all are Romani, but the refugees include an 80-year-old award winning Hungarian Jewish writer who received death threats after writing about anti-Semitism in Hungary, and was stripped of his honorary citizenship of Budapest on an initiative from the far-right Jobbik party, supported by the votes of the ruling Fidesz party.

While there are many who suggest the real problem comes from the extremist opposition party Jobbik, and not the ruling government, it seems that some members of Fidesz have contributed to a rise in intolerance.

I am particularly troubled that the government-created Media Council, consisting entirely of Fidesz delegated members, has threatened ATV—an independent television station—with punitive fines if it again characterizes Jobbik as extremist. If you can't even talk about what is extremist or anti-Semitic in Hungary without facing legal sanctions, how can you combat extremism and anti-Semitism? Moreover, this decision serves to protect Jobbik from critical debate in the advance of next year's elections. Why?

Other new measures further stifle free speech.

Unfortunately, and somewhat shockingly, last month Hungary amended its defamation law to allow for the imposition of prison terms up to 3 years.

The imposition of jail time for speech offenses was a hallmark of the communist era. During the post-communist transition, the Helsinki Commission consistently urged OSCE countries to repeal criminal defamation and insult laws entirely. In 2004, for example, the Helsinki Commission wrote to Minister of Justice Peter Barandy regarding the criminal convictions of Andras Bencsik and Laszlo Attila Bertok.

This new law, raced through under an expedited procedure in the wake of a bi-election controversy in which allegations of voter manipulation were traded, was quickly criticized by the OSCE representative on Freedom of the Media. I share her concerns that these changes to the criminal code may lead to the silencing of critical or differing views in society and are inconsistent with OSCE commitments.

Hungary was once held up as a model of peaceful democratic transition and is situated in a region of Europe where the beacon of freedom is still sought by many today. I hope Hungary will return to a leadership role in the protection of human rights and the promotion of democracy.

FARMLAND PRESERVATION

Mr. CASEY. Madam President, today I wish to honor Lancaster County, Pennsylvania's impressive feat of preserving 100,000 acres of farmland. Lancaster County became the first county in the Nation to preserve this many acres of farmland, a full 25 percent of all land available for farming in the county. My father, Governor Robert P. Casey, served as Governor of Pennsylvania from 1987 to 1995 and signed into law the State farmland preservation program. Governor Casey made preserving farmland a high priority to ensure that Pennsylvania's farmers could continue to produce agricultural products and sustain the Commonwealth's number one industry.

Farmland preservation is one of Pennsylvania's noblest accomplishments. There are a lot of words that can describe this achievement. But the one word that I think is most important is the word sacred. This is truly a sacred act. Reflecting on this tremendous milestone, I am reminded of a line from the Prayer of Saint Francis, which reads "For it is in giving that we receive." When I think about conservation, I am inspired by the gifts which flow so directly from the preservation of land. Conserved lands purify our water, clean our air and maintain open spaces. Conserved lands serve as precious wildlife habitat, allowing species to forage and to flourish.

We know that bees, which provide sweet honey and pollinate our crops, are searching for habitat in these modern times. Lancaster County's triumph in conservation helps afford bees, which have lived on Earth for more than 100 million years, a place to inhabit. Another gift created when farmers, foresters and ranchers conserve lands is the knowledge that these critical professions—these cherished ways of life—will continue to have a valued role in American society for many generations to come.

In giving lands over to the committed purpose of conservation, people receive bountiful rewards. As a government official, I believe in the transformative and restorative qualities of conservation easements. I will work to ensure vital conservation programs continue to work for Pennsylvanians and partner organizations, such as the Lancaster Farmland Trust and the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board.

Furthermore, more than half of Pennsylvania and most all of Lancaster County lies within the Chesapeake Bay watershed—and approximately 3 million people live in this area. The challenges of farming in this region are significant. Thus efficient, effective and relevant Federal conservation programs are critical to farmers' success. In advance of the Senate agriculture committee's consideration of the 2012 farm bill, I introduced the Chesapeake Bay Watershed Fairness Act, legislation aimed at helping farmers to better implement beneficial conservation practices and to meet water quality goals in the watershed. The 2013 Senate bill contains portions of this legislation and features additional improvements that better ensure that the remodeled conservation programs will serve the needs of farmers in the Chesapeake Bay watershed.

As we move forward with the farm bill, providing farmers in the watershed with the conservation tools included in the Senate bill is extremely important. Federal farm land conservation programs must remain strong. The voluntary conservation programs in the farm bill provide important tools to help farmers comply with Federal and State regulations while keeping farmers in business. Of particular importance to Pennsylvanians are programs like the proposed Agricultural Land Easements program, designed to take over the current Farmland Protection Program, which helps to preserve working farm lands from development. These conservation programs must continue to work for Pennsylvanians and those across the Nation who desire to perform the sacred act of preserving farmland so our future generations can continue to provide us with food, fiber and fuel for the benefit of all.

REMEMBERING ALBERT HENRY HAAS

Mrs. MCCASKILL. Madam President, I ask that the Senate join me in honoring the life of Albert Henry Haas. Albert was killed November 29 in a mortar attack at Bagram Air Force Base in Afghanistan, where he was serving as a civilian aircraft mechanic.

Albert had a long career in service to our country, dating back to his service in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam war and continuing in the Army Reserves during the conflict in Bosnia. Following 30 years of military service, Albert retired and began a 30-year career in aircraft maintenance for companies such as TWA and American Airlines.

Albert had a passion for life that he shared with those around him. He especially enjoyed spending time with his grandchildren and learning about different cultures. He was fascinated with and very knowledgeable about all mechanical things that move like trains, helicopters, and planes. Those around him will remember him as a comical person who was able to make all around him feel comfortable and welcomed.

As the daughter of a caring, loving father who always told me I could achieve anything, and that there were no jobs too tough for me, I was especially happy to hear about Albert's advice for his two daughters. He instilled in them from an early age that they could do anything they put their mind to, without regard to their gender. This resulted in them helping rewire the entire house and working on roof repairs with Albert. Just as I am thankful on a daily basis for the lessons my father taught me, I know Albert's children are thankful for the memories and teachings of their father.

On behalf of the Senate, I wish to offer my condolences to Albert's wife of 41 years, Bay Thi, their three adult children, Thao Haas of Texas, Tina V. Smith of Belleville, IL, and Lisa R. Carnahan of St. Louis, MO, and his eight grandchildren. Albert's life was an example to those around him and I hope his family can take comfort in the memories they shared with him.

TRIBUTE TO MAJOR BOBBY J. COX

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Madam President, I wish to pay tribute to MAJ Bobby James Cox for his exemplary dedication to duty and his service to the U.S. Army and to the United States of America. Major Cox has spent the last year serving in my office as a U.S. Army congressional fellow, and it is my distinct pleasure to congratulate him as he concludes an exemplary tour of duty in the Senate.

Major Cox was born in Spartanburg, SC. He commissioned into the infantry in 2002 upon graduation from the Citadel, the Military College of South Carolina, as a distinguished military graduate and the cadet regimental commander of the South Carolina Corps of Cadets.

Major Cox was first assigned as a platoon leader in A Company, 3-187 Infantry Regiment, Rakkasans, 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, KY, deploying in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom in 2003. Upon return from Iraq, Major Cox was selected to be a Ranger platoon leader in A Company, 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, at Fort Lewis, WA, deploying twice in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. After the Maneuver Captains' Career Course at Fort Benning, GA, Major Cox was assigned to 4th Ranger Training Battalion, Fort Benning, GA, to be a platoon Ranger instructor, Company Commander, and Battalion S-1.

Major Cox then moved to Fort Bragg, NC, to become the 3rd Brigade Combat Team air officer at the 82nd Airborne Division. He assumed command of A Company, 1-505 Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division while deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Following company command and battalion staff, he was selected to be an Army congressional fellow attending the George Washington University, where he earned a master's degree and subsequently joined my personal office on Capitol Hill.

Over the past year, Major Cox has distinguished himself among his fellowship peers as a leader in the Senate. From his legislative contributions supporting my role on the Senate Armed Services Committee to his dedication to constituent services, Major Cox has deftly applied his military expertise to elevate the performance of my personal office. Across my 19 years in office, Major Cox ranks among the very best of a select group of fellows.

The Army says that "Rangers Lead The Way!" Major Cox has served as an inspiration and model Airborne Ranger to me and my colleagues in the Senate. I am deeply grateful for his significant contributions and leadership over the past year. He has certainly lived up to the Ranger motto.

It is my great pleasure to congratulate Major Cox, his wife Joscelyn, and their two children, Reagan and Seth, as they leave the Senate and continue to serve our great Nation. I wish them the very best of luck.

TRIBUTE TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL KELLY MARIE LAUREL

Mrs. MURRAY. Madam President, today I wish to pay tribute to an exemplary leader, an accomplished Soldier, and an extraordinary American, as she retires from Active Duty with the U.S. Army. LTC Kelly Marie Laurel has dedicated nearly 25 years of service to our great Nation and has set the very standard of leadership, strategic thinking, and selfless service that we expect of our finest Army officers. Culminating her career as the hand-picked Deputy Chief of the Secretary of the Army's Strategic Initiatives Group, Lieutenant Colonel Laurel has served and excelled at every level of our Army, and she exemplifies the patriotism, fidelity, and commitment to which every citizen should strive.

From her early enlisted career as an airman in the Wyoming National Guard to her Active-Duty service in key positions ranging from medical platoon leader and company commander to personally advising the Army surgeon general and the Secretary of the Army, Kelly has been exceptional in every respect. Examples of her ever-increasing responsibilities include medical platoon leader, 61st Area Support Medical Company at Fort Hood, TX, company commander, Headquarters, 52d Medical Evacuation Battalion; and later the chief of the Management Division, 18th Medical Command in Korea; and the chief financial officer for the widely dispersed Heidelberg Hospital and its nine outlying clinics in Germany. Her work and potential was so great that then-Major Laurel was soon personally selected to serve the Army's surgeon general as the senior budget analyst, the chief of the Financial Health Policy Division, and finally as the senior congressional affairs coordinating officer.

Fortunately for me and so many Members of Congress, the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Financial Management and Comptroller soon recognized her outstanding abilities and selected Kelly to serve as the Army's senior budget legislative liaison. I and my colleagues in both Chambers have personally benefited from Kelly's extraordinary intellect, keen analysis, and unmatched determination. During her tenure in this position, Kelly routinely worked the most sensitive, complex, and critical Army actions involving the Senate and House Appropriations Committees. Her wisdom and unmatched expertise led the Army to extraordinary success in obtaining vital funding for the most critical medical, environmental, and behavioral health programs and ensured that our soldiers and their families had the necessary support they needed during these years of war. Moreover, she was instrumental in obtaining vital funding for the restructuring and expansion of the Army National Cemeteries Program. Most recently, recognizing her leadership and exceptional intellect, the Secretary of the Army selected Kelly to be his deputy chief of strategic initiatives. In this capacity, Kelly advised the Secretary and other Army senior leaders on the development and implementation of critical service-wide policies and programs that will benefit the Army for many years to come.

Kelly's superb career and character is also a true testament to the exceptional support and example provided by her family. As the daughter of first-generation Americans, Kelly was taught early the value of hard work, commitment, and selfless service by her parents Jose and Dolores Montemayor. Moreover, as a child of a career military family, Kelly learned to embody the values of loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage before she even knew there was an Army. As she has repeatedly demonstrated, to Kelly, these are not ideals but character traits; not platitudes, but requirements and expectations of every citizen. Clearly, her character, work ethic, and patriotism are examples to us all. We owe the highest praise and tribute to this great American and her family.

Accordingly, on behalf of a very grateful nation, I join my colleagues today in recognizing and commending LTC Kelly Marie Laurel for nearly 25 years of service to this country. Although, to the Army, Kelly is irreplaceable, I am certain this exceptional citizen will continue to make great contributions to the United States as she embarks on the next chapter of her life.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO DR. LEVI WATKINS, JR.

• Mr. CARDIN. Madam President, today I wish to salute Dr. Levi Watkins, Jr., a renowned cardiac surgeon who will retire at year's end from Johns Hopkins Medicine. During his 4-decade-long career, Dr. Watkins has had a profound impact on American health care—through the countless patients he has treated, the students he has recruited and mentored, and the cultural diversity he has advanced.

Levi Watkins, Jr. grew up in Montgomery, AL, the third of Dr. and Mrs. Levi Watkins, Sr.'s six children. At the Alabama State Laboratory High School, Watkins excelled in academics and athletics: he graduated valedictorian and was selected for the Montgomery All-Star basketball team. It was in Alabama that he witnessed the early days of the civil rights movement. As a member of the First Baptist Church of Montgomery, Watkins developed a close friendship with his pastor, the Reverend Dr. Ralph David Abernathy, and later he attended Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, where he was introduced to the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and the King family.

Watkins majored in biology as an undergraduate at Tennessee State University, where he was elected president of the student body and joined Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., Alpha Kappa Mu honor society, Beta Kappa Chi honor society, and many other notable organizations. Watkins also led many student movements on campus and graduated with highest honors.

Dr. Watkins' medical career has been one of monumental firsts. In 1966, he integrated the Vanderbilt University School of Medicine as the first African-American student ever admitted. He was later selected to become a member of Alpha Omega Alpha medical honor society. Watkins arrived at Johns Hopkins Hospital in 1970 as a general surgery intern and became the first African-American chief resident in cardiac surgery in the institution's history. There, in 1980, he performed the world's first implantation of an automatic heart defibrillator in a human—a procedure that is now performed worldwide and has since saved tens of thousands of lives. In 1991, Dr. Watkins became the first African-American at Johns Hopkins promoted to full professor of cardiac surgery. He was named the first African-American associate dean in the School of Medicine and established the nation's first postdoctoral association, helping to revolutionize the culture of postdoctoral education in the United States. Today, there are more than 50 such associations across the nation.

Dr. Watkins has been a fierce advocate for fairness and diversity. He joined the Hopkins School of Medicine's admissions committee in 1979, and began recruiting minority applicants and sponsoring an annual welcoming and networking reception for new students. In 1982, he founded the Martin Luther King, Jr. Commemoration at Hopkins, an annual event that has brought an illustrious array of speakers to Baltimore, including Coretta Scott King, Rosa Parks, Maya Angelou, Stevie Wonder, and Taylor Branch.

In October 2002, Vanderbilt University established a Professorship and Associate Deanship in his name; in October 2005, Dr. Watkins' portrait was unveiled at the Vanderbilt University School of Medicine honoring his life's work; and, in 2008, Vanderbilt bestowed upon Dr. Watkins its "Most Distinguished Alumnus Award."

Since 2006, when he stopped performing surgery, Dr. Watkins has remained a powerful presence and an important influence on Johns Hopkins and the city of Baltimore. In December 2008, he was honored by the National Black Caucus of State Legislators with the Nation Builders Award, along with President-Elect Barack Obama, and James H. Meredith. In January of 2012, he was appointed co-chair of Mayor Stephanie Rawlings-Blake's transition team for health and human services.

I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing Dr. Levi Watkins, Jr. well as he embarks upon the next phase of his lifelong journey to improve the health and well-being of others.■

TRIBUTE TO DR. LYNN KILCHENSTEIN

• Mrs. SHAHEEN. Mr. President, I wish to recognize Lynn Kilchenstein, president of the New Hampshire Technical Institute, who will step down from her position at the end of the year. Dr. Kilchenstein has demonstrated exceptional leadership at NHTI for the last 10 years, and I thank her for her strong commitment to the students of New Hampshire. While I know she will be missed by the school and the community, I join Dr. Kilchenstein's family, friends, and colleagues in acknowledging her many achievements and celebrating her service.

Dr. Kilchenstein's substantial contributions to NHTI began when she joined the faculty as an English professor 26 years ago. Prior to becoming president, she also served as head of the English Department, faculty forum president, and associate vice president of academic affairs. In each position Dr. Kilchenstein made an impact, from her direct instruction of students to the development of NHTI's Academic Success Council.

In 2003, Dr. Kilchenstein was named the president of NHTI, and under her leadership the campus has been transformed with numerous projects that have improved social and academic spaces. Dr. Kilchenstein has overseen the growth of NHTI's health programs, including the construction of the LEED-certified Beverly D. Grappone Hall and the renovation of MacRury Hall, both of which feature new facilities and equipment that allow students to learn in hands-on medical environments.

During Dr. Kilchenstein's tenure, NHTI expanded class offerings, created new liberal arts programs and teacher education classes, grew existing programs, and successfully completed the reaccreditation process.

In addition to her leadership role at NHTI, Dr. Kilchenstein is also an involved and dedicated member of the Concord community. She served for 8 years on the Greater Concord Chamber Board of Directors and currently sits on the Governor's Advanced Manufacturing and Education Advisory Council, the Capitol Center for the Arts Board, the Creative Concord Committee, and the Concord Housing Commission. To recognize her service, the Greater Concord Area Chamber of Commerce presented Dr. Kilchenstein with the Pinnacle Award for Business Leader of the Year in 2011.

I know that everyone at the New Hampshire Technical Institute and in the community of Concord joins me in thanking Dr. Kilchenstein for her service and wishes her well in all her future endeavors.●

TRIBUTE TO JOSEPH BLISS

● Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, today I recognize Joseph Bliss, an intern in my Sioux Falls, SD, office, for all of the hard work he has done for me, my staff, and the State of South Dakota.

Joseph is a graduate of Roosevelt High School in Sioux Falls, SD. Currently, he is attending University of South Dakota, where he is majoring in political science and criminal justice. He is a hard worker who has been dedicated to getting the most out of his internship experience.

I extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to Joseph for all of the fine work he has done and wish him continued success in the years to come.●

TRIBUTE TO BRANDON FUSARO

● Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, today I recognize Brandon Fusaro, an intern in my Washington, DC, office, for all of the hard work he has done for me, my staff, and the State of South Dakota.

Brandon is a graduate of Burncoat High School in Worcester, MA. Currently, he is attending George Washington University, where he is majoring in exercise science. He is a hard worker who has been dedicated to getting the most out of his internship experience.

I extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to Brandon for all of the fine work he has done and wish him continued success in the years to come.●

TRIBUTE TO ISAAC HARRINGTON

● Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, today I recognize Isaac Harrington, an intern in my Washington, DC, office, for all of the hard work he has done for me, my staff, and the State of South Dakota.

Isaac is a graduate of Mitchell High School in Mitchell, SD and the University of Notre Dame, where he majored in computer science. He is a hard worker who has been dedicated to getting the most out of his internship experience.

I extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to Isaac for all of the fine work he has done and wish him continued success in the years to come.●

TRIBUTE TO ISAIAH WONNENBERG

● Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, today I recognize Isaiah Wonnemberg, an intern in my Washington, DC, office, for all of the hard work he has done for me, my staff, and the State of South Dakota.

Isaiah is a graduate of Gregory High School in Gregory, SD. Currently, he is attending University of South Dakota, where he is majoring in political science. He is a hard worker who has been dedicated to getting the most out of his internship experience.

I extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to Isaiah for all of the fine work he has done and wish him continued success in the years to come.●

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Pate, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The messages received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

At 1:45 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mrs. Cole, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bills, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 1447. An act to encourage States to report to the Attorney General certain information regarding the deaths of individuals in the custody of law enforcement agencies, and for other purposes.

H.R. 3458. An act to treat payments by charitable organizations with respect to certain firefighters as exempt payments.

H.R. 3509. An act to direct the Secretary of State to submit to Congress a report on the status of post-earthquake recovery and development efforts in Haiti.

The message also announced that the House has agreed to the following concurrent resolution, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H. Con. Res. 71. Concurrent resolution providing for corrections to the enrollment of the bill H.R. 3304.

The message further announced that the House concurs in the Senate amendment to the title of the bill (H.R. 3304) to authorize and request the President to award the Medal of Honor to Bennie G. Adkins and Donald P. Sloat of the United States Army for acts of valor during the Vietnam Conflict and to authorize the award of the Medal of Honor to certain other veterans who were previously recommended for award of the Medal of Honor; concurs in the first three amendments to the text of the bill, without amendment; and concurred in the fourth amendment to the bill, with an amendment.

The message also announced that pursuant to section 1238(b)(3) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (22 U.S.C. 7002), as amended, and the order of the House of January 3, 2013, the Speaker appoints the following individual on the part of the House of Representatives to the United States-China Economic and Security Review Commission, for a term expiring on December 31, 2015: Mr. Daniel M. Slane of Ohio.

The message further announced that effective December 16, 2013, pursuant to section 2 of the Civil Rights Commission Amendments Act of 1994 (42 U.S.C. 1975 note), and the order of the House of January 3, 2013, the Speaker appoints the following individual on the part of the House of Representatives to the Commission on Civil Rights for a term expiring December 15, 2019: Mr. Peter N. Kirsanow of Cleveland, Ohio.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mrs. McCASKILL, and Mr. MANCHIN):

S. 1825. A bill to improve the management of the Job Corps program, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise today with Senator McCASKILL and Senator MANCHIN to introduce the Securing Job Corps Centers Act, a bill that seeks to address the Job Corps' recent management challenges.

Job Corps is an educational and vocational training program administered by the Department of Labor, DOL, that helps at-risk young people ages 16 through 24 by giving them the tools they need to succeed. Job Corps has been training young adults for meaningful careers for nearly 50 years and is committed to offering its students a safe, drug-free environment where they can train and learn.

Job Corps' mission is to attract eligible young people, teach them the skills they need to become employable and independent, and help them find meaningful jobs or further their education.

This mission has been threatened, however, by the Department of Labor's mismanagement.

Earlier this year, the DOL ordered a temporary suspension of new student enrollments as its way to address a significant Job Corps program shortfall of $61.5 million. This was in addition to the $39 million shortfall in the previous program year. The suspension of enrollments decimated the program, setting it back for years to come, which is especially upsetting considering Job Corps has compiled an impressive record over five decades in preparing at-risk youth for the workforce or higher education.

According to DOL, several factors contributed to Job Corps' financial problems, but the most significant was unchecked growth in expenditures due to serious weaknesses in the financial management processes. I wrote to DOL officials for clarification, and they responded with the following:

Job Corps lacked appropriate program monitoring tools and control protocols, including those to sufficiently analyze contractual spending trends. In turn, this led to inadequate spending projections for the Operations account.

It is clear that the Department of Labor has mismanaged this program, and the students suffered the consequences. There are two Job Corps centers in Maine that do excellent work to help these young adults become productive members of society. The Penobscot Job Corps Academy and the Loring Job Corps Center have the capability to serve nearly 800 at-risk youth on a daily basis. These centers put these young men and women on a path to earning their high school diploma and to gaining the necessary skills to enter the workforce or the military or go on to college.

However, the shortfall caused by DOL mismanagement forced these centers to furlough and lay off staff to reduce costs—jeopardizing the long-term sustainability of these centers and their important work.

Studies have found Job Corps to be among the most effective of all federally supported programs that serve youth between the ages of 16 and 24 who are disconnected from both school and work. Even in the face of unprecedented budget shortfalls and enrollment freezes, Job Corps has continued to produce impressive results—85 percent of graduates obtain a job, enroll in higher education, or enlist in the military.

To ensure recent management challenges are addressed as transparently and effectively as possible, our bill would create an advisory board responsible for working with the DOL to develop policy and programmatic recommendations related to Job Corps' administration. The advisory panel will provide a series of reports directly to the U.S. Secretary of Labor and Congress on budget and financial management protocols, cost efficiencies, and maximizing the number of youth served. Our bill will also require earlier notifications of management decisions at DOL that could affect student enrollments.

Job Corps' recent management challenges have had ripple effects throughout the communities served by Job Corps centers and continue to have an impact on center operations. The fact that every Job Corps center continues to operate at 21 to 25 percent below full capacity is the result of a management structure that forced operational decisions to be made in haste and without proper consideration of alternatives. An advisory board of experienced Job Corps operations experts can help the program and its new leadership to emerge from the crises of the last year and ensure that, in the future, Job Corps policy decisions are always guided by what is in the best interests of Job Corps students and communities.

Job Corps' value remains clear. Studies suggest that leaving behind the youth served by this program could cost our states and our economy hundreds of thousands of dollars per youth. I urge my colleagues to support our bill to ensure that Job Corps returns to the operational efficiency that characterized its first 50 years and remains among the nation's most successful workforce programs.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING,
Washington, DC, February 21, 2013.

HON. SUSAN M. COLLINS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR COLLINS: Thank you for your letter to Acting Secretary of Labor Seth D. Harris regarding the U.S. Department of Labor's (Department) oversight and administration of the Job Corps program. Job Corps is part of the Employment and Training Administration (ETA) and the Acting Secretary referred your letter to me for response. Although we are not placing a moratorium on suspension of enrollments at this time, I hope you will find the following information to be helpful.

The Employment and Training Administration administers Job Corps through 147 contracts for the program's 125 centers and educational and vocational programs. Private contractors operate 97 centers and the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) runs the remaining 28 centers. This letter discusses the financial problems experienced by Job Corps in Program Year (PY) 2011 and PY 2012, their causes, what we should have done better, corrective actions we have taken, and the steps we will take to ensure that the Job Corps program can continue to provide high-quality programming to some of our nation's most disadvantaged youth. We would welcome the opportunity to provide you and your colleagues with a more in-depth briefing at your earliest convenience. We are continuing to analyze the matters discussed in this letter. The description we have set forth below reflects our current understanding.

Several factors contributed to the financial problems with Job Corps in PY 2011, including growth in expenditures (such as student-related expenditures and those associated with the opening of three new Job Corps centers in PY 2010 and PY 2011) and serious weaknesses in ETA's and Job Corps' financial management processes that led to a failure to identify and adjust for rising costs in a timely manner. In PY 2012, Job Corps again experienced financial problems because the cost-savings measures taken by ETA and Job Corps management were not aggressive enough to allow the program to stay within budget.

For example, Job Corps opened three new centers in PY 2010 and PY 2011 on a delayed schedule. Funding that had been provided to Job Corps to cover the costs of operating these centers in prior years was no longer dedicated to these sites as a result of the delays, and we did not appropriately plan for the increased costs resulting from the opening of these centers.

While these and other costs escalated during the course of PY 2011, the extent of the financial problems went unrecognized. This is largely because Job Corps lacked appropriate program monitoring tools and control protocols, including those to sufficiently analyze contractual spending trends. In turn, this led to inadequate spending projections for the Operations account.

As you know, Congress provided ETA with authority in PY 2011 to transfer up to $26.2 million in funds from the Job Corps Construction, Rehabilitation and Acquisition (CRA) account to the Operations account. In April 2012, I concluded that Job Corps would need to transfer this full amount. At the end of May 2012, I notified the Secretary of the need to transfer the funds. It also became apparent that this transfer would not be sufficient to meet PY 2011 operating needs.

Thus, ETA obtained approval from the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in June 2012 to transfer up to an additional $5.37 million from the Training and Employment Services (TES) and State Unemployment Insurance and Employment Service Operations (SUIESO) accounts to the Job Corps Operations account. The Department notified the Appropriations Committees of its intent to transfer these funds. In the end, only $2.2 million of this initial request was transferred to Job Corps' Operations account.

In addition to the fund transfers for PY 2011, ETA implemented a variety of programmatic changes to control costs. These changes focused on non-mission critical administrative expenses to ensure that student academic, career technical training, and post-graduation placement activities were not affected. These included negotiating across-the-board cost-savings targets with each Job Corps center to deobligate PY 2011 funds and suspending enrollment for new students in the month of June, except for homeless youth. ETA also conducted additional oversight on travel by requiring center operators to report all bus and airfare travel directly to the national office prior to arranging travel with ticketing agencies, thus allowing for real-time accounting of June's travel costs. We also required Job Corps center operators to submit their financial reports every three days during the month of June.

Concurrently, ETA implemented several initiatives to strengthen and coordinate existing controls and created new controls where appropriate to track contractor expenditures, and certify adequate funding throughout the rest of PY 2011. On May 22, 2012, the Department established a Job Corps working group within DOL to provide weekly oversight of the remediation efforts during the end of PY 2011. In addition, in June 2012, Secretary Solis requested that the Inspector General (IG) perform a comprehensive review of the Job Corps financial control system.

We understood at the outset of PY 2012 that we needed to take measures to ensure that program obligations remained within Job Corps' appropriated levels. Even before the program year started, we began to develop a comprehensive plan for cost-cutting measures, which was updated throughout the Program Year. In addition, the improvements made to Job Corps' financial management allowed us to make projections earlier in the program year about the overall budget situation.

Given our strong interest in not reducing student services and minimizing disruption to the Job Corps Program, we proceeded cautiously in evaluating and implementing cost saving measures in PY 2012. In retrospect, it is clear that we did not act as quickly or decisively as circumstances required. As the Assistant Secretary, I take full responsibility for our failure to manage these issues more aggressively.

Although they ultimately were insufficient, we did take several significant steps throughout PY 2012 to gain better control of Job Corps' expenses. For example, in August a newly-created Office of Financial Administration (OFA) within ETA, headed by a Senior Executive Service-level Comptroller, began operating. OFA oversees the now-centralized budget and financial operations of Job Corps. After OFA began operating, we developed initial targets for both savings and what we believed would be a sufficient reserve for the Job Corps program. We also eliminated a contract for accounting services within the Job Corps Operations account, reduced USDA costs, and negotiated with contractors to identify additional cost-savings measures.

In September 2012, the Secretary approved several additional measures for PY 2012: a reduction in new student biweekly stipend and transition pay to graduates, suspension of enrollments in late November and December, centralizing student transportation costs, and reducing the national academic support contract and career technical support contract. In October 2012, we issued guidance informing the Job Corps community that we would be suspending enrollment from November 26 through December 31, 2012. We also announced that, effective November 1, 2012, Job Corps would reduce the stipends and transition pay for new enrollees.

Despite these cost-cutting measures, our analysis of data in November showed that Job Corps would need to implement additional savings because costs were again exceeding budgeted amounts. Therefore, in December, we took additional steps, including eliminating the student stipend for days when a Job Corps student is not present for duty, which took effect immediately, and reducing the student clothing stipend, effective January 1, 2013. We reduced Job Corps' national media buy by $4 million for PY 2012. In mid-December, we increased the student to teacher ratio from 15:1 to 18:1 in order to save costs, while properly accounting for the special academic needs of at-risk youth.

In January 2013, we also issued guidance to reduce health care-related costs, including by modifying the current health staffing requirements, adjusting the hours for center physicians, dentists and Training Employee Assistance Program specialists based on center usage, and requiring applicants to provide a current record of immunizations in order to eliminate duplicative care. We also continued our work to cut administrative costs. Among other things, we have issued a solicitation that we anticipate will help Job Corps right-size its career technical training and academic programs and we are exploring the best way to centralize utility and other procurements.

Notwithstanding these efforts to reduce costs for PY 2012, as of the beginning of January 2013 we continued to project insufficient cost savings to remain within budgeted levels for the program year. On January 18, 2013, Job Corps instructed all centers to temporarily suspend outreach and admission activities, effective January 28, except for runaway, homeless and foster care candidates. The length of the suspension will be determined by the time it takes to achieve the necessary savings, but we do not expect it to last past June 30, 2013.

The decision to temporarily freeze Job Corps enrollment nationwide was extremely difficult. It came after we implemented many alternative cost-savings measures, albeit insufficient ones. We also considered other alternatives before deciding to implement the temporary enrollment freeze.

Some of the options we considered include an abbreviated program year, slot reductions at a specified number of centers, cutting student stipends and transition pay to current students, and adopting a student leave policy in lieu of scheduled holiday and other school breaks. Ultimately, we rejected these and other options because of their more harmful effect on the Job Corps program and the students that it serves as well as the insufficient savings we would have obtained. Our conclusion was that the most certain and least detrimental savings Job Corps could achieve for the remainder of PY 2012 was from the temporary suspension. This will result in reduced center operating expenses, lower Outreach/Admissions contract costs, as well as savings in student stipend and transportation costs.

Notwithstanding the temporary enrollment suspension, on January 28, 2013, Job Corps continued to serve 44,268 students as of that date. With the suspension of new enrollments, Job Corps will be able to keep its commitment to students who are already in the program.

In closing, the Department deeply regrets the current situation facing the Job Corps program. I personally take responsibility for not acting more quickly to ensure that the program was operating within its appropriated levels. The decision to temporarily suspend enrollment at all centers is the most balanced, efficient way to achieve the savings now in order to avoid a shortfall in PY 2012. However, we clearly recognize that a comprehensive review and assessment of the Job Corps program, contracting, budget, and management is needed to ensure that we do not face this situation again. We will keep your office updated. Please contact Michelle Rose in the Department's Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Affairs with any questions. She may be reached at (202) 693-4600.

Sincerely,

JANE OATES,
Assistant Secretary.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 320—DESIGNATING DECEMBER 14, 2013, AS "WREATHS ACROSS AMERICA DAY"

Ms. COLLINS (for herself and Mr. KING) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 320

Whereas 22 years ago, the Wreaths Across America project began an annual tradition, during the month of December, of donating, transporting, and placing Maine balsam fir holiday wreaths on the graves of the fallen heroes buried at Arlington National Cemetery;

Whereas more than 1,000,000 wreaths have been sent to locations, including national cemeteries and veterans memorials, in every State and overseas;

Whereas the mission of the Wreaths Across America project to "Remember, Honor, Teach" is carried out in part by coordinating wreath-laying ceremonies at Arlington National Cemetery as well as veterans cemeteries and other locations in all 50 States;

Whereas the Wreaths Across America project carries out a week-long veterans parade between Maine and Virginia, stopping along the way to spread a message about the importance of remembering the fallen heroes of the United States, honoring those who serve, and teaching the people of the United States about the sacrifices made by veterans and their families to preserve the freedoms in the United States;

Whereas in 2012, wreaths were sent to more than 800 locations across the United States and overseas, 100 more locations than the previous year;

Whereas in December 2013, the Patriot Guard Riders, a motorcycle and motor vehicle group that is dedicated to patriotic events and includes more than 250,000 members nationwide, will continue the tradition of the group of escorting a tractor-trailer filled with donated wreaths from Harrington, Maine to Arlington National Cemetery;

Whereas thousands of individuals volunteer each December to escort and lay the wreaths;

Whereas December 15, 2012, was previously designated by the Senate as "Wreaths Across America Day"; and

Whereas the Wreaths Across America project will continue the proud legacy on December 14, 2013, bringing approximately 130,000 wreaths to Arlington National Cemetery on that day: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates December 14, 2013, as "Wreaths Across America Day";

(2) honors the Wreaths Across America project, the Patriot Guard Riders, and all of the volunteers and donors involved in this worthy tradition; and

(3) recognizes the sacrifices that our veterans, members of the Armed Forces, and their families have made, and continue to make, for our great Nation.

SENATE RESOLUTION 321—HONORING THE LIFE, ACCOMPLISHMENTS, AND LEGACY OF NELSON ROLIHLEHLA MANDELA AND EXPRESSING CONDOLENCES ON HIS PASSING

Mr. REID (for himself, Mr. McCONNELL, Mr. COONS, Mr. FLAKE, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mr. ALEXANDER, Ms. AYOTTE, Ms. BALDWIN, Mr. BARRASSO, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. BEGICH, Mr. BENNET, Mr. BLUMENTHAL, Mr. BLUNT, Mr. BOOKER, Mr. BOOZMAN, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BROWN, Mr. BURR, Ms. CANTWELL, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. CARPER, Mr. CASEY, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mr. COATS, Mr. COBURN, Mr. COCHRAN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. CORKER, Mr. CORNYN, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. CRUZ, Mr. DONNELLY, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. ENZI, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mrs. FISCHER, Mr. FRANKEN, Mrs. GILLIBRAND, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mrs. HAGAN, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. HATCH, Mr. HEINRICH, Ms. HEITKAMP, Mr. HELLER, Ms. HIRONO, Mr. HOVEN, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. JOHANNIS, Mr. JOHNSON of Wisconsin, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. KAINE, Mr. KING, Mr. KIRK, Ms. KLOBUCHAR, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. LEE, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. MANCHIN, Mr. MARKEY, Mr. MCCAIN, Mrs. McCASKILL, Mr. MERKLEY, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. MORAN, Ms. MURKOWSKI, Mr. MURPHY, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON, Mr. PAUL, Mr. PORTMAN, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. REED, Mr. RISCH, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. RUBIO, Mr. SANDERS, Mr. SCHATZ, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. SCOTT, Mr. SESSIONS, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Mr. SHELBY, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. TESTER, Mr. THUNE, Mr. TOOMEY, Mr. UDALL of Colorado, Mr. UDALL of New Mexico, Mr. VITTER, Mr. WARNER, Ms. WARREN, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, Mr. WICKER, and Mr. WYDEN) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 321

Whereas Nelson Mandela was born on July 18, 1918, as Rolihlahla Mandela, to Nonqaphi Nosekeni and Nkosi Mphakanyiswa Gadla Mandela in Transkei, South Africa;

Whereas Nelson Mandela's defiance of injustice, and his commitment to peace and reconciliation, played critical roles in the negotiation process that led South Africa to abolish apartheid, a system of racially focused social, political, and economic discrimination, and to ultimately adopt in its place a system of multiparty democracy and universal suffrage for all South Africans;

Whereas Nelson Mandela became a political activist as a young man and rose through the leadership ranks of the African National Congress (ANC), becoming the ANC President;

Whereas, on August 5, 1962, Nelson Mandela was arrested for his political activism to end the discriminatory policies of apartheid;

Whereas, despite calls for clemency on behalf of Nelson Mandela by the international community, including the Security Council, the General Assembly, and the Secretary General of the United Nations, he was found guilty of all charges against him and sentenced to life in prison;

Whereas, during 18 of his 27 years of imprisonment on Robben Island, Nelson Mandela was permitted only one visitor a year, and for only 30 minutes;

Whereas Nelson Mandela remained resolute, refusing offers to renounce his struggle against the Government of South Africa in exchange for his freedom, and became widely viewed as a martyr for the anti-apartheid movement;

Whereas, during his imprisonment, Nelson Mandela was confined to a small cell where he slept on the floor, and he was sentenced to hard labor while being gravely mistreated by prison officials;

Whereas, on February 11, 1990, under growing international pressure and national campaign efforts, Nelson Mandela was released from prison, marking the end of his 27 years, 6 months, and 1 week of continuous incarceration;

Whereas, upon his release, Nelson Mandela resumed a top leadership role in the ANC and led the party in negotiations that resulted in South Africa's first multiracial elections;

Whereas, in 1994, following the first fully representative, multiracial national elections, Nelson Mandela was elected on May 9 and inaugurated on May 10 as President of the Democratic Republic of South Africa under a Government of National Unity;

Whereas President Nelson Mandela led the transition from minority rule and apartheid to multicultural, multiracial democracy, and played a critical role in initiating South Africa's ongoing efforts to foster national reconciliation and end the diverse, deep-rooted, and enduring social, political, and economic inequalities created by apartheid;

Whereas President Nelson Mandela sought to promote equal opportunity for jobs and education, access to social services, and quality-of-life improvements for all South Africans;

Whereas, during the presidency of Nelson Mandela, South Africa established the Truth and Reconciliation Commission to investigate gross human rights violations committed under the apartheid regime;

Whereas Nelson Mandela's decision to step down after one term as South Africa's elected President serves as a commendable example of commitment to democratic principles for elected national leaders in new democracies around the globe;

Whereas Nelson Mandela continued his social justice and human rights work upon his retirement in 1999, primarily through the Nelson Mandela Foundation and its two sister organizations, the Nelson Mandela Children's Fund and the Mandela-Rhodes Foundation;

Whereas, on July 18, 2007, Nelson Mandela convened the Elders, a group of world leaders including Desmond Tutu, Graca Machel, and former United States President Jimmy Carter, to contribute their wisdom and insight towards addressing some of the world's toughest problems;

Whereas the 1993 Nobel Peace Prize was jointly awarded to Nelson Mandela and Frederik Willem de Klerk "for their work for the peaceful termination of the apartheid regime, and for laying the foundations for a new democratic South Africa";

Whereas Congress contributed to the attainment of the political ideals and goals for which Nelson Mandela struggled, by enacting the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-440) on October 2, 1986, and has honored Nelson Mandela by passing the Mandela Freedom Resolution in the House of Representatives on September 18, 1984 (H. Res. 430, 98th Congress), and in the Senate on October 10, 1984 (S. Res. 386, 98th Congress), by adopting the resolution concerning United States support for the new South Africa on October 5, 1994 (H. Res. 560, 103rd Congress), and by awarding Nelson Mandela the Congressional Gold Medal on July 29, 1998;

Whereas former United States President Bill Clinton honored Nelson Mandela with the Philadelphia Liberty Medal in 1993, and former United States President George W. Bush honored Nelson Mandela with the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 2002;

Whereas, on July 18 of each year, people around the world celebrate Nelson Mandela Day, in recognition of Nelson Mandela's birthday, by devoting their time to community service in honor of his legacy;

Whereas, in 1995, Nelson Mandela wrote: "I have walked that long road to freedom. I have tried not to falter; I have made missteps along the way. But I have discovered the secret that after climbing a great hill, one only finds that there are many more hills to climb. I have taken a moment here to rest, to steal a view of the glorious vista that surrounds me, to look back on the distance I have come. But I can only rest for a moment, for with freedom come responsibilities, and I dare not linger, for my long walk is not ended."; and

Whereas Nelson Mandela leaves a legacy that transcends his time and place in history, which will guide and inspire generations to come: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) honors the life, accomplishments, and legacy of former South African President Nelson Mandela;

(2) extends its heartfelt sympathies and condolences to the members of the family of the late President Nelson Mandela and his fellow citizens;

(3) requests the Secretary of State to communicate these expressions of honor and condolence to Nelson Mandela's family and to the Parliament of the Republic of South Africa; and

(4) requests the President to identify an appropriate and lasting program of the United States Government to honor Nelson Mandela's legacy.

HONORING THE LIFE AND LEGACY OF NELSON ROLIHLEHLA MANDELA

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to S. Res. 321.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 321) honoring the life, accomplishments, and legacy of Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela and expressing condolences on his passing.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, last week the world lost a true hero with the passing of Nelson Mandela. His determined and courageous advocacy helped end South Africa's disgraceful system of apartheid, while his enlightened leadership set an example for national reconciliation.

Apartheid was a policy of hate. It was a severe form of segregation that denied the non-White population their basic human rights. Millions of non-Whites lost their homes and were forced from their lands.

In order to travel or work in a restricted White area, special passes were necessary. Non-Whites could not participate in national government and were segregated in almost every way imaginable—from education to transportation to health care.

Nelson Mandela dedicated much of his life to ending this injustice. After years of protesting the harsh policies of the South African Government, he was imprisoned for 27 years—18 of which were spent at the infamous maximum security prison on Robben Island that was surrounded by shark-infested waters.

There he suffered in a cell that he described as "perpetually damp" and only measured 7 feet by 8 feet.

From prison, Nelson Mandela was an inspiration to those fighting apartheid both inside South Africa and throughout the world. And as pressure grew, the South African Government initiated secret talks with Mandela for the first time in 1986.

That same year, I was a Member of the House of Representatives when Congress voted to impose sanctions against the South Africa Government—overriding a Presidential veto to do so.

Two months before that historic and long overdue vote, the President gave a speech opposing comprehensive sanctions against South Africa. That same day, I went to the House floor to respond, asking:

How many children have to die? How many funeral mourners have to die? How much bloodshed will be spent before the President decides that words are no longer enough—that 'constructive engagement' has done nothing to prevent 2,000 deaths since late 1984?

In that same statement, I spoke about the "concerned citizens all over the country who have emphasized the need to do something specific to demonstrate our abhorrence of the policies of the South African government." Those concerned citizens included the Solano County board of supervisors, who sent me a resolution in 1985 that declared, "Acquiescence to South Africa's apartheid policy, whatever the rationalization would be a rejection of the ultimate sacrifices made by those who died to ensure justice for all human beings . . ."

It was the grassroots movement against apartheid in the 1980s that pushed Congress to enact sanctions, and this grassroots movement was inspired by the example of Nelson Mandela.

In 1990, Nelson Mandela was finally released from prison, and in 1994 he was elected as South Africa's first Black President.

Despite more than 40 years of suffering under the brutality of apartheid, Nelson Mandela chose reconciliation over resentment.

During his inauguration, he declared, "The time for the healing of the wounds has come . . . the moment to bridge the chasms that divide us has come. The time to build is upon us."

The legacy of Nelson Mandela lies not just in his courage to fight repression but in his courage to forgive his enemies.

In his words, "Courageous people do not fear forgiving for the sake of peace."

My deepest sympathies go out to Nelson Mandela's family, the nation of South Africa, and all those who are mourning the loss of this great man.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I further ask that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motions to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 321) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

(The resolution, with its preamble, is printed in today's RECORD under "Submitted Resolutions.")

MEASURE READ FOR THE FIRST TIME—S. 1824

Mr. REID. Madam President, I understand that there is a bill at the desk, and I ask for its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bill by title for the first time.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1824) to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act to exempt certain lead pipes, fittings, fixtures, solder, and flux that contain brass.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask for a second reading, and in order to place the bill on the calendar under rule XIV, I object to my own request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection having been heard, the bill will be read for the second time on the next legislative day.

Mr. REID. I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FALLEN FIREFIGHTERS ASSISTANCE TAX CLARIFICATION ACT OF 2013

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, having received from the House H.R. 3458, the bill is considered read three times and passed, and the motion to reconsider considered made and laid upon the table.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL SUNDAY, DECEMBER 15, 2013, AT 1 PM

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that it stand adjourned under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 2:11 p.m., adjourned until Sunday, December 15, 2013, at 1 p.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

IN RECOGNITION OF GINA PAPAN

HON. JACKIE SPEIER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. SPEIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Gina Papan for her eight years of service on the Millbrae City Council, two of them as mayor, one as vice mayor.

In her role as mayor this past year and throughout her tenure on the council, Gina has focused on sustainable finances and revenue enhancement in Millbrae. She has played an instrumental role in the adoption of the Economic Development Plan and the ongoing negotiations for a fire department merger with Central County Fire and San Bruno Fire. She is an avid advocate for public-private partnerships that benefit the local community.

Gina serves on the City and County Association of Governments Board of Directors and Legislative Committee, the Congestion Management Program and Environmental Quality Committee, the High Speed Rail Policymakers Working Group, the San Mateo County Council of Cities, the Mayor's Civic Coordination Council, the Budget/Finance Subcommittee, the Field Agreement Subcommittee, the Fire Shared Services Subcommittee and the Commission/Committee Subcommittee.

In the past, she represented Millbrae on the San Mateo County Housing Endowment and Regional Trust, the Grand Boulevard Task Force, the Peninsula Traffic Congestion Relief Alliance, the San Mateo County Emergency Services Council and the Airport Land Use Committee.

Gina continues a family tradition of public service and philanthropy following in the footsteps of her late father, Lou Papan, known as the "Dean of the Assembly" for his 20 years of service in the California State Assembly and her late mother Irene Papan, a dedicated community leader and tireless supporter of her husband.

Gina began her professional career as a corporate attorney, but quickly moved to the public sector and served as Deputy Attorney General for the state for 19 years. She litigated to protect civil rights and prevent fraudulent use of taxpayer money. She was appointed deputy director of Governor Gray Davis' Office of Criminal Justice Planning. In that capacity, she served on the School Violence Prevention and Response Task Force, the Child Abduction Task Force and as a legislative advisor to the High Technology Crime Advisory Committee. School safety became an immediate focus on her second day on the job when the nation was shocked by the school shooting in Columbine.

Gina grew up in Millbrae and graduated from Capuchino High School. She received her Bachelor's degree in Finance and Economics from UC Santa Barbara and her law degree from the University of the Pacific's McGeorge School of Law. She completed the Senior Executives in State and Local Government program at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

Her commitment and dedication to others is unwavering. She and her sister Diane run John's Closet which provides free new clothing to underserved children and offers them confidence to achieve. John Papan was Gina's brother who suffered from a congenital condition that tragically and prematurely ended his life at age 21. In response and to continue its advocacy for disabled children, the Papan family set up John's Closet. Gina also is the co-director of the John Papan Memorial Scholarship Fund which was founded by the family to help special education students and late bloomers, kids who overcome early learning difficulties in high school.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to join me in honoring Gina Papan who is retiring today as mayor of Millbrae and who has committed her life and career to serving her community and fighting for justice.

COMMEMORATING THE LIFE OF FLORA DAY KING

HON. JACK KINGSTON

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the life of Mrs. Flora Day King. Mrs. King passed away on November 29, 2013 in Seneca, South Carolina at the age of 97.

Flora Prussia Day was born on December 27, 1915 in Lexington, Virginia, the daughter of the late Philip Baldwin Day and Ernestine Albery Day. After graduating as valedictorian of the one-room schoolhouse in Lexington, she earned her Bachelor's degree from William and Mary College and her Master's degree in chemistry from Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Following in the footsteps of her grandfather, Admiral Benjamin Franklin Day of the United States Navy, Flora enlisted in the Navy in 1941. She served as a Lieutenant in the Navy developing and testing jet propellant for rockets at Indian Head Naval Surface Warfare Center in Maryland for the duration of the Second World War.

Flora married Dr. Edwin Wallace King in 1950 and moved to Clemson, South Carolina in 1956, where she worked as a chemist for the United States Department of Agriculture at Clemson University. She was active in community service organizations and her local Episcopal church.

She is survived by her sister, Jane Day Casati, her sister-in-law, Jeanne Poe Day, her son Edwin Wallace King Jr., his wife Edythe and their two daughters, Edythe Day King and Elizabeth Monroe King, and her son Philip Day King, his wife Lori, and their son Philip Robert King.

Today we honor her service to our country and her commitment to her family. She was a kind and loving woman who inspired those around her, and she will be truly missed.

HONORING SCOTT KARCZEWSKI

HON. MICHAEL H. MICHAUD

OF MAINE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Scott Karczewski on the occasion of his retirement from the Department of Veterans' Affairs after 36 years of dedicated service.

Scott's service to our country began in 1971, when he joined the U.S. Navy, serving on board the USS John F. Kennedy for more than three years. He began his VA career in 1977 at the Togus VA Hospital as a temporary warehouse worker. He was quickly promoted to a full time file clerk position in the Regional Office, while still attending college at the University of Maine. Scott has held several positions at the Togus Regional Office including Claims Examiner, Senior Claims Examiner, Rating Specialist, Assistant Veterans Service Center Manager, Veterans Service Center Manager, and most recently as Director of the Regional Office.

Under his leadership, the Togus Regional Office has continued its exceptional performance as one of the top regional offices in the Nation, efficiently and accurately processing claims for Maine's veterans. The performance of the Togus Regional Office has been recognized with the establishment of two special missions, a rating resource center and a development resource center. These missions assist other regional offices with their backlogged claims and have contributed greatly towards the reduction in the claims backlog nationally.

Through his dedication and valued work, Scott has earned well-deserved appreciation and accolades including a Commendation Award in 1986 from the Chief Benefits Administrator, and the Eastern Area Leadership Award in 2007.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating Scott Karczewski on his many years of outstanding service to our veterans and wishing him a rewarding and enjoyable retirement.

HONORING THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS AND CELEBRATING THE CAREER OF LARRY HORTON OF STANFORD UNIVERSITY

HON. ZOE LOFGREN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to note the remarkable career of Larry Horton who will retire from his post as Senior Associate Vice President and Director of Government and Community Relations at Stanford University at the end of 2013. His academic and professional tenure at Stanford spans a combined 52 years.

Born in Louisiana to a railroad switch operator and a homemaker, Larry came to Stanford in 1958 by way of Arkansas and Southern California. After earning his undergraduate degree in political science, he was drafted to serve in the U.S. Army in Europe for two years. He returned to Stanford to complete a master's degree in history. By 1970, the year of my own graduation from the university, he had been appointed an associate dean of student affairs. In this capacity he oversaw the integration of the sexes in coed university housing. During this period he helped ensure that egalitarian American principles and the recognition of the value of diversity that blossomed in the 1960s and '70s was reflected in University policies. Next he served as a special assistant to the secretary of Health and Human Services in both the Ford and Carter administrations.

Returning to Stanford again in 1977 with new experiences in dealing with Washington, he was appointed Associate Director of Government Affairs. From this post he helped Congress to shape the landmark 1980 Bayh-Dole Act. These efforts fostered free-market innovation by encouraging inventors and institutions to pursue ownership of patents for products created with the aid of Federal Government resources.

For all his accomplishments at the Federal level, some of Larry's most challenging and rewarding projects have involved local government. The cities of Palo Alto and Menlo Park and the Counties of Santa Clara and San Mateo as well as various state and local land and water authorities, have required skillful attention. He negotiated many cooperative land-use initiatives, sometimes in the face of disagreement from some of Stanford's neighbors. He made sure there was careful sensitivity to threatened wildlife like the California tiger salamander, for which the University built a tunnel under Junipero Serra Boulevard to encourage migration from Lake Lagunita to a new, more secure habitat in Stanford's foothills.

Beyond his admirable professional achievements, Larry is a thoughtful intellectual, host to authors debuting their books and is a friend and supporter for those who are writers, artists and, most particularly, friends of Stanford. This year, for his dedication to Stanford he was awarded the Cuthbertson Award during Stanford's graduation ceremony. Today I praise my good friend Larry Horton, whose intellect, humility, talent, tenacity, empathy, and dedication to our alma mater are unparalleled. Although his retirement will provide him with more time to spend on his personal loves—history, opera, Stanford Athletics, literature, theater, and his partner of 35 years, George Wilson—he will be deeply missed not only by his Stanford colleagues, but by those of us in Washington, Sacramento, and the Bay Area who have shared in the privilege of knowing him. He leaves a formidable legacy.

HONORING U.S. MARINE CORPS GENERAL RAYMOND GILBERT "RAY" DAVIS, SERGEANT RODNEY MAXWELL DAVIS, MAJOR HENRY TALMAGE ELROD, AND U.S. NAVY SEAMAN FIRST CLASS WENDALL LEON JONES

HON. AUSTIN SCOTT

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. AUSTIN SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the careers of several individuals from Georgia's Eighth Congressional District who gave their all for our country and for our freedoms. They have been posthumously inducted into Georgia's first-ever Military Veterans Hall of Fame, and I would like to recognize them today.

United States Marine Corps General Raymond Gilbert "Ray" Davis hails from Fitzgerald, GA. In Korea in December 1950, then Lieutenant Colonel Davis personally led his battalion to victory in hand to hand combat against a strongly entrenched and numerically superior hostile force. For his valorous actions he was awarded the Medal of Honor.

United States Marine Corps Sergeant Rodney Maxwell Davis hails from Macon, GA. In Vietnam in September 1967 while his platoon was pinned down by a numerically superior force, he personally led his men in repulsing an onrushing enemy. With disregard for his own life, he saved many of his men by throwing himself on an exploding enemy grenade. He gallantly gave his life for his country and was awarded the Medal of Honor.

United States Marine Corps Major Henry Talmage Elrod hails from Ashburn, GA. On Wake Island in December 1941, as a fighter pilot, he personally destroyed an enemy warship and shot down two enemy airplanes before assuming command of a ground unit and inspirationally led his men against an attacking superior enemy force until he was killed in action. He gallantly gave his life for his country and was awarded the Medal of Honor.

United States Navy Seaman First Class Wendall Leon Jones hails from Tifton, GA. At the age of 16, he enlisted in the Navy. At age 17 the landing craft that he was aboard was sunk by a German U-Boat, killing all but 89 of the 641 aboard. He was severely burned on the face and hands while rescuing Sailors and Soldiers. During the D-Day Landing, he was among the 51 survivors of a 600 man demolition unit, once again sustaining injuries to his hands during small arms fire fights. One month later at age 18, he was wounded again by shell fragments in the right ear, right ankle, and face during a demolition mission behind enemy lines. After recovering, he was headed to Japan when the war ended and he was soon discharged having just reached the age of 19. He was awarded the Navy Commendation Medal for Valor and 3 Purple Hearts. He died at age 36 from injuries to his brain caused by wounds.

RECOGNIZING IVY TECH COMMUNITY COLLEGE SOUTHEAST

HON. LUKE MESSER

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. MESSER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the contributions of Ivy Tech Community College Southeast to the success of the 6th District Job Fair.

On October 21, 2013, over 150 job seekers from across the district met with 36 businesses looking to hire new employees. In a time when jobs are still hard to come by, these job fairs are an important tool in linking job seekers with prospective employers. I am proud we were able to bring community leaders together and provide this service to the people of the 6th District.

The job fair would not have been the success it was without the help of Ivy Tech Community College Southeast. I want to recognize the work of Shakira Grubbs, Tim Buehler, Daniel Smith, and Chancellor Jim Helms. Their efforts in hosting the job fair show a deep commitment to their community and the economic health of Southeastern Indiana.

I ask the entire 6th Congressional District to join me in recognizing Ivy Tech Community College Southeast. I look forward to working with them in the future as we strive to serve the people of Southeastern Indiana.

CELEBRATING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF SAM AND DOROTHY YOUNG

HON. RALPH M. HALL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. HALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Sam and Dorothy Young who just celebrated their 50th Anniversary. Their commitment to each other and their family is an inspiration and a wonderful reminder of the importance of family, particularly during the holiday season.

Sam and Dorothy, high school sweethearts at Lockett High School, were wed on August 4, 1963 at Lockett Baptist Church shortly after Sam joined the Navy. Over the past five decades, Mr. and Mrs. Young have been blessed with three children—Trent, Christi, and Todd—and seven grandchildren—Dane, Zachary, Teressa, Sammi, Jacque, Gracie, and Aubrey.

The Youngs moved to Mount Vernon, Texas in the early 1980's when Sam was transferred with AO Smith Harvestore Silos. The family later owned and operated Donuts Etc. in Mount Pleasant, Mount Vernon, Pittsburg, and Winnsboro. Sam and Dorothy continue to actively participate in the community, and since 2002, Sam has served Franklin County as Commissioner for Precinct 4.

Sam and Dorothy Young are blessed to have had so many happy years together, and I wish them many more happy years in the future. Mister Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in celebration of the Young's 50th Wedding Anniversary.

IN RECOGNITION OF KAREN
CLAPPER

HON. JACKIE SPEIER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. SPEIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Karen Clapper for her service on the San Carlos City Council since June 2012. She has applied decades of experience with private and public organizations to keep San Carlos the "City of Good Living" for all residents.

When a seat on the council became vacant, the four remaining council members unanimously selected Karen to fill the remaining term. She has been a passionate advocate for our neighborhoods, schools, parks and public safety. During her time on the City Council, Karen Clapper has worked collaboratively with her colleagues and sought to create a community marked by fiscal prudence and regional relevance. She was always well prepared at council meetings and asked many important questions during budget and policy sessions. Karen has been a team player who worked hard to ensure that San Carlos had the finest fire, police, and parks services possible. She frequently attended public events, wanting to be accessible to residents.

During her time in public service, Karen served on the boards of the Peninsula Congestion Relief Alliance and the Library Governing Board WA. She also served on ad hoc committees dealing with school property, the San Carlos Transit Village, and Wheeler Plaza. She was the liaison to San Carlos Green, a citizens group advocating for environmentally sensitive projects and policies, and the Planning Commission. In fact, Karen's longest service to the city was during her time on the commission where she served from 2009–20012. During this formative time in the city's history, she helped to maintain the city's small town character while recognizing that its planning decisions had to fit into the regional need for housing and other changes.

Karen earned her BA in Environmental Design from San Diego State University and her MBA in Finance and Accounting from the Anderson School of Management at UCLA. She has been a consultant, coach and board member for a long list of companies and non-profit organizations, including Great American Bank FSB, Accenture, Friends of San Carlos Library, the Service League of San Mateo County, and Elizabeth F. Gamble Garden.

Karen will continue her work as an independent productivity and leadership coach and be guided by one of her favorite quotes by Albert Einstein: "Out of clutter find simplicity; from discord find harmony; in the middle of difficulty lies opportunity." Her eternal optimism will no doubt direct her to continue to contribute to the community. In her spare time she enjoys reading, quilting and doing crossword puzzles.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to rise with me to honor Karen Clapper for her outstanding leadership during her tenure on the city council and for her service to the residents of San Carlos at many meetings and forums in the past. She will be missed on the council but certainly seen and heard throughout the community for many years to come.

RECOGNIZING MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and congratulate Mt. Olive Baptist Church of Buffalo, New York on celebrating the 90th anniversary of its devout faithfulness and dedication to the surrounding community. To commemorate this milestone, Mt. Olive will be hosting a celebration on December 8, 2013 in Buffalo's historic Lafayette Hotel.

Under the visionary leadership of Pastor William Gillison, Mt. Olive Baptist Church has become a central pillar of Buffalo's African-American community through its good and tireless community works and initiatives to nurture educate and support generations of families. Known as one of the most active and ambitious churches in the region, Mt. Olive continues to build on its extensive and rich history. Its outstanding reputation is a testament to the inspiration of its leaders and parishioners.

Mt. Olive Baptist Church was organized in 1923 under the leadership of the late Pastor James Hamilton, inside the gates of Semet Solvay Company Plant in Tonawanda, New York. In 1924, under the leadership of Pastor Clinton N. Polite, the Church moved outside the company gates. When Semet Solvay closed in 1941, Mt. Olive relocated Clinton Street in Buffalo where the first service was held on the first Sunday in May with five families.

Reverend William Gillison was called to pastor Mt. Olive in June 1981, which marked the beginning of an unprecedented era of growth and community engagement projects within the Church. In February 1988, Mt. Olive purchased three and a half acres of land at 701 East Delavan Avenue and in 1992, additional acreage was added giving the church five acres for its new three million dollar home. Construction began in 1994 and upon completion, the new home of Mt. Olive Baptist Church included an impressive complex which seats 1200, 16 classrooms and an all-purpose hall for recreation and social occasions. It is of special note that this Church's decades long mortgage was paid in full in only six years.

Under this extraordinary pastoral leader and faithful following, Mt. Olive continues to experience extensive growth spiritually, financially and munerically. Multiple ministries and a separate faith-based organization, the Mt. Olive Development Corporation, have been formed since 1991. Mt. Olive's First Leadership School, which is recognized by the National Baptist Congress of Christian Education, was held in October 2007. In recent years a Health Ministry was instituted as was a Media Ministry with the addition of a TV studio. This year has also seen the construction of the William Gillison Fellowship Hall and the dedication of the YOMO (Youth of Mt. Olive) Athletic Field.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to honor, acknowledge and add my deepest appreciation to Pastor Gillison and the family and friends of Mt. Olive Baptist Church for 90 years of faith-filled service to its congregation, community, city and country. Its outreach to the least the lost among us provides us with a powerful example of faith and love that will only intensify to help our children be better prepared and be able to enjoy and embrace an enhanced quality of life.

CELEBRATING THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY FOR THE ABILITYONE PROGRAM AND THE NATIONAL INDUSTRIES FOR THE BLIND

HON. DINA TITUS

OF NEVADA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. TITUS. Mr. Speaker, this year marks the 75th anniversary for the AbilityOne Program and the National Industries for the Blind. Since their inception, the AbilityOne Program and NIB have changed the lives of millions of people who are blind or have other significant disabilities by providing increased independence through job skills training and employment opportunities. They are our nation's largest source of employment for blind and disabled individuals and manufacture over 3,000 quality products, ranging from diesel engine glow plugs to printer toner.

In Las Vegas, the Blind Center of Nevada has helped blind and visually impaired Nevadans reach their highest potential. In addition to offering employment opportunities, computer training, braille classes, and other supportive services, the Blind Center of Nevada has built a community full of music and friendship.

I want to congratulate the AbilityOne Program and NIB on this momentous occasion and thank them for 75 years of service.

THANKING BERN BEIDEL FOR HIS SERVICE TO THE HOUSE

HON. CANDICE S. MILLER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate and recognize Bernard E. Beidel, an employee of the Chief Administrative Officer of the U.S. House of Representatives. Mr. Beidel was honored with the 2013 Lifetime Achievement Award from the Employee Assistance Professionals Association (EAPA). The Lifetime Achievement Award honors an EAPA member who has made a significant contribution to Employee Assistance Programs (EAP), the EA profession, and to individuals over an extended period of time.

Mr. Beidel has been a leader in providing EAP services to organizations and currently serves as Director of the Office of Employee Assistance. He has held this role for over 20 years providing direct EAP services to members and staff of the U.S. House of Representatives since its inception in 1991.

I am proud to stand before you and the Nation on Mr. Beidel's behalf to recognize the importance of his public service, and honor his award for lifetime achievement and his contributions to the House community.

We wish Bern much happiness in fulfilling his retirement dreams.

RECOGNIZING CURTIS MARTIN

HON. GREG WALDEN

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. WALDEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize my good friend Curtis Martin for his life-long efforts to support agriculture and ranching, which are so important to jobs and the economy in rural Oregon. Over the past two years, Curtis has done a tremendous job serving as the president of the Oregon Cattlemen's Association. As his term as president comes to an end, I'd like to take a moment to pay tribute to his leadership.

Before and during his service as president of the Oregon Cattlemen's Association, Curtis served in several capacities locally to the benefit of farmers and ranchers. He has been a member of the Powder Basin Watershed Committee, a Director on the Union Soil and Water Conservation District and President of the Powder Valley Water Control District.

During his tenure as Oregon Cattlemen's Association President, Curtis has worked tirelessly to represent Oregon's livestock industry across the state. During the summer of 2012, wildfires devastated over one million acres of rangeland and forest across Oregon, affecting many ranchers' livelihoods along the way. Curtis took the lead in coordinating a relief effort, helping raise over $200,000 in donations for ranchers who had lost cattle and pasture due to the fires. In a further response to the fires, Curtis established the Restore Everything Strategically Through Organized Response (RESTOR) Task Force, bringing together federal agencies, the State of Oregon, local governments and the Oregon congressional delegation to channel resources and assistance to affected livestock communities. RESTOR also put forth proactive solutions to reduce the frequency and intensity of wildfires, and improve government and community responses when fires occur. Federal agencies continue to work towards implementing several of the task force's recommendations.

Curtis also led the Oregon Cattlemen's Association Oregon Habitat Monitoring Initiative, pulling together a diverse group of stakeholders from federal and state agencies, Oregon State University, private consultants and other industry groups to develop a cooperative monitoring standard for producers on the ground. This effort resulted in the current development of the Oregon Rangeland Monitoring Guide, so that livestock producers can easily monitor their pastures and supplement federal agency data supporting public land grazing allotments.

Curtis was raised on a ranch in Vale, Oregon, on the far eastern edge of the state. After high school, he moved full time into the family's ranch operation, building fence, piping water and moving cattle on horseback. By 1978, Curtis had married his wife Cheryl and moved to North Powder, where Cheryl's family has roots back to the Oregon Trail pioneers who first settled the Baker Valley in the 1860s.

In 1983, Curtis and Cheryl bought a ranch in North Powder, where they now center their ranching operation. Curtis has said that upon buying the property, it was so run down it was only suitable for producing "weeds and ground squirrels." Together, they turned their efforts to rehabilitating the property to a state fit for raising cattle and have been successful in their efforts. Curtis and Cheryl treasure their four sons and six grandchildren. They take great pride in their family ranch operation and in seeing yet another generation involved in the ranch and learning the lifestyle that means so much to them.

I'd like to offer a special thank you to Curtis and Cheryl for their friendship and guidance over the years.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing Curtis Martin for his tireless dedication to agriculture and ranching in Oregon as president of the Oregon Cattlemen's Association.

HONORING SGT KYLE CLIFTON ON EARNING THE U.S. ARMY ENGINEER ASSOCIATION'S DE FLEURY MEDAL

HON. RICHARD L. HANNA

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. HANNA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate SGT Kyle Clifton on being presented with the U.S. Army Engineer Association's prestigious de Fleury Medal. The de Fleury Medal is awarded by the Army Corps of Engineers to honor those individuals who have provided significant contributions to Army Engineering. Since 1779, the de Fleury Medal has held a special place in the ranks of our service engineers for the values that one must demonstrate in order to be deemed worthy of its receipt.

While this medal is certainly a testament to the valor and professionalism possessed and exhibited by SGT Clifton, it is also a natural tribute to SGT Clifton's distinguished service career with the Army Reserve. As the medal itself is inscribed, this is "a memorial and reward for courage and boldness," and perhaps more than that it is a physical accolade of the thanks that his community, his fellow Reservists, and his nation have for the service and sacrifices he has devoted to the defense of the United States of America. In addition to the de Fleury Medal, SGT Clifton's long list of awards also includes the Bronze Star with Valor, the Purple Heart, the Army Commendation Medal, and the Combat Action Badge. These honors have been bestowed upon SGT

Clifton for his proven expertise in service efforts including ground clearance missions and professionalism while serving on the front line of duty. Throughout his tours in Iraq and Afghanistan, SGT Clifton proved to be an asset for our Army in holding positions, exhibiting versatility within his vehicle command, clearing improvised explosive devices (IEDs), and demonstrating exceptional instincts and tactics in the midst of contact fire.

Last year, SGT Clifton's truck was struck by an IED while involved in a supply route clearing mission in support of Operation Enduring Freedom. This cruel attack seriously injured SGT Clifton and claimed the lives of his three brothers in arms who were in the truck with him: SSG Dain Venne; SGT Brett Gorniewicz; and SPC Ryan Jayne. Upon his arrival at the Walter Reed National Military Medical Center, I had the opportunity to personally visit with SGT Clifton and his wife. On that day and in the days since then, I have been continuously impressed by the progress that SGT Clifton has made in his physical recovery and the modesty that he has shown. SGT Clifton exhibits daily the traits of bravery, resolve, and a genuine desire to selflessly serve our nation that exemplify the very best of our troops.

While every soldier's experiences are unique, the story of SGT Clifton, SSG Venne, SGT Gorniewicz, and SPC Jayne shares aspects with far too many others that have paid a personal price in their efforts to counter the challenges of the modern battlefield. IEDs are the leading cause of casualties for American servicemembers and the leading cause of injuries afflicting our veterans. In 2012 alone, 104 American troops were killed and 1,744 were wounded by these indiscriminate weapons. SGT Clifton is just one of the more than 51,000 service members who have been wounded in action in our engagements since the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. With these figures in mind, Mr. Speaker, I ask that this body join me in continuing to explore and support ways to reduce the prevalence of these incidents.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleges to join me in congratulating SGT Clifton on being awarded the Steel de Fleury Medal. I express my utmost gratitude to him and all of our servicemembers and veterans for their valiant service and sacrifices, as well as to all of the families and communities who make up the invaluable foundation of support for these men and women.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. SHEILA JACKSON LEE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Speaker, on December 9, 2013, I travelled to Johannesburg, South Africa, as part of the Congressional Delegation appointed to attend the memorial service for Nelson Mandela, the first president of the new Republic of South Africa and one of the greatest leaders of the 20th century. Because of my participation in this important event I was unable to return in time for Roll Call Votes 630 and 631.

Had I been present I would have voted as follows:

1. On rollcall No. 630 I would have voted "aye" (December 10) (H.R. 3521, The Department of Veterans Affairs Major Medical Facility Lease Authorization Act of 2013, as amended (Rep. MILLER (FL)—Veterans' Affairs)

2. On rollcall No. 631, I would have voted "aye" (December 10) (H.R. 1402, VA Expiring Authorities Extension Act of 2013, as amended (Rep. COFFMAN—Veterans' Affairs)

IN RECOGNITION OF DAVE WARDEN

HON. JACKIE SPEIER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. SPEIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Dave Warden for his twelve years of service on the Belmont City Council, including three years as mayor in 2002, 2005 and 2012. Dave was first elected in 1999 and served two terms until 2007. He returned in 2009 for his current term.

Dave has been a tireless advocate for open space and was a driving force behind voter-approved Measure F, the Hillside Preservation Ordinance, and the Slope Density Ordinance. He worked hard on the acquisition of 35 acres in the San Juan Canyon which are now permanent open space. He was also instrumental in getting the new library built and was the council's representative to the library JPA. He also made the seismic upgrade of city hall a reality. He supported the smoking ordinance and the creation of Semeria Park.

Dave's top priority has always been to spend Belmont taxpayers' money wisely. He was critical in negotiating with the city's bargaining units to rein in escalating pension costs. He is well-known for his bargaining skills and has helped keep Belmont's budget balanced with a minimal use of reserves even in a down economy.

Before joining the council, he served as the Planning Commissioner and Parks and Recreation Commissioner. He is also a former president of his neighborhood association and former member of the Belmont Chamber of Commerce.

Dave was born and raised in Belmont and graduated from Carlmont High School in 1979. He earned a Bachelor's Degree in Computer Science from UC Berkeley and is a medical software engineer. He worked for several Silicon Valley start-up firms and developed successful products for Sony, Zenith, Samsung, RCA, Casio, Panasonic and the U.S. Navy. He is also a former school teacher at Ralston Middle School where he was named the PTA Teacher of the Year in 2002.

He and his wife of 17 years, Lisa, have always had an eye out for preserving Belmont's village-like charm and character.

As you can see from this long list of accomplishments, Dave has a love of Belmont that has been demonstrated over many years and in many forms. Working in local government is not always the easiest task. You often face your neighbors and friends whose expectations are sometimes difficult to meet. However, through his tireless efforts, Dave Warden has demonstrated that he truly wanted to meet the needs of residents as much as was possible given fiscal and other constraints.

Mr. Speaker, this dedication over time is rare, but his length of service and focus on the quality of life in Belmont is why Dave Warden's tenure on the council and in so many other capacities will be remembered. He will be missed on the council but his legacy will live on for many, many years.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO MAJOR CONRAD J. JAKUBOW'S DEDICATED SERVICE TO OUR NATION

HON. JACK KINGSTON

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Major Conrad J. Jakubow, United States Army for his extraordinary dedication to duty and selfless service to the United States of America. Conrad has served for the last three years as a Congressional Budget Liaison for the Secretary of the Army and will soon depart for his next duty assignment.

A native of Chicago, Illinois, Conrad earned his commission as an Officer in the United States Army at the United States Military Academy at West Point, New York in calendar year 2000. Major Jakubow's assignments have been diverse and include over twenty-eight months of combat experience. While assigned as a Lieutenant to the 1st Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, 1st Armored Division, at Armstrong Barracks in Budeingen, Germany, Conrad served with Charlie Troop, Alpha Troop, and Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, as a tank and scout platoon leader, executive officer, and squadron motor officer and deployed his units twice to combat in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. As a Captain, Conrad attended the Civil Affairs Qualification Course and became a civil affairs officer serving in both the 96th Civil Affairs Battalion and the 95th Civil Affairs Brigade deploying again in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

After returning from his third combat deployment, Major Jakubow began his professional studies as a United States Army Congressional Fellow, earning a Master's of Professional Studies in Legislative Affairs from The George Washington University. Conrad was then nominated and assigned as an Office of the Secretary of Defense Congressional Fellow in the office of the late Congressman C.W. Bill Young and served as his military advisor on defense and veteran matters, providing critical analysis and insight on defense appropriation matters and pending legislation. Major Jakubow served one year in the Congressional Office and thereafter was subsequently assigned as a Congressional Budget Liaison Officer in the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Financial Management and Comptroller in the Pentagon with responsibility for managing the Army's tactical wheeled vehicle program, military construction accounts, installations, energy, and special access program portfolios. Conrad has skillfully advised the Army's senior leaders, fostering and strengthening the relationship between the Congress and the United States Army. Major Jakubow's leadership as both a Company Grade and Field Grade Officer throughout his career has positively impacted his peers and superiors, Soldiers and civilians alike. As a Congressional Budget Liaison Officer he worked directly with the House and Senate Appropriations Committees to educate and inform Representatives, Senators, and staff about the diverse and important tactical procurement initiatives of the U.S. Army.

Mr. Speaker, it has been my esteemed pleasure to work with Major Conrad Jakubow during his time as a fellow and legislative liaison. On behalf of a grateful nation, I join my colleagues today in recognizing and commending Major Conrad J. Jakubow for over a decade of active service to his country in the United States Army. We wish Conrad, his daughter Mara, all the best as they continue their journey of service to our great Nation.

HONORING ARMY CHAPLAIN
COLONEL ERIC OLSEN

HON. CHRISTOPHER P. GIBSON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the honorable and distinguished career of Army Chaplain Colonel Eric Olsen. I have had the distinct privilege of knowing Colonel Olsen since serving in the United States Army.

Born in Staten Island, Chaplain Olsen entered the United States Army in December 1983 through the Pennsylvania National Guard. He completed the Chaplain Candidate Course in 1985 and was subsequently ordained by the Evangelical Lutheran Church in 1988. From 1988 until 1992, he led the parish at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church in Saranac Lake before going on Active Duty and serving tours of duty in South Carolina, Germany, Egypt and Fort Drum. Finally, he transitioned to the New York National Guard in 1999 where he remained throughout his career.

Chaplain Olsen's long career has included assignments as Assistant Chaplain HHC 27th Infantry Brigade Combat Team, Chaplain HHS 1-156 Field Artillery, Chaplain HHC 27th UEX, and the State Chaplain of the New York National Guard.

A veteran of Operation Iraqi Freedom, Chaplain Olsen deployed to Iraq, operating in the dangerous Sunni Triangle region. Serving as the Battalion Chaplain, his unit conducted combat and stability operations as a part of Task Force Hunter.

During his notable career, Chaplain Olsen earned various awards and decorations including the Bronze Star Medal, Meritorious Service Medal (with bronze oak leaf cluster), Army Commendation Medal (with 3 bronze oak leaf clusters), Army Achievement Medal (with 1 silver oak leaf clusters and 1 bronze oak leaf cluster), Army Reserve Components Achievement Medal (with 3 bronze oak leaf clusters), National Defense Service Medal (with 2 bronze oak leaf clusters), Multinational Force and Observers Medal, Meritorious Unit Citation Ribbon, Army Service Ribbon, Overseas Service Ribbon, Army Reserve Components Overseas Training Ribbon, Global War on Terrorism Expeditionary Medal, Global War on Terrorism Service Medal, and Combat Action Badge.

Eric had a truly commendable career, of which he, his wife Susan Marie, and his two sons Garth and Evan should all be very proud. Notably, he made the difficult sacrifice of serving both the United States as well as the higher power of God. I would like to wish him and his family all of the best in his future service and retirement from the United States Army and New York National Guard.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER 2013 VSIP RETIREES ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

HON. CANDICE S. MILLER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate and recognize the staff that retired through the Office of the Chief Administrative Officer 2013 voluntary separation incentive payment program, for their collective years of distinguished service to the U.S. House of Representatives: Sharyn Alexander; Kenton Armas; Timothy Babcock; Gerald Bennett; Frederick Bowles, Jr.; Lorenzo Braye; Elery Caskey, Jr.; Tredway Childress; Alessandro Cusati; Mark Dalton; Thomas D'Amico; Sandra Durham; Estanislao Field; Jerry Gallegos; Terry Hancock; Monroe Holliway; Barbara Holmberg; Alfredda Horton; Richard Hughes; Trevera Jackson; Christine Jensen; Stephen Johnson; Eric King; Thomas Mako; Russell Malone; Roy McLeod; Gwendolyn Melvin; George Moore; Ronald Mullvain; Thoa Nguyen; David Peebler; Robert Ransom II; Alan Richardson; Willie Roane; Delma Rutkowski; Joe Taylor; Alvin Thompson; Ben Vann; Robert Watson.

These individuals are acknowledged and commended for the hard work, dedication, professionalism, and spirit of public service that each contributed to the operation of the House. On behalf of the Office of the CAO and the entire House community, I am proud to stand before you in recognition of their outstanding contributions to the House of Representatives.

IN RECOGNITION OF CORALIN FEIERBACH

HON. JACKIE SPEIER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. SPEIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Coralin Feierbach for 14 years of outstanding service on the Belmont City Council, serving as mayor in 1999, 2007 and 2011. Coralin was first elected in 1995 for one term. She joined the council again in 2003 and has served continuously since that date.

Coralin's hands-on and passionate style make her one of the most memorable leaders in Belmont. She always strives to see the side of residents, and works hard to ensure that their interests rather than the interests of others are the central focus of the council's deliberations. She will listen to Belmont residents on any topic, at any time of the day or night.

Coralin has been a longtime advocate of open space. She first made a name for herself in the community in the mid-1970s when a plan to build housing on Sugarloaf Mountain in San Mateo on the border with Belmont was proposed. She and others won the fight to protect open space and Coralin has spent much of her life since protecting the Belmont hills from development.

During her tenure on the council, she was instrumental in getting both Measure F, the Hillside Preservation Ordinance, and the Slope Density Ordinance, passed. She assisted in the acquisition of 35 acres in San Juan Canyon which are now permanent open space. The canyon was slated to have 1,000 homes built and Coralin helped reduce the number of lots for homes down to about 60. She succeeded in preserving the land for its beauty and recreational purposes, making it a sanctuary for the area's wildlife and residents.

She also worked on a revision of the city's tree ordinance, the smoking ordinance, design review, code enforcement, the noise ordinance, construction time limits and green initiatives. Literally, if you look at the lush trees and canyons that distinguish Belmont, you see Coralin's clarity of purpose throughout the community.

Coralin served during some of the most difficult economic times for Belmont. She always wanted a balanced and fair budget. She worked hard to prevent Caltrain's evolution from changing the character of the community, and her service did not begin with the council. Coralin served on the Planning Commission from 1986–1987 and 2001–2003.

Coralin has a Bachelor's in Mathematics from San Francisco State University and did two years in the graduate program in mathematics at San Francisco State. She was a software developer and part owner of a software development firm.

In her well-deserved retirement, Coralin is looking forward to spending more time with her husband Gary, their daughter and grandchildren. And she plans to take music classes at Notre Dame de Namur University in Belmont and to start a quartet as she plays classical piano.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to rise with me to honor Coralin Feierbach for her outstanding public service to the residents of Belmont. She has preserved and nurtured the city's spirit in order to produce tranquility amidst the urban din, and a small town appeal that makes Belmont a gem on the San Francisco Peninsula.

HON. K. MICHAEL CONAWAY

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. CONAWAY. Mr. Speaker, on December 9, the weather delayed my arrival to Washington, DC for the afternoon votes, and I missed rollcall No. 630, or H.R. 3521. Had I been present I would have voted "aye" on H.R. 3521.

THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH (NIH) FUNDING AND THE IMPACT OF SEQUESTRATION

HON. JOYCE BEATTY

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mrs. BEATTY. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, Congresswoman JACKIE SPEIER, for leading this important bi-partisan discussion on the benefits of the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the dire impact that sequestration is having on NIH, its grantees, and our nation.

NIH makes important discoveries that improve health and save lives.

Thanks in large part to NIH-funded medical research, Americans today are living longer and healthier lives.

Life expectancy in the United States has increased and disability in people over age 65 has dramatically decreased in the past 3 decades because of the important research taking place at NIH.

NIH is also a job creator—it has created hundreds of thousands of high-quality jobs by funding scientists at universities and research institutions in every state across America and in countries around the globe.

These investments have led directly to better outcomes for cancer patients and increased the effectiveness of the treatments we have for HIV, influenza, diabetes, obesity, Alzheimer's, and hundreds of other diseases and disorders that affect millions of Americans.

More than 80% of NIH's budget goes to more than 300,000 research personnel at over 2,500 universities and research institutions.

In fiscal year 2013, Ohio received $777 million in NIH funding.

And my district, the third congressional district of Ohio, received 581 NIH grants, worth over $248 million.

NIH has historically funded the largest amount of federally funded research within my district at The Ohio State University.

In 2012, NIH funded approximately 25% of the overall research expenditures at The Ohio State University.

NIH grants went utilized on collaborations between The Ohio State University and Nationwide Children's Hospital to accelerate basic scientific discoveries into life-saving medical advances.

In particular, the discovery of microRNAs, small cellular molecules involved with biological regulation, is now known to play a pivotal role in the growth and spread of prostate, ovarian, colon and lung cancers, as well as other diseases.

NIH grants were also provided to The Ohio State University to establish a research center devoted to the study of tobacco use patterns, research that will help the Food and Drug Administration put science behind its new role in regulating tobacco.

NIH funds investigators in my district, at Nationwide Children's Hospital, to study gene therapy as a treatment for spinal muscular atrophy, the most common genetic defect that results in infant mortality.

At Nationwide Children's Hospital, NIH funding makes possible important clinical trials of viral therapy for solid cancer tumors in children, testing of new agents against childhood tumors, research to prevent and treat infant prematurity, and the furthering of understanding of the mechanisms of autism prevention.

In fact, the Research Institute at Nationwide Children's Hospital is ranked 6th for NIH funding among free-standing children's hospitals in the United States.

Hyper Tech Research, Bertec Corporation, Battelle, and BioOhio—all of these outstanding companies in the third congressional district of Ohio benefit from NIH research funding for biotechnology, drug development, medical devices, and health care.

But, just as NIH dollars that flow to Ohio help grow the state's economy, a reduction in those dollars have hurt us.

On March 1, 2013 sequestration required NIH to cut 5 percent—$1.55 billion—of its fiscal year 2013 budget.

These drastic cuts affected all NIH programs, projects, and activities—every single area of medical research was negatively affected.

NIH now has approximately 700 fewer competitive research grants.

They now have approximately 750 fewer new patients in their clinical center.

The development of more effective cancer drugs is being delayed.

Research on a universal flu vaccine is being delayed.

Research on prevention of debilitating chronic conditions is being delayed.

These delays are proof that sequestration has significantly undermined medical progress across all disciplines of research on the full spectrum of diseases and conditions.

We cannot continue to compromise our nation's future economic growth and security by blindly cutting federal investment in areas that are critical to our nation's ability to innovate and compete in the global economy.

As much as half of U.S. economic growth since World War II is a result of technological innovation, much of which resulted directly from federally-funded scientific research.

The private sector, which requires rapid returns in investment, relies on the federal government to fund basic scientific research.

Sustained support for federal research, education, and student aid programs pay dividends by building human, scientific and technological capital for our nation.

We cannot afford to let the United States fall behind other countries, such as China, in such important areas as scientific research and innovation.

Our government must show a clear commitment to sustained funding of scientific research across the disciplines so that our nation can compete globally and we can build a better America for future generations.

Sequestration is not the answer to our nation's fiscal problems.

I urge my colleagues to oppose further cuts to nondefense discretionary programs.

The point of fiscal responsibility is to invest in these critical federal programs in order to provide a better life for all Americans, especially our children who are our future researchers and inventors.

Sustained investments in NIH are essential so that our nation can train the next generation to make tomorrow's health discoveries and to continue America's scientific leadership.

The work done by NIH helps grow our economy, improve our health, and has made our nation stronger and more secure.

We should not weaken them.

IN HONOR OF MR. LARRY HORTON'S RETIREMENT

HON. DORIS O. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Larry Horton, Senior Associate Vice President and Director of Government and Community Relations at Stanford University, as he celebrates his retirement from a long and distinguished career. I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring this individual who has contributed so much to Stanford University.

Mr. Horton joined Stanford University in 1970, and has served in a number of positions including Assistant and Associate Dean of Student Affairs, Associate Director of Government Relations, and Associate Vice President for Public Affairs. In addition, from 1976 to 1977, he participated in the President's Executive Exchange Program in Washington, where he served as an assistant to the Secretary of Health and Human Services. His achievements at Stanford include the 2000 Community Plan/General Use Permit, the Mayfield Development Agreement and the conclusion of the Trails Agreement with Santa Clara County.

A true Cardinal, Mr. Horton earned both his B.A. in political science, and his M.A. in history, from Stanford. Following graduation, he served our country in the U.S. Army, with two years in Western Europe during the Vietnam War era. Through his years at Stanford, he has seen history unfold on the campus, and helped to shape Stanford's policies in areas vital to the University's success, including housing for women and minorities, federal patent legislation, federal research-funding policy, federal immigration and national security issues, and significantly, land use issues.

At Stanford's 2013 commencement, Mr. Horton was honored with the Kenneth M. Cuthbertson Award For Exceptional Service to Stanford University. This award was truly deserved, and Mr. Horton will leave Stanford University for the better from his 54 years of service to the school. Following his retirement, Larry will certainly maintain a busy schedule pursuing his passions of opera and theater, golf, travel, and enjoying a good book.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to recognize the numerous contributions made by Mr. Larry Horton during his tenure at Stanford University. As Mr. Horton, family, friends, and colleagues celebrate his retirement, I ask my colleagues to join me in thanking and recognizing him for his many years of service.

A TRIBUTE TO THE FISHER HOUSE: A HOME AWAY FROM HOME, FOR AMERICA'S HEROES AND THEIR FAMILIES

HON. PETE SESSIONS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in this Christmas Season of giving to recognize The Fisher House, an organization that has built sixty-two homes for our wounded warriors and their families. The Fisher House is a place of recovery where families can be reunited with their loved ones as they fight the battle to overcome the scars of war. As a home away from home, The Fisher House provides safe haven and helps relieve the financial hardships that families relocating to be with their wounded loved ones face. The Fisher House Program was founded in 1990 by Zachary and Elizabeth Fisher in Rockville, Maryland. They are located at major military and VA medical centers nationwide. Kenneth Fisher is currently carrying on his Uncle Zach's legacy as acting Chairman. I submit this poem penned by Albert Carey Caswell in their honor.

FISHER HOUSE—BECAUSE A FAMILY'S LOVE IS GOOD MEDICINE

A . . .
A Home . . .
A Home Away . . .
A Home Away From . . .
A Home Away From Home!
And when our heroes come back home . . .
From war and battlefields of honor bright to which they belong.
Back from that most dreaded cost of war
. . . .
all in such pain and heartache to endure
. . . .
As such a battle up ahead them so lies before,
for all these families in this new war!
Broken all in such places.
With scars upon their faces . . .
With arms and legs missing in all places . . .
With operation after operation,
as this they so face this!
As they can not so be alone . . .
For they so need a place of refuge where they can get strong . . .
A place that they can call Home!
A Home Away From Home,
where they can all belong!
Can grow!
A place where healing is so strong!
A place where their loved ones can hold them tight . . .
and encourage them both day and night!
A place to ready them for this new battle,
this new fight!
A place of refuge and of rest!
A place where they can but be their best!
A place that which helps their fine heart's crest!
A place which brings them to recovery and nothing less!
A place where they so all belong!
So they know that they are not alone!
A Home Away From Home!
Just like a love song!
Because all of these families come from afar!
As they put their own lives on hold . . .
because that's who they are!
Such quiet heroes one and all,
who so shine like the stars!
Because they make their loved ones who they are!

All In This Home Away From Home from afar!
 The Fisher House is the Home of America's Greatest of All Stars!
 So that in the morning they can awake . . .
 With but smiles upon their face!
 Where their children can but so have a place!
 Where they can be kids as all around they so race!
 Which feels more like home with each new day!
 Where at the dinner table they can all say grace!
 A safe haven . . .
 a sanctuary which in the quiet of the night brings tears to their face!
 To let them Heal!
 To let them find The Grace!
 Where their courage grows at such an enormous pace!
 Where family Birthdays . . .
 Christmas . . .
 Thanksgiving and Holidays they celebrate!
 And talk about their first new steps so great!
 As they wipe away all those tears from their face!
 All in This Home Away From Home, this so very special healing place!
 Until that moment,
 that one fine day
 when it's time to leave this Home Away From Home!
 And finally,
 they can all go back to their Home's to so stay!
 As they will never forget this place!
 Bless this home!

RECOGNIZING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF SPRINGFIELD CHAPTER 893 OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

HON. GERALD E. CONNOLLY

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. CONNOLLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of Chapter 893 of the National Association of Active and Retired Federal Employees (NARFE), based in Springfield, Virginia.

Founded in 1921, NARFE is a nonpartisan organization dedicated to protecting and enhancing the earned pay, retirement, and health care benefits of federal employees and retirees as well as their spouses and survivors. Springfield Chapter 893 is one of more than 1600 NARFE chapters nationwide.

The Charter for Chapter 893 was issued December 31, 1963. At that time, there were 14 members. Today, the Chapter membership has grown to become the largest of the 59 chapters in Virginia, with nearly 1,400 voting members. Chapter members have had a strong voice in many national and local legislative issues affecting Federal retirees, senior citizens and the public at large.

While Chapter 893 has always emphasized fulfilling the primary NARFE mission, its members have also made invaluable contributions to our Northern Virginia community. Chapter 893 members have volunteered countless hours at hospitals and libraries, and they have worked with local non-profit organizations to support blood drives and Meals on Wheels programs. Since 1987, members have contributed generously to Alzheimer's Research, the charity of choice for NARFE nationwide. In 1992, members first participated in the local area Alzheimer's Memory Walk, which has raised approximately $1,000 annually for several years. In 2009, members began participating in the collection of warm clothing items for homeless veterans for the Washington, DC, Veterans Administration Medical Center. That same year, the Chapter began supporting the National Association of Letter Carriers "Stamp Out Hunger" program.

Over the course of its successful history, the Springfield Chapter has benefited from many dynamic, accomplished leaders. Several past presidents have been elected as officers or appointed committee chairs of the NARFE Virginia Federation of Chapters. Others have served in civic, professional, or fraternal organizations locally. Particularly noteworthy are the accomplishments of past presidents Milton Kramer, Vincent Agnelli, David Sullivan, Charles Delaplane, and Ann M. Collins. Past President Kramer played a major role in organizing the Northern Virginia Caucus of Chapters in 1993. Past President Agnelli served on an ad hoc committee influential in the 1993 Virginia Supreme Court Federal retiree tax refund issue. Past President Sullivan served on the Board of the Virginia Federation of Chapters (VFC) for several years and subsequently was elected NARFE National Secretary in 2000 and again in 2002. Past President Charles Delaplane served on the Board of the VFC for several years and chaired the National Legislation Committee at the 2008 and 2010 NARFE National Conventions. Past President Collins served on the Board of the VFC and subsequently was elected VFC President for 2 terms (2005–2007). In 2006 as VFC President she established NARFE VFC Congressional District Liaisons for the 11 congressional districts in Virginia as well as a Senatorial Liaison. Also, Past President Collins was appointed as a delegate to the 2005 White House Conference on Aging to represent the 11th Congressional District of Virginia.

The 11th Congressional District of Virginia, due to its proximity to Washington, DC, is home to a significant number of Federal employees and retirees and I am honored to represent these dedicated and honorable public servants in the U.S. House of Representatives. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating NARFE Springfield Chapter 893 on the occasion of its 50th Anniversary and in thanking the members for their unwavering support and dedication to Federal employees, retirees, and their families.

CONGRATULATIONS TO MR. JOHN DALTON

HON. KERRY L. BENTIVOLIO

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. BENTIVOLIO. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Dalton was appointed to the Livonia Human Relations Commission by Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey and was elected by his fellow commissioners to serve as the Vice Chairman of the city commission. He takes his new position on the commission at the start of 2014. Congratulations to Mr. John Dalton.

CONGRATULATING THE UNIVERSITY OF NEW MEXICO AND THE RWJF CENTER FOR HEALTH POLICY ON THEIR DEDICATION TO HEALTH JUSTICE

HON. MICHELLE LUJAN GRISHAM

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. MICHELLE LUJAN GRISHAM of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the University of New Mexico and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Center for Health Policy at the University of New Mexico for their dedication to achieving health justice. This September, the University of New Mexico hosted the Congressional Tri-Caucus Health Disparities conference titled "Practices and Policies That Promote Health Justice". The summit brought together local and national experts, leaders, policymakers, and advocates for a comprehensive discussion on the status of health justice.

The Tri-Caucus health summit grew out of the need to move forward the discussion on health disparities in Washington and around the nation. The 2013 Health Disparities Summit has set a new standard for this discussion. Thanks to the efforts of the conference planning committee, this summit was the first to include Native American speakers and perspectives, a contribution that sets an important precedent for future summits.

Hosted by the University of New Mexico, under the leadership of President Robert G. Frank and Chancellor for Health Sciences Paul B. Roth, and coordinated by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Center for Health Policy at UNM, led by Director Gabriel Sanchez, the summit provided my Tri-Caucus colleagues and myself with the most relevant and groundbreaking research on health disparities, including in-depth discussions on the serious reality of racial and ethnic health disparities.

The RWJF Center for Health Policy at the University of New Mexico is a research and training institute whose mission is to increase the diversity of health policy leaders who are trained in the social and behavioral sciences and nursing. One of the ways they accomplish this is through their doctoral fellow program, which nurtures promising researchers who are dedicated to social justice and the elimination of health disparities.

Over the course of the conference, I had the distinct pleasure of meeting with several RWJF doctoral fellows whose dedication and passion for achieving health equity helped me return to Washington reenergized to continue working toward health equity. It is meeting people like the RWJF research faculty and their doctoral fellows that gives me hope that we will continue to gain traction in the movement to eliminate health inequalities and achieve health justice.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have the privilege of representing my alma mater in Congress. As the only Hispanic-Serving Institution in the United States that is classified as a Carnegie Research University with Very High Activity, UNM is at the forefront of education and groundbreaking research, which contributes to a more just and equitable society. The University of New Mexico has taken an active role in working to eliminate health disparities and the RWJF Center for Health Policy is leading this charge. I would like to congratulate the University of New Mexico on their successful conference and for their dedication to achieving health justice.

CELEBRATING THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE NATIONAL INDUSTRIES FOR THE BLIND (NIB)

HON. LEE TERRY

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, the National Industries for the Blind (NIB) is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year, and I am honored to be a part of its celebration. Seventy-five years ago, the Wagner-O'Day Act was signed into law, which created the AbilityOne Program as well as the NIB.

NIB strives to enhance economic and personal independence of persons who are blind by creating, sustaining, and improving employment.

The NIB works with 91 agencies spread out among 35 states at over 250 locations and the agencies provide products and services for the government.

In my home state, Outlook Nebraska is the NIB provider and is an economic engine that brings valuable business to the Omaha area.

Founded in 2000, Outlook Nebraska, much like its sister NIB agencies, seeks to enhance the quality of life for the blind and visually impaired.

It is Nebraska's largest employer for those with vision disabilities. Outlook Nebraska's work is especially important because, unfortunately, 70 percent of working-age Americans who are blind are unemployed.

The AbilityOne program makes Outlook Nebraska possible. As the official AbilityOne manufacturer of quality tissue and towel products for the government, Outlook Nebraska supplies a full line of 100 percent recycled fiber content tissue and towel products, including bath tissue, pull towels, and all compatible dispensers to the United States government.

Besides the manufacturing of products, the agency provides complete product servicing from its office and tissue-converting site in Omaha.

The agency has also developed additional services for blind and visually impaired employees, such as education and training to provide them with the technological skills that allow them to excel in their professional and personal lives.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. DIANE BLACK

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mrs. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 630 for final passage of H.R. 3521, and rollcall No. 631 for final passage of H.R. 1402, which took place Tuesday, December 10, 2013, I am not recorded because I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on both bills.

HONORING THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE UNIFICATION OF THE ISLAND OF CRETE WITH THE HELLENIC REPUBLIC

HON. GUS M. BILIRAKIS

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the unification of the Island of Crete with the Hellenic Republic. On December 1, 1913, the flag of Greece was raised proudly on the Island, recognizing the will of the people of Crete who declared their unification with Greece, breaking ties with the oppressive Ottoman Empire which had occupied the island since 1669.

Sitting at the crossroads of Africa, Europe and the Middle East, Crete, one of the largest islands in the Mediterranean, is matched by its oversized influence throughout world history. Crete was home to the Minoan civilization, a major center for the Roman, Byzantine, Venetian and Ottoman empires, and birthplace to some of the world's most renowned artists—like Nobel laureate Odysseus Elytis and composer, Mikis Theodorakis.

During their struggle for independence from the Ottoman Empire, the people of Crete endured political oppression and unspeakable atrocities, but they never stopped living their lives under the creed "Eleftheria I Thanatos" "Freedom or Death." Since rejoining with Greece, Crete has remained a pillar of the fight against tyranny and oppressive regimes. Nowhere was this exhibited more than during the Battle of Crete, when Cretans stood alongside Allied troops and fought off German paratroopers. And—like Crete itself—the Battle had an oversized influence on the outcome of World War II. The damage the Cretans and their Western allies inflicted on the German air force and paratrooper corps prevented Nazi Germany from carrying out another airborne invasion for the remainder of World War II.

For over 267 years, the people of Crete fought a brave battle to rejoin their Greek motherland and I stand here today to recognize their sacrifices and honor their memories.

THE IMPORTANCE OF NIH FUNDING

HON. PETER T. KING

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. KING of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support for full funding of the National Institutes of Health (NIH). The largest source of funding for medical research in the world, the NIH has supported more than 130 Nobel Prize winners.

Medical breakthroughs funded through the NIH include new treatments for cancer and chronic conditions. Clinical trials hosted at the NIH award patients newfound hope that they will be able to overcome debilitating diseases or conditions.

While the significance of NIH funding can be measured through patients reached and treatments developed, it can also be gauged through economic impact. For every dollar of NIH funding spent in New York State, more than twice as much is generated in economic output. In 2011, NIH grants and contracts created and supported more than 33,193 jobs in the state alone and more than 500,000 jobs nationwide.

Due to budget cuts, the NIH funded approximately 700 fewer research grants in 2013 than 2012 and admitted 750 fewer patients to the NIH Clinical Center. Almost immediately, these cuts affected patients hoping to be admitted to clinical trials and research jobs at universities nationwide. In the long term, these cuts will almost certainly delay progress in medical breakthroughs.

We must not allow the significant legacy of the National Institutes of Health be diminished by the harmful effects of funding cuts.

RECOGNIZING THE WILLIAM SMITH COLLEGE SOCCER TEAM

HON. TOM REED

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the William Smith College soccer team, which recently won the 2013 NCAA Division III National Championship. On December 7, 2013, the Herons concluded their record-breaking season with a 2-0 victory over Trinity University, successfully capturing their second national championship title in program history.

Setting new standards for the William Smith soccer program, the Herons completed their season with a record of 23-1-0. Their impressive winning streak of twenty-three games broke the previous school record. Remarkably, twenty-one of those games were complete shutouts, including all six victories in the NCAA tournament. The Herons have now competed in the Final Four ten times in the past twenty-five years and have won the Liberty League title in seven consecutive seasons.

Following the championship game, five players from this incredibly talented squad were named to the NCAA Women's All-Tournament Team. Forward Kara Shue, midfielder Zoe Eth, and goalkeeper Chelsea Dunay were among those who were recognized. In addition, forward Krista Longo and defender Olivia Zitoli were respectively named Most Outstanding Offensive and Defensive Players of the Year.

This gifted team was led by their accomplished and experienced coach, Aliceann Wilber. As the only head coach that the William Smith Herons have ever known, Coach Wilber's 34th season proved to be her most successful yet. The national championship marked Wilber's 480th career win, making her the winningest coach in Division III women's soccer history. She also became the first female collegiate soccer coach to earn more than 400 career wins.

The 2013 William Smith College soccer team demonstrated that hard work and dedication truly pay off. I have no doubt that under the leadership of Coach Wilber, the Herons will continue their extraordinary level of success in the years to come.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. JACKIE WALORSKI

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mrs. WALORSKI. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, December 10, I was unavoidably detained due to inclement weather and missed two rollcall votes. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea" on both rollcall 630, the Department of Veterans Affairs Major Medical Facility Lease Authorization Act, and rollcall 631, the VA Expiring Authorities Extension Act.

HUMAN RIGHTS IN NORTH KOREA

HON. DANNY K. DAVIS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. DANNY K. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise to call attention to the human rights situation in North Korea. We all remain hopeful that the transition to the leadership of Kim Jong-Un has created new possibilities but we are well aware that there remain fundamental human rights violations in North Korea and humanitarian conditions in North Korea remain deplorable. I believe it is fair to say that the findings in the 2004 North Korean Human Rights Act and 2008 and 2012 Reauthorizations remain substantially accurate today. That is not just my opinion, it was the bi-partisan consensus of this Congress when it reauthorized the North Korean Human Rights Act until 2017.

Mr. Speaker, we know that democracy, economic growth and human development are intimately linked and perhaps nowhere is that more evident than the comparison of North and South Korea. South Korea has taken the path toward more democracy, more human rights, more education, higher living standards and economic self-sufficiency. North Korea has shunned that road . . . and the results of those policies are now glaringly evident. Perhaps even more relevant in today's world is the link of democracy and economic growth to peace. South Korea is not only a major trading partner but an ally in the region while North Korea remains a major source of regional and global instability and insecurity.

Mr. Speaker, the United States has one of the largest Korean populations outside of the Korean Peninsula with millions who have family ties to North Korea and the Seventh Congressional District has its share of the Korean diaspora. Like so many of my constituents, I believe the U.S. must continue its commitment to aid North Korean refugees and advocate for the human rights of the North Korean people. We share the pain of those who have been deprived of these most basic rights and the suffering of those who live in miserable conditions and look forward to the day when the Korean leadership will provide transparency in the delivery of humanitarian assistance, and guarantee the rights of those who seek refuge abroad.

I want to thank my constituent Mr. David Chang, a consistent advocate of human rights, for helping to maintain a focus on this critical issue.

HONORING EARL P. WILLIAMS

HON. DAVID G. VALADAO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. VALADAO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Earl P. Williams on his retirement and celebrate his over 20 years of service to the cotton industry and the Central Valley's agriculture industry as a whole.

A native of Arkansas, Earl moved to Buttonwillow, California in 1958. He received a Bachelor of Science in Crop Production from California Polytechnic State University in 1965 and began his agricultural career in California.

Earl was one of fifteen charter members of the California Cotton Ginners Association's Board of Directors and served on the board from 1972 to 1980. He joined the California Cotton Ginners and Growers Associations as the Executive Vice President in 1993, and was later named President and Chief Executive Officer.

Earl is also the past President of the Buttonwillow Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture. He is a past member and chairman of the Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo Crop Science Department's Advisory Council. In 1963 he was the Crops Club President and in 1996 received the Crops Club's Distinguished Agriculturist Award. Additionally, he served two terms on the California Industrial Welfare Commission's Wage Board #8. He is a past board member of the Agricultural Energy Consumers Association and a past board member of the California Agricultural Education Foundation.

In his various leadership roles, Earl has worked closely with California Governor Gray Davis, and other Democrat and Republican legislators, as well as his colleagues in the agriculture community to pass legislation to assist farmers and agribusinesses in California.

Additionally, Earl has been a champion for air pollution and water quality issues facing the San Joaquin Valley of California.

Without a doubt, Earl has been a key player in California's agriculture industry for a number of years. It is with great pride that I recognize Earl P. Williams for his service and leadership and congratulate him on his retirement.

HON. VICKY HARTZLER

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mrs. HARTZLER. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, December 10, 2013, I was unable to vote. Had I been present, I would have voted as follows: On rollcall No. 630, "yea," on rollcall No. 631, "yea."

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. BRETT GUTHRIE

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. GUTHRIE. Mr. Speaker, I was absent yesterday due to several flight cancellations and delays due to severe weather. As a result, I missed two votes on Tuesday, December 10, 2013. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on rollcall votes 630 and 631.

CONGRATULATING JORDAN MARCUS PATE ON ACHIEVING THE RANK OF EAGLE SCOUT

HON. JOHN L. MICA

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize, honor and congratulate an outstanding constituent of my district, Jordan Marcus Pate of Scout Troop 100 in Oviedo, Florida, for achieving the rank of Eagle Scout.

The rank of Eagle Scout is the highest achievement in scouting. To attain this rank, he has demonstrated the qualities of leadership, self-discipline and perseverance while serving his family, friends and community. Only about five percent of Boy Scouts earn the rank of Eagle Scout. The awarding of the Rank of Eagle Scout is a performance-based achievement with high standards that have been well maintained over the past century.

Jordan Pate has met every test and challenge to pass through the ranks of the Boy Scouts. Those aspiring to be Eagle Scouts must fulfill requirements in the areas of leadership, service and outdoor skills. To demonstrate proficiency as a scout, each Boy Scout must achieve merit badges in the areas of First Aid, Citizenship, Environment, Fitness, Family Life and much more.

The work ethic Jordan has shown in his Eagle Scout projects, and every other project leading up to his Eagle Scout rank, speaks volumes about his commitment to assisting his community and serving a cause greater than himself. It is my honor to commend Daniel Moon for his achievement of the rank of Eagle Scout. Jordan will join the ranks of fellow Eagle Scouts like President Gerald R. Ford, Neil Armstrong and Florida Governor Rick Scott.

Mr. Speaker, the example set by this young man and his supportive family demonstrates the rewards of hard work, dedication and perseverance. Jordan's devotion to the Boy Scouts over the past decade is laudable, and I congratulate him on his achievement. I thank him for his dedication to service and know we can expect great things from him in the future. I invite my colleagues in the House to join me in congratulating Jordan Marcus Pate on obtaining the rank of Eagle Scout, and I wish him continued success in his future endeavors.

OUR UNCONSCIONABLE NATIONAL DEBT

HON. MIKE COFFMAN

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. COFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, on January 20, 2009, the day President Obama took office, the national debt was $10,626,877,048,913.08.

Today, it is $17,234,005,998,603.93. We've added $6,607,128,949,690.85 to our debt in 4 years. This is $6.6 trillion in debt our nation, our economy, and our children could have avoided with a balanced budget amendment.

COMMENDING VIRAJ PURI

HON. ENI F. H. FALEOMAVEAGA

OF AMERICAN SAMOA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. FALEOMAVEAGA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Viraj Puri, a 13-year-old student at Kilmer Middle School in Vienna, Virginia.

Viraj is interested in technology, music, advocacy, and writes a blog about mobile devices. He is also a certified DJ (DJ Droid) and built his own powerful computer which he uses for his DJ performances. Viraj performs in front of kids, adults and seniors.

As an Indian American teenager, Viraj saw the effects of bullying on his older brother and decided to blend advocacy and technology. He built a website which can be accessed at www.bullyvention.com.

Viraj's website calls for teenagers to Write on Washington, to make their voices roar by contacting their lawmakers and urging them to join the campaign to stop bullying now. Viraj believes that kids who are bullied need to know they are powerful enough to reach out to those in position to make a difference.

Bullyvention is the first site to team up with the U.S. House of Representatives' Congressional Anti-Bullying Caucus (CABC). Viraj's website trends from Capitol Hill where he interviews Members of Congress who have a story to share or advice to give victims of bullying.

In support of his vision that the "pen is mightier than the sword," Viraj has been successful in getting Members of Congress involved in a campaign he calls Raise Your Pen. Former Speaker and now Democratic Leader of the U.S. House of Representatives NANCY PELOSI has raised her pen to stop bullying now. President Barack Obama also sent a message of praise and a note of encouragement in response to a hand-written letter Viraj sent to him.

I am pleased that Viraj is also interviewing and posting photos of State Attorneys General, School Superintendents, and others who want to join the campaign. He is creating an online interactive map that highlights areas of concern by searching through keywords in social media like Facebook, Instagram, etc., and by school district, state, and county. It is the only interactive map on this subject.

I commend Viraj for taking a public stand against bullying and for putting his technology skills to use in a way that draws all of us together. His work, especially with Members of Congress, on behalf of teens across America is the first of its kind. And so, for historical purposes, I submit this statement for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to recognize Viraj for his advocacy efforts. Viraj is a remarkable young man with a very bright future. I am proud to know him, and I extend to him and his family my kindest regards and best wishes.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. K. MICHAEL CONAWAY

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. CONAWAY. Mr. Speaker, on December 9, the weather delayed my arrival to Washington, DC for the afternoon votes, and I missed rollcall No. 631, or H.R. 1402. Had I been present I would have voted "aye" on H.R. 1402.

IN RECOGNITION OF JEFF IRA

HON. JACKIE SPEIER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. SPEIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Jeff Ira for his 16 years of outstanding service on the Redwood City City Council, two terms as mayor. To say that Jeff's enthusiasm and expertise will be missed by his colleagues and all residents would be the understatement of the decade. Jeff has demonstrated superb leadership in setting Redwood City on a stable financial path and in making it a better place to live. I am proud to call Jeff a colleague and long time friend. When Jeff became mayor in 2009, he opened his two-year term with a "Call to Action" to inspire residents to get engaged in their community and help it recover from the worst recession since the Great Depression. He recommended volunteering at schools, libraries and non-profits and youth sports groups because he knew first-hand that all were suffering during the economic downturn. Under his leadership, and despite tough economic challenges, the city completed a new General Plan and the Downtown Precise Plan, attained a garbage collection agreement, accomplished a partnership with the San Carlos Fire Department to share services and save money, and passed a budget under enormous financial constraints. On his own time, Jeff worked hard to get ballot measures passed to bring more revenue to Redwood City. While mayor, he served on the city's Audit, Finance and Revenue, Jail, Economic Development/Downtown and Fox Theater committees. He was also the council's liaison for Neighborhood Association co-chairs, and chair of the South Bayside System Authority. Jeff's vision and persistence were instrumental in creating the beautiful downtown of Redwood City. Courthouse Square and the Fox Theater would not be the sparkling jewels they are today without his hard and strategic work. Additionally, he made recycled water a reality for the community. Jeff showed the same creativity, integrity and commitment during his entire tenure on the city council. He will always be known for the 2004 Great Toilet Giveaway when thousands of residents received low-flow toilets. He saved countless trees by having the city council move to a paperless system for staff reports and digital delivery of agenda packets. You can also thank him for the photo gallery on the city website showing off the beauty of Redwood City. His in-depth understanding of finances and fiscal constraints, and his contribution to creating controls over spiraling costs, helped steer the city through the economic downturn and towards financial stability. As a member of the South Bayside Systems Authority for 13 years, Jeff created the blue ribbon task force to analyze the governing structure of SBSA which resulted in a change on the board to include elected officials and a technical advisory committee. He oversaw the restructuring of the board's commission and committees to make them more effective and to meet the needs of the community. Jeff is passionate about public schools. As a parent, he was deeply involved in Clifford Elementary School in the Redwood City School District, and he worked tirelessly to raise funds for the district. He is committed to equal opportunity for all through quality public education. Jeff also serves as Treasurer of the Sequoia Awards which offers college scholarships to outstanding young people in Redwood City. Jeff has been a major fiscal and spiritual steward of this all-volunteer program for many years. In short, no matter what Jeff takes on, the results are always lasting. Jeff was born and raised in Redwood City and attended Saint Pius School and Saint Francis High School. He graduated from Humboldt State University with a B.S. in Accounting. Jeff is the proud father of Josh, Julie, Jessica and Joseph. While I am sure that he will enjoy more time hiking, kayaking, gardening and traveling after he retires from the council today, I have no doubt he will find ways to stay engaged and to give back to our community. Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to rise with me to honor Jeff Ira, one of the finest mayors and public servants

San Mateo County has seen. His tireless commitment and contributions to the city and residents of Redwood City will be felt for generations to come.

TRIBUTE TO CHRISTINE DAVENPORT

HON. CANDICE S. MILLER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of myself and Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania, our Ranking Minority Member, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Christine Davenport who is leaving the House at the end of this year after serving in the Office of the General Counsel for more than ten years, first as an Assistant Counsel and then as a Senior Assistant Counsel. We will miss her.

Ms. Davenport provided frequent and invaluable legal advice and representation to the Committee on House Administration, as well as to Members, officers and other committees of the House more generally. Our staff came to rely on her expertise and guidance, particularly in connection with their internal oversight activities. Over the years, Ms. Davenport played a significant role in safeguarding the legal and institutional interests of the House of Representatives.

Ms. Davenport served the House with great distinction. On behalf of the Committee on House Administration, we thank Ms. Davenport for her devoted service, and extend to her our very best wishes for her continued success.

RECOGNIZING THE PARKSIDE COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION AS THEY CELEBRATE THEIR 50TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and congratulate Buffalo's Parkside Community Association (PCA) for celebrating its 50th anniversary in association with the organization's years of dedicated community service. The PCA will celebrate this impressive landmark on Friday, December 6th at the greatbatch pavilion on the Darwin D. Martin House Complex of Buffalo.

Throughout its storied and active past, the PCA has continually sought to meet the challenges that older urban neighborhoods often present. Some of these hurdles include absentee landlords, zoning and code issues, infrastructure deterioration and cutbacks in city services.

The organization is governed by a Board of Directors which comprises 20 members who all serve on a volunteer basis. Each Board member is elected annually by a neighborhood membership of more than 500 individuals, families, and business owners. It is more than appropriate that the PCA's leadership consists of volunteers, as they are truly the backbone of the organization. Eight or more standing and ad-hoc committees consisting of neighborhood volunteers regularly contribute an impressive average of 130 volunteer hours per month.

The PCA provides countless services to local homeowners and the surrounding community. In addition to providing referral and crime prevention services for neighborhood residents as well as assisting in the formation of block clubs and community meetings, the PCA also stages neighborhood tours, hosts programs including the Summer Arts Camp and Little Library Program, and manages committees on crime and safety, housing, and traffic. The PCA was instrumental with the opening of the Parkside COPS Satellite station which addresses quality of life issues, and helped to restore two vacant buildings along the major commercial boundaries. The organization has even assisted some homeowners with property improvements through low-interest loans.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to commend the Parkside Community Association of Buffalo on their 50 years of devoted service to their community. It is the admirable hard work and dedication from organizations like the PCA that maintains the strength and integrity of our neighborhoods. I wish the Parkside Community Association the absolute best in all their future endeavors.

RECOGNIZING THE ROTARY CLUB OF SAVANNAH

HON. JACK KINGSTON

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the Rotary Club of Savannah, which will celebrate the 100th anniversary of its founding this January. This club has been instrumental in providing a network for Savannah's business leaders and serving our community.

The Rotary Club of Savannah is the oldest club in Georgia outside of Atlanta and has over 240 members. It was founded on January 12, 1914. The club's first major project was to buy and promote the sale of bonds to build a road to Tybee Island. The Rotary Club of Savannah was very active in World Wars I and II, helping our service men abroad and aiding relief efforts in Europe.

The Rotary Club of Savannah has been one of the largest supporters of the Bethesda Home for Boys, providing funding, clothing, Christmas gifts, banquets, Boy Scout activities, and volunteer services. They have sponsored the formation of eight new Rotary clubs in our state. They have also been instrumental in establishing the Georgia Rotary Student Program, an international scholarship program which invites students from around the world to study in Georgia.

From organizing youth sports programs to constructing water fountains, the Rotary Club has been a force for good in our community for the past century. I am proud to support the Rotary Club of Savannah as they celebrate this historic milestone. My thoughts are with them during this special time.

EXPRESSING CONDOLENCES TO FAMILY OF DR. CHESTER AIKENS

HON. CORRINE BROWN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sadness and a heavy heart, that I wish my condolences to Dr. Chester Aikens' family. Dr. Aikens was not only my dentist, but my long-time friend and community activist whom I greatly respected and admired. Aikens' unexpected passing leaves an irreplaceable void throughout the Jacksonville community.

As a recent recipient of Mayor Alvin Brown's "Trailblazer Award," Dr. Aikens embodied that completely. He was a coveted member of the Jacksonville area, where his input, mentorship, and advice was consistently respected and sought out. It is a telling sign towards his character that Dr. Aikens passed after attending a local meeting with the pension reform task force, an issue he was passionate about.

After receiving a doctorate degree in dentistry from Howard University, for 30 years, Dr. Aikens served the Jacksonville area as a prominent dentist. He was a consistent force, acting as one time president of the National Dental Association, a member of the Jacksonville Civic Council, and chairman of the Jacksonville Aviation Authority board to name a few of his accomplishments.

A veteran of the Florida Army Reserve National Guard, serving 11 years, Dr. Aikens dabbled in just about everything, doing his best to make an impact and improve his community. He was the consummate family man and ultimate professional. I will miss him dearly, but more importantly, the city of Jacksonville and broader Florida community lost an unparalleled leader. That said, he lived a life that should be a blueprint for those to come and an example of great character and unabridged competence.

CONGRATULATING DUKE UNIVERSITY FOOTBALL COACH DAVID CUTCLIFFE FOR BEING HONORED AS WALTER CAMP COACH OF THE YEAR

HON. G. K. BUTTERFIELD

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate Duke University Head Football Coach David Cutcliffe for being recognized by the Walter Camp Football Foundation, Incorporated as Coach of the Year for the all Division I-A football teams in the National Collegiate Athletic Association, NCAA. Coach Cutcliffe is the only Duke football coach to win the award since its inception in 1967.

After being hired as head coach on December 15, 2007, Coach Cutcliffe led Duke this season to a 10–2 regular season record, which is the best record in the institution's history. This season, Duke football defeated two opponents that were both ranked in the top 25 of all Division I–A football teams—the first victories for Duke football over ranked opponents since 1994. Coach Cutcliffe also guided his team to victories over rivals from the University of North Carolina—Chapel Hill and North Carolina State University in 2013. Last season Coach Cutcliffe led Duke football to its first post season bowl game since 1994 and set a school record by scoring a season total of 410 points.

Coach Cutcliffe has also led the Duke football program to success off the field. Students on the Duke football team had a graduation rate of 92 percent in 2013, compared to the average NCAA rate of 82 percent. Under Coach Cutcliffe's leadership, the Duke football team has strengthened the school's relationship with the community through service opportunities with the Duke Children's Hospital, the Ronald McDonald House, and the Oxford Housing Authority Partnership. Prior to joining the coaching staff at Duke University, Coach Cutcliffe served as an assistant coach at the University of Tennessee and a head coach at Ole Miss. Coach Cutcliffe is a native of Birmingham, Alabama and a graduate of the University of Alabama.

The Walter Camp Football Foundation was created in 1967 and is based in New Haven, Connecticut. The foundation is named for Walter Camp, a former athlete and coach at Yale University who is known as the "Father of American Football." He is credited with inventing the line of scrimmage, the game's system of downs, the game's scoring system, and the restriction of play to eleven players per team. The Walter Camp Football Foundation is part of the National College Football Awards Association, which is a coalition of the major collegiate football awards.

Mr. Speaker, I commend David Cutcliffe and the entire Duke University football program for their commitment to excellence. This award is a testament to the outstanding leadership demonstrated by Coach Cutcliffe and tremendous performance on and off the playing field from the Duke University football program's student-athletes. I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring and celebrating Coach David Cutcliffe's great achievement in being recognized as the Walter Camp 2013 Coach of the Year.

TRIBUTE TO DR. CHESTER A.
AIKENS

HON. CORRINE BROWN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the constituents of the Fifth Congressional District of Florida, I rise today to pay tribute to the life of Dr. Chester A. Aikens.

I am deeply and profoundly saddened by the loss of my dear friend and brother, Dr. Chester A. Aikens. This man of prominence and bearing was the epitome of a gentleman and a scholar. I am moved by his passion, emboldened by his commitments, honored by his friendship and made all the better by his innate wisdom and his belief in the integrity of the human experience. His was a purposeful life and one that helped shape the destinies of historical figures with whom he conversed, and equally so that of the common man and woman, in whom he placed unwavering faith. I came to know him as a husband, father, and dedicated servant to his people and causes, a dentist, a humanitarian, a scholar, a civic leader and businessman without comparison.

Dr. Aikens was born in Madison, Florida, where he was the first black football player and honor society member at his high school. He graduated from Howard University, Washington, DC, with a doctorate in dentistry. He later earned a law degree from Florida Coastal School of Law and Master's degree in Business from Jacksonville University. Dr. Aikens was also a Major in the Florida Army Reserve National Guard.

Known as a fearless warrior, Dr. Aikens was a formidable force who influenced a generation of young people to give both time and resources to their community. Inspired by his strong belief in equal opportunity, he was a true civil rights champion, who went on to greatly influence the community as a whole.

As a member of the Jacksonville community for the past thirty years, Dr. Aikens' presence will be missed by many. He served on many community boards up to and including, first African American from Jacksonville to be President of National Dental Association, Jacksonville Civic Council, Jacksonville Aviation Authority, long-time member, and devoted Deacon of Bethel Institutional Baptist Church and many others.

I am assured, for we all came to know the absoluteness of his word, the sanctity of his promise, the depth of his intellect, the breadth of his worldly experiences and his place in Jacksonville history.

CONGRATULATING
WEYERHAEUSER COMPANY

HON. G. K. BUTTERFIELD

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate Weyerhaeuser Company on being recognized as one of the most community-minded companies in the Nation. Weyerhaeuser was among 50 companies to be awarded this honor by Points of Light and the National Conference on Citizenship's Civic 50 rankings.

Since 1957, Weyerhaeuser has been an integral part of eastern North Carolina. In the First Congressional District that I represent, Weyerhaeuser operates the Softwood Lumber Mill in Plymouth and the Carolina Timberlands Area and GHW Operations Center in Washington. Weyerhaeuser also owns or leases more than 545,000 acres of timberland across the state. The company employs 1,051 North Carolinians and helps support families and businesses in many rural communities.

Weyerhaeuser has been an important contributor to North Carolina's economy and has served as an environmental steward and strong corporate citizen. Since 2008, Weyerhaeuser has donated more than $2.5 million to philanthropic causes throughout North Carolina. Since 1903, the company has provided more than $215 million to support affordable housing and shelter, education and youth development, environmental stewardship, human services, and civic and cultural growth.

The second annual Civic 50 was selected through a stringent survey of S&P 500 companies and measured corporate commitment to improving communities, corporate investment in philanthropy, and civic culture.

Mr. Speaker, I commend employees of Weyerhaeuser Company in North Carolina and throughout the country for their commitment to improving their communities for future generations. I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring and celebrating their efforts to make North Carolina a better place to live and work.

HONORING MEMORY OF LEROY
TYSON

HON. CORRINE BROWN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 11, 2013

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of Leroy Tyson. He passed away last week after a long illness. He was a Custodian with the Day Cleaning Division of the House Office Buildings. He began his tour of duty with the AOC on August 6, 2007, where he worked around the clock to help maintain the U.S. Capitol buildings. His kindness and great service will be missed.

I got to know Lee when he took care of the hallways and restrooms around my office on the third floor of the Rayburn Building. He was always quick with a greeting and a friendly smile, always willing to go out of the way for whatever I needed.

Lee was a pleasure to see at work and he will be missed.

Our thoughts and prayers are with the Tyson family during this difficult time.

UPDATE THE GAS TAX

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Madam Speaker, last week I was proud to stand with representatives of the U.S. Chamber, the AFL-CIO, contractors, local government, transit, truckers, AAA, engineers, and environmentalists, all supporting my legislation, H.R. 3636, to update the gas tax.

It inspired the predictable firestorm. There was a rant from a shouting head on Fox who thought not only did we not need transportation money, but thought that the previous money had somehow disappeared. Even the people who supported the gas tax said it was a horrible idea, like the article in Slate saying it is the best least-popular idea in politics. It provoked a torrent of reaction—some laudatory, some inflammatory. But it boiled down to basically three major points:

Where did this idea come from?

Well, it came from my decades of work in transportation, studying, listening to people from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon; North Carolina to Seattle to California. It was 10 years of experience that I had directing the transportation functions at the city of Portland as the Commissioner of Public Works where I saw firsthand the impact of poor and declining infrastructure. It is every single major independent study that says we need more money for transportation, not less, and it is a disaster that we are poised to slash transportation funding October 1 unless something happens.

The question was asked: Isn't this unfair to lower-income Americans?

Well, actually no. Lower-income Americans stand to benefit the most, people who are at the mercy of oil companies and foreign producers who don't know how much they will pay for gasoline next week, whether it is $3.35 as it was when I left Portland earlier this week, or $4.25. That is why they think the gas tax goes up every year, but it hasn't increased since 1993.

Lower-income people are more transportation dependent. They work, in the main, by the hour. A traffic delay or deteriorating transit hits them harder because they have fewer choices. Terrible road conditions costs them money as it wastes fuel, it damages tires, and shakes their cars out of alignment. And lower-income people stand to benefit from the hundreds of thousands of family-wage jobs that will be created.

Well, my favorite question is: If this is so unpopular and such a remote possibility, why even bother?

Well, it is remote, but it is not impossible. Look at the user-fee increase that Ronald Reagan could sign, a nickel a gallon in 1982. We need leadership today if we are going to meet serious transportation challenges and help jump-start our economy. It may sound quaint, but I think leadership is not what you do when an idea is popular. Leadership is what you do when it is needed.

I hope Congress will lead on transportation funding.

OBAMACARE AND IDENTITY THEFT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. HOLDING) for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOLDING. Madam Speaker, the disastrous rollout of ObamaCare has shown that those who were quick to sing its praises were not prepared to actually implement it. It quickly became apparent after the online exchanges opened that healthcare.gov was unworkable. Folks who were trying to create accounts and pick a plan were receiving error messages, being kicked off midway through the process, only to be sent back to the beginning, experiencing many glitches.

Madam Speaker, the administration and the agencies responsible clearly were not prepared for the launch of healthcare.gov. They blamed issues with the Web site on unexpected volume, which simply does not make sense. ObamaCare requires all Americans to have health insurance or face a fine. There are over 313 million people in the United States, so how could they not expect a high volume?

Madam Speaker, the American people are paying for a Web site that doesn't even work, and they are paying an outrageous amount. In her testimony before the Energy and Commerce Committee yesterday, Secretary Sebelius said that the administration has currently spent $319 million on healthcare.gov so far, and Health and Human Services has budgeted $667 million for the Web site through October of next year. At a time when we are over $17 trillion in debt and the government continues to borrow and spend at an unsustainable rate, this is simply unacceptable.

Madam Speaker, the unworkability of this Web site goes beyond error messages and technical problems; it is vulnerable to security breaches as well. In late October, a Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services memo showed that administration officials were concerned, due to a lack of testing, healthcare.gov had potential high security risks. And yet they went ahead and launched the Web site anyway.

When an individual uses the Web site to sign up, they enter much of their personal information such as Social Security number and address and so forth. Many individuals who have had problems with the Web site may have entered it several times, and they could be a victim of fraud or identity theft if the Web site is not secure.

Madam Speaker, it is out of concern for the security of people's personal information on healthcare.gov that I have introduced H.R. 3652, the No Identity Theft in Health Care Act, which would increase penalties for navigators or other agency employees who commit identity theft by using information submitted for the purposes of signing up for ObamaCare. Under current Federal law, aggravated identity theft carries a 2-year sentence. My bill would increase the penalty to 5 years in prison for those who use your sensitive information that has been submitted for the purpose of signing up for health care.

Many agency employees who have been tasked with implementing the law and processing Americans' sensitive personal information have not gone through background checks or even been thoroughly screened. My bill would deter navigators and others with access to sensitive information through ObamaCare from stealing the identities of Americans who are simply trying to pick a health care plan. Madam Speaker, we need to do what we can to protect the American people from this harmful law, starting with the security of their personal information.

The problems with the Web site do not overshadow the problems with the law itself, because the real issues with ObamaCare go far beyond an unworkable Web site. I have heard from many of my constituents about their canceled plans, increased costs of premiums, and that they are being offered less choice about which doctors they can see. We need to continue to work toward patient-oriented reforms and focus on protecting the American people from this harmful law.

ADDRESSING AIRPORT NOISE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. QUIGLEY) for 5 minutes.

Mr. QUIGLEY. Madam Speaker, every day nearly 2,500 flights land and take off at O'Hare International Airport at the western edge of the Fifth Congressional District. More than 66 million passengers boarded or deplaned at O'Hare in 2012.

On a recent morning, FAA traffic controllers kept tabs on 7,300 flights in the immediate area. By any measure, O'Hare is integral to the Nation's commercial air traffic network; and just as it shapes the Nation's air traffic system, O'Hare plays a major role in the local and regional economies. O'Hare currently generates 450,000 jobs and $38 billion in economic activity for Chicago and the State of Illinois. And when the $9 billion effort to modernize O'Hare is completed in 2020, it will mean the creation of 195,000 more jobs and an additional $18 billion in annual economic activity.

In my district alone, more than 12,000 constituents have jobs tied to the airport, but O'Hare's success comes at a price. Since the October 17 opening of a new runway at O'Hare, many constituents have experienced a dramatic rise in flights—and noise—over their homes. Some residents are now dealing with hundreds more flights over their homes—all day, every day. It is not just the new runway that is causing the increase in noise pollution. Because of a dramatic reconfiguration of airspace over O'Hare, a majority of flights, either arriving or departing O'Hare, now traverse the skies of the Fifth District.

I understand and support the need to modernize O'Hare. The new parallel runway configuration means safer, more efficient operations and fewer delays; but I also understand the importance of livable neighborhoods. The two are not mutually exclusive.

We are a region of distinctive neighborhoods where hardworking people have built their lives and invested much of their earnings into their homes in Forest Glen, Sauganash, North Park, and Harwood Heights. My constituents worry that their peace of mind and property values are being eroded in the name of profits and air traveler convenience.

As one constituent told me:

We can no longer open our windows, enjoy eating outside on our new front porch, or gardening.

Madam Speaker, I agree. Neighbors should not be exiled from backyards and gardens because of the ceaseless din of commercial aircraft. I also believe that if we take the right steps, maintaining a vibrant neighborhood won't be incompatible with a safe and efficient O'Hare.

Since O'Hare became part of my district in January, I have pushed for important changes that can bring relief to residents in the near term. I have advocated that O'Hare continue to use all available runways to mitigate the increase in air traffic, and I have called for expanding the practice of routing aircraft over industrial parks, interstates, and forest preserves, not over residents' backyards.

But we need to do more. The Federal Aviation Administration needs to overhaul the metric it uses to determine how much noise around airports is acceptable. The FAA's current measurement—the so-called 65 DNL—is outdated and woefully incomplete at measuring the impact of unabated noise overhead. I know the FAA has been studying and reviewing the 65 DNL metric for years. It is time to stop studying this 30-year-old relic and take action.

So, too, must the city of Chicago and the airlines. The city has told us it will not revisit its Fly Quiet program, which adjusts runway usage at night, until the O'Hare modernization is completed in 2020. There may be obstacles to reviewing this program, but the city needs to be more nimble in addressing the needs of these residents.

The airlines, too, must help. They will save millions in lower operating costs as delays at O'Hare decrease. A portion of these savings should be earmarked for neighborhood soundproofing efforts. The airlines must also get quieter quicker. That is why I just introduced the Silent Skies bill, which will accelerate the airlines' use of newer, quieter aircraft.

Madam Speaker, I know the O'Hare modernization plan is here to stay; and I know air traffic noise, like noise from expressways or the "el" is a fact of life in our metropolitan area. But it is also a fact that neighborhoods, not noisy aircraft, make life in Chicago and its suburbs special. We all need to work together to ensure the vitality of our neighborhoods isn't drowned out in a roar of aircraft overhead.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL WILL VAUGHN

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOLDING). The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. NUNNELEE) for 5 minutes.

Mr. NUNNELEE. Mr. Speaker, the Legislative Fellowship program is a selective mideducation program where the Air Force places the very best and brightest officers and civilians in congressional offices so that they may learn the legislative process. For this past year, my office was given the opportunity to host Lieutenant Colonel Will Vaughn.

Prior to the start of serving his fellowship, Lieutenant Colonel Vaughn was assigned as chief training officer for the 97th Flying Training Squadron, an Air Force Reserve associate unit supporting the multinational Euro-NATO Joint Jet Pilot Training program at Sheppard Air Force Base in Texas. He also served on a joint, interagency and multinational staff in Jerusalem as a plans and programs officer for the United States security coordinator for Israel and the Palestinian Authority. He served on Active Duty, flying the F-16 and T-37 until 2008, where he transitioned to the Reserves, instructing in the T-37 and, most recently, the T-6.

Lieutenant Colonel Will Vaughn has effectively served the people of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I look forward to watching him do great things for America.

IT IS TIME TO LEAVE AFGHANISTAN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN) for 5 minutes.

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, the time has come for our military to leave Afghanistan. Afghan President Karzai's refusal to sign the bilateral security agreement should be the last straw in putting an end to what is becoming America's longest war.

After more than 12 years, hundreds of billions of dollars, and over 2,100 American servicemen and -women killed in combat, it is time to bring all of our troops home now. In poll after poll, the American people have made it clear that they want our troops home. Certainly, our brave men and women in uniform and their families have done everything that we have asked of them and more. We must not ask them to continue to fight, bleed, and die in Afghanistan for another 10 or 12 years to support a government more interested in extorting America and ripping off our tax dollars than working with us to strengthen its own security.

Mr. Speaker, President Obama needs to turn this interminable conflict over to the Afghans. As of yesterday, 2,153 members of our Armed Forces have died in Afghanistan since 2001; another 19,526 have been wounded; and every Member of this Chamber knows that tens of thousands of our troops have returned home with invisible wounds to their minds and spirits. Suicide rates among our veterans are among the highest ever, and they continue to climb. For many, the care required to help heal these wounds will last a lifetime.

It is estimated that health care and veteran benefits for the men and women deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan will cost trillions of dollars. In both human and fiscal terms, we simply cannot afford to waste more lives and dollars in Afghanistan.

The President has not made a case about how any number of troops remaining in Afghanistan after 2014 can improve the confidence of Afghan forces when our current greater and more intensive engagement over the past decade has not been able to do so. It is completely unclear whether the April elections will improve the Afghan Government, given its ingrown corruption, sectarian divisions, and Taliban insurgency. There are no compelling reasons to remain.

We need to turn Afghanistan over to the Afghans now, not 10 years from now. We need to bring our troops home by no later than the end of 2014, just as President Obama promised. If this is the so-called "zero option," then it is the best option. We do not need to keep another 10,000 to 12,000 American troops in Afghanistan for another 10 years at the cost of about $80 billion or more each year. They will continue to be in harm's way; they will continue to be carrying out dangerous operations; they will continue to be wounded body and soul; and they will continue to be killed.

For what? So one of the most corrupt governments in the world can continue living off of our blood and treasure? So military contractors can continue lining their pockets? We are cutting programs right and left in the budget, but we are supposed to keep pouring tens of billions of dollars into Afghanistan for another decade? All of it is borrowed money charged to our national credit card. I say enough is enough.

In June, 305 Members of this House voted in support of an amendment that I offered along with Congressmen WALTER JONES and ADAM SMITH to bring our troops home by the end of 2014 and to accelerate that process if possible. It clearly stated that if the President determined to keep U.S. troops in Afghanistan after 2014, then Congress should vote on authorizing that mission. Senators MERKLEY and LEE were ready to offer a similar amendment in the Senate when the defense bill was to be taken up over there. They had more than a dozen bipartisan cosponsors on their amendment.

Instead, the FY14 NDAA went into conference negotiations without debate by the full Senate. In those negotiations, the principal Senate conferees demanded that the House amendment be completely watered down. The conference language only requires the President to "consult" with Congress about any post-2014 deployment of troops. That is worthless. It is absolutely worthless, Mr. Speaker. We don't need consultation. What we need is a vote. I call on Speaker BOEHNER and Leader PELOSI to take seriously the call of 305 Members of this House and schedule a vote next year on keeping thousands of U.S. troops in Afghanistan. Whether or not you support such a decision, the House needs to vote on it.

It is time for us in Congress to do our job. It is time we stop asking our troops and their families to sacrifice their lives in a war that has outlived its purpose. It is time to bring our troops home. It is time to get out of Afghanistan.

THE LONG GOODBYE IN AFGHANISTAN

(By the Editorial Board)

From his first campaign for the White House, President Obama has vowed to end more than a decade of war, bring the troops home and put America on a less militaristic footing. He has reduced the forces in Afghanistan from about 100,000 in 2010 to about 47,000 today and has promised that all American and international combat forces will be out by the end of 2014.

But he has also indicated that a residual force of American troops will remain in Afghanistan to train Afghan security forces and engage in counterterrorism missions. In all this time, he has not made a clear and cogent case for any particular number of troops or explained how a residual force can improve the competency of Afghan forces when a much broader and intensive American engagement over the last decade has not.

Yet last week the Obama administration announced that it had reached an agreement with Afghanistan on a long-term bilateral security arrangement that, officials say, would allow up to 12,000 mostly American troops to be in that country until 2024 and perhaps beyond—without Mr. Obama offering any serious accounting to the American people for maintaining a sizable military commitment there or offering a clue to when, if ever, it might conclude.

The administration's focus, instead, has been on whether an Afghan tribal council and the Afghan Parliament will formally approve the pact and whether President Hamid Karzai will sign it.

Even now, key details of the security agreement are unclear. Mr. Karzai has spoken about a force of 10,000 to 15,000 American and NATO troops; President Obama has not yet announced a figure, but officials have talked of 8,000 to 12,000.

Officials have said the troops' main role will be to continue to train and assist the 350,000-member Afghan security force. The capability of the Afghan security force has improved, but it still cannot defend the country even after a $43 billion American investment in weaponry and training. Proponents of a residual force also argue that it is needed to protect Kabul, to prove that the United States is not abandoning Afghanistan and to pressure the Taliban to negotiate a political settlement, which military commanders say is the only path to stability. In addition, since Afghanistan cannot finance its security apparatus, American officials say Congress is unlikely to keep paying for the Afghan Army and police, at a cost that could range from $4 billion to $6 billion per year, unless Americans are there to verify that the money is properly spent.

The American forces are also expected to conduct counterterrorism missions when needed. The draft agreement allows United States Special Operations forces to have leeway to conduct antiterrorism raids on private Afghan homes. As Mr. Obama's letter to Mr. Karzai says, American troops will be able to carry out the raids only under "extraordinary circumstances involving urgent risk to life and limb of U.S. nationals." (Under current protocol, Afghan troops take the lead in entering homes.) The pact also gives American soldiers immunity from Afghan prosecution for actions taken in the course of their duties. The failure to reach agreement on this immunity issue blocked a long-term security deal between the United States and Iraq and led to the final withdrawal of troops there.

President Obama said in May that the United States needs to "work with the Afghan government to train security forces, and sustain a counterterrorism force, which ensures that Al Qaeda can never again establish a safe haven to launch attacks against us or our allies." Managing a productive relationship with Afghanistan has always been difficult with Mr. Karzai, who is an unpredictable, even dangerous reed on which to build a cooperative future. And it is unclear if Afghanistan, driven by corruption, sectarian divisions and the Taliban insurgency can have any better governance when elections are held next April.

Mr. Karzai's long record of duplicitous behavior is just one of the many reasons it is tempting, after a decade of war and tremendous cost in lives and money, to argue that America should just wash its hands of Afghanistan. There is something unseemly about the United States having to cajole him into a military alliance that is intended to benefit his fragile country.

Regardless of what he, the tribal council and the Afghan Parliament decide, President Obama still has to make a case for the deal to the American people.

CALL KARZAI'S BLUFF

(By John Paul Schnapper-Casteras and Lawrence Korb)

When Chuck Hagel, the U.S. secretary of defense, touched down in Afghanistan on Saturday for an unannounced visit to U.S.

troops and Afghan officials, it was telling that he had no plans to meet with Afghan President Hamid Karzai.

The snub appears deliberate; it reflects American frustration with Karzai's recent decision to place fresh obstacles in front of a stalled security pact with the United States. Among other new conditions, Karzai threatened to delay ratification until after April and demanded that Washington engage the Taliban and release certain detainees from the U.S. prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Tensions rose further after a U.S. drone strike killed civilians in Helmand province, provoking this outburst from Karzai: "For as long as such arbitrary acts and oppression of foreign forces continue, the security agreement with the United States will not be signed."

It's time to play hardball. If Washington has any chance of de-escalating the situation, it should look to the lessons of negotiating a similar agreement in Iraq and prepare in earnest for the "zero option" leaving no troops in Afghanistan after 2014. Hagel's visit, unfortunately, has the potential to reinforce two unhealthy facets of Karzai's thinking: bolstering his fears that the United States seeks to undermine Afghan sovereignty, and underscoring his belief that he—and Afghanistan—occupies a place of strategic preeminence in American policymakers' minds.

The lessons from Baghdad are instructive. Soon after the Iraq invasion, Washington tried to negotiate a comparable accord, known as a Status of Forces Agreement, that authorized the presence of troops and defined their status and role. But interim Iraqi leaders recoiled, citing sovereignty and legitimacy concerns. Instead, coalition officials summarily granted themselves de facto SOFA rights—a provisional measure that actually lasted for years and caused major blowback after contractors killed civilians and were subsequently shielded from prosecution. When SOFA talks reopened in 2008, they were so contentious and destabilizing that some policymakers murmured about "replacing" Iraq's Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki. In late 2008, the George W. Bush administration eventually secured a three-year deal after substantial compromises: Troops would withdraw first from cities and then Iraq entirely, and would nominally be subject to shared jurisdiction. As that agreement neared its conclusion, the Obama administration put forward another SOFA that would have authorized a residual U.S. military presence past 2012. But the negotiations were profoundly divisive, and the Obama administration eventually gave up and proceeded with a complete withdrawal.

Afghanistan bears striking similarities. Interim Afghan officials one agreed to a de facto SOFA via a two-page diplomatic "note." In 2005, Karzai planned to offer a full-fledged agreement—but after a 2008 airstrike caused numerous civilian casualties, he insisted on a reassessment of foreign forces and a SOFA similar to Iraq's. By 2012, Washington and Kabul had hammered out some high-level goals and reopened SOFA talks, but controversy quickly ensued, particularly surrounding issues of jurisdiction, village/night raids and security guarantees. After months of negotiations and a personal intervention by Secretary of State John Kerry last month, it appeared that a deal was finally done. Karzai convened a loya jirga of 2,500 tribal elders to vote on the SOFA, which somewhat unexpectedly approved it. But then Karzai added new conditions and re-escalated his rhetoric.

There's little mystery here: Karzai has taken a page out of Maliki's playbook. His move holds three lessons for Washington:

The zero option is real. Karzai apparently dismisses the seriousness of a full U.S. withdrawal, recently smirking at the prospect. Washington should now prepare for this option in earnest—both to call Karzai's bluff and also because it increasingly appears to be the only feasible course. The White House should immediately ask the Pentagon to update its plans, particularly since some officials there have anonymously disavowed the practicality of the zero option. Washington should also begin negotiating expanded access rights in neighboring countries and consider reallocating naval assets in the area to facilitate and compensate for withdrawal of ground forces.

All politics is local. Analysts are widely baffled about what now motivates Karzai—perhaps some combination of political and legacy concerns, with a dash of the paranoid and erratic. But if anything will sway Karzai, it is likely domestic political pressure. In Iraq, several spoilers lined up—against the SOFA. Afghanistan is different. Outside of the Taliban, the SOFA enjoys much greater local support—including among elders and members of Karzai's Cabinet, some of whom publicly disagree with his latest demands and have threatened to quit. Washington should stay closely attuned to local political movements and work all back channels to build and amplify support for the SOFA in the coming weeks.

Look for a face-saving resolution. Karzai clearly cares deeply about the SOFA, however misplaced his actions, so providing him a graceful means of de-escalation is important. While some policymakers have staunchly insisted that Karzai must sign the accord, sheer adamancy failed in the final days of Iraq's SOFA. Indeed, if Karzai is seeking to prove his independence from Washington, then publicly insisting that he obey U.S. diktats is not necessarily helpful. It would be better to look for a few relatively harmless concessions to offer Karzai, or frame discussions so as to allow him to fall back upon the loya jirga's decision.

But ultimately, the United States needs to be ready to walk away. The aim of U.S. policy is not to keep troops in Afghanistan indefinitely—the goal is to cooperate on security in mutually beneficial and comparatively modest ways, and that can be done without boots on the ground. If Karzai is unwilling to accept reasonable terms that his own negotiators and loya jirga have approved, then the United States should prepare to protect its interests through other means. At this point, the zero option is entirely realistic and might even yield more favorable negotiating terms with Karzai's successor.

BENGHAZI

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF) for 5 minutes.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, yesterday marked the 15-month anniversary of the Benghazi attack. Once again, another anniversary has come and gone with no new answers about what happened that night or just what so many Americans, reportedly around two dozen, were doing at a secret CIA base in Benghazi to begin with.

Another anniversary has come and gone with no new public hearings. By my count, the last public hearing was held on September 18, nearly 3 months ago, and no new public hearings are being held. The keyword is "public."

But perhaps most important, another anniversary has come and gone with absolutely no one being held responsible for the security and intelligence failures leading up to the attack, and no one has been brought to justice. And despite several recent developments related to the Benghazi investigation, practically nothing has been done in Congress to address them.

First, we have recently learned that CIA Director John Brennan distorted the facts in letters to the House Intelligence Committee and me when he claimed that Benghazi survivors were not made to sign new nondisclosure agreements.

Another major development is a November 24 article published by Breitbart reporting surprising new comments by Kevin Kolbye, the FBI's lead investigator for Benghazi, who stated for the first time that the FBI arrived on the scene in Benghazi within days, not weeks, of the attack. According to the article by Kerry Pickett:

The Washington Post reported that while the FBI had legats in Algiers and Cairo, a team of FBI investigators could not get into Benghazi 2 days after the attack. Kolbye disputes this. "We were there," he said.

Is Agent Kolbye correct? Was the FBI secretly on the ground in Benghazi within days of the attack? If so, why is this being kept from the public? Once again, the Congress should know and, to my knowledge, has never asked Agent Kolbye to testify.

Equally important, why is it that we are learning additional comments before a paid audience of $400 a ticket? You had to pay $400 to hear this guy speak, but he has never spoken for free to the American people. This is just like when the American people heard new information about that night from retired General Ham when he appeared at a big-ticket event in Aspen. The American people did not hear. If you paid the money in Aspen, you got to hear. I guess there was no need to tell the Congress and the public what happened that night since paid audiences will hear through conferences, through books, and maybe even a movie.

Finally, I return to my concerns first raised on the House floor in July that the large CIA base in Benghazi may have been used to support covert operations with regard to Syria, including the possible transfer of weapons collected in Libya to Syrian rebels, possibly in coordination with third parties of foreign countries, particularly Saudi Arabia.

These concerns need to be addressed now more than ever after reports yesterday that both the U.S. and the United Kingdom have cut off support to rebels in northern Syria along the Turkish border after the Islamic front, a coalition of jihadi extremist fighters, overran bases run by the Free Syrian Army and seized their weapons and resources. According to a report from the BBC yesterday, the U.S. and European countries have reportedly facilitated secret arms shipments to Syrian rebels, allegedly including anti-aircraft weapons commonly referred to as "MANPADS," just like the weapons collected in Libya over the last 2 years.

A separate Washington Post article stated:

A covert CIA program providing lethal aid to the rebels, consisting mostly of small arms and ammunition channeled to southern Syria through Jordan, would continue unchanged.

It is particularly noteworthy that during the same period of time the CIA was operating in Benghazi and U.S. weapons collection in Libya were underway, respected national security reporter Mark Hosenball wrote August 1, 2012:

President Obama has signed a secret order authorizing U.S. support for rebels seeking to depose Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and his government, U.S. sources familiar with the matter said. Obama's order, approved earlier this year and known as an intelligence "finding," broadly permits the CIA and other U.S. agencies to provide support that could help the rebels oust Assad.

Hosenball continued:

A U.S. Government source acknowledged that under provisions of the Presidential finding, the United States was collaborating with a secret command center operated by Turkey and its allies. NBC said the shoulder-fired missiles, also known as MANPADS, had been delivered to the rebels via Turkey.

Are these the same secret arms shipments that were just seized by the Islamic extremists in northern Syria? Have these weapons, transferred with alleged U.S. covert support, been used to kill innocent civilians, Christians, and Muslims? Don't the American people have a right to know if their tax dollars are being spent to supply Islamic extremists with weapons to use against Christians and Muslims? We need a select committee. The current process is not working.

It is time for the administration and the Congress to say what the CIA was doing in Benghazi and elsewhere around Syria.

A Wall Street Journal article from August detailed just how closely Saudi Arabia was working with the CIA to train and arm Syrian rebels, despite some concerns that the weapons could fall in the hands of the extremists.

It appears those concerns are coming true, but the American people still aren't being told the truth about the U.S. role in arming the Syrians and the role of the CIA base in Benghazi. It's time for answers.

It's time for a select committee on Benghazi.

DO-NOTHING CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KILDEE) for 5 minutes.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, this Republican-controlled Congress has been one of the least productive Congresses in modern times. Recently, the Speaker of the House actually said, "We've done our work." This year we passed only 56 bills. That is sad and that is wrong. And this month, we are in session here on this floor for only 8 days.

Important issues continue to pile up, unresolved and unanswered. And yet tomorrow, we are getting ready to leave for the rest of the year, even as the Senate will continue to work on behalf of the American people. The list of what we have not done is much longer than what we have passed. We need to stay here and get the work of the American people done.

We haven't taken up a jobs and infrastructure bill. We could do that next week.

We have not passed a long-term budget deal that tackles the big issues that we face.

We have not voted on comprehensive immigration reform, despite the fact that a majority would support immigration reform. All we need to do is bring it to the floor. We could do that next week.

We haven't done our work to extend unemployment compensation for 1.3 million Americans who will lose their benefits on December 28, yet we are going to leave this body having failed to act to protect the livelihood of 1.3 million Americans. That is just wrong.

We haven't considered raising the minimum wage, despite the economic boon that it would be to give millions of working class people more purchasing power, supporting business, and supporting economic growth.

And we have a bipartisan farm bill. Sure it has got some problems. I don't know how everybody would vote on it, but it ought to come to the floor of the House for a "yes" or "no" vote. We could do that next week.

The list goes on. Unfortunately, it is completely fair to characterize this Republican-led House as a do-nothing Congress. Sometimes, though, it seems as though the things we have actually done have only made things worse.

In March, we allowed the harmful across-the-board sequester cuts to go into effect. Nobody here tried to stop them. On our side, we tried to stop them. Nobody did anything on the other side. Those draconian cuts went into effect, slowed economic growth, and cost hundreds of thousands of Americans their jobs.

In October, the gridlock and dysfunction shut down the Federal Government for 2 weeks—the first such shutdown in two decades. That cost this economy $24 billion. We can't let that happen in the future.

I am only a freshman, just finishing my first year in Congress, but I can tell you one thing I know: this is no way to run this government. We have got to get back to legislating, doing the work of the American people, the way the Framers of this government intended it to be done.

□ 1030

We can just kind of go back. Some of you might remember "Schoolhouse Rock," how a bill becomes a law. The House passes a bill, the Senate does its work, passes a bill, we go to conference, we work out the differences, and send that on to the President for his signature or for a veto. That is the way we legislate.

Yet, we continue to lurch from crisis to crisis and not let the will of the American people be manifest in the laws that we write. My constituents, and all Americans, deserve a Congress that is serious about the work of the American people and ready to get to work to grow our economy, to support manufacturing, to strengthen the middle class.

I am ready to work in a bipartisan fashion. I think most of us are here to take on these big problems that our country faces. Now is not the time for more dithering or delay. Now is certainly not the time for a vacation.

Look, I would love to be able to go home and spend the next couple of weeks with my family. You know, we spend a lot of time away from home. But the folks that we represent expect us to get our work done.

So I, Mr. Speaker, am one who is willing to just stay here. Let's come back to work on Monday, and let's stay here until we get this important work done.

Let's take the Make It In America agenda to support American manufacturing; let's bring it to the floor. You don't want to vote for it, don't vote for it. But we ought to consider these important pieces of legislation that are important to our economy and not leave town without taking up the important work that we are charged with doing.

I represent Flint, Saginaw, Bay City, older industrial cities that helped build the manufacturing base of our economy. They depend on the Congress to do the work that we were sent here to do. We shouldn't go home. We should stay here and finish our work.

IRAN NEGOTIATIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. ELLISON) for 5 minutes.

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Speaker, for 34 years, the United States and Iran have had no diplomatic relations. Iran has escalated its nuclear weapons program and hostile rhetoric.

The United States has upped sanctions and threats of military force. There can be little doubt that, when our diplomats and politicians say all options are on the table, we mean military force.

And yet, today, under the leadership of President Obama, we have an opportunity to change all that, to avoid the prospect of war or a nuclear-armed Iran. We have a chance to set a new course, a new path. Instead of the collision course, we have an off-ramp, an off-ramp to peace, diplomacy and international cooperation; and we must take it.

This is our best opportunity in 30 years to advance the interests of the United States vis-à-vis Iran. It is our best chance to make sure that the Middle East is as free and safe as possible of nuclear weapons.

The Iranian people defied the odds and elected a moderate President, Hassan Rouhani. President Rouhani has condemned the inflammatory rhetoric of Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. He has promised to improve Iran's relationship to the West.

Now, instead of moving forward toward the brink of war, the United States and Iran are negotiating, talking; and this is a good thing. This is the way countries should pursue their interests. This is the way to avoid war.

Through diplomacy, the United States and its allies have frozen Iran's nuclear program for the first time in more than a decade. The agreement imposes daily inspections to ensure Iran will not develop a nuclear weapon, and Iran has made agreements to move this process forward.

Ending our decades-long cold war with Iran isn't going to happen overnight; but through robust, sustained diplomacy, we may prevent an Iranian nuclear weapon and disastrous war and spare thousands of our children and theirs from a horrible situation.

We cannot achieve these goals if Congress undermines these negotiations, and I have supported sanctions in the past. In fact, I have a very good friend and constituent who is in the Chamber today who has supported sanctions. She was born and raised in Iran, is very concerned about the human rights situation there, and has informed me over the years about the best position that I might take. And she also says now is not the time to hit the accelerator; it is the time to let diplomacy work.

These sanctions would undermine the confidence of our international partners, including the P5+1. China, Russia, the United States, Germany, and France are all part of this negotiation with Iran. And if we up sanctions while we have claimed that we want to work with them to have a reduction in nuclear weaponry in Iran, they may well see this as a break and a breach of faith with them, which could set us all back.

It has not been easy to get Iran, Russia, and China to the table. We have them there. Let's not lose this chance.

New sanctions stand to kill any hope for diplomacy. Iran's Foreign Minister, Javad Zarif, has said that if Congress imposes new sanctions, "the entire deal is dead."

Is that what we want?

New sanctions will not increase our negotiating power. If they would, the White House certainly would have told us so. In fact, the White House has warned that new sanctions will undermine negotiations.

Negotiations over the next 6 months are the only way to guarantee that Iran will not develop a nuclear weapon and will set itself on a path to rejoin the world of nations. And this could well improve the human rights situation in Iran, as it has no justification for the police state which denies human rights.

Congress should give diplomats space to do their jobs. Undercutting diplomacy with new sanctions would put our country on the path to war.

The choice is clear. We can try to negotiate a deal that prevents an Iranian nuclear weapon and avoids a nuclear conflict, or we can dismiss this opportunity, pile on more sanctions, derail diplomacy, and continue toward war.

Americans don't want another war. The best way to honor our men and women in uniform is to avoid unnecessary war. My son is Active Duty military. I am speaking from a personal place as well.

Americans support a negotiated deal with Iran by a 2-1 ratio; 68 percent say Congress should not take action that would block an agreement.

Passing any punitive measures, including a sense of Congress tying the President's hands, is a mistake. It will not help; and if Congress wants to help, we should set up a people-to-people exchange. We should set up a Congress-to-Congress exchange and move forward.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Members are reminded not to make reference to occupants of the gallery.

The Chair will remind all persons in the gallery that they are here as guests of the House and that any manifestation of approval or disapproval of the proceedings is in violation of the rules of House.

THE HELPING FAMILIES IN MENTAL HEALTH CRISIS ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURPHY) for 5 minutes.

Mr. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, in a couple of days we will have a moment of silence in respect and memory of the victims of Sandy Hook Elementary. We need to take those moments to pause, reflect, and pray.

However, afterwards, we cannot be silent on the need to get something done, on the need to pass comprehensive and meaningful legislation, and the need to help the mentally ill.

Has the world changed since Newtown and the other tragedies?

Sadly, little has been done to get those who need help the help they need. In the past few decades, this Nation has moved forward in knowledge of what it takes to help, but has moved backward in getting the help done. And where there is no help, there is no hope.

We have fewer psychiatric hospital beds, fewer outpatient treatment options, restrictions on the use of medications that can and do help those who are mentally ill, too few psychiatrists and psychologists and clinical social workers, especially child and adolescent specialists, and especially ones who are trained and specialize in treating the seriously mentally ill.

We have too many barriers that prevent doctors from communicating with parents of the sons and daughters with persistent serious mental illness.

We have Federal barriers that block treatment, Federal dollars that go to grants for programs that do not work. The National Institute of Mental Health has insufficient money to engage in needed research.

First responders who are called to deal with mental health crises have little or no training on what to do, and they miss critically important actions.

Treatment delayed is treatment denied; and where there is no help, there is no hope.

Today, I am introducing the Helping Families in Mental Health Crisis Act. It increases access to trained professionals at community health centers and community mental health centers, and refocuses the government spending on programs that work and gets to the people that need it in communities and not remain in bureaucracies.

It reforms government spending to eliminate redundancy and waste and refocuses us on getting evidence-based help. It brings scientific objectivity to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration.

It opens up the door of communication between doctors and parents and legal guardians of those with mental illness. It increases inpatient treatment options and availability. No more being told that there are no more beds. Take your son or daughter home, no matter how much they are at risk of hurting you or themselves.

It increases outpatient treatment options. It increases pharmaceutical treatment options. It reduces the warehousing of our persistently and seriously mentally ill in jails or homelessness.

It improves communication between primary care providers, psychiatrists, psychologists, and licensed mental health practitioners. It increases mental health courts. It provides training for first responders, and it gathers essential and critically important information on the relationship between mental illness and violence and victimization.

Bottom line: if we want to change these trends in victimization of the mentally ill and the persistently mentally ill; if we want to reduce the high number of suicides, homicide and assaults; if we want to get people treatment, not jail time, and not abandonment; if we want to help the tens of millions of people with mental illness and the hundreds of millions of friends and relatives who are emotionally and financially strained by the untreated problems of mental illness; if we want to prevent the Newtowns, Tucsons, Auroras, Pittsburghs, and Columbines, we have to do something comprehensive, research based, and we have to do it now.

What we need is not only for Congress to act, but during these next few weeks, while Congressmen and -women are back home, we need to hear from every doctor and first responder and teacher and parent and patient and consumer that we must act thoroughly and thoughtfully and must act now.

Those who need the help the most have the most trouble getting the help they need, and where there is no help there is no hope. We can and must and we will take mental illness out of the shadows of ignorance, despair, and neglect, and into that bright light of hope.

So I ask my colleagues to support this bill, the Helping Families and Mental Health Crisis Act, because treatment and action delayed is treatment denied.

Let us help American families get the help they need because where there is no help, there is no hope.

THE MOST UNACCOMPLISHED CONGRESS IN THE HISTORY OF THIS COUNTRY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. NOLAN) for 5 minutes.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, Members of the House, we are in the closing hours of the first year of the 113th Congress, and the pundits who examine Congresses past and present have concluded that this is the most unaccomplished Congress in the history of the country.

We have passed a total of 56 bills here in this Congress. The fact is, we have taken 239 days off, and we have worked 133 days. And let's be honest with ourselves here: those 133 days often included a Monday or a Tuesday where we came in at 6:30 in the evening and took a handful of votes on some non-controversial issues. Where most of us come from, that is not a day's work.

And by the same token, more often than not, we left on a Thursday or a Friday, somewhere after taking a few votes that morning, and then heading back to wherever we were headed.

Back in 1948, Harry Truman got elected President of the United States by campaigning against the do-nothing 80th Congress in 1948. Well, guess what, that Congress passed over 900 bills. And we are looking at 56 here at the halfway mark?

I cannot begin to imagine how history is going to evaluate this Congress. The Wall Street Journal said:

This Congress is long on partisanship, in-decision, and brinksmanship.

Others have constantly referred to the fact that most of what is done here and considered here in the past year has been political posturing in preparation for the next election.

□ 1045

To be fair, we have accomplished some things here: the middle-class tax cut, Hurricane Sandy relief, the Violence Against Women Act. We passed a couple of appropriations bills, and we may be on the brink here of actually passing a budget bill, which would be most important and quite an accomplishment. Not to mention, we formally recognized Soap Box Derby Day, and we have made it possible for hunters to buy their duck stamps online.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is that we are not getting the job done. And the fact also remains that, in this country, the rich are getting richer, the poor are getting poorer, and the middle class in this country is getting crushed. We are looking at large deficits and broken priorities and a broken government, and we are not addressing those issues of our time.

I did a little research. I have the unique perspective of having served some 32 years ago, and at that time we had between 7,000 and 8,000 subcommittee, full committee, conference committee hearings, markups, and meetings. This Congress, by contrast, has had 500, and most of those were procedural and Rules Committee meetings.

The Speaker himself said that we need to return to regular order in this country if we are going to get things done. "Regular order," for those who don't know, means going to work 5 days a week, like everybody else in America. It means working full days. It means fully engaging the subcommittees and full committees and all the Members of the Congress, because when we do that, that is when we get things done. When we sit down and we have open, bipartisan discussions, everybody gets their amendment, everybody gets an opportunity to exhaust all the arguments, everybody gets a vote. That is how people come together. That is how you get things done. That is how you fix things, and that is the way the Congress operated for several hundred years. That is not the way it is operating today.

Mr. Speaker, my fellow colleagues, if we are going to get things done and reverse the terrible reputation of this Congress, I implore the Speaker and the leadership and all of the Members to demand that, starting in January of next year, we restore regular order, we go to work 5 days a week, and we employ the subcommittee and the full committee process that has worked so well for so many hundreds of years in this country, because that is how we get things done. That is how we fix things here in this country. That is how we get our economy back on a pro-growth trajectory, and that is how we restore the people's confidence in what is now a broken government and a broken Congress.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until noon today.

Accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 47 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess.

□ 1200

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at noon.

PRAYER

Reverend Dr. John Loudon, First Presbyterian Church, Lakeland, Florida, offered the following prayer:

Lord, we acknowledge our need for divine guidance and confess we are imperfect people in need of Your forgiveness.

We give thanks that You are not only a God of righteousness, but also a God of compassion and offer us mercy.

Empower us to live in such a way that we strive for balance in our lives and seek to exhibit conviction as well as grace.

May we make our own an old prayer offered daily by Harry Truman:

Everlasting God, help me to be, to think, and to act what is right, because it is right. Make me truthful, honest, and honorable in all things. Make me intellectually honest for the sake of right and honor and without thought of reward for me. Give me the ability to be charitable, forgiving, and patient with others, and help me understand their motives and their shortcomings even as You understand mine.

Amen and amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. PRICE) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

WELCOMING REVEREND DR. JOHN LOUDON

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. ROSS) is recognized for 1 minute.

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in gratitude that my good friend Pastor Mike Loudon from my home church in Lakeland, Florida, could give the opening prayer in the United States House of Representatives.

Pastor Mike, as he is known back home, and his wife, Joyce, have lived a life of dedication to their faith and their family. Pastor Mike's ministry serves as an inspiration to everyone. Truly, he is a great man with a legacy of what counts in life and the life hereafter.

Pastor Mike is a pillar in the Lakeland and Polk County communities. He is active in Rotary Club and is a strong leader, a man of God, and has a fantastic sense of humor.

Pastor Mike has served churches across the country prior to coming to First Presbyterian Church in Lakeland in 1999. His messages are uplifting, encouraging, and always resonate with me. I am honored to have him as my pastor and as my friend.

I join countless others in expressing a deep thankfulness for his willing spirit to serve and the privilege of having him give the opening prayer today.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COLINS of New York). The Chair will entertain up to 15 further requests for 1-minute speeches on each side of the aisle.

OBAMACARE ADS

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, we all know that this administration is desperate to enroll young, healthy Americans in the new exchange plans, and the recent ad campaign from ProgressNow Colorado shows just how low some groups are willing to go to catch young people's attention. The ads depict young men drinking right out of kegs of beer and objectifying young women. They try to encourage people to sign up for health care by making light of unhealthy behaviors.

I recently received a letter from Dr. Julie Welch, an emergency room physician in Indianapolis, specifically concerned about how the ads promoted risky sexual behavior. The Let's Get Physical ad depicts a young woman thanking ObamaCare, with the words:

Oh my God, he's hot. Let's hope he is as easy to get as this birth control. My health insurance covers the pill, which means all I have to worry about is getting him between the covers. I got insurance. Now you can too. Thanks ObamaCare.

Dr. Welch writes:

As a taxpayer, I am puzzled at why advertising campaigns for health insurance appear to promote high-risk behaviors?

Promoting health coverage by condoning binge drinking and promiscuity is not a step towards a healthier America. It is just another way that ObamaCare just doesn't work.

NO NUCLEAR WEAPONS IN IRAN

(Mr. WELCH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, one of the most important challenges that this country faces with allies is to make certain Iran does not have a nuclear weapon. For that reason, I, along with virtually all of my colleagues, voted for tough, enforceable sanctions.

There is a question now in this House about whether Congress should present yet another resolution on Iran. There are two questions that raises. Number one, do we send a message to the world that Congress is not on the same page as our President and Secretary of State in their absolute determination to rid Iran of a nuclear capability? Number two, do we send a message to our allies in the P5+1, that include Russia and China, not exactly our best of friends, but our reluctant allies who we need to guarantee that the tough sanctions that we impose are enforceable?

If we pass sanctions that don't have the cooperation of our allies, they are meaningless. So the question that we have is: Any action that we take, will it increase or diminish our strength in guaranteeing no nuclear weapons in Iran?

DMF INCLUDED IN BUDGET AGREEMENT

(Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, for the last 30 years, Social Security has been required to make deceased Americans' Social Security numbers and other personal information public through the so-called "Death Master File." Unfortunately, identity thieves have been using this file to obtain fraudulent tax refunds based on the identity of deceased Americans, particularly children like 4-year-old Alexis Agin here. No grieving family should have to go through this.

To put a stop to this heinous crime, earlier this year, I introduced the Alexis Agin Identity Theft Protection Act with my Democrat colleague XAVIER BECERRA. And thanks to the budget deal, which includes a provision to restrict access to the Death Master File, American families will be better protected from tax fraud.

I salute the Agins for their tireless advocacy, and God bless America.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE EXTENSION

(Mr. PAYNE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of over 90,000 unemployed New Jerseyans at the risk of losing their unemployment benefits on December 28 if Congress fails to act before the end of the year.

Despite what my colleagues on the other side think, unemployment insurance helps during hard times, and people forget that we are still recovering from the worst recession since the Great Depression.

Patrick, a carpenter from Rahway, New Jersey, struggles to find employment through no fault of his own. His family will not be able to afford their mortgage if this critical lifeline is cut.

Malene from Maplewood, New Jersey, is an educated professional, but has been unable to find work since February. In her letter, she wrote:

When do my elected officials start caring for me and the millions of other people struggling to survive—not living, but scraping by?

Vote to extend the unemployment benefits which equate to hope for many families in the new year. I urge the House leadership to address this looming expiration of the unemployment benefits for millions of Americans before leaving this year.

YEAR IN REVIEW

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, during last night's town hall by telephone with constituents, I conducted a poll and asked what should be done first to tackle our national debt. Fifty-one percent of participants want Congress to repeal ObamaCare. ObamaCare will add to our national debt as higher premiums and taxes are placing burdens on families and destroying jobs.

Rachel from West Columbia says:

ObamaCare is still very costly for me and my family. At times we have difficulty purchasing food for our family because of my insurance costs.

Robert from Aiken spent time on the Web site and found he "would be paying about two-thirds more for a much worse insurance plan."

2013 should be remembered as the year further revealing the failure and threat of Big Government, with the ObamaCare train wreck, continuing of the Benghazi cover-up, IRS targeting, NSA spying, and DOJ-FBI eavesdropping on media. Congress should act, passing limited government reforms that encourage job creation and expand freedom.

In conclusion, God bless our troops, and we will never forget September the 11th in the global war on terrorism.

FISHER HOUSE HERO MILES PROGRAM

(Mr. BARROW of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BARROW of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, this time of year, as we gather with family and friends, it is important for us to remember the men and women in the military who sacrifice so much for our country. Those who have been injured in battle oftentimes find themselves a long way from home during the holidays.

This year, like every year, I am donating the over 68,000 frequent flyer miles that I received from congressional travel to the Fisher House Hero Miles program, which provides free airline tickets so that American soldiers and their families can be together.

The Fisher House has provided more than 40,000 flights worth some $63 million to wounded troops and their families. We have got no business keeping these frequent flyer miles for personal use anyhow, and I don't know of anyone who could make better use of them.

I encourage all Members of Congress to follow my example and give their frequent flyer miles to some charity like the Fisher House. It is not just a good thing to do; it is the right thing to do.

MAGNESS LIBRARY

(Mr. DESJARLAIS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DESJARLAIS. Mr. Speaker, I stand before you today to commend Magness Library on its 100 years of service to the people of McMinnville in the Fourth District of Tennessee.

Magness Library began as a service project in July 1913 by Mrs. Mary Cunningham and the McMinnville Women's Civic League, with benefactors Colonel Gentry Moffitt and W.H. Magness, to provide a rest stop for families coming into town to sell and trade. In 1917, the library moved to its current location on the corner of Chancery and Main Street, and in 1946, Magness Library joined the Tennessee State Library and Archives.

Thanks to generous donations from thousands of patrons, the Magness Library flourished into one of the longest running libraries in our State over the years. The library provides invaluable services to McMinnville, including a strong summer reading program for children and genealogy research for adults.

Congratulations to the Magness Library on their centennial, and I look forward to seeing their successful future endeavors.

IRAN INTERIM NUCLEAR AGREEMENT

(Mr. PRICE of North Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, if the interim nuclear deal negotiated last month leads to a final agreement, Iran can be prevented from developing a nuclear weapon. This would neutralize one of the greatest threats facing the United States, Israel, and the international community and could set the stage for a new era of relations between Iran and the West.

The unprecedented sanctions already in place have brought the Iranian economy to its knees and the government to the negotiating table. We are entering these talks from a position of strength; we have a strong hand to play.

But if Congress rushes through another round of sanctions or takes other action perceived as undermining the negotiations, we will be giving up our hand before we have a chance to play it. Iran would then have an excuse to walk away from the table, and the international coalition that has been so critical to the current sanctions regime could fracture, thus weakening the leverage we already have.

There is no guarantee that a final deal is possible. But given the stakes involved, we simply must try, for the alternative is far worse. Iran would then be left to develop its nuclear program without supervision, and the U.S. could be drawn into another costly war in the Middle East.

I urge my colleagues to support the interim nuclear agreement and oppose any attempt to undermine our country's diplomacy.

TRANSITIONAL ASSISTANCE MANAGEMENT PROGRAM

(Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, each year, Congress deliberately acts to craft, pass, and sign into law the National Defense Authorization Act, the annual policy bill for the U.S. Department of Defense.

For the first time in 52 years, this may no longer be the case. This year, the House passed its version in June, while the Senate, again, dragged its feet.

Fortunately, earlier this week, congressional leaders reached a compromise that will allow both Chambers to move forward. It includes an important amendment I offered accepted under the House version dealing with the Transitional Assistance Management Program, or TAMP, which offers health care coverage for servicemembers transitioning into civilian life.

All too often, symptoms related to post-traumatic stress do not appear until 8 to 10 months after deployment. The amendment will extend coverage under TAMP by 180 days for all services rendered through telemedicine, which is critical, especially for those coping with mental injuries.

As a father of an Active Duty soldier, I am hopeful we can bring this bill to the finish line and make good on our commitments to our troops and continue meeting our obligations around the world.

COMMEMORATING HUMAN RIGHTS DAY

(Mr. CICILLINE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. CICILLINE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate Human Rights Day, an occasion to recognize the struggles of individuals all around the world who fight for their basic rights of life, liberty, and security of person.

On March 2, 2011, Jean-Claude Roger Mbende of Cameroon was arrested for, "homosexuality and attempted homosexuality" and sentenced to 3 years' imprisonment.

Jean-Claude is one of the individual cases of the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission's Defending Freedoms Project, which seeks to have Members of Congress adopt the case of an individual like Jean-Claude and work for their rights and freedom.

Sadly, cases such as these are far too common in areas of the world where people can be imprisoned for simply exercising their basic human rights.

I call upon the Cameroonian authorities to live up to their obligation to respect and protect the rights of Jean-Claude Mbende and all Cameroonians.

I pledge to continue to follow his story and do what I can to secure his safety. I hope my colleagues will join me in taking up cases from the Defending Freedoms Project, and that, together, we can ensure justice for wrongly imprisoned individuals all across the world.

THE EMAIL PRIVACY ACT

(Mr. YODER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. YODER. Mr. Speaker, the number of Americans who support updating our electronic communication privacy laws is growing every day. Just today, The Washington Post reported that over 100,000 Americans have signed a petition asking President Obama to support changes in the 27-year-old privacy law called the Electronic Communications Privacy Act that currently allows government agents to search Americans' private emails without a warrant.

The Constitution prohibits government from searching postal mail without a warrant. It defies common sense that emails should have any less protection.

Our existing laws were written before Facebook and Google even existed. Still think how far we have come in regard to Internet technology. It is time to update these laws.

The American people are shocked when they learn that their emails do not have the same privacy protections as their mail and other documents in their homes. That is why I introduced H.R. 1852, the Email Privacy Act, a bipartisan bill to affirm that Americans have a reasonable expectation of privacy in their emails.

Mr. Speaker, it is time Congress and the President worked together to update our email privacy laws. I urge the House to pass this needed legislation.

EXTEND UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

(Ms. CHU asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. CHU. Mr. Speaker, over the next few weeks, the American people will be celebrating the warmth of the holidays with friends and family alike.

But for nearly 1.3 million people, the situation will be desperate. The pains of long-term unemployment will be compounded as their benefits totally run out on December 28.

These people have struggled for months on end to find work after losing a job. They include thousands of veterans who recently completed their military service, and they include families who need unemployment benefits to clothe their children and put food on the table.

It is unconscionable that this budget deal does not protect these vulnerable families who had no part in causing the recession that put them in such dire circumstances.

As we go into this holiday season, let us help those in greatest need. Extend unemployment benefits.

CONGRATULATING THE DESALES COLTS, KENTUCKY'S 2013 CLASS 2A HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL CHAMPIONS

(Mr. YARMUTH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. YARMUTH. Mr. Speaker, last weekend in Louisville, the world-famous Twin Spires of Churchill Downs glowed orange in support of something the hallowed track knows well, a champion.

The DeSales High School Colts of Louisville's South End entered the State championship on a streak of dominance, posting six shutouts, and holding opponents to just 9.4 points per game. When they lined up against Newport Central Catholic to play for the title on Saturday, the DeSales defense hadn't allowed a point in 2 weeks.

Fueled by three touchdowns from all-time leading rusher Dylan Byrd, two passing scores from quarterback Nathan Roush, and a defense anchored by middle linebacker Matt Bouchard, the Colts overcame a tough opponent 34-26, taking State for the first time in school history.

The title caps a remarkable 14-1 season for the Colts, who became only the second South End team ever to win State.

For DeSales Head Coach Harold Davis, the title run offered a nice symmetry. Davis was a senior safety on the 1981 DeSales team, one of only two others in school history to play in the finals.

The debate over the best Colts team in school history will continue back home, but there is no question this year's team now stands at the top. They might have been outsized through much of the playoffs, but they were never outmatched or outplayed.

Mr. Speaker, today I am proud to join all of Louisville in honoring the DeSales Colts, Kentucky's 2013 Class 2A High School football champions. Go Colts.

A UNIQUE MOMENT IN HISTORY

(Mr. BLUMENAUER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, it appears as though the rumored sanctions legislation dealing with Iran may not reach the floor this week. This would be good news.

It is imperative that we take this optimistic development that gives us a chance for a diplomatic resolution of the differences with Iran and prevent them from developing nuclear weapons to come to fruition. We must not give excuses to Iranian hardliners who hate America a reason to walk away. We don't want to confuse our allies, who we rely upon to make sanctions work, about our intentions.

It is imperative that we move forward aggressively, thoughtfully, to make the most out of this 6 months, using diplomacy to make sure that the majority of Iranians who recently voted for a change in direction with a relative moderate as President are reinforced.

This is a unique moment in history. I am pleased that it looks like the House might not screw it up.

CONTINUE FUNDING HEALTH AND SCIENCE RESEARCH

(Mr. MCNERNEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MCNERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to highlight a recent discovery by researchers at the University of California at Davis. Earlier this month, Professor Peter Armstrong, a professor at the university, published a new role for blood clots, absorbing bodily toxins.

Blood clots are known to be critical in protecting wounds by stopping blood flow and preventing contaminants from entering the body. Dr. Armstrong and his colleagues, knowing that lipopolysaccharide, a toxin in the body, is released during septic shock, demonstrated that this toxin is absorbed by blood clots inhibiting it from circulating within the body.

This study, funded by the National Science Foundation, brings us one step closer to understanding the human body and improving medical care. We must continue funding science and health research projects, as the next great discovery just may save your life.

DIPLOMACY WITH IRAN

(Mr. DOGGETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, as a Member who has consistently voted to impose sanctions on Iran, I commend Secretaries Kerry and Sherman for an excellent job in seeking to safeguard our families through tough, persistent diplomacy with Iran. We should fully support their vital efforts.

Iranian hardliners may ultimately obstruct a meaningful, permanent agreement; but we should not give them a pretext for doing so. Those here who would interfere or limit these negotiations are really offering the American people only one alternative; it is called war. We have been there and done that before.

Military action in Iraq cost us very dearly. It did not make us safer. Let's not repeat this deadly mistake.

While difficult and uncertain, diplomacy is already eliminating chemical weapons from Syria. It represents our best hope to prevent nuclear weapons in Iran and assure the safety of our families and others around the world.

HONORING THE LIFE AND SERVICE OF JUSTICE JOHN GABBERT

(Mr. TAKANO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TAKANO. Mr. Speaker, it is with great sadness that I observe the passing of Justice John Gabbert, who died Monday at the age of 104. A long-time Riverside resident, Justice Gabbert was a dedicated public servant, a key founder of UC Riverside, and a prominent leader in Riverside's expansion from a citrus-growing town into an urban center.

Justice Gabbert was 3 years old when his family moved to Riverside in 1912. After graduating from Poly High School, he stayed in the community to attend Riverside City College, where his interest in law was sparked by the infamous "Chicken Coop Murders."

In 1934, Gabbert received his law degree from UC Berkeley and returned to Riverside to serve as a county deputy district attorney. Subsequently, he worked in private practice as part of what is known as Best, Best and Krieger.

He also served as a member of the local school board. But John Gabbert is mostly known as a fine jurist. In 1949, he was appointed to be a superior court judge; and, finally, in 1970 he was appointed to be an associate justice of the Fourth District Court of Appeal.

Throughout his life, John Gabbert touched the lives of so many people. He will be greatly missed.

EXTEND FEDERAL UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

(Ms. HAHN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. HAHN. Mr. Speaker, many of us are congratulating each other over this bipartisan budget agreement, but I want to remind us that there is still some unfinished business that we need to take care of.

Unemployment is still a very real issue for our Nation and for our communities; and in my district, unemployment is as high as 16.9 percent, twice the national average.

If we fail to take immediate action and we allow this critical lifeline to those in need to expire, just in California 214,800 people alone will lose their benefits by December 28 and an additional 325,800 unemployed California workers will lose their benefits in the first 6 months of the year.

This is really unacceptable. A failure to extend this critical lifeline to those in need would not only be a devastating blow for millions of American families already struggling, but it would hurt our own recovery of our economy.

Now is not the time to pull the rug out from under millions of Americans who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own.

Speaker BOEHNER, I urge you to do the right thing and not adjourn this House without extending Federal unemployment insurance for millions of Americans.

MEMORIAL FOR RONDAL K. MOORE

(Mr. VARGAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VARGAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of Rondal K. Moore of Aurora, Colorado, who passed away from a stroke on November 12 at the age of 71.

Mr. Moore was born on March 25, 1942, in Fort Smith, Arkansas, the son of Clarence Delmer and Golden Viola Moore.

In 1961, Mr. Moore graduated from Wheeler County High School in Fossil, Oregon. He went on to serve in the United States Navy during the Vietnam war onboard the aircraft carrier USS Coral Seas, as well as duty in Rhode Island at the Naval War College.

In the spring of 1963, he married Nancy E. Heily, and on March 29 of this year they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

Mr. Moore began working for United Airlines in 1966 and spent decades in the field of de-icing, until retiring in 2003 after 37 years.

He held multiple patents for inventions in both information and system operations, as well as software products used in the process of de-icing. His inventions and patents are still in use today in order to help determine check time for de-icing fluids, which allows for safe travel during inclement weather.

My thoughts and prayers go out to his surviving family members, including his wife of 50 years, Nancy Moore, of Aurora, Colorado; his son, Jason Moore, of Chula Vista, California, also a Navy veteran; his daughter, Sondra LaValley, of Aurora, Colorado; and his sister, Carol Ellis, of Kennewick, Washington.

2014 NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT

(Ms. KUSTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. KUSTER. Mr. Speaker, as we approach the end of the calendar year, I am proud that both Chambers have finally come together to pass the 2014 National Defense Authorization Act. This important bill will help ensure that the men and women of our armed services have the resources they need to do their jobs and keep our country safe.

I am especially pleased that this legislation includes important reforms to help prevent military sexual assaults by better protecting whistleblowers and holding perpetrators accountable for their actions. This critical reform is an amendment from legislation introduced by my Republican colleague from Indiana, Representative JACKIE WALORSKI, and my Democratic colleague from California, Representative LORETTA SANCHEZ, that passed the House with 110 bipartisan cosponsors and nearly 50 Members of our freshmen class.

Because of our joint efforts working across the aisle, this is a great first step in further protecting our heroes in uniform who take the extra heroic step of coming forward to blow the whistle on military sexual crimes. It has been an honor to help build support for this legislation, and I urge my colleagues to continue to work to end sexual violence in our military.

GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGE

(Mr. DEUTCH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DEUTCH. Mr. Speaker, the list of issues that the 113th Congress has failed to address is long: immigration reform, gun violence, long-term joblessness. Yet on this list of opportunities squandered by Republican obstructionism and indifference is also the threat of global climate change. As a member of the Safe Climate Caucus, I want to emphasize that this threat is real, and it needs real solutions.

In south Florida, we know that unchecked carbon pollution poses an existential threat to our communities. Rising sea levels endanger the safety of our residents and the viability of our economy. That is why Palm Beach, Monroe, Miami-Dade, and Broward Counties have formed a climate compact dedicated to mitigating climate change.

Local task forces cannot replace national leadership. We need a nationwide effort to limit carbon pollution, speed the adoption of clean energy, and protect our people from unprecedented natural disasters.

Every Member of this House belongs on the Safe Climate Caucus. Don't we all agree that, as Americans, it is our responsibility to pass on a healthier and safer environment to the next generation?

Mr. Speaker, addressing global climate change will take courage. Anything less, I am afraid, is cowardice.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.J. RES. 59, CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS RESOLUTION, 2014; PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES; PROVIDING FOR PROCEEDINGS DURING THE PERIOD FROM DECEMBER 14, 2013, THROUGH JANUARY 6, 2014; AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 438 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 438

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to take from the Speaker's table the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 59) making continuing appropriations for fiscal year 2014, and for other purposes, with the House amendment to the Senate amendment thereto, and to consider in the House, without intervention of any point of order, a motion offered by the chair of the Committee on the Budget or his designee that the House recede from its amendment and concur in the Senate amendment with the amendment printed in part A of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution modified by the amendment printed in part B of that report. The Senate amendment and the motion shall be considered as read. The motion shall be debatable for 70 minutes, with 60 minutes equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Budget and 10 minutes equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the motion to its adoption without intervening motion or demand for division of the question.

SEC. 2. The chair of the Committee on the Budget may insert in the Congressional Record at any time during the remainder of the first session of the 113th Congress such material as he may deem explanatory of the motion specified in the first section of this resolution.

SEC. 3. In the engrossment of the House amendment to the Senate amendment to House Joint Resolution 59, the Clerk may conform division, title, and section numbers and conform cross-references and provisions for short titles.

SEC. 4. The chair of the Committee on Armed Services may insert in the Congressional Record at any time during the remainder of the first session of the 113th Congress such material as he may deem explanatory of defense authorization measures for the fiscal year 2014.

SEC. 5. It shall be in order at any time on the legislative day of December 12, 2013, or December 13, 2013, for the Speaker to entertain motions that the House suspend the rules as though under clause 1 of rule XV. The Speaker or his designee shall consult with the Minority Leader or her designee on the designation of any matter for consideration pursuant to this section.

SEC. 6. On any legislative day of the first session of the One Hundred Thirteenth Congress after December 13, 2013—

(a) the Journal of the proceedings of the previous day shall be considered as approved; and

(b) the Chair may at any time declare the House adjourned to meet at a date and time, within the limits of clause 4, section 5, article I of the Constitution, to be announced by the Chair in declaring the adjournment.

SEC. 7. On any legislative day of the second session of the One Hundred Thirteenth Congress before January 7, 2014—

(a) the Speaker may dispense with organizational and legislative business;

(b) the Journal of the proceedings of the previous day shall be considered as approved if applicable; and

(c) the Chair at any time may declare the House adjourned to meet at a date and time, within the limits of clause 4, section 5, article I of the Constitution, to be announced by the Chair in declaring the adjournment.

SEC. 8. The Speaker may appoint Members to perform the duties of the Chair for the duration of the period addressed by sections 6 and 7 as though under clause 8(a) of rule I.

SEC. 9. Each day during the period addressed by sections 6 and 7 of this resolution shall not constitute a calendar day for purposes of section 7 of the War Powers Resolution (50 U.S.C. 1546).

SEC. 10. Upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider in the House the bill (H.R. 3695) to provide a temporary extension of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 and amendments made by that Act, as previously extended and amended and with certain additional modifications and exceptions, to suspend permanent price support authorities, and for other purposes. All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived. The amendment printed in part C of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution shall be considered as adopted. The bill, as amended, shall be considered as read. All points of order against provisions in the bill, as amended, are waived. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill, as amended, and on any amendment thereto to final passage without intervening motion except: (1) 40 minutes of debate equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture; and (2) one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

SEC. 11. The requirement of clause 6(a) of rule XIII for a two-thirds vote to consider a report from the Committee on Rules on the same day it is presented to the House is waived with respect to any resolution reported through the legislative day of December 13, 2013.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to my friend from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODALL. As we are doing housekeeping here at the beginning, Mr. Speaker, I would also like to include a section-by-section analysis of provisions within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Rules in the RECORD.

Mr. Speaker, I won't speak for my friend from New York, but I enjoy the Rules Committee debate when it begins with such a long reading from the reading clerk, Mr. Speaker, because you know you are involved in something special on a day like today. If it was just an ordinary rule, we would be done with that reading in 15 or 20 seconds, and we would move on to debate. But the rule today, Mr. Speaker, is taking on a number of challenges.

We are trying to move a budget conference report forward. This rule makes an opportunity for us to have that debate here on the floor of the House.

We are trying to move an SGR fix, what they call the sustainable growth rate, Mr. Speaker. That is that provision that threatens to cut double digits from the reimbursement rates of physicians, hindering the access of seniors to their Medicare benefits. We are trying to solve that here today, again, bringing forward a bipartisan, bicameral solution to that.

Also, we are providing for an opportunity to extend the farm bill language. We have gotten so close to a bicameral, bipartisan solution to the farm bill, Mr. Speaker, that those folks who are deeply involved in those negotiations tell us, if they could just get 30 more days, they will be able to get that done for the first time in far, far too long. This rule makes that debate available here on the floor of the House.

Finally, in terms of housekeeping, there are so many other provisions that are being worked on, again, Mr. Speaker, in a bipartisan, bicameral way, bills that are almost ready to go to the desk of the President of the United States to be signed into law, to address so many of the issues that are of concern to men and women across this country. This rule makes any provision that the House deems necessary available to be considered on the same day.

Now, I just want to be clear. As my colleague from New York knows, that is not the way we like to do business in this Chamber. There are a lot of serious Members in this Chamber, and every single one of them deserves an opportunity to review legislation before it comes to the floor, and so we have made a very strong commitment throughout this Congress to provide a 3-day layover for folks to review legislation. But during this season, with so many issues so close to fruition, issues that we have been working on, not for a day, not for a week, but issues that we have been working on collectively for months, those issues are almost ready to come to the floor, and so we waived that requirement that those bills lay over to make it possible for us to get as much of the people's business done as is allowable by the agreements that the House and the Senate come to.

Mr. Speaker, I have the great pleasure of sitting on the Budget Committee and the Rules Committee. In fact, I am only on the Budget Committee as the Rules Committee designee. And the proudest votes that I have been able to take in this House in my 3 years with the voting card of the folks of the Seventh District of Georgia have been on those budgets that we have crafted together in the Budget Committee, that we have brought to this floor, and that we have passed here on the floor.

In fact, as you know, Mr. Speaker, for far too long, the House has been the only institution in town that has been able to pass a budget. The Senate joined those ranks this year for the first time in a long time, and I am proud to have them here. But we have been getting that business done. What we haven't been able to do is to then take the budget that the House has passed and combine it with a budget that the Senate has passed in order to create a vision of the United States of America for the coming years.

Candidly, Mr. Speaker, with what I have seen in this town, with what I read of the differing opinions that are on each side of the aisle and each side of the Capitol, America didn't have any reason to expect that we would be able to come to an agreement this year either. They didn't.

But we sent one of our best and our brightest, Chairman PAUL RYAN of the Budget Committee, into those negotiations, and he was joined by one of my colleagues from Georgia, Dr. TOM PRICE, also one of our best and brightest, to put that Georgia stamp of approval on where we were headed with that budget conference report, and they teamed up with our colleagues in the Senate.

Senator PATTY MURRAY led the Senate side, led the Democratic side, let the Senate side. And they worked, again, not for a day, not for a week.

They worked tirelessly around the clock to try to find an agreement that we could come to together.

Now, I am a person who came here for big ideas, Mr. Speaker. I don't think you came here to do the little things. I think you came here to do the big things. I know my friend from New York came here to do the big things, those things that really make a big difference for America. We don't have that big budget deal on the floor. This rule doesn't make available debate on a big budget deal. We could not find the big budget deal. And for that, I am deeply sorry. I wish that we could have found that. But what we did find are those elements of agreement that were available to be found.

In recent weeks, Mr. Speaker, I have grown fond of a quote first shared with me by our deputy whip, PETER ROSKAM. It was from a Thomas Jefferson letter to Charles Clay in 1790, and he says this:

The ground of liberty is to be gained by inches, and we must be contented to secure what we can get from time to time and eternally press forward for what is yet to get. It takes time to persuade men to do even what is for their own good.

We are in the game of inches here today, Mr. Speaker, and I expect you will hear the same thing from my colleague from New York.

□ 1245

We are going to secure today what we can get from time to time, and we are going to eternally press forward for that that is yet to get.

My sense is my friend from New York is going to eternally press forward in this direction, and I am going to be eternally pressing forward in this direction, as is the process here, as she follows the wishes of her constituents and I follow the directions of mine.

But we have an opportunity today, for the first time in the 3 years that I have served in this body, to come together on a budget agreement to get that which we can get before we both wake up tomorrow morning and begin to eternally press forward on that which is yet to get.

I am grateful to those folks who have negotiated this budget deal. I am grateful to the folks of the Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee who have come together to begin to find that bicameral, bipartisan SGR solution. I am grateful to my friends on the Ag Committee on both sides of the aisle and both sides of the Capitol who have been working so long and so hard to find that agreement on the farm bill.

My great hope, Mr. Speaker, is that we are, with the beginning of the rule today, laying that framework and that foundation for bipartisan, bicameral agreement not just for this hour, not just for this day, but for this week and this month and the remainder of this Congress.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

HOUSE AMENDMENT TO THE SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.J. RES. 59 ESTABLISHING A CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF PROVISIONS WITHIN THE JURISDICTION OF THE COMMITTEE ON RULES

Section 111. Fiscal Year 2014 Budget Resolution.

This section establishes a congressional budget for fiscal year 2014 for the purpose of enforcing the Congressional Budget Act of 1974. The section requires that the chairs of the Committee of the Budget in the House and the Senate submit a statement to the Congressional Record, which includes a committee 302(a) allocation for the Committee on Appropriations consisting of the total discretionary limit set forth in the Act, committee 302(a) allocations for all other House committees, and aggregate spending and revenue levels required for enforcement of section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

This section also maintains existing authority for the chair of the Committee on the Budget to make further adjustments to reduce the aggregates, allocations, and other budget levels in the statement referred to subsection (b) to reflect the budgetary effects of any legislation enacted during the 113th Congress that reduces the deficit.

Section 113. Rule of Construction in the House of Representatives.

This section provides that those provisions of H. Con. Res. 25 (113th Congress) necessary for budget enforcement will remain in effect to the extent that budgetary levels are not superseded by other provisions in this subtitle or other action of the House.

Section 115. Authority for Fiscal Year 2015 Budget Resolution in the House of Representatives.

The purpose of this section is to ensure that the Committee on the Budget has time to complete consideration of a Budget Resolution for fiscal year 2015 and to preserve the ability of the Committee on Appropriations to begin consideration of its 12 annual funding bills in a timely manner. The Committee on Rules expects that the Committee on the Budget will pursue a budget resolution through regular order in the second session of the 113th Congress. The authority to effectuate the levels and allocations described in this section is only provided after the date by which the Congress is otherwise required to conclude consideration of a concurrent resolution on the budget as prescribed in the Congressional Budget Act of 1974. If a concurrent resolution on the budget is adopted by the House and the Senate, this section does not apply.

This section establishes a congressional budget for fiscal year 2015 for the purpose of enforcing the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

Subsection (b) requires that the chair of the Committee of the Budget in the House of Representatives to submit a statement to the Congressional Record after April 15, 2014, but not later than May 15, 2014. The statement must include a committee 302(a) allocation for the Committee on Appropriations consisting of the total discretionary limit provided for in section 251(c)(2) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, committee 302(a) allocations for all other House committees, and aggregate spending and revenue levels required for enforcement of section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

Subsection (c) also provides that the statement referred to in subsection (b) may include levels and limitations relating to advance appropriations, reserve funds, and overseas contingency operations/global war on terrorism. The Committee on Rules expects that the Committee on the Budget will base all levels and limitations established pursuant to this subsection on prior practices for determining such levels, including, in the case of advance appropriations and funding for overseas contingency operations/global war on terror, consistency with the President's request for such funding.

This section also maintains existing authority for the chair of the Committee on the Budget to make further adjustments to reduce the aggregates, allocations, and other budget levels in the statement referred to subsection (b) to reflect the budgetary effects of any legislation enacted during the 113th Congress that reduces the deficit.

Section 118. Exercise of Rulemaking Powers.

This section clarifies that the provisions of this Act are enacted as an exercise of the rulemaking powers of the House and Senate, that they are considered part of the rules of each House, and that each House has a constitutional right to change the rules in the same manner that each House may change any other rule.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding me the customary 30 minutes, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the legislation before us today gives us a chance to begin to mitigate the worst effects of sequestration; but it is not enough, as my colleague has stated.

Our Nation can—and should—dare to once again dream big. We are a Nation that built one of the largest interstate highway systems in the world, which is presently crumbling; launched the Internet; pioneered the creation of GPS; and created the largest middle class on Earth through a fair and balanced Tax Code that asked everyone, including the wealthiest among us and the biggest corporations, to pay their fair share. We are home to public institutions like the National Institutes of Health, which have helped to find the cures for countless diseases and conditions and saved millions of lives.

Great achievements like these are only behind us if we so choose. I strongly believe that we can rebuild our crumbling runways, our roads and rails, restore our middle class, and invest in the breakthroughs that will once again make us the envy of the world. But in order to do so, we have to make responsible fiscal choices that are a reflection of our values. That means restoring smart and targeted funding to programs and agencies that drive our country forward, asking the most fortunate among us to pay their fair share—not more than that, but their fair share—and protecting the programs that serve hardworking Americans at times when they need help the most.

To that end, it is shameful that the legislation before us does not extend unemployment benefits for the 1.3 million Americans who are scheduled to lose them within a matter of weeks—3 days after Christmas, actually.

In the United States of America, we believe in providing a hand up, not a kick while you are down. Unemployment insurance is that hand up.

Studies have shown that unemployment insurance allows jobseekers to purchase necessities such as groceries and gas without accruing further debt. In so doing, it helps to increase economic activity while easing the financial burden of unemployed Americans and making it easier, not harder, for them—as we are—to find a new job.

That is why my Democratic colleagues, Representative LEVIN, Representative VAN HOLLEN, and Representative BARBARA LEE, introduced an amendment in the Rules Committee last night to extend the unemployment insurance for an additional 3 months.

This bill was paid for. I want to make that perfectly clear. It would not have cost an extra dime.

Inexcusably, the majority rejected my colleagues' amendment, despite inserting language to fix Medicare payments to doctors over the coming year, which is certainly important. Fixing the Medicare payments to doctors is a worthy and important goal, but it is certainly troubling—and should be to all of us—that we are unwilling at the same time to ignore the needs of the unemployed.

The majority's refusal to extend a helping hand to jobless Americans stands in stark contrast to the defense of tax loopholes for big corporations and powerful special interests. For far too long, our Nation has allowed wealthy individuals and powerful corporations to hide billions of dollars in offshore bank accounts and create tax loopholes instead of paying their fair share.

Indeed, some corporations in America pay no taxes at all. It is unfortunate that not a single one of the loopholes is addressed in the bill that is before us today to help us reduce the national debt.

Despite these shortcomings, today's legislation does take an important first step toward easing the painful budget cuts contained in sequestration. It has been an unmitigated disaster that has hurt our economy and our country, and there is an urgent need to avert the next round of budget cuts that are scheduled to take effect. And I am grateful for that.

In a study conducted earlier this year by the Association of American Universities, 81 percent of the respondents declared that sequestration cuts had immediate and detrimental effects on research activities. Seventy percent of the respondents cited delays in research projects, and 58 percent of respondents stated that sequestration led to reductions in staff, students, and fellows through attrition and layoffs.

A recent study showed that sequestration and other budget cuts have resulted in an actual Institutes of Health budget far too low to support our biomedical research community.

In addition to that point, Mr. Speaker, let me say that during the government shutdown, which cost the economy $24 billion and was useless, of the five Nobel laureates employed by the United States of America, only one was declared essential.

Four Nobel laureates were said to be nonessential. That blows the mind, doesn't it?

These types of drastic budget cuts have profound impacts on our country. Reduced funding means that new discoveries and breakthroughs are delayed—or never realized—and that our public health knowledge is stunted for years to come.

As a microbiologist, I can tell you that you cannot simply turn research off and on like a faucet, but that is exactly what we do when we arbitrarily slash the budgets with no regard for the consequences of our cuts.

That is why today's legislation is an important step forward for our country. We must end the self-inflicted wound that is sequestration and get back to investing in our own well-being and the future of America. By restoring funding across our government, we will help to jump-start our economy and get back to work on the cutting-edge research and on infrastructure that will benefit the Nation in years to come.

In closing, today's bill is an important step forward, but our work is not done until we add an extension of unemployment insurance to this legislative package. We will give you an opportunity to do that at the end of the rule. In so doing, we can ensure a brighter, more prosperous future for every American this holiday season.

I urge my colleagues to vote “no” on the rule, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I thank the gentlelady from New York. I appreciate her mentioning all of those things that we are working on together.

The gentlelady is absolutely right: we had an opportunity in the Rules Committee last night to add to these bills that we are considering today—these bills that are bicameral, bipartisan solutions to a budget; these bills that are bicameral, bipartisan solutions to a farm bill; these bills that are bipartisan, bicameral solutions to keep our seniors' access to Medicare. And to add to that an unemployment extension that we in the Rules Committee were seeing for the very first time, I don't know what the committees of jurisdiction were doing. I certainly was one of those “no” votes last night, Mr. Speaker. I don't think that is the appropriate place to do that.

But I will say to my colleagues again today, as I said to them last night, I am so pleased that this rule contains that same-day authority, Mr. Speaker, that I mentioned earlier. Because if my colleagues, who I know have deeply heartfelt opinions about this issue, as do I, if that bipartisan, bicameral agreement can be found, this House has the opportunity, if we pass this rule today—and only if we pass this rule today—we will have the opportunity to bring such a package up.

I hope we can find that agreement. But at the moment, Mr. Speaker, I hope we can pass this rule so that if such an agreement is found, we will have the authority on the floor of the House to bring that agreement immediately to the floor for consideration.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN), a member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. MCGOVERN. I thank the ranking member for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, let me, first of all, begin by congratulating Congressman RYAN, Congressman VAN HOLLEN, and Senator MURRAY for coming together and trying to work out a bipartisan budget deal. It is far from what I would deem as perfect, but it begins to chip away at this awful sequestration that my Republican friends seem to be so enamored of.

But I want to come here on the floor to echo what the ranking member said in terms of expressing outrage over the fact that my Republican friends want to leave town without addressing the issue of extending unemployment compensation for 1.3 million Americans.

They are going to leave town tomorrow; and on December 28, after they have opened up all their presents and wished everybody a merry Christmas and had a wonderful dinner, on December 28, 1.3 million of our fellow citizens will be cut off totally from their unemployment compensation.

I want to put this in perspective.

On November 1, the American Recovery Act funds ran out, in terms of supporting the SNAP program, which means that everybody on SNAP has received a cut. So the average family of three, Mr. Speaker, received a $30 reduction in their SNAP benefits. That is their food benefit. That is about 16 meals.

It may not sound like a big deal to some of my friends on the other side of the aisle; but for millions of family in this country who are struggling just to put food on the table, it is a big deal.

On top of that, they are going to say to these 1.3 million people and their families, We don't care. We don't care. We are leaving town.

And since when did my Republican friends have to wait for a bicameral, bipartisan deal on anything to bring this to the floor? They brought a repeal of the Affordable Care Act to the floor about four dozen times.

Since when do they wait to get a backroom deal with the Senate before we are allowed to vote on something on the House floor? That is an excuse, and it is a poor excuse.

We ought to be doing the people's business, and that means not turning our backs on millions of Americans who are struggling during this difficult economy. We ought not to be making excuses. We ought to do something, and this is an opportunity to do it.

Defeat the previous question, as the ranking member said, and we can have a vote on extending unemployment compensation for these 1.3 million people. And it is paid for.

If you don't want to do it, you can vote "no." But for those of us in this Chamber who believe we have a moral obligation to those people, we want that vote. And let us vote for the extension and then send it over to the Senate.

Let's take some leadership on this issue. Let's not turn our backs on the most vulnerable in this country. It has become unfashionable in this country to worry about the poor. It has become unfashionable to stand up for these programs just to help people get by. This is the holiday season. Have a heart.

We ought to do something here. We ought to help these people and not just skip town. So there are no excuses.

I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to vote "no" on the previous question. Let us vote on extending unemployment compensation, and let us do the right thing. Let's not make excuses.

Mr. WOODALL. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am glad that our bipartisan, bicameral spirit lasted for the first 5 minutes of the debate. It was going to be too much to ask that it lasted much longer. I regret that.

But I will say to you, Mr. Speaker, if you want to know why problems are so hard to solve in this town, when the folks who have such a heartfelt commitment to solving the problems begin the presentation with "and we could do this, except for those heartless Republicans," it is easy to see why disagreement prevails and agreement is hard to find.

I will say to my friend that I appreciate his recognition of the tireless effort we have put in on this side of the aisle to repeal the President's health care bill, which is denying not only the choice of plans to my constituents; it is restricting their choice of doctors as well.

But the issue that he brings up is an important issue, Mr. Speaker, and I hope that we will have more success on his issue than we have had the 40 times trying to repeal the President's health care bill.

If what he wants is a symbolic vote on this issue, more power to him, but I don't believe that is what he wants. I think he cares deeply about challenges that folks have in this country and he cares deeply about solving those problems.

I will say to you, Mr. Speaker, as I have said to all of my colleagues, we can do these things together. This is not a case of first impression. The gentleman knows that. We have come together in a bipartisan way to extend unemployment benefits.

Just to be clear, because we spend a lot of time in this Chamber, Mr. Speaker, creating fear out there, I think that is one of the most shameful things that we are a part of, Mr. Speaker: creating fear for families that needn't have that fear.

□ 1300

For families that are concerned, we are talking about the emergency extended unemployment benefits. Those basic unemployment benefits that your State has guaranteed to you, nothing is happening to those, and folks need to know that. Those weeks of unemployment that the Federal Government has always provided, nothing is happening to those, and folks need to know that. What we are talking about are those emergency benefits.

Now, what we have done in this Chamber, Mr. Speaker, is to have come together not once, not twice, not three times, not four times—but more—to do this together, and we can do this together; but I promise you, Mr. Speaker, that we are only going to do it in working together. If the answer is that someone has got a heart and the other folks don't have a heart, we are not going to be able to solve the issue.

Mr. MCGOVERN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODALL. I would be happy to yield to my friend from Massachusetts.

Mr. MCGOVERN. I guess my question to the gentleman is that, on December 28—I think it is indisputable—1.3 million people will lose their benefits. They have also had their SNAP benefits cut. What do these people do on December 28? What do they do? Where do they go?

Mr. WOODALL. In reclaiming my time, I would say to my friend, who has incredible expertise on this issue, that, instead of being on this floor, impugning our committee's process or impugning my heart, the gentleman could be hard at work in creating a bipartisan, bicameral solution, because the gentleman knows, Mr. Speaker, that anything short of a bipartisan, bicameral solution is showboating for those folks who are hurting and is not doing a dadgum thing to help them. We don't need showboating in this institution, Mr. Speaker—we need results—which brings me back to the bipartisan, bicameral solutions that this rule has made in order.

It wasn't easy, Mr. Speaker, but we came together on a budget for the first time not in 1 year, not in 2 years, not in 3 years—but more. It is important because we have come together on a pathway to a farm bill not in 1 year, not in 2 years, not in 3 years—but in more—and we have come together on a process to solve an SGR that has plagued us not for 1 year, not for 2 years, not for 3 years—but for more.

This is not a day for acrimony, Mr. Speaker. There is not a person in this Chamber who is getting everything he wants today. I promise you I am not. I promise you my constituents are not. This is a day for doing what can be done, and what we are doing today makes a difference.

I ask my colleagues to look at not just what we are doing today but at how it is we came together to do it, because that is the framework, Mr. Speaker, by which we will accomplish the rest of these goals that I know my colleagues on both sides of the aisle share.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN), the distinguished ranking member of the Committee on Ways and Means, to discuss our previous question amendment, which will allow every one of us to vote “yes” or “no” on whether we are going to allow 1.3 million Americans to keep their unemployment benefits for 3 months, which is absolutely paid for and which does not add a nickel to the deficit.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I am glad we are talking about unemployment insurance.

We are not showboating—we want to vote—and you misunderstand, if I might say so, the issue.

If we don't act on December 28, 1.3 million people will lose every cent of unemployment insurance. These are people who have exhausted their State benefits. They have exhausted them. These are people who have been laid off through no fault of their own, and they are looking for work. When Walmart came to D.C. and asked for applications, 23,000 people applied for 600 jobs. That is the shortage of jobs for people. So these 1.3 million people are people who have exhausted their State benefits and who are long-term unemployed.

Historically, we have never, never ended these emergency provisions when long-term unemployment has been as high as it is today—37 percent—and we have already reduced the average number of unemployment insurance weeks in this country to 54. I want to point out to the gentleman and to everybody else that, if we don't act, another 1.9 million unemployed people will lose every cent of their unemployment insurance in the next 6 months.

So, under this bill, SGR is now extended for 3 months. We asked the Rules Committee to make in order an amendment—paid for—to extend unemployment insurance for 3 months, and here is what we said: if we can prevent a 25 percent cut to doctors' pay, surely, we can prevent a 100 percent cut for 1.3 million uninsured.

So what has been the response?

The answer from House Republicans is this—an empty box.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I am sorry, Mr. LEVIN. All time has been allocated.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, at this time, it is my great pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma, Mr. TOM COLE, a member of the Rules Committee.

Mr. COLE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the rule and the underlying legislation, the bipartisan Budget Act of 2013.

I had the privilege of sitting as one of the budget conferees, and it was an interesting process but a productive one. This is the first time in a long time we have had a genuine compromise in this body and, frankly, between this body and the administration and between this body and the other Chamber.

I particularly want to praise Chairman RYAN and Chairman MURRAY, who worked together in good faith and who worked together well, neither one of whom violated their core principles but both of whom came together and did some pretty extraordinary things in what is a modest bill.

First of all, they actually added to the deficit reduction over the window. Literally, we will have a somewhat smaller deficit and debt because of what they did than if we keep the current situation.

Secondly, they did something we all know needs to be done in that they dealt a little bit with mandatory spending, and they redistributed those savings over to the discretionary side of the budget. It was because they were able to do that that we are probably going to be able to protect our military from what would have been really devastating cuts under the sequester. That is a pretty amazing achievement.

The achievement, to me, that is the most impressive of all is that they managed to find a compromise that will restore regular order. We all know, if this legislation passes, the appropriators from the Senate and the appropriators from the House will be working over the holidays. They will probably come back and have an omnibus or some series of minibuses, but we will actually have had a somewhat normal appropriations process. Even more importantly, because they have set a top line number for fiscal year 2015, we can have regular order work in this Chamber all year next year, and we will be spared the prospect of a government shutdown in January or again in October.

Those are exceptional achievements. I wish there would have been more and would have been different. I know I would have written it differently. I know my friend would have, and I know my friends on the other side would have; but we ought to take a step back and thank Chairman RYAN and thank Chairman MURRAY for what they did to restore the institution as much as what they did to try and work on the budget. They did it the right way. They did it together, and it is an example we ought to follow.

So I urge the passage of this rule and the support and passage of the underlying legislation.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. VAN HOLLEN), the distinguished ranking member of the Committee on the Budget, and I congratulate him for his hard work.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. I thank my friend, Ms. SLAUGHTER.

Mr. Speaker, I do believe that the budget agreement that was reached was a small but positive step forward, and I plan to talk about that a little later today; but what I want to talk about right now is the abuse of process that has taken place in the last 8 hours and the changing of the terms of that agreement.

During that agreement, the Democrats from the House and others put forward a proposal that said, as we deal with the budget issues, we should also deal with what we call the doc fix, making sure that doctors are fully reimbursed to help Medicare patients, but that we should also help folks who are about to lose their unemployment compensation. That is what we said, and we put it on paper and offered it. We said, if we do a doc fix for 3 months, we should do a UI extension for 3 months, and if we do a doc fix for a year, we should deal with the UI issue for a year; but that was not part of the budget negotiation even though we wanted it to be.

Chairman RYAN acknowledged that yesterday as did Senator MURRAY. They said we wouldn't deal with either of those two issues—the doc fix or the UI—as part of the budget agreement but that we would deal with them outside of that agreement. Yet the ink was barely dry, Mr. Speaker, on that agreement before the House Republicans and the Speaker of the House put forward a rule that injected the doc fix, which we support, into the budget agreement, so it is all going to be one whole thing.

They did that to take care of a real issue of the doc fix, but what did they leave out?

They left out an extension of unemployment insurance for 1.3 million Americans who are going to lose that important support 3 days after Christmas. They left that out of that last-minute procedure.

Now, as Mr. LEVIN said, he and I went to the Rules Committee last night and said, All right. If we are going to fix the SGR issue, let's deal with the unemployment compensation issue, and we presented an amendment. I have it in my hand—3 months. We said we would pay for it, and we paid for it, Mr. WOODALL, in a way that has been agreed to on a bipartisan basis, which is in the ag bill negotiations, in the farm bill negotiations. We have already agreed on a bipartisan and on a bicameral basis to get rid of these excessive direct payments—subsidies—that go to agribusiness. We had agreed on that already. As of now, we have agreed on it. Let's use $6 billion of that savings to make sure that 1.3 million Americans aren't left out in the cold.

So I would say to my friend Mr. WOODALL: If you want to make this a bipartisan agreement, all you have to do is vote for it; and if you want to vote for it, you have got to give this House an opportunity to vote for it. Yet, while we are going to get a chance to vote on the doc fix and on the budget agreement, the Rules Committee and the Speaker of the House have told the American people you won't allow a vote to help 1.3 million Americans who are going to be left out in the cold. It is not just them and their struggling families, but the Congressional Budget Office that tells us that their surrounding communities are going to be hurt, too.

Why?

They won't be able to make the rent payments. They won't be able to go out to the local stores around Christmas-time and the holiday season to buy gifts. That hurts local merchants, small businesses. In fact, the Congressional Budget Office tells us that we will have 200,000 fewer of those jobs—private sector jobs—as a result of not extending unemployment insurance.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is absolutely unconscionable and shameful, after we have reached an agreement in which we had wanted to include a fixed SGR and UI in the agreement but it was decided not to, that we would have this last-minute thing parachuted on and would leave the 1.3 million Americans out in the cold. That is shameful. You should allow a vote, and if you vote against the previous question, we will have a chance to do our job and vote on that.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to say that I think the gentleman characterized much of that exactly right, and his characterization of all we have to do to make his idea a bipartisan idea is to agree to do it his way—that is all we have to do—and that is not the way we reach agreements in this institution.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Will the gentleman yield on that?

Mr. WOODALL. In just one moment, I would be happy to yield to my friend from Maryland.

We have here on the floor, Mr. Speaker, a rule, again, to bring bipartisan, bicameral agreements on the budget, bipartisan, bicameral agreements on Medicare, bipartisan, bicameral agreements on the farm bill; and we have two of the finest minds in this institution with two of the biggest hearts in this institution, who want to do the right thing for the American people, who are using this as their opportunity to try to get that done. I can promise my friends, Mr. Speaker, that we are not going to solve that problem here in the 1 hour of debate on this entirely separate measure.

What the gentleman characterized as the agreement within the Budget Committee is we weren't going to be able to find an answer to SGR within the budget conference and we didn't. We found it outside of the conference. We didn't find an answer to my issues with Medicare in the conference. We didn't find the answers to saving Social Security in the conference. So many things I wanted we didn't find in the conference.

The commitment that was made was to deal with UI outside of the conference. I don't sit on any of the relevant committees for UI, but I take folks at their word that that is something we can solve outside of conference. We are not going to solve it here. Knowing that folks need that help, it is a great frustration to me, Mr. Speaker, that some of the finest minds in this Congress are focusing their energy on this hour while we are trying to move things forward that we do agree on instead of focusing their energy trying to find that agreement on things we do not yet agree on but we could agree on if folks would focus their energies in that direction.

I will be happy to yield to my friend from Maryland.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. I thank my friend, Mr. WOODALL, for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would just point out—and I think the gentleman knows this—we have not seen a single proposal from our Republican colleagues to extend unemployment insurance because there is a philosophical difference and a majority of the Republican colleagues don't think we should extend unemployment compensation for 1.3 million Americans. We have not seen a proposal. We paid for this proposal in a way that has bipartisan support.

I will just say the question is whether we should be able to vote on it. My colleague and friends can vote against it, but I think the American people deserve a vote on this.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I would say to my friend that I wouldn't want anyone to be confused who is listening to this debate that we can't find agreement on this in a bipartisan way.

Why would folks come to that conclusion? Well, much has been said here on the floor; but the facts are that time and time and time again these provisions have been extended and they were not extended January 2013, February 2012. All the way back to the beginning they were not extended on party-line votes alone. They were extended in a bipartisan, bicameral way.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODALL. In just one moment, I will be happy to yield to my friend.

Folks back home are so frustrated, Mr. Speaker. They know that we can argue with each other. They are absolutely convinced we can do that. We do that every single day.

Today, we have an opportunity on this rule to move forward those things that we have not found an easy agreement on, but things we have struggled to find agreement on for, again, not days, not weeks, in most cases months, in many cases years, and we have finally found that agreement.

I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, it advances any of our causes to turn what should be an hour on those things that we are doing well together into any kind of an hour on accusations that somebody is right and somebody is wrong and only if we do it one way can we find the answers.

I will be happy to yield 30 seconds to my friend.

Mr. LEVIN. I appreciate your courtesy.

I always enjoy coming before the Rules Committee.

Just two points. First of all—maybe three quick ones—SGR was outside the budget agreement. It was decided to place it within it. All we are asking is for a vote on UI. And the third point, December 28 is a few days away. The ax falls on the livelihood of 1.3 million people.

So if you will say today that the Speaker will sit down with us on a bipartisan basis today and tomorrow and find an answer, fine. But just to say you are skipping town not addressing this and leaving an empty box, that is not a good answer.

Mr. WOODALL. Well, I would say to my friend suggesting anyone is skipping town is also not a good answer.

Mr. LEVIN. It is true, isn't it? We are leaving?

Mr. WOODALL. The gentleman knows, and it is so frustrating, Mr. Speaker, because, again, much, much to the surprise of the odds makers all across this country, we have got three provisions before us today on which Republicans and Democrats on the House side and the Senate side, with the support of the White House, have been able to come together on.

If we want to go down the road of moving things on which we don't have agreement, the gentleman knows those things don't move. If you want to make a difference for people, I say stop the recriminations and begin the conversations. That is the only way we have been able to find these, Mr. Speaker.

I say to my folks back home, Mr. Speaker, it is not the happiest day in the life of their Seventh District Congressman that we have these bills on the floor today. I would do something different in every single one of them—every single one. I would do a lot of things different in every single one.

While I appreciate the opportunity to speak on behalf of the Speaker, perhaps one day if I am Speaker of the House I will have the power to do those things by myself. I think if you ask the Speaker, he will say he does not have the power to do things alone. It takes herding 434 other cats to make that happen.

But we have successes here today, hard-fought successes on behalf of the American people. Not frivolous things, but things that are going to make a difference in people's lives.

My colleague from New York mentioned earlier, Mr. Speaker, medical research. I am a huge believer in medical research, a huge believer in NIH. CDC is stationed in my great home State of Georgia. We have an opportunity with this budget agreement to restore some funding to those two agencies that do amazing work on behalf of all Americans, in fact, in the case of the CDC, on behalf of the world.

We should take advantage of these successes, Mr. Speaker, and then we should show up again—maybe it is not even tomorrow; maybe it is the very next hour—and build on these successes to do more. We have got that framework now. We know what it takes to come together and do things that matter to the American people, do things that make a difference for this land that we both love. We have that opportunity today.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Will the gentleman yield for 30 seconds on that?

Mr. WOODALL. I would say to my friend that we are very lopsided on time. If the gentlelady runs out later in the hour, I will be happy to yield to my friend.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. VAN HOLLEN). This is very important.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. I thank my friend, Ms. SLAUGHTER.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is right. As I said at the outset of my comments, I support the bipartisan agreement. I think it is a small step forward. But the gentleman knows we will be debating that issue later this afternoon.

Right now we are debating the rule of the House. That rule parachuted in a doc-fix for 3 months, which we support, but our Republican colleagues denied this House and the American people an opportunity to vote to extend UI in that rule. That is what we are debating right now, Mr. WOODALL, and you know that.

The way that rule was structured was to deny the people of this country a vote to help 1.3 million Americans, and that is shameful.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. VELÁZQUEZ), my colleague, who is the ranking member of the Committee on Small Business.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. I want to thank the gentlelady from New York for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, in 16 days, 1.3 million Americans will lose their unemployment benefits they have relied on to buy groceries and keep a roof over their heads; and, no, we are not creating fear. This is the reality for 1.3 million Americans who every day get up and go out to the job market to find out that there are no jobs available. This is the reality of American children who are suffering. This is the reality of 1.3 million individuals in this country who will not know how they can pay for the next meal or how can they pay for their rent.

This is not the American way. We took care of the doctors; we took care of big farmers at a time when the economy is still struggling in the wake of the 2008 financial collapse. We should not be revoking needed economic assistance from jobseekers while millions of Americans are fighting to get back to work.

Last year, unemployment insurance kept 2.5 million Americans and .6 million children out of poverty. If long-term jobless benefits are allowed to expire, next year there will be nothing to protect these families from long spells of unemployment.

Unfortunately, this budget fails to extend the unemployment insurance millions of Americans rely on to make ends meet. Allowing jobless benefits to expire will not put people back to work. It will just make it harder for families to pay the bills and discourage people from seeking employment.

I urge my colleagues to continue fighting for struggling Americans, and I hope that Americans are paying close attention to what is happening in Congress today.

I urge a "no" vote on this rule.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds to remind my colleagues about the successes that we have had when we worked together and about the terrible, terrible failures that we have had when we decide fussing with each other is better than seeking long-term solutions.

One issue at a time we can absolutely make a difference, Mr. Speaker. I am glad that my colleagues on the Republican side of the aisle have not come down to express all of their disappointments about everything that wasn't included. I hope that we will be able to use this time to celebrate our successes on those things that were included and again rise tomorrow to solve the rest.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI), the Democrat leader, on this important issue.

Ms. PELOSI. I thank the gentlelady from New York for yielding, our ranking member on the Rules Committee, and thank her and our colleagues on that committee for trying so hard to have this rule contain an amendment that will allow us to vote on the extension of unemployment insurance for over 1.3 million Americans who will lose those benefits if we do not pass that extension. I would particularly salute Congressman SANDY LEVIN of Michigan, the ranking member on the Ways and Means Committee, for his relentless championing of this issue of fairness to the American people.

Mr. Speaker, we come here to talk about a bill that is to end the sequester, and end the sequester it does. I commend the conferees. I am very proud of the work of Congressman CHRIS VAN HOLLEN, the ranking member on the Budget Committee on the Democratic side; NITA LOWEY, the ranking member on Appropriations; and our assistant leader, Mr. CLYBURN, representing the leadership in those negotiations. I thank them for taking this to a place, fighting it to a draw, so that we come to the floor to fight some and end sequestration.

But the opportunity was so much greater. Apparently, the Republicans never miss an opportunity to miss an opportunity when it comes to creating jobs. Mr. VAN HOLLEN had in his bill just a few points in terms of priorities. One was to create jobs and economic growth for our country in the short term and in the long term.

If we close a loophole, build the infrastructure of America; close a loophole, build a bridge; close a loophole, special interests, tax loopholes for special interests, invest in the human infrastructure of our country, early childhood education, long-term economic growth; close a loophole, pay for unemployment insurance. I don't think it has to be paid for because it is emergency spending; but, nonetheless, let's have an opportunity to vote to extend unemployment benefits.

When we do ignore those investments in the future, we are not reducing the deficit; we are increasing the deficit. Nothing brings more money to the Treasury than creating jobs and the revenue that produces. Nothing brings more money to the Treasury than the education of the American people starting with early childhood education.

As far as unemployment benefits are concerned, the economic impact is clear: every dollar spent on unemployment benefits grows the economy by $1.52, according to Moody's Analytics—a dollar and a half for every dollar we spent, and that is a conservative estimate.

Failing to extend unemployment benefits will cost us 200,000 jobs over the next year. We can't do that. A recent report shows that extending UI instead would produce 300,000 jobs.

So again, this money, if spent immediately, injects demand into the economy, creates jobs, grows the economy, as well as honoring our social compact that we have with the American people.

□ 1330

People work hard, play by the rules, and lose their job through no fault of their own; insurance is what they have. We should honor that insurance.

So it is disappointing, yes, because this package is so limited. But as I said, it was a fight to a draw, and I recommend that our colleagues vote to support it so we can take it off the table and make way for the discussion we should be having about comprehensive immigration reform. The votes are here. Give us a vote, Mr. Speaker.

Passing a farm bill, that is very important to the economy of our country.

Raise the minimum wage. Nearly two-thirds of the people making the minimum wage are women. Paycheck equity, have fairness in the workplace for women.

The list goes on and on. ENDA, ending discrimination against the LGBT community, people in the workplace. There are so many items on the agenda that have the support of the American people in large numbers.

Yesterday was the anniversary of Newtown. Pass the Brady background bill. All of these things are on an agenda we have neglected. Up until now we just haven't had time for it. I guess they haven't been priorities for this Congress, but they are priorities for the American people and for the Democrats in Congress.

So again, one reason to vote for this package, even though you may think it is meager and you may not like all of its priorities, as the gentleman said, is to at least have an agreement on the budget that enables us to move forward for bigger fights that will improve policy and improve the lives of the American people and honor our responsibilities to them.

I urge our colleagues to vote for the budget, but to vote against this rule because this rule says "no." It says "no" to the Congress; we are not even going to allow you to speak or vote on unemployment insurance benefits extension. It says "no" to the American people that if you work hard and play by the rules and lose your job through no fault of your own, the safety net is not there. And that safety net is not there just for individuals; it is there for the system. Our beautiful free market system grows in cycles, and sometimes unemployment is higher than others and there are some outside forces at work that people lose their jobs because of. And so it is a safety net for our economic system as well as individuals.

Why would they not allow us to bring this up and extend the extension? Is it the money? If it is the money, we will find it. Is it the price? Do you think the price is too high to give people dignity, to allow them to keep their homes and meet the needs of their children? Two million children would be affected by this. Tens of thousands of veterans will be affected by this. We care about veterans here. We care about children here, but apparently not enough to extend unemployment benefits.

So why, my Republican colleagues, would you not allow us to have a vote on this? I know the support is there on the Republican side. I know that the Democrats would vote 100 percent for this. Do you not believe that these people are worthy of receiving unemployment insurance? I say "insurance," that is something paid into, a benefit check. If so, let the American people know that.

But this debate will not end today. While you may not give us a vote on the floor to extend these benefits so we see where everybody is on the subject and why, this fight will continue because this is about the morality of our country, the respect that we have for people, the value that we place on work, the pride we take in the great work ethic of the American people. But sometimes it just seems the harder they work, the forces are in a deck stacked against them, and this Congress is saying this deck is not going to include you as we deal out the cards.

So I can't explain it to anybody except to say it is a values decision; and, apparently, there is not enough shared value on the subject of the respect we should have for our workers to even honor the subject with a vote on the floor of the House. It is an outrageous rule to come to the floor. I thank you, Madam Chair, for fighting it, and I urge a very strong "no" vote on the rule. Vote "no" on the previous question, which would allow us to bring the issue to the floor.

What are you afraid of? Are you afraid of the vote? Are you afraid of working people who are out of a job? What are you afraid of? Let us have a vote on the floor.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I urge a "no" vote on the rule, and a "yes" on the bill.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to go back to the place I was earlier, and that is how one of the worst things we do in this institution is create fears in the minds of the American people.

The gentlelady from California has a powerful voice. She is listened to, admired, and respected across this great land; and it has to be said, I was just in a hearing, Mr. Speaker, in the Oversight Committee where we were hearing from doctors who were talking about all the fears their patients had that they were going to lose access to their doctor and lose access to their pharmaceuticals because of ObamaCare. Now, those fears have been realized. That is exactly what happened to those patients.

But these fears are not realized. I want to make clear to everybody back home because I talk to constituents every day who are losing their jobs in response to what their employers are doing to be able to afford the ObamaCare mandates. They are losing their jobs, Mr. Speaker, and absolutely every week of State unemployment that has always been available to them will continue to be available to them. Fear not from what you are hearing from the other side of the aisle.

Mr. Speaker, for those folks who are losing their jobs in my district as their employers are trying to comply with those mandates, understand that every week that you paid your insurance premium for unemployment insurance, all of those Federal weeks that have been there not for a year, not for 5 years, but for a decade, those will still be there for you. Fear not, that is still there.

What we are talking about here today, Mr. Speaker, are benefits in the emergency unemployment category, benefits that folks have not paid the insurance premiums for, benefits that are absolutely being utilized by families across this country. I don't minimize the impact of those going away. I don't minimize the impact; but I reject, Mr. Speaker, the fear creation that coming to the floor of the House and saying unemployment benefits are going away tomorrow is going to create in my district. Folks are losing their jobs today. Why, because after we do job creation bill after job creation bill after job creation bill, I can't find a bipartisan, bicameral agreement on those. I'm going to keep looking, but I haven't found it yet.

My message, Mr. Speaker, is if you are losing your job today because of the heavy foot—and I won't yield because I am running low on time. I know my friend has much time remaining. If you are one of those folks in my district or others who are losing your job because the heavy hand of government is on your employer, those unemployment benefits on which you are counting to apply tomorrow will be there.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I have to yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. WOODALL, if you believe anything at all that you have just said, I understand what is going on here.

First, blame everything in the world on ObamaCare.

Mr. WOODALL. Will the gentlelady yield?

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I will not.

To try to give people health insurance is somehow a crime in the House of Representatives, but the people we are talking about on unemployment have exhausted their unemployment. It will not be there, Mr. WOODALL. They can lose their housing. They can lose their food. They may even be dispossessed out into the street. There is a meanness that is going on that is absolutely astonishing to me.

Mr. WOODALL. I am sure that the gentlelady does not mean to suggest that there is meanness going on, I would ask the gentlelady.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. May I please have my time. I didn't get to speak because he took it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

The Chair would remind all Members to direct their remarks to the Chair.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I would like to, Mr. Speaker, and I started out that way.

I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. TONKO), the Energy and Commerce Environment Subcommittee ranking member, who I hope can finish my thought.

Mr. TONKO. I thank the gentlelady for yielding. And absolutely, those benefits have been exhausted, and I think that needs to be very clear here.

Mr. Speaker, while this budget compromise is not perfect, I would like to highlight a provision that will reduce our deficit.

Since 2011, I have fought to change a little-known statutory formula for capping the maximum reimbursement for Federal contractor executives and employees. Due to a flaw in this formula, taxpayer-funded salaries have spiraled out of control in recent years.

Just this month, OMB announced that it was required to raise the cap to over $950,000 per year—$950,000—while we debate our ability to afford essential services for our most vulnerable citizens, for extending unemployment insurance. We are paying private sector executives nearly million-dollar salaries. This agreement sets the cap at $487,000. Personally, I would have preferred the cap to be set at $230,700—the Vice President's salary—as it is stated in my legislation, but this is an important step and sensible compromise to restoring sanity to taxpayer-funded salaries.

Just a sampling, GAO, within the Department of Defense, found just 7 percent of their contracts when reduced to this level would save hundreds of millions of dollars.

I again thank the gentlelady for yielding.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia has 4½ minutes remaining. The gentlewoman from New York has 10 minutes remaining.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LEE), a member of the Committee on the Budget and author of the amendment we are trying to get here.

Ms. LEE of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlelady for yielding and for her tremendous leadership in her capacity as our ranking member on the Rules Committee. Thank you so much for standing in strong opposition to this rule.

As a member of the Budget Committee and Appropriations Committee, I want to commend all of my colleagues for putting forth a plan to replace some of the reckless sequester cuts that do continue to hurt families each and every day.

Yet this budget deal is really outrageous for what it doesn't do. It does nothing—nothing—to extend emergency unemployment benefits to the millions of jobless workers in every State.

As the Center on Budget and Priorities report today points out, the failure to include any extension of Federal emergency jobless benefits in the deal would likely negate any boost from sequester this deal would bring, and I will include this report for the RECORD.

Over 170 Democrats have joined my letter calling for an extension of this critical lifeline. It is really shameful that Republicans have refused to include an extension of unemployment benefits. The least we can do for the millions of the long-term unemployed who are struggling just to get by during this holiday season is to pass this 3-month extension. This budget does nothing for the millions of jobless people and asks nothing from the people who caused our economic crisis and continue to benefit from economic inequality.

Please remember, this is not about showboating or statistics. We are talking about people's lives. We are talking about people living on the edge. We are talking about 1.3 million people who will lose unemployment benefits during this holiday season. It is cruel. It is morally wrong, and it is economically stupid.

So I hope that we can vote "no" on this rule and defeat the previous question so we can vote for a 3-month extension of unemployment compensation.

Finally, let me just say, we must do better. We must protect and expand the safety net that are the pillars of our society.

FAILURE TO CONTINUE JOBLESS BENEFITS
WOULD UNDO BUDGET DEAL'S ECONOMIC BOOST
(By Chad Stone)

The Murray-Ryan budget deal provides a stimulative boost to the economy—albeit a modest one. But here's the rub: the economic drag caused by lawmakers' failure to include an extension of federal emergency jobless benefits in the deal would likely negate that stimulus.

Economist Joel Prakken of Macroeconomic Advisers says that the deal would boost economic growth by "maybe 1/4 percentage point" compared to the sequestration cuts scheduled under current law. The deal follows the sound principle under current circumstances of raising deficits in the near term to boost the economic recovery but reducing them by an even larger amount later, when the economy is expected to be stronger.

The problem is, the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) estimates that Emergency Unemployment Compensation (EUC) has a very similar impact—boosting the economy by up to 0.3 percent by the end of 2014 and adding up to 300,000 jobs. Not extending EUC would remove that potential boost from the economy.

The budget deal and extending EUC have similar economic effects because their budgetary effects are roughly the same size: CBO estimates that the budget deal's increases in discretionary spending would raise federal spending by $26 billion in fiscal year 2014 and $22 billion in fiscal year 2015, while its deficit-reduction provisions would cut spending by roughly $3 billion in each fiscal year. Netting these effects and assuming that about a quarter of spending for fiscal year 2015 (which starts October 1, 2014) occurs in calendar year 2014, the budget deal would produce a net increase in spending of about $28 billion by the end of calendar year 2014. CBO estimates that extending EUC would cost about $26 billion in calendar year 2014.

CBO and other analysts generally regard spending on unemployment insurance as providing more "bang for the buck" than most other stimulus measures. So, the economic drag in 2014 from a failure to extend EUC is likely to be at least as large as the economic boost from the budget deal.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON LEE).

Ms. JACKSON LEE. You know, it is very good that we have a deal. The American people are frustrated and tired. Our offices are being bombarded by calls from people from all political perspectives that they are glad for the deal; and to be honest with you, I am glad that we have made some progress. Many of us want to be part of the deal.

But I know that it is equally important to raise the concern of faces like this, faces across America who equal the 1.3 million number of Americans who will lose their unemployment benefits; 3.5 million in 2014; 200,000 military veterans and 2 million children. And so we can't only be about ourselves in this holiday season, particularly as we recognize that the Pope, being named Man of the Year, has spoken to the world eloquently about this whole issue of the vulnerable.

And so I ask this, Mr. WOODALL and the Rules Committee: let's put the Van Hollen-Lee-Levin amendment to the floor tonight. Call us back, Mr. BOEHNER. Let us vote to provide for unemployment insurance for working men and women. Faces across America will not have the tears of desperation. The deal is good, but the people are suffering. We cannot allow this to happen in this season of joy and giving.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on the rule and the underlying bill, H.J. Res. 59, the "Bipartisan Budget Act of 2013 and Pathway for Sustainable Growth in Medicare Reform Act of 2013."

The budget proposal before us is not perfect—far from it—but it is a modest and positive step toward preventing Republicans from shutting down the government again and manufacturing crises that only harm our economy, destroy jobs, and weaken our middle class. Thank goodness for small favors.

As with any compromise there are some things in the agreement that I support and some things that I strongly oppose.

On the positive side:

Republicans—and the bipartisan deal does not cut Medicare, Social Security, or Medicaid benefits by a penny even though our friends across the aisle went into the talks insisting on cuts to programs that sustain families and seniors.

Over the Republicans insistence, the agreement replaces almost two-thirds of the sequester's disastrous impending cuts to important domestic investments like education, medical research and law enforcement.

The agreement scales back the proposed cuts to federal employees sought by Republicans and exempts current federal employees.

On the negative side:

Mr. Speaker, it is outrageous—it is scandalous—that the budget agreement does not include an extension of unemployment insurance for the 1.3 million jobless workers—68,900 in Texas—will have their benefits cut off on December 28, and nearly another 1.9 million—106,900 Texans—will lose their unemployment benefits over the first half of next year.

If Congress does not act immediately to extend these benefits, a devastating blow will be dealt not only to the millions of Americans who are already struggling, but to our economy.

That is why yesterday I joined with 165 of Democratic colleagues in calling upon Speaker BOEHNER not to adjourn this House for the year without extending the vital unemployment insurance desperately needed by millions of our fellow citizens.

To let their benefits expire in the middle of the holiday season is cruel and heartless and unworthy of a great and generous nation.

Cutting off unemployment benefits at the end of the year will only further hurt an economy already injured by sequestration and the Republican government shutdown.

The Congressional Budget Office estimated that 750,000 fewer jobs will be created or retained in calendar year 2013 because of the budget cuts under sequestration.

The government shutdown cost our economy an additional 120,000 jobs in the first two weeks of October alone, according to the Council of Economic Advisors.

The Economic Policy Institute estimates that cutting off extended unemployment benefits would cost our economy 310,000 jobs next year because of reduced consumer demand.

Other experts, like Michael Feroli, the chief economist at JPMorgan Chase, indicate that allowing the federal unemployment insurance (UI) program to expire could shave as much 0.4 percentage point off our economy's growth in the first quarter of 2014.

Letting unemployment benefits expire will deprive our economy of the positive impact unemployment insurance provides since financially stressed unemployed workers spend any benefits they receive quickly.

CBO also concluded in a 2012 report that assistance for the unemployed has one of the "largest effects on employment per dollar of budgetary cost."

I agree. Therefore, I urge all Members to join me in voting against this rule.

□ 1345

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, it is my great pleasure to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. MESSER).

Mr. MESSER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Georgia for yielding me time.

I rise in support of the bipartisan budget act, the underlying rule, and Chairman RYAN's hard work.

This isn't a perfect deal, but it is better than the alternative. This bill replaces some of the indiscriminate spending cuts called for by sequestration and replaces it with smarter ones; it makes modest reforms that will reduce the deficit without raising taxes; and it continues our Nation's trajectory toward a more fiscally responsible government.

I agree with those critics who say this bill doesn't solve all of our Nation's budget problems, but "no" can't always be the answer. Reality is that we have a Democratic President and a Democrat-led Senate. Given that reality, this is a solid deal. And virtually everyone agrees that we don't need another government shutdown. It is time to put politics aside and make genuine progress on ending wasteful Washington spending. This is a good first step in that direction.

Let's not be afraid to take that step and move forward toward common ground from which we can continue fighting for fiscal sanity for hard-working taxpayers.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DANNY K. DAVIS), a member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. DANNY K. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the ranking member for yielding.

I rise in opposition to this rule, and I don't do so because it gives us limited opportunity to keep the government open for a few days, and I know that we are going to allow our physicians to practice medicine so that they can take care of Medicare patients for a few more days. What it does not do is it does not extend unemployment insurance for those 2 million or more people who will not have it. This is not going to be a good Christmas for many of the people in my district. It is going to be just the opposite.

I will vote against the rule so that we can, in fact, come back and provide unemployment compensation to those millions who need it.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. CICILLINE), a member of the Budget Committee.

Mr. CICILLINE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

The budget deal that we are voting on today is a step in the right direction because it blunts some of the painful cuts caused by sequestration. But a critical piece is missing: extending unemployment benefits that are due to expire at the end of this year.

It is an absolute disgrace that this body would even consider leaving town without finishing our work and ensuring that we address the needs of the long-term unemployed. Just 3 days after Christmas, 1.3 million Americans struggling to find work will immediately be thrown out into the cold and lose their unemployment assistance, including 4,900 Rhode Islanders who will lose their benefits on December 28. Much of the economic gain achieved in this budget deal will be nearly wiped out by failing to extend unemployment insurance.

Mr. Speaker, how do you plan to explain to your constituents your 3-week vacation when you have constituents who won't be able to keep the heat on or put the next meal on their dinner table because Congress failed to do its job?

We should, every day, but especially during this time of year, be thinking of others and taking care of one another, not walking away from our responsibilities and ignoring the challenges facing our fellow citizens.

We have 15 days to figure this out. What is the rush to leave town? It won't take much time to resolve this problem because we already have the answer.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House call up H.R. 3546 for immediate consideration. This will extend unemployment benefits for 1.3 million Americans.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Georgia yield for a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. WOODALL. No.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman does not yield.

Mr. CICILLINE. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote against this rule and to stand up and fight for the 1.3 million Americans who will lose their benefits on December 28.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend from New York for yielding.

I don't see how my colleagues can go home for Christmas leaving their constituents who are unemployed with no Christmas at all. I understand this bill to be important for its elimination of some sequestration. That is a small favor considering that sequestration may be the only bill nobody wanted that nevertheless prevailed. But the callous treatment of the unemployed is unforgivable, especially at this season. I am really outraged by the notion of some of my colleagues about the incentive to remain on unemployment insurance, when the benefits per week have gone down one-third across the States.

We are exposing those who have worked and paid into unemployment insurance to more hard times, but we are also exposing our economy, itself, because the loss of unemployment insurance means another loss of 300,000 jobs.

This bill is counterproductive. It is counterintuitive. It spoils an otherwise acceptable bill. It makes a mockery of Christmas.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire if my colleague has further speakers? If not, I am prepared to close.

Mr. WOODALL. I am the final speaker on our side.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Today's proposal is a step in the right direction, but we must improve this bill before we vote on final passage.

What have we learned here today? We have learned first that during the budget negotiations that it was determined that the doc fix, as we call it—doctors' payments—and unemployment insurance would not be in the scope of what they were doing and we would do that separately. Then, unbeknownst to us on our side, after agreeing to that, only the doc fix, as we call it, was put back into this bill. It was supposed to be separate, it was a part of the rule, and it would be voted on automatically when we vote for this rule today.

The only thing left out was unemployment extension, and I think we know why. We heard from our colleague that he thinks there is plenty of money out there. They are not going to go without a thing. That is totally untrue. It would be a tragedy of gigantic proportions if this House turned down the extension of unemployment benefits because some Members believe it is not going to happen. It is going to happen, and it is not because we didn't try in the Rules Committee to try to explain it.

There is no justification in the world for turning down a 3-month extension in the dead of winter that is paid for, that adds not a penny to anything. And there was no bipartisanship in the Rules Committee on this last night. We did our very best, but we were outnumbered considerably, 9-4.

Nonetheless, we think it is important enough today to give every Member of this House a second chance, and we are going to ask everybody who wants to make sure the people in their districts who are unemployed, through no fault of their own—there has been sort of a prevailing thought that we have heard from time to time that if we don't extend unemployment insurance, we will teach them a lesson; we will teach them not to have a job. They will find out right away that is not the way to live, despite the fact, as was pointed out, 20,000 people applied for 600 jobs. That gives you some idea of what that is like. Some people have come before committees here with stacks of resumes that they have sent out as high as 2 feet with rejection notices that they have gotten. They are not there.

We are going to give another chance on the previous question. I want everybody on both sides of the aisle who believes they cannot go home—and we did have a resolution here not to go home until our work is finished—but that we will take care of our fellow Americans in need, which we hope is temporary, which again depends very much on what we do in the future. We will give you a chance if we vote "no" on the previous question to this rule. Then I will be allowed to bring up the amendment that was turned down last night to extend it for 3 months. Imagine, 3 months all paid for again.

So it is really appalling to me that we can fix anything here, but we can literally let children, veterans, people who are unable to work, the disabled, and the people who have lost their jobs, that we can say to them that it doesn't matter here in the House of Representatives if you are hungry, if you are cold, if you are going to lose the place that you live, if your sustenance is taken away from you. We don't care. Maybe some church somewhere, some temple, some synagogue will take care of you.

If we defeat the previous question, I will offer an amendment to the rule to allow the House to extend unemployment insurance for 1.3 million Americans.

I ask unanimous consent to insert the text of the amendment in the RECORD, along with extraneous material, immediately prior to the vote on the previous question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New York?

There was no objection.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the rule and vote "no" on the previous question.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

I am surprised we have spent most of the hour talking about what is not in this rule today because we have great cause of celebration for what is in this rule today.

It has not been months; it has been years we have been working to get a farm bill. There is an extension that this rule allows to be voted on that will bring us in the next 30 days that agreement we have been so long searching for.

Mr. Speaker, it has been since 1997 that the SGR has been a part of our lingo here. That is that provision that threatens access to health care for every senior in America. This bill today, this rule today allows us to have a vote on a bipartisan, bicameral solution to that. It is actually a 3-month extension that leads to the end of this discussion forever, putting at ease every senior's mind in America that around this time of year, every year, their access to care will be threatened.

Perhaps most importantly, Mr. Speaker, this rule allows for a vote on the bipartisan, bicameral budget agreement.

This is not a grand agreement. It is not the grand agreement that I have been fighting for on the Budget Committee for the last 3 years, but what it is is a small step in the right direction. The reason it is a small step in the right direction, Mr. Speaker, is that we take those sequester cuts that no one would argue were done in a discriminate manner, we preserve those savings, but we apply them in a much more discriminate manner. For me, that is national security. The concern has always been national security.

Today, Air Force units have reduced their training activities by about 25 percent. With the sequester, only 2 of 43 active brigade combat teams are ready or available for deployment in the United States Army. We absolutely must rein in Federal spending—this budget agreement does that—but we must do so in a responsible way that preserves our national security.

The sequester reductions that were coming up in January, as many of my friends know, fell on no program in the land except for our Armed Forces, except for our national security. The Constitution does not ask much of us in this House, Mr. Speaker—far too often we are doing too much here as opposed to not enough—but it asks us to protect and preserve our national security. And with this bill today, while it does not achieve my Medicare goals, while it does not achieve my Social Security goals, while it does not achieve the budget reduction goals I would like to see, it does replace an indiscriminate sequester with discriminate reductions in mandatory spending programs, putting those dollars, instead, towards our national security.

I will end where I began, Mr. Speaker, with the letter from Thomas Jefferson to Charles Clay in 1790:

The ground of liberty is to be gained by inches, and we must be contented to secure what we can from time to time and eternally press forward for what is yet to get.

I urge a strong “yes” vote on this rule and a “no” vote on my colleague’s motion so that we do those things that we are able to do today and then tomorrow eternally press forward.

The material previously referred to by Ms. SLAUGHTER is as follows:

AN AMENDMENT TO H. RES. 438 OFFERED BY
MS. SLAUGHTER OF NEW YORK

In section 1, strike “to its adoption without intervening motion or demand for division of the question” and insert “and on any amendment thereto to its adoption without intervening motion or demand for division of the question except an amendment specified in section 12 of this resolution, if offered by Representative Levin of Michigan or his designee, which shall be in order without intervention of any point of order or demand for division of the question, shall be considered as read, and shall be separately debatable for 30 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent.”

At the end of the resolution, add the following new section:

SEC. 12. The amendment referenced in the first section of this resolution is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Levin of Michigan to the motion offered by Mr. Ryan of Wisconsin:

At the end of division B, add the following:

(1) September 30, 2014; and

(2) the date specified in the provision of such Act or amendment made by such Act.

(b) COMMODITY PROGRAMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The terms and conditions applicable to a covered commodity or loan commodity (as those terms are defined in section 1001 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (7 U.S.C. 8702)) or to peanuts, sugarcane, or sugar beets for the 2012 crop year pursuant to title I of such Act and each amendment made by that title shall be applicable to the 2014 crop year for that covered commodity, loan commodity, peanuts, sugarcane, or sugar beets.

(2) REDUCTION IN DIRECT PAYMENTS.—For purposes of applying sections 1103 and 1303 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (7 U.S.C. 8713, 8753) for the 2014 crop year of a covered commodity (as that term is defined in section 1001 of such Act (7 U.S.C. 8702)) or peanuts, the Secretary of Agriculture shall modify the terms “base acres” and “payment acres” as otherwise defined in sections 1001 and 1301 of such Act (7 U.S.C. 8702, 8751) to realize savings of $6,400,000,000 from direct payments for the 10-year period of 2014 through 2023.

(3) COTTON.—The authority provided by the following provisions of title I of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 shall continue through July 31, 2015:

(A) Section 1204(e)(2)(B) (7 U.S.C. 8734(e)(2)(B)) relating to adjustment authority regarding prevailing world market price.

(B) Section 1207(a) (7 U.S.C. 8737(a)) relating to import quota program.

(C) Section 1208 (7 U.S.C. 8738) relating to special competitive provisions for extra long staple cotton.

(4) SUSPENSION OF PERMANENT PRICE SUPPORT AUTHORITIES.—The provisions of law specified in subsections (a) through (c) of section 1602 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (7 U.S.C. 8782) shall be suspended—

(A) for the 2014 crop year of a covered commodity (as that term is defined in section 1001 of such Act (7 U.S.C. 8702)), peanuts, and sugar, as appropriate; and

(B) in the case of milk, through December 31, 2014.

THE VOTE ON THE PREVIOUS QUESTION: WHAT IT REALLY MEANS

This vote, the vote on whether to order the previous question on a special rule, is not merely a procedural vote. A vote against ordering the previous question is a vote against the Republican majority agenda and a vote to allow the Democratic minority to offer an alternative plan. It is a vote about what the House should be debating.

Mr. Clarence Cannon’s Precedents of the House of Representatives (VI, 308-311), describes the vote on the previous question on the rule as “a motion to direct or control the consideration of the subject before the House being made by the Member in charge.” To defeat the previous question is to give the opposition a chance to decide the subject before the House. Cannon cites the Speaker’s ruling of January 13, 1920, to the effect that “the refusal of the House to sustain the demand for the previous question passes the control of the resolution to the opposition” in order to offer an amendment. On March 15, 1909, a member of the majority party offered a rule resolution. The House defeated the previous question and a member of the opposition rose to a parliamentary inquiry, asking who was entitled to recognition. Speaker Joseph G. Cannon (R-Illinois) said: “The previous question having been refused, the gentleman from New York, Mr. Fitzgerald, who had asked the gentleman to yield to him for an amendment, is entitled to the first recognition.”

The Republican majority may say “the vote on the previous question is simply a vote on whether to proceed to an immediate vote on adopting the resolution . . . [and] has no substantive legislative or policy implications whatsoever.” But that is not what they have always said. Listen to the Republican Leadership Manual on the Legislative Process in the United States House of Representatives, (6th edition, page 135). Here’s how the Republicans describe the previous question vote in their own manual: “Although it is generally not possible to amend the rule because the majority Member controlling the time will not yield for the purpose of offering an amendment, the same result may be achieved by voting down the previous question on the rule . . . When the motion for the previous question is defeated, control of the time passes to the Member who led the opposition to ordering the previous question. That Member, because he then controls the time, may offer an amendment to the rule, or yield for the purpose of amendment.”

In Deschler's Procedure in the U.S. House of Representatives, the subchapter titled “Amending Special Rules” states: “a refusal to order the previous question on such a rule [a special rule reported from the Committee on Rules] opens the resolution to amendment and further debate.” (Chapter 21, section 21.2) Section 21.3 continues: “Upon rejection of the motion for the previous question on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules, control shifts to the Member leading the opposition to the previous question, who may offer a proper amendment or motion and who controls the time for debate thereon.”

Clearly, the vote on the previous question on a rule does have substantive policy implications. It is one of the only available tools for those who oppose the Republican majority's agenda and allows those with alternative views the opportunity to offer an alternative plan.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 and clause 9 of rule XX, this 15-minute vote on ordering the previous question will be followed by 5-minute votes on adoption of House Resolution 438, if ordered, and agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal, if ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 227, nays 195, not voting 9, as follows:

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

OFFICE OF THE CLERK,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, December 11, 2013.

Hon. JOHN BOEHNER,
The Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I have the honor to transmit herewith a facsimile copy of a letter received from the Honorable William Francis Galvin, Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, indicating that, according to the unofficial returns of the Special Election held December 10, 2013, the Honorable Katherine M. Clark was elected Representative to Congress for the Fifth Congressional District, Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely,

KAREN L. HAAS,
Clerk.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
Boston, MA, December 11, 2013.

Hon. KAREN L. HAAS,
Clerk, U.S. House of Representatives, The Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR MS. HAAS: This is to advise you that the unofficial results of the Special State Election held on Tuesday, December 10, 2013, for the office of Representative in Congress from the Fifth Congressional District of Massachusetts, show that Katherine M. Clark received 40,172 votes out of 60,937 total votes cast for that office.

It would appear from these unofficial results that Katherine M. Clark was elected as Representative in Congress from the Fifth Congressional District of Massachusetts.

To the best of our knowledge and belief at this time, there is no contest to this election.

As soon as the official results are certified to this office by those municipalities located within the Fifth Congressional District, an official Certificate of Election will be prepared for transmittal as required by law.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM FRANCIS GALVIN,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

SWEARING IN OF THE HONORABLE KATHERINE M. CLARK, OF MAS- SACHUSETTS, AS A MEMBER OF THE HOUSE

Mr. NEAL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentlewoman from Massachusetts, the Honorable KATHERINE M. CLARK, be permitted to take the oath of office today.

Her certificate of election has not arrived, but there is no contest and no question has been raised with regard to her election.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Will Representative-elect CLARK and the members of the Massachusetts delegation present themselves in the well.

All Members will rise and the Representative-elect will please raise her right hand.

Ms. CLARK of Massachusetts appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office, as follows:

Do you solemnly swear that you will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that you will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that you take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that you will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which you are about to enter, so help you God.

The SPEAKER. Congratulations, you are now a Member of the 113th Congress.

WELCOMING THE HONORABLE KATHERINE M. CLARK TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. NEAL) is recognized for 1 minute.

There was no objection.

Mr. NEAL. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to introduce KATHERINE M.

CLARK, with the always important reminder that there are fewer than 12,000 men and women who have had the honor in American history of taking this oath.

This institution has been home to Presidents of the United States, members of the Supreme Court, and members of the United States Senate who have gone far and wide in helping America to succeed every day.

KATHERINE CLARK, one of those individuals who has now joined this important and august body, succeeds, again, a very favorite colleague of ours who served in this institution with distinction for 37 years, Senator ED MARKEY.

Mr. Speaker, KATHERINE CLARK is well grounded in local government, having served at the school committee level. She served in the legislature as a member of the House of Representatives and as a member of the Massachusetts Senate. She has also served time as a prosecutor. She is well-distinguished in the State of Massachusetts and won a very handsome victory.

It is an honor for me to submit to you for the first time the Honorable KATHERINE M. CLARK from the State of Massachusetts.

The SPEAKER. The gentlewoman from Massachusetts is recognized.

Ms. CLARK of Massachusetts. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, Leader PELOSI, Congressman NEAL, the Massachusetts delegation, and all of you for this very warm welcome.

Thank you to my family and friends who are here with me today: my husband, Rodney, and my three sons, Addison, Jared, and Nathaniel, whose love every day makes me the luckiest mom and wife in the world.

My parents, Chan and Judy Clark, I thank them for their love and support and teaching me that even when times are hard, approach life with gratitude, optimism, respect for others, and a sense of adventure.

My in-laws, Art and Ladene Dowell, I am so grateful for all they do to keep our family running smoothly and all the love they give us.

And my brother John and his partner Justin, I thank you for being here and for all your support.

I am so grateful to the voters of the Massachusetts Fifth Congressional District for their confidence and the profound privilege of representing them.

Senator MARKEY, you set a standard of excellence during your time in the House. I look forward to carrying on your work for the people of our district and partnering with you and the entire Massachusetts delegation to move Massachusetts and our country forward.

The Massachusetts Fifth, from Revere to Cambridge, Waltham to Framingham, is home to some of this country's and the world's most respected universities and innovative companies. We are deeply proud of these incredible institutions.

But what defines the Fifth District is its families. As I have talked with families around their kitchen tables, I found they are just like mine, and I am sure they are just like yours. We are teachers, small business owners, CEOs, and machinists. We work in stockrooms and boardrooms. We are recent immigrants and we are descendants from early American settlers. We are of all political ideologies. And, yes, deep in the heart of Red Sox Nation, we even have a few Yankees fans.

What unites our families is they work hard, play by the rules, and all they ask in return is a fair shot at the American Dream. Our families want to find a good job, send their children to great schools, save for college, and count on a secure retirement. They want to know that the issues they talk about around their kitchen tables are the issues that we will talk about here in Congress.

I am honored to join the Massachusetts delegation and represent the people of the Fifth Congressional District in the House of Representatives. I look forward to working together with each of you for the families of my district, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and the United States of America.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. Under clause 5(d) of rule XX, the Chair announces to the House that, in light of the administration of the oath to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts (Ms. CLARK), the whole number of the House is 433.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.J. RES. 59, CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS RESOLUTION, 2014; PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES; PROVIDING FOR PROCEEDINGS DURING THE PERIOD FROM DECEMBER 14, 2013, THROUGH JANUARY 6, 2014; AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

The SPEAKER. Without objection, 5-minute voting will continue.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. This is a 5-minute vote.

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Sec. 101. Authorization of appropriations.

Subtitle B—Army Programs

Sec. 111. Limitation on availability of funds for Stryker vehicle program.

Sec. 112. Study on multiyear, multivehicle procurement authority for tactical vehicles.

Subtitle C—Navy Programs

Sec. 121. CVN-78 class aircraft carrier program.

Sec. 122. Repeal of requirements relating to procurement of future surface combatants.

Sec. 123. Multiyear procurement authority for E-2D aircraft program.

Sec. 124. Limitation on availability of funds for Littoral Combat Ship.

Subtitle D—Air Force Programs

Sec. 131. Repeal of requirement for maintenance of certain retired KC-135E aircraft.

Sec. 132. Multiyear procurement authority for C-130J aircraft.

Sec. 133. Prohibition on cancellation or modification of avionics modernization program for C-130 aircraft.

Sec. 134. Prohibition of procurement of unnecessary C-27J aircraft by the Air Force.

Subtitle E—Defense-wide, Joint, and Multiservice Matters

Sec. 141. Personal protection equipment procurement.

Sec. 142. Repeal of certain F-35 reporting requirements.

Sec. 143. Limitation on availability of funds for retirement of RQ-4 Global Hawk unmanned aircraft systems and A-10 aircraft.

Sec. 144. MC-12 Liberty Intelligence, Surveillance, and Reconnaissance aircraft.

Sec. 145. Competition for evolved expendable launch vehicle providers.

Sec. 146. Reports on personal protection equipment and health and safety risks associated with ejection seats.

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

SEC. 101. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2014 for procurement for the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps, the Air Force, and Defense-wide activities, as specified in the funding table in section 4101.

Subtitle B—Army Programs

SEC. 111. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR STRYKER VEHICLE PROGRAM.

(a) LIMITATION.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for weapons and tracked combat vehicles, Army, for the procurement or upgrade of Stryker vehicles, not more than 75 percent may be obligated or expended until a period of 15 days has elapsed following the date on which the Secretary of the Army submits the report under subsection (b).

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of the Army shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the status of the Stryker vehicle spare parts inventory located in Auburn, Washington, cited in the report of the Inspector General of the Department of Defense (number 2013-025) dated November 30, 2012. The report submitted under this subsection shall include the following:

(1) The status of the implementation by the Secretary of the recommendations specified on pages 30 to 34 of the report by the Inspector General.

(2) The value of the parts remaining in warehouse that may still be used by the Secretary for the repair, upgrade, or reset of Stryker vehicles.

(3) The value of the parts remaining in the warehouse that are no longer usable by the Secretary for the repair, upgrade, or reset of Stryker vehicles.

(4) A cost estimate of the monthly cost of maintaining the inventory of such parts that are no longer usable by the Secretary.

(5) Any other matters the Secretary considers appropriate.

SEC. 112. STUDY ON MULTIYEAR, MULTIVEHICLE PROCUREMENT AUTHORITY FOR TACTICAL VEHICLES.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) budget uncertainty and reduced defense procurements have had negative impacts on the tactical vehicle industrial base; and

(2) in such environment, the Army should consider innovative contracting and acquisition strategies to maximize cost savings, improve the sustainment of the tactical vehicle industrial base, and reduce risk during this downturn in defense procurement.

(b) STUDY REQUIRED.—

(1) STUDY.—The Secretary of the Army, in consultation with the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, shall conduct a study of the desirability and feasibility of requesting legislative authority, in accordance with section 2306b of title 10, United States Code, to enter into one or more multiyear, multivehicle contracts for the procurement of tactical vehicles beginning in fiscal year 2015 or thereafter.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary, in consultation with the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the possible multiyear, multivehicle contracting options and other innovative contracting options considered in the study under paragraph (1). Such report should include the following:

(A) A business case analysis of a multiyear, multivehicle contract for tactical vehicles, including any potential increases in cost, savings, or risk that may derive from such a contract in comparison to standard contracting methods.

(B) An evaluation of whether the Secretary requires legislative action to enter into such a multiyear, multivehicle contract.

(C) Any other matters the Secretary determines appropriate.

Subtitle C—Navy Programs

SEC. 121. CVN-78 CLASS AIRCRAFT CARRIER PROGRAM.

(a) COST LIMITATION BASELINE FOR LEAD SHIP.—Subsection (a) of section 122 of the John Warner National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2007 (Public Law 109-364; 120 Stat. 2104) is amended to read as follows:

“(a) LIMITATION.—

“(1) LEAD SHIP.—The total amount obligated from funds appropriated or otherwise made available for Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy, or for any other procurement account, for the aircraft carrier designated as CVN-78 may not exceed $12,887,000,000 (as adjusted pursuant to subsection (b)).

“(2) FOLLOW-ON SHIPS.—The total amount obligated from funds appropriated or otherwise made available for Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy, or for any other procurement account, for the construction of any ship that is constructed in the CVN-78 class of aircraft carriers after the lead ship of that class may not exceed $11,498,000,000 (as adjusted pursuant to subsection (b)).”

(b) HULL NUMBER; ADDITIONAL FACTOR FOR ADJUSTMENT OF LIMITATION AMOUNT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (b) of such section is amended—

(A) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking “CVN-21” and inserting “CVN-78”;

(B) in paragraph (1), by striking “2006” and inserting “2013”; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(7) With respect to the aircraft carrier designated as CVN-78, the amounts of increases or decreases in costs of that ship that are attributable solely to an urgent and unforeseen requirement identified as a result of the shipboard test program.”

(2) LIMITATION ON ADJUSTMENT.—Such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(e) LIMITATION ON SHIPBOARD TEST PROGRAM COST ADJUSTMENT.—With respect to using the authority under subsection (b)(7) to adjust the amount set forth in subsection (a)(1) for the aircraft carrier designated as CVN-78 for reasons relating to an urgent and unforeseen requirement identified as a result of the shipboard test program, the Secretary may only use such authority if—

“(1) the Secretary determines, and certifies to the congressional defense committees, that such requirement was not known before the date of the submittal to Congress of the budget for fiscal year 2014 (as submitted pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code);

“(2) the Secretary determines, and certifies to the congressional defense committees, that waiting on an action by Congress to raise the cost cap specified in such subsection (a)(1) to account for such requirement will result in a delay in the delivery of that ship or a delay in the date of initial operating capability of that ship; and

“(3) the Secretary submits to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth a description of such requirement before the obligation of additional funds pursuant to such authority.”

(c) REQUIREMENTS FOR CVN-79.—Such section is further amended by adding after subsection (e), as added by subsection (b)(2), the following new subsection:

“(f) REQUIREMENTS FOR CVN-79.—

“(1) QUARTERLY COST ESTIMATE.—The Secretary of the Navy shall submit to the congressional defense committees on a quarterly basis a report setting forth the most current cost estimate for the aircraft carrier designated as CVN-79 (as estimated by the program manager). Each cost estimate shall include the current percentage of completion of the program, the total costs incurred, and an estimate of costs at completion for ship construction, Government-furnished equipment, and engineering and support costs.

“(2) DIRECTION FOR NEGOTIATING CERTAIN CONTRACTS.—The Secretary shall ensure that each prime contract for the aircraft carrier designated as CVN-79 includes an incentive fee structure that will, throughout the period of performance of the contract, provide incentives for each contractor to meet the portion of the cost of the ship, as limited by subsection (a)(2) and adjusted pursuant to subsection (b), for which the contractor is responsible.”

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The heading of such section is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 122. ADHERENCE TO NAVY COST ESTIMATES FOR CVN-78 CLASS OF AIRCRAFT CARRIERS.”

(e) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents at the beginning of such Act is amended by striking the item relating to section 122 and inserting the following:

“Sec. 122. Adherence to Navy cost estimates for CVN-78 class of aircraft carriers.”

SEC. 122. REPEAL OF REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO PROCUREMENT OF FUTURE SURFACE COMBATANTS.

Section 125 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010 (Public Law 111-84; 123 Stat. 2214; 10 U.S.C. 7291 note) is repealed.

SEC. 123. MULTIYEAR PROCUREMENT AUTHORITY FOR E-2D AIRCRAFT PROGRAM.

(a) AUTHORITY FOR MULTIYEAR PROCUREMENT.—Subject to section 2306b of title 10, United States Code, the Secretary of the Navy may enter into one or more multiyear contracts, beginning with the fiscal year 2014 program year, for the procurement of E-2D aircraft.

(b) CONDITION FOR OUT-YEAR CONTRACT PAYMENTS.—A contract entered into under subsection (a) shall provide that any obligation of the United States to make a payment under the contract for a fiscal year after fiscal year 2014 is subject to the availability of appropriations for that purpose for such later fiscal year.

SEC. 124. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR LITTORAL COMBAT SHIP.

(a) LIMITATION.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for construction or advanced procurement of materials for the Littoral Combat Ships designated as LCS 25 or LCS 26 may be obligated or expended until the Secretary of the Navy submits to the congressional defense committees each of the following:

(1) The report required by subsection (b)(1).

(2) A coordinated determination by the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation and the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics that successful completion of the test evaluation master plan for both seaframes and each mission module will demonstrate operational effectiveness and operational suitability.

(3) A certification that the Joint Requirements Oversight Council—

(A) has reviewed the capabilities of the legacy systems that the Littoral Combat Ship is planned to replace and has compared such capabilities to the capabilities to be provided by the Littoral Combat Ship;

(B) has assessed the adequacy of the current capabilities development document for the Littoral Combat Ship to meet the requirements of the combatant commands and to address future threats as reflected in the latest assessment by the defense intelligence community; and

(C) has either validated the current capabilities development document or directed the Secretary to update the current capabilities development document based on the performance of the Littoral Combat Ship and mission modules to date.

(4) A report on the expected performance of each seaframe variant and mission module against the current or updated capabilities development document.

(5) Certification that a capability production document will be completed for each mission module before operational testing.

(b) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Chief of Naval Operations, in coordination with the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the current concept of operations and expected survivability attributes of each of the Littoral Combat Ship seaframes.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall set forth the following:

(A) A review of the current concept of operations of the Littoral Combat Ship and a comparison of such concept of operations with the original concept of operations of the Littoral Combat Ship.

(B) An assessment of the ability of the Littoral Combat Ship to carry out the core missions of the Cooperative Strategy for 21st Century Seapower of the Navy.

(C) A comparison of the combat capabilities for the three missions assigned to the Littoral Combat Ship seaframes (anti-surface warfare, mine countermeasures, and anti-submarine warfare) with the combat capabilities for each of such missions of the systems the Littoral Combat Ship is replacing.

(D) An assessment of expected survivability of the Littoral Combat Ship seaframes in the context of the planned employment of the Littoral Combat Ship as described in the concept of operations.

(E) The current status of operational testing for the seaframes and the mission modules of the Littoral Combat Ship.

(F) An updated test and evaluation master plan for the Littoral Combat Ship.

(G) A review of survivability testing, modeling, and simulation conducted to date on the two seaframes of the Littoral Combat Ship.

(H) An updated assessment of the endurance of the Littoral Combat Ship at sea with respect to maintenance, fuel use, and sustainment of crew and mission modules.

(I) An assessment of the adequacy of current ship manning plans for the Littoral Combat Ship and an assessment of the impact that increased manning has on design changes and the endurance of the Littoral Combat Ship.

(J) A list of the casualty reports to date on each Littoral Combat Ship, including a description of the impact of such casualties on the design or ability of that Littoral Combat Ship to perform assigned missions.

(3) FORM.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall be submitted in classified form and unclassified form.

Subtitle D—Air Force Programs

SEC. 131. REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT FOR MAINTENANCE OF CERTAIN RETIRED KC-135E AIRCRAFT.

Section 135 of the John Warner National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2007 (Public Law 109-364; 120 Stat. 2114), as amended by section 131 of the Duncan Hunter National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2009 (Public Law 110-417; 122 Stat. 4377), is amended—

- (1) by striking “(a) LIMITATION.—”; and
- (2) by striking subsection (b).

SEC. 132. MULTIYEAR PROCUREMENT AUTHORITY FOR C-130J AIRCRAFT.

(a) AUTHORITY FOR MULTIYEAR PROCUREMENT.—Subject to section 2306b of title 10, United States Code, the Secretary of the Air Force may enter into one or more multiyear contracts, beginning with the fiscal year 2014 program year, for the procurement of C-130J aircraft for the Department of the Air Force and the Department of the Navy.

(b) CONDITION FOR OUT-YEAR CONTRACT PAYMENTS.—A contract entered into under subsection (a) shall provide that any obligation of the United States to make a payment under the contract for a fiscal year after fiscal year 2014 is subject to the availability of appropriations for that purpose for such later fiscal year.

SEC. 133. PROHIBITION ON CANCELLATION OR MODIFICATION OF AVIONICS MODERNIZATION PROGRAM FOR C-130 AIRCRAFT.

(a) PROHIBITION.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Air Force may be used to—

- (1) take any action to cancel or modify the avionics modernization program of record for C-130 aircraft; or
- (2) initiate an alternative communication, navigation, surveillance, and air traffic management program for C-130 aircraft that is designed or intended to replace the avionics modernization program described in paragraph (1).

(b) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT.—Not later than April 1, 2014, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the congressional defense committees a sufficiency review of the cost-benefit analysis conducted under section 143(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1662), including any findings and recommendations relating to such review.

SEC. 134. PROHIBITION OF PROCUREMENT OF UNNECESSARY C-27J AIRCRAFT BY THE AIR FORCE.

None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2012 (Public Law 112-81) for aircraft procurement, Air Force, that remain available to the Secretary of the Air Force on or after the date of the enactment of this Act may be obligated or expended for the procurement of additional C-27J aircraft that are not on contract as of June 1, 2013.

Subtitle E—Defense-wide, Joint, and Multiservice Matters

SEC. 141. PERSONAL PROTECTION EQUIPMENT PROCUREMENT.

(a) CONSOLIDATED BUDGET JUSTIFICATION DISPLAY.—Chapter 9 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 235 the following new section:

“§236. Personal protection equipment procurement: display of budget information

“(a) BUDGET JUSTIFICATION DISPLAY.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress, as a part of the defense budget materials for each fiscal year after fiscal year 2014, a consolidated budget justification display that covers all programs and activities associated with the procurement of personal protection equipment during the period covered by the future-years defense program submitted in that fiscal year under section 221.

“(b) REQUIREMENTS FOR BUDGET DISPLAY.—The consolidated budget justification display under subsection (a) for a fiscal year shall include the following:

“(1) The amount for personal protection equipment included in both the base budget of the President and any overseas contingency operations budget of the President.

“(2) A brief description of each category of personal protection equipment for each military department planned to be procured and developed.

“(3) For each category planned to be procured using funds made available for operation and maintenance (whether under the base budget or any overseas contingency operations budget)—

“(A) the relevant appropriations account, budget activity, and subactivity group for the category; and

“(B) the funding profile for the fiscal year as requested, including cost and quantities, and an estimate of projected investments or procurements for each of the subsequent five fiscal years.

“(4) For each category planned to be developed using funds made available for research, development, test, and evaluation (whether under the base budget or any overseas contingency operations budget)—

“(A) the relevant appropriations account, program, project or activity; program element number, and line number; and

“(B) the funding profile for the fiscal year as requested and an estimate of projected investments for each of the subsequent five fiscal years.

“(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) The terms ‘budget’ and ‘defense budget materials’ have the meaning given those terms in section 234 of this title.

“(2) The term ‘category of personal protection equipment’ means the following:

“(A) Body armor components.

“(B) Combat helmets.

“(C) Combat protective eyewear.

“(D) Other items as determined appropriate by the Secretary.”.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding after the item relating to section 235 the following new item:

“236. Personal protection equipment procurement: display of budget information.”.

SEC. 142. REPEAL OF CERTAIN F-35 REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

Section 122 of the Ike Skelton National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2011 (Public Law 111-383; 124 Stat. 4157) is amended—

- (1) by striking subsection (b); and
- (2) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (b).

SEC. 143. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR RETIREMENT OF RQ-4 GLOBAL HAWK UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS AND A-10 AIRCRAFT.

(a) LIMITATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended to make significant changes to manning levels with respect to covered aircraft or to retire, prepare to retire, or place in storage a covered aircraft.

(2) COVERED AIRCRAFT.—In this subsection, the term “covered aircraft” means the following:

(A) A-10 aircraft (except for such aircraft that the Secretary of the Air Force, as of April 9, 2013, plans to retire).

(B) RQ-4 Block 30 Global Hawk unmanned aircraft systems.

(b) ADDITIONAL LIMITATION ON RETIREMENT OF CERTAIN A-10 AIRCRAFT.—In addition to the limitation in subsection (a)(1), during the period preceding December 31, 2014, the Secretary of the Air Force may not retire, prepare to retire, or place in storage A-10 aircraft (except for such aircraft that the Secretary, as of April 9, 2013, plans to retire).

(c) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense, in coordination with the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on all high-altitude airborne intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance systems operated, or planned for future operation, by the Department of Defense.

(2) MATTERS INCLUDED.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) the intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance capabilities of each high-altitude intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance system covered by the report;

(B) the plans to upgrade such capabilities in the future;

(C) the fully-burdened cost-per-flight-hour of each such system;

(D) the number of requests for each such system made by commanders of the combatant commands during the five-year period prior to the report, including the percentage of such requests that have been fulfilled to meet the requirements of such commanders;

(E) a description of the assumptions used by the Secretary in carrying out this subsection; and

(F) any other information that the Secretary considers appropriate with respect to the analysis of high-altitude intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance systems.

(3) FORM.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

(4) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate; and

(B) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

(d) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit or otherwise affect the requirement to maintain the operational capability of RQ-4 Block 30 Global Hawk unmanned aircraft systems under section 154(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1666).

SEC. 144. MC-12 LIBERTY INTELLIGENCE, SURVEILLANCE, AND RECONNAISSANCE AIRCRAFT.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Beginning on the date that is 60 days after the date on which the Secretary of Defense submits the report under subsection (d)(1), the Secretary may transfer MC-12 Liberty intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance aircraft from the Air Force to the Army in accordance with the plan developed under subsection (b)(1).

(b) PLAN.—

(1) PLAN REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall develop a plan for the potential transfer of MC-12 Liberty intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance aircraft from the Air Force to the Army pursuant to subsection (a).

(2) ELEMENTS.—The plan required by paragraph (1) shall—

(A) ensure that any transfer described in such paragraph does not adversely affect ongoing intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance operations, including such operations in Afghanistan;

(B) identify the appropriate size, composition, and configuration of the fleet of MC-12 Liberty intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance aircraft required by the Army;

(C) identify the appropriate size, composition, configuration, and disposition of the remaining fleet of MC-12 Liberty intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance aircraft required by the Air Force;

(D) provide for the modification of the MC-12 Liberty intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance aircraft that are transferred to the Army pursuant to the plan in order to meet the long-term needs of the Army; and

(E) for any aircraft that are so transferred, include a time line for the orderly transfer of the aircraft in a manner consistent with subparagraph (A).

(c) EFFECT ON OTHER PROGRAMS.—

(1) PROHIBITION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR PROCUREMENT.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Army may be obligated or expended to procure additional aircraft under the Enhanced Medium Altitude Reconnaissance and Surveillance System program during fiscal year 2014.

(2) CONVERSION OF AIRCRAFT.—The Secretary of the Army shall convert aircraft described in paragraph (3) to the Enhanced Medium Altitude Reconnaissance and Surveillance System program configuration to meet the requirements of the Army. The Secretary shall carry out this paragraph using funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2013 or 2014 for the Enhanced Medium Altitude Reconnaissance and Surveillance System program.

(3) AIRCRAFT DESCRIBED.—The aircraft described in this paragraph are the following:

(A) MC-12 Liberty intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance aircraft of the Air Force that are transferred to the Army pursuant to subsection (a).

(B) Army Medium Altitude Multi-Intelligence intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance C-12 Quick Reaction Capability aircraft.

(d) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than the date on which the budget of the President for fiscal year 2015 is submitted to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the plan required by subsection (b)(1).

(2) FORM.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

(3) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate; and

(B) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 145. COMPETITION FOR EVOLVED EXPENDABLE LAUNCH VEHICLE PROVIDERS.

(a) PLAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Air Force shall develop a plan to implement the new acquisition strategy for the evolved expendable launch vehicle program described in the acquisition decision memorandum dated November 27, 2012.

(2) MATTERS INCLUDED.—The plan to implement the new acquisition strategy for the evolved expendable launch vehicle program under paragraph (1) shall include a general description of how the Secretary will conduct competition with respect to awarding a contract to certified evolved expendable launch vehicle providers. Such description may include the following with respect to such acquisition strategy:

(A) The proposed cost, schedule, and performance.

(B) Mission assurance activities.

(C) The manner in which the contractor will operate under the Federal Acquisition Regulation.

(D) The effect of other contracts in which the contractor is entered into with the Federal Government, including the evolved expendable launch vehicle launch capability contract, the space station commercial resupply services contracts, and other relevant contracts regarding national security space and strategic programs.

(E) Any other areas the Secretary determines appropriate.

(b) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—At the same time that the Secretary issues a draft of the request for proposals with respect to a contract for the evolved expendable launch vehicle provider, the Secretary shall—

(A) submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that includes the plan under subsection (a)(1); or

(B) provide to such committees a briefing on such plan.

(2) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term

“appropriate congressional committees” means the following:

(A) The congressional defense committees.

(B) The Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate.

(C) The Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate.

SEC. 146. REPORTS ON PERSONAL PROTECTION EQUIPMENT AND HEALTH AND SAFETY RISKS ASSOCIATED WITH EJECTION SEATS.

(a) STUDY ON PERSONAL PROTECTION EQUIPMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall enter into a contract with a federally funded research and development center to conduct a study to identify and assess cost-effective and efficient alternative means for the procurement and research and development of personal protection equipment that supports and promotes competition and innovation in the personal protection equipment industrial base.

(2) SUBMISSION.—Not later than 120 days after the date on which the contract is entered into under paragraph (1), the federally funded research and development center conducting the study under such paragraph shall submit to the Secretary the study, including any findings and recommendations.

(3) REPORT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which the Secretary receives the study under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report that includes the study under paragraph (1), the matters described in subparagraph (B), and any related findings, recommendations, comments, and plans of the Secretary.

(B) MATTERS INCLUDED.—The report under subparagraph (A) shall include the following:

(i) The findings and recommendations of the federally funded research and development center submitted to the Secretary under paragraph (2).

(ii) An assessment of current and future technologies that could markedly improve body armor, including by decreasing weight, increasing survivability, and making other relevant improvements.

(iii) An analysis of the capability of the personal protection equipment industrial base to leverage such technologies to produce the next generation body armor.

(iv) An assessment of alternative body armor acquisition models, including different types of contracting and budgeting practices of the Department of Defense.

(4) PERSONAL PROTECTION EQUIPMENT.—In this subsection, the term “personal protection equipment” includes—

(A) body armor components;

(B) combat helmets;

(C) combat protective eyewear;

(D) environmental and fire-resistant clothing; and

(E) other individual equipment items as determined appropriate by the Secretary.

(b) REPORT ON HEALTH AND SAFETY RISKS ASSOCIATED WITH EJECTION SEATS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Air Force shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth an assessment of the risks to the health and safety of members of the Armed Forces of the ejection seats currently in operational use by the Air Force.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) An assessment of whether aircrew members wearing advanced helmets, night vision systems, helmet-mounted cueing system, or other helmet-mounted devices or attachments are at increased risk of serious injury or death during a high-speed ejection sequence.

(B) An analysis of how ejection seats currently in operational use provide protection against head, neck, and spinal cord injuries during an ejection sequence.

(C) An analysis of initiatives to decrease the risk of death or serious injury during an ejection sequence.

(D) The status of any testing or qualifications on upgraded ejection seats that may reduce the risk of death or serious injury during an ejection sequence.

TITLE II—RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Sec. 201. Authorization of appropriations.

Subtitle B—Program Requirements, Restrictions, and Limitations

Sec. 211. Modification of requirements on biennial strategic plan for the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

Sec. 212. Limitation on availability of funds for ground combat vehicle engineering and manufacturing phase.

Sec. 213. Limitation and reporting requirements for unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system program.

Sec. 214. Limitation on availability of funds for Air Force logistics transformation.

Sec. 215. Limitation on availability of funds for defensive cyberspace operations of the Air Force.

Sec. 216. Limitation on availability of funds for precision extended range munition program.

Sec. 217. Long-range standoff weapon requirement; prohibition on availability of funds for non-competitive procedures for offensive anti-surface warfare weapon contracts of the Navy.

Sec. 218. Review of software development for F-35 aircraft.

Sec. 219. Evaluation and assessment of the distributed common ground system.

Sec. 220. Operationally responsive space.

Sec. 221. Sustainment or replacement of Blue Devil intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance capabilities.

Subtitle C—Missile Defense Programs

Sec. 231. Improvements to acquisition accountability reports on ballistic missile defense system.

Sec. 232. Prohibition on use of funds for MEADS program.

Sec. 233. Prohibition on availability of funds for integration of certain missile defense systems; report on regional ballistic missile defense.

Sec. 234. Availability of funds for co-production of Iron Dome short-range rocket defense system in the United States.

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

SEC. 201. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2014 for the use of the Department of Defense for research, development, test, and evaluation as specified in the funding table in section 4201.

Subtitle B—Program Requirements, Restrictions, and Limitations

SEC. 211. MODIFICATION OF REQUIREMENTS ON BIENNIAL STRATEGIC PLAN FOR THE DEFENSE ADVANCED RESEARCH PROJECTS AGENCY.

(a) ELEMENTS OF STRATEGIC PLAN.—Subsection (b) of section 2352 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

“(1) The strategic objectives of that agency, and the linkage between such objectives and the missions of the armed forces.”;

(2) in paragraph (2)(A), by striking “goals” and inserting “objectives”;

(3) by striking paragraph (3);

(4) by redesignating paragraphs (4) and (5) as paragraphs (3) and (4), respectively; and

(5) in paragraph (3), as redesignated by paragraph (4) of this subsection, by striking

“for the programs of that agency” and inserting “for programs demonstrating military systems to one or more of the armed forces”.

(b) RESPONSIBILITY FOR SUBMISSION OF PLAN.—Subsection (c) of such section is amended by striking “Secretary of Defense shall” and inserting “Director shall, in coordination with the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics.”.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to biennial strategic plans submitted under section 2352 of title 10, United States Code, as amended by this section, after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 212. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR GROUND COMBAT VEHICLE ENGINEERING AND MANUFACTURING PHASE.

None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Army may be obligated or expended for post-Milestone B engineering and manufacturing phase development activities for the ground combat vehicle program until a period of 30 days has elapsed following the date on which the Secretary of the Army submits to the congressional defense committees a report that includes the following:

(1) An independent assessment of the draft milestone B documentation for the ground combat vehicle that—

(A) is performed by the Director of Cost Assessment and Program Evaluation, the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering, or other similar official; and

(B) analyzes whether there is a sufficient business case to proceed with the engineering and manufacturing development phase for the ground combat vehicle using only one contractor.

(2) A certification by the Secretary that the ground combat vehicle program has—

(A) feasible, fully defined, and stable requirements;

(B) been demonstrated in a relevant environment in accordance with section 2366b(a)(3)(D) of title 10, United States Code, and achieved technology readiness or maturity;

(C) independent and high-confidence cost estimates;

(D) sufficient funding available during fiscal year 2014 and sufficient funding planned for the period covered by the current future-years defense plan; and

(E) a realistic and achievable schedule.

SEC. 213. LIMITATION AND REPORTING REQUIREMENTS FOR UNMANNED CARRIER-LAUNCHED SURVEILLANCE AND STRIKE SYSTEM PROGRAM.

(a) LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF AIR VEHICLES.—The Secretary of Defense may not acquire more than six air vehicles of the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system prior to receiving milestone B approval (as defined in section 2366(e)(7) of title 10, United States Code) for engineering and manufacturing development and low-rate initial production.

(b) QUARTERLY COST REPORTS.—Beginning 90 days after the date on which the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system receives milestone A approval, and each 90-day period thereafter until such system receives milestone B approval, the Secretary of the Navy shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report that includes, at a minimum—

(1) the current cost estimate and schedule, as of the date of the report, for all segments of the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system program;

(2) any changes to such cost estimate or schedule from the previous report; and

(3) an explanation for any changes to the cost estimate or schedule or to the key performance parameters or key system attributes used for such program.

(c) BUDGET DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENT.—In the budget materials submitted to the President by the Secretary of Defense in connection with the submission to Congress, pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, of the budget for fiscal year 2015, and each subsequent fiscal year, the Secretary shall include individual project lines for each program segment of the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system, within program element 0604404N, that articulate all costs, contractual actions, and other information associated with technology development for each such program segment.

(d) ANNUAL GAO REVIEW.—

(1) REVIEW.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall annually conduct a review of the acquisition program for the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than March 1 of each year, the Comptroller General shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the review under paragraph (1).

(3) ELEMENTS.—Each report under paragraph (2) shall include such matters as the Comptroller General considers appropriate to fully inform the congressional defense committees of the status of the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system program. Such matters should include, at a minimum, the following:

(A) The extent to which the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system program is meeting cost, schedule, and performance goals.

(B) The progress and results of developmental testing.

(C) An assessment of the acquisition strategy for the program, including whether the strategy is consistent with acquisition management best practices identified by the Comptroller General for the purposes of the program.

(4) SUNSET.—The Comptroller General shall carry out this subsection until the earlier of—

(A) the date on which the Secretary of the Navy awards a contract for the full-rate production of the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system; or

(B) the date on which the unmanned carrier-launched surveillance and strike system program is terminated.

SEC. 214. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR AIR FORCE LOGISTICS TRANSFORMATION.

Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for procurement, Air Force, or research, development, test, and evaluation, Air Force, for logistics information technology, including for the expeditionary combat support system, not more than 85 percent may be obligated or expended until the date that is 30 days after the date on which the Secretary of the Air Force submits to the congressional defense committees a report on how the Secretary will modernize and update the logistics information technology systems of the Air Force following the cancellation of the expeditionary combat support system. Such report shall include—

(1) a detailed strategy and timeline for implementing the recommendations from the Expeditionary Combat Support System Acquisition Investigation Review Team Final Report; and

(2) a description of the near-term options for maintaining or incrementally modernizing the logistics information technology systems of the Air Force until a replacement for the expeditionary combat support system can be determined.

SEC. 215. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR DEFENSIVE CYBERSPACE OPERATIONS OF THE AIR FORCE.

(a) LIMITATION.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for procurement, Air Force, or research, development, test, and evaluation, Air Force, for Defensive Cyberspace Operations (Program Element 0202088F), not more than 90 percent may be obligated or expended until a period of 30 days has elapsed following the date on which the Secretary of the Air Force submits to the congressional defense committees a report on the Application Software Assurance Center of Excellence.

(b) MATTERS INCLUDED.—The report under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) A description of how the Application Software Assurance Center of Excellence is used to support the software assurance activities of the Air Force and other elements of the Department of Defense, including pursuant to section 933 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 10 U.S.C. 2224 note).

(2) A description of the resources used to support the Center of Excellence from the beginning of the Center through fiscal year 2014.

(3) The plan of the Secretary for sustaining the Center of Excellence during the period covered by the future-years defense program submitted in 2013 under section 221 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 216. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR PRECISION EXTENDED RANGE MUNITION PROGRAM.

Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Department of Defense, not more than 50 percent may be obligated or expended for the precision extended range munition program until the date on which the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff submits to the congressional defense committees written certification that—

(1) such program is necessary to meet a valid operational need that cannot be met by the existing precision guided mortar munition of the Army, other indirect fire weapons, or aerial-delivered joint fires; and

(2) a sufficient business case exists to proceed with the development and production of such program.

SEC. 217. LONG-RANGE STANDOFF WEAPON REQUIREMENT; PROHIBITION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR NON-COMPETITIVE PROCEDURES FOR OFFENSIVE ANTI-SURFACE WARFARE WEAPON CONTRACTS OF THE NAVY.

(a) LONG-RANGE STANDOFF WEAPON.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Air Force shall develop a follow-on air-launched cruise missile to the AGM-86 that—

(A) achieves initial operating capability for conventional missions prior to the retirement of the conventionally armed AGM-86;

(B) achieves initial operating capability for nuclear missions prior to the retirement of the nuclear-armed AGM-86; and

(C) is capable of internal carriage and employment for both conventional and nuclear missions on the next-generation long-range strike bomber.

(2) CONSECUTIVE DEVELOPMENT.—In developing a follow-on air-launched cruise missile to the AGM-86 in accordance with paragraph (1), the Secretary may carry out development and production activities with respect to nuclear missions prior to carrying out such activities with respect to conventional missions if the Secretary determines such consecutive order of development and production activities to be cost effective.

(b) OFFENSIVE ANTI-SURFACE WARFARE WEAPON CONTRACTS OF THE NAVY.—

(1) PROHIBITION.—Except as provided by paragraph (2), none of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the offensive anti-surface warfare weapon may be used to enter into or modify a contract using procedures other than competitive procedures (as defined in section 2302(2) of title 10, United States Code).

(2) EXEMPTION; WAIVER.—

(A) EXEMPTED ACTIVITIES.—The prohibition in paragraph (1) shall not apply to funds specified in such paragraph that are made available for the development, testing, and fielding of aircraft-launched offensive anti-surface warfare weapons capabilities.

(B) NATIONAL SECURITY WAIVER AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Defense may waive the prohibition in paragraph (1) if the Secretary determines that such a waiver is in the national security interests of the United States.

SEC. 218. REVIEW OF SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT FOR F-35 AIRCRAFT.

(a) SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.—

(1) REVIEW.—The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics shall establish an independent team consisting of subject matter experts to review the development of software for the F-35 aircraft program (in this subsection referred to as the “software development program”), including by reviewing the progress made with respect to—

(A) managing the software development program; and

(B) delivering critical software capability in accordance with current program milestones.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than March 3, 2014, the Under Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the review under paragraph (1). Such report shall include the following:

(A) An assessment by the independent team with respect to whether the software development program—

(i) has been successful in meeting the key milestone dates occurring before the date of the report; and

(ii) will be successful in meeting the established program schedule.

(B) Any recommendations of the independent team with respect to improving the software development program to ensure that, in support of the start of initial operational testing, the established program schedule is met on time.

(C) If the independent team determines that the software development program will be unable to deliver the full complement of software within the established program schedule, any potential alternatives that the independent team considers appropriate to deliver such software within such schedule.

(b) AUTONOMIC LOGISTICS INFORMATION SYSTEM SUSTAINMENT REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Under Secretary, in consultation with the Joint Strike Fighter Joint Program Office, shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on current plans, as of the date of the report, for long-term sustainment of the autonomic logistics information system of F-35 aircraft. Such report shall include the following:

(1) Current plans for acquisition of technical data rights to autonomic logistics information system software and the potential competitive sustainment of elements of the autonomic logistics information system.

(2) How sustainment of the autonomic logistics information system may take advantage of public-private partnerships authorized by section 2474 of title 10, United States Code, including schedules for actions necessary for such sustainment.

(3) Any current plan to select, designate, and activate any Government-owned and Government-operated site to serve as the autonomic logistics operating unit.

(4) Current plans to ensure that the autonomic logistics information system provides total asset visibility and accountability, including asset valuation and tracking, and for potential integration with other automated logistics systems.

SEC. 219. EVALUATION AND ASSESSMENT OF THE DISTRIBUTED COMMON GROUND SYSTEM.

(a) PROJECT CODES FOR BUDGET SUBMISSIONS.—In the budget submitted by the President to Congress under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, for fiscal year 2015 and each subsequent fiscal year, each capability component within the distributed common ground system program shall be set forth as a separate project code within the program element line, and each covered official shall submit supporting justification for the project code within the program element descriptive summary.

(b) ANALYSIS.—

(1) REQUIREMENT.—The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics shall conduct an analysis of capability components that are compliant with the intelligence community data standards and could be used to meet the requirements of the distributed common ground system program.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The analysis required under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) Revalidation of the distributed common ground system program requirements based on current program needs, recent operational experience, and the requirement for nonproprietary solutions that adhere to open-architecture principles.

(B) Market research of current commercially available tools to determine whether any such tools could potentially satisfy the requirements described in subparagraph (A).

(C) Analysis of the competitive acquisition options for any tools identified in subparagraph (B).

(3) SUBMISSION.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Under Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees the results of the analysis conducted under paragraph (1).

(c) COVERED OFFICIAL DEFINED.—In this section, the term “covered official” means the following:

(1) The Secretary of the Army, with respect to matters concerning the Army.

(2) The Secretary of the Navy, with respect to matters concerning the Navy.

(3) The Secretary of the Air Force, with respect to matters concerning the Air Force.

(4) The Commandant of the Marine Corps, with respect to matters concerning the Marine Corps.

(5) The Commander of the United States Special Operations Command, with respect to matters concerning the United States Special Operations Command.

SEC. 220. OPERATIONALLY RESPONSIVE SPACE.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) it remains the policy of the United States, as expressed in section 913(a) of the John Warner National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2007 (Public Law 109-364; 120 Stat. 2355), to demonstrate, acquire, and deploy an effective capability for operationally responsive space to support military users and operations from space, which shall consist of—

(A) responsive satellite payloads and busses built to common technical standards;

(B) low-cost space launch vehicles and supporting range operations that facilitate the timely launch and on-orbit operations of satellites;

(C) responsive command and control capabilities; and

(D) concepts of operations, tactics, techniques, and procedures that permit the use of responsive space assets for combat and military operations other than war; and

(2) the Operationally Responsive Space Program Office has demonstrated through multiple launches since 2009 an ability to accomplish many of the policy objectives of the Operationally Responsive Space Program through specific missions, but has not executed a mission that leverages all policy objectives of such Program in a single mission.

(b) LIMITATION.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Department of Defense for the space-based infrared systems space modernization initiative wide-field-of-view testbed, not more than 50 percent may be obligated or expended until the Executive Agent for Space of the Department of Defense certifies to the congressional defense committees that the Secretary of Defense is carrying out the Operationally Responsive Space Program Office in accordance with section 2273a of title 10, United States Code.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Executive Agent for Space of the Department of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report regarding a potential mission that would seek to leverage all policy objectives of the Operationally Responsive Space Program in a single mission.

SEC. 221. SUSTAINMENT OR REPLACEMENT OF BLUE DEVIL INTELLIGENCE, SURVEILLANCE, AND RECONNAISSANCE CAPABILITIES.

(a) PLAN TO RETAIN CAPABILITY.—The Secretary of the Air Force shall develop a plan to sustain the operational capabilities of the Blue Devil 1 Intelligence, Surveillance, and Reconnaissance Systems (in this section referred to as “Blue Devil 1 system”), including precision signal geolocation, by—

(1) procuring the existing Blue Devil 1 system;

(2) developing a new system; or

(3) basing a new system on capabilities that are adapted and integrated from existing programs and programs being developed.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on—

(1) the potential cost of procuring, operating, and sustaining current Blue Devil 1 systems for fiscal years 2014 through 2019, including costs relating to procurement, research and development, personnel, operation and maintenance, and military construction;

(2) the ability of other current platforms and subsystems as of the date of the report to provide intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance support similar to the support provided by the current Blue Devil 1 system; and

(3) a listing of programs of the Air Force and other programs of the Department of Defense in development as of the date of the report that could provide such similar support in the future.

(c) REQUIREMENT TO COORDINATE.—In preparing the report under subsection (b), the Secretary shall—

(1) coordinate with the Commander of the United States Special Operations Command regarding the operational needs of the United States Special Operations Command; and

(2) coordinate with the Director of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency with respect to information regarding the transfer to the Air Force of the technology developed under the wide-area network detection program for operational integration of wide-area motion imagery and near-vertical direction-finding data for effective target detection, identification, and tracking for potential incorporation, as practical and appropriate, into other platforms.

(d) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(1) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate; and

(2) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

Subtitle C—Missile Defense Programs

SEC. 231. IMPROVEMENTS TO ACQUISITION ACCOUNTABILITY REPORTS ON BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE SYSTEM.

(a) IMPROVEMENT TO OPERATIONS AND SUSTAINMENT COST ESTIMATES.—In preparing the acquisition accountability reports on the ballistic missile defense system required by section 225 of title 10, United States Code, the Director of the Missile Defense Agency shall improve the quality of cost estimates relating to operations and sustainment that are included in such reports under subsection (b)(3)(A) of such section, including with respect to the confidence levels of such cost estimates.

(b) OPERATIONS AND SUSTAINMENT RESPONSIBILITY.—Section 225 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(e) OPERATIONS AND SUSTAINMENT COST ESTIMATES.—The Director shall ensure that each life-cycle cost estimate included in an acquisition baseline pursuant to subsection (b)(3)(A) includes—

“(1) all of the operations and sustainment costs for which the Director is responsible; and

“(2) a description of the operations and sustainment functions and costs for which a military department is responsible.”.

(c) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Missile Defense Agency shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report outlining the plans of the Director to improve the quality of cost estimates pursuant to subsection (a).

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) a description of the actions planned to improve the quality of cost estimates included in the acquisition accountability reports on the ballistic missile defense system required by section 225 of title 10, United States Code;

(B) the schedule for such planned actions, including the planned schedule for meeting the requirements of subsection (e) of such section 225, as added by subsection (b);

(C) a description of any steps taken during the previous year to improve the quality of such cost estimates;

(D) an assessment of how the planned improvements compare to the best practices and cost-estimation guidelines recommended by the Comptroller General of the United States for cost estimates of the ballistic missile defense system;

(E) any other matters the Director considers appropriate; and

(F) the views of the Comptroller General of the United States with respect to the contents of the report.

(3) FORM.—The report under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form.

SEC. 232. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR MEADS PROGRAM.

None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended for the medium extended air defense system.

SEC. 233. PROHIBITION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR INTEGRATION OF CERTAIN MISSILE DEFENSE SYSTEMS; REPORT ON REGIONAL BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE.

(a) PROHIBITION ON INTEGRATION OF CERTAIN SYSTEMS.—

(1) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that missile defense systems of the People's Republic of China should not be integrated into the missile defense systems of the United States or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

(2) PROHIBITION.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended to integrate missile defense systems of the People's Republic of China into missile defense systems of the United States.

(b) REPORT ON REGIONAL BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the status and progress of regional missile defense programs and efforts.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) A description of the overall risk assessment from the most recent Global Ballistic Missile Defense Assessment of regional missile defense capabilities relative to meeting the operational needs of the commanders of the geographic combatant commands, including the need for force protection of forward-deployed forces and capabilities of the United States and for the defense of allies and partners of the United States.

(B) An assessment of whether and how the currently planned phased, adaptive approach to missile defense in Europe and other planned regional missile defense approaches and capabilities of the United States meet the integrated priorities of the commanders of the geographic combatant commands to achieve the operational requirements of the commanders to defend against the ballistic missile threat to deployed forces of the United States and allies of the United States, including a description of planned force structure deployment options to increase missile defense capabilities in the area of responsibility of a commander, if needed, in the event of warning of an imminent ballistic missile attack.

(C) A detailed explanation of the current and planned concept of operations for the phased, adaptive approach to missile defense in Europe, including—

(i) arrangements for allocating the command of assets of such approach between the Commander of the United States European Command and the Supreme Allied Commander, Europe;

(ii) an explanation of the circumstances under which such command would be allocated to each commander; and

(iii) a description of the prioritization of defense of both the deployed forces of the United States and the territory of the member states of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization using available missile defense interceptor inventory.

(D) A description of the progress made in the development and testing of elements of systems intended for deployment in phases 2 and 3 of the phased, adaptive approach to missile defense in Europe, including the standard missile-3 block IB, the standard missile-3 block IIA interceptors, and the Aegis Ashore system, and any areas where work remains to ensure such phases are ready for deployment as specified in the 2010 Ballistic Missile Defense Review.

(E) A description of the manner in which elements of regional missile defense architectures, such as forward-based X-band radars in Japan, Israel, Turkey, and the area of responsibility of the Commander of the United States Central Command, contribute to the enhancement of the homeland defense of the United States.

(F) A description of the manner in which enhanced integration of offensive military capabilities and defensive missile defense capabilities, including the potential for improved intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance, will fit into regional missile defense planning and force structure assessments.

(G) A description of how the contributions of allies and partners of the United States that have purchased missile defense technology of the United States could aid in reducing the costs of deployment of regional missile defense capabilities of the United States, and how the systems of such allies and partners could be better networked and integrated to provide mutual force multiplication benefits.

(H) A description of how the Secretary of Defense is working with allies and partners of the United States that have purchased air and missile defense technology of the United States to integrate the capabilities of such allies and partners provided by such technology with the air and missile defense systems and networks of the United States to provide mutual benefit.

(I) Any other matters the Secretary determines appropriate.

(3) FORM.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

SEC. 234. AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR CO-PRODUCTION OF IRON DOME SHORT-RANGE ROCKET DEFENSE SYSTEM IN THE UNITED STATES.

(a) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for research, development, test, and evaluation,

Defense-wide, for the Missile Defense Agency, not more than $15,000,000 may be obligated or expended for nonrecurring engineering costs in connection with the establishment of a capacity for co-production in the United States by industry of the United States of parts and components for the Iron Dome short-range rocket defense program. Such obligation or expenditure shall be made pursuant to an agreement described in paragraph (2).

(2) AGREEMENT DESCRIBED.—An agreement described in this paragraph is an agreement entered into by the Government of the United States and the Government of Israel with respect to the co-production in the United States of parts and components for the Iron Dome short-range rocket defense program.

(b) REPORT ON CO-PRODUCTION.—Not later than 30 days after obligating or expending funds specified in subsection (a), the Director of the Missile Defense Agency shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the plan to implement an agreement described in paragraph (2) of such subsection, including the following:

(1) A description of the estimated cost of implementing the agreement, including the costs to be paid by industry.

(2) The expected schedule to implement the agreement.

(3) A description of any efforts to minimize the costs of the agreement to the Government of the United States.

(c) REPORT ON MISSILE DEFENSE COOPERATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the status of missile defense cooperation between the United States and Israel.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) A description of the current program of ballistic missile defense cooperation between the United States and Israel, including the objectives and results of such cooperation as of the date of the report.

(B) A description of steps taken during the year prior to the report, and steps planned to be taken during the year following the report, by the governments of the United States and Israel to improve the coordination, interoperability, and integration of the missile defense capabilities of the United States and Israel.

(C) A description of joint missile defense exercises and training that have been conducted by the United States and Israel, and the lessons learned from such exercises.

(D) A description of joint efforts of the United States and Israel to develop ballistic missile defense technologies and capabilities.

(E) Any other matters that the Secretary considers appropriate.

(d) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or affect the procurement schedule, or anticipated procurement numbers, under the Iron Dome short-range rocket defense program.

(e) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) second-source production of parts and components of the Iron Dome short-range rocket defense program that is based in the United States is in the national security interest of both Israel and the United States; and

(2) the move towards such a second-source capacity in the United States for integration and assembly of all-up rounds of the Iron Dome short-range rocket defense program will further enhance the security of Israel by ensuring added production capability of such vital program.

SEC. 235. ADDITIONAL MISSILE DEFENSE RADAR FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE UNITED STATES HOMELAND.

(a) DEPLOYMENT OF LONG-RANGE DISCRIMINATING RADAR.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Missile Defense Agency shall deploy a long-range discriminating radar against long-range ballistic missile threats from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. Such radar shall be located at a location optimized to support the defense of the homeland of the United States.

(2) FUNDING.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act for research, development, test, and evaluation, Defense-wide, for the Missile Defense Agency for BMD Sensors (PE 63884C), as specified in the funding table in section 4201, $30,000,000 shall be available for initial costs toward the deployment of the radar required by paragraph (1).

(b) ADDITIONAL SENSOR COVERAGE FOR THREATS FROM IRAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the Secretary is able to deploy additional tracking and discrimination sensor capabilities to support the defense of the homeland of the United States from future long-range ballistic missile threats that emerge from Iran.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report that details what sensor capabilities of the United States, including re-locatable land- and sea-based capabilities, are or will become available to support the defense of the homeland of the United States from future long-range ballistic missile threats that emerge from Iran. Such report shall include the following:

(A) With respect to the capabilities included in the report, an identification of such capabilities that can be located on the Atlantic-side of the United States by not later than 2019, or sooner if long-range ballistic missile threats from Iran are successfully flight-tested prior to 2019.

(B) A description of the manner in which the United States will maintain such capabilities so as to ensure the deployment of the capabilities in time to support the missile defense of the United States from long-range ballistic missile threats from Iran.

SEC. 236. EVALUATION OF OPTIONS FOR FUTURE BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE SENSOR ARCHITECTURES.

(a) EVALUATION REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense, acting through the Commander of the United States Strategic Command, shall conduct an evaluation of options and alternatives for future sensor architectures for ballistic missile defense in order to enhance the ballistic missile defense capabilities of the United States.

(2) CONSULTATION.—In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consult with the heads of departments and agencies of the Federal Government that the Secretary determines appropriate.

(3) SCOPE OF EVALUATION.—In conducting the evaluation under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consider the following:

(A) A wide range of options for a future sensor architecture for ballistic missile defense, including—

(i) options regarding the future development, integration, exploitation, and deployment of existing or new missile defense sensor systems and assets; and

(ii) options regarding using capabilities of the Federal Government that exist or are planned as of the date of the evaluation that are not primarily focused on missile defense, including such capabilities that may require modification to be used for missile defense.

(B) The potential costs, advantages, and feasibility of using such future sensor architecture for purposes other than missile defense, including for technical intelligence collection or space situational awareness.

(C) Whether and how such future sensor architectures could be designed and employed to fulfill missions other than missile defense when not required for such missile defense missions.

(4) OBJECTIVE.—The objective of the evaluation shall be to identify one or more future sensor architectures for ballistic missile defense that will result in an improvement of the performance of the ballistic missile defense system in a cost-effective, operationally effective, timely, and affordable manner.

(b) ELEMENTS TO BE EVALUATED.—The evaluation required by subsection (a) shall include a consideration of the following:

(1) SENSOR TYPES.—At a minimum, the types of sensors as follows:

- (A) Radar.
- (B) Infrared.
- (C) Optical and electro-optical.
- (D) Directed energy.

(2) SENSOR MODES.—Deployment modes of sensors as follows:

- (A) Ground-based sensors.
- (B) Sea-based sensors.
- (C) Airborne sensors.
- (D) Space-based sensors.

(3) SENSOR FUNCTIONS.—At a minimum, missile defense-related sensor functions as follows:

- (A) Detection.
- (B) Tracking.
- (C) Characterization.
- (D) Classification.
- (E) Discrimination.
- (F) Debris mitigation.
- (G) Kill assessment.

(4) SENSOR ARCHITECTURE CAPABILITIES.—At a minimum, maximization or improvement of sensor-related capabilities as follows:

- (A) Handling of increasing raid sizes.
- (B) Precision tracking of threat missiles.
- (C) Providing fire-control quality tracks of evolving threat missiles.
- (D) Enabling launch-on-remote and engage-on-remote capabilities.
- (E) Discriminating lethal objects (warheads) from other objects.
- (F) Effectively assessing the results of engagements.
- (G) Enabling enhanced shot doctrine.
- (H) Other capabilities that the Secretary of Defense determines appropriate.

(c) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth the results of the evaluation required by subsection (a).

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the Secretary with respect to—

(A) future sensor architectures evaluated under subsection (a)(3)(A)(i).

(B) existing or planned capabilities of the Federal Government evaluated under subsection (a)(3)(A)(ii);

(C) using future sensor architecture for additional purposes as described in subsection (a)(3)(B); and

(D) the design and employment of future sensor architectures to fulfill missions other than missile defense as described in subsection (a)(3)(C).

(3) FORM.—The report shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

(d) CONFORMING REPEAL.—Section 224 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1675) is repealed.

SEC. 237. PLANS TO IMPROVE THE GROUND-BASED MIDCOURSE DEFENSE SYSTEM.

(a) IMPROVED KILL ASSESSMENT CAPABILITY.—The Director of the Missile Defense Agency, in consultation with the Commander of the United States Strategic Command and the Commander of the United States Northern Command, shall develop—

(1) options to achieve an improved kill assessment capability for the ground-based midcourse defense system that can be developed as soon as practicable with acceptable acquisition risk, with the objective of achieving initial operating capability by not later than December 31, 2019, including by improving—

(A) the exo-atmospheric kill vehicle for the ground-based interceptor;

(B) the command, control, battle management, and communications system; and

(C) the sensor and communications architecture of the ballistic missile defense system; and

(2) a plan to carry out such options that gives priority to including such improved capabilities in at least some of the 14 ground-based interceptors that will be procured by the Director, as announced by the Secretary of Defense on March 15, 2013.

(b) IMPROVED HIT ASSESSMENT.—The Director, in consultation with the Commander of the United States Strategic Command and the Commander of the United States Northern Command, shall take appropriate steps to develop an interim capability for improved hit assessment for the ground-based midcourse defense system that can be integrated into near-term exo-atmospheric kill vehicle upgrades and refurbishment.

(c) REPORT ON IMPROVED CAPABILITIES.—Not later than April 1, 2014, the Director, the Commander of the United States Strategic Command, and the Commander of the United States Northern Command shall jointly submit to the congressional defense committees a report on—

(1) the development of an improved kill assessment capability under subsection (a), including the plan developed under paragraph (2) of such subsection; and

(2) the development of an interim capability for improved hit assessment under subsection (b).

(d) PLAN FOR UPGRADED ENHANCED EXO-ATMOSPHERIC KILL VEHICLE.—

(1) PLAN REQUIRED.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director shall submit to the congressional defense committees a plan to use covered funding to develop, test, and deploy an upgraded enhanced exo-atmospheric kill vehicle for the ground-based midcourse defense system that—

(A) is tested under a test program coordinated with the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation; and

(B) following such test program, is capable of being deployed during fiscal year 2018 or thereafter.

(2) PRIORITY.—In developing the plan for an upgraded enhanced exo-atmospheric kill vehicle under paragraph (1), the Director shall give priority to the following attributes:

(A) Cost effectiveness and high reliability, testability, producibility, modularity, and maintainability.

(B) Capability across the midcourse battle space.

(C) Ability to leverage ballistic missile defense system data with kill vehicle on-board capability to discriminate lethal objects.

(D) Reliable on-demand communications.

(E) Sufficient flexibility to ensure that the potential for future enhancements, including ballistic missile defense system interceptor commonality and multiple and volume kill capability, is maintained.

(3) COVERED FUNDING DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term “covered funding” means—

(A) funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Missile Defense Agency, as specified in the funding table in section 4201; and

(B) funds authorized to be appropriated by the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239) or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2013 that are available to the Director to carry out the plan under paragraph (1).

SEC. 238. REPORT ON POTENTIAL FUTURE HOMELAND BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE OPTIONS.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 240 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on potential future options for enhancing the ballistic missile defense of the homeland of the United States.

(b) CONSULTATION.—The Secretary shall prepare the report under subsection (a) in consultation with the Commander of the United States Strategic Command, the Commander of the United States Northern Command, and the Director of the Missile Defense Agency.

(c) ELEMENTS.—The report under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) A description of the current assessment of the threat to the United States from limited ballistic missile attack (whether accidental, unauthorized, or deliberate), particularly from countries such as North Korea and Iran, and an assessment of the projected future threat through 2022, including a discussion of confidence levels and uncertainties in such threat assessment.

(2) A description of the current capability of the ballistic missile defense of the homeland of the United States to defend against the current threat of limited ballistic missile attack (whether accidental, unauthorized, or deliberate), particularly from countries such as North Korea and Iran.

(3) A description of the status of efforts to correct the problems that caused the flight test failures of the ground-based midcourse defense system in December 2010 and July 2013 and plans for future efforts, including additional flight testing, to demonstrate that the problems have been successfully corrected.

(4) A description of planned improvements to the current ballistic missile defense system of the homeland of the United States, and the enhancements to the capability of such system that would result from such planned improvements, including—

(A) deployment of 14 additional ground-based interceptors at Fort Greely, Alaska;

(B) missile defense upgrades of early warning radars at Clear, Alaska, and Cape Cod, Massachusetts;

(C) deployment of an in-flight interceptor communications system data terminal at Fort Drum, New York; and

(D) improvements to the effectiveness and reliability of the ground-based interceptors and the overall ground-based midcourse defense system.

(5) In accordance with subsection (d), a description of potential additional future options for the ballistic missile defense of the homeland of the United States, in addition to the improvements described in paragraph (4), if future ballistic missile threats warrant deployment of such options to increase the capabilities of such ballistic missile defense, including—

(A) deployment of a missile defense interceptor site on the East Coast;

(B) deployment of a missile defense interceptor site in another location in the United States, other than on the East Coast;

(C) expansion of Missile Field-1 at Fort Greely, Alaska, to an operationally available 20-silo configuration, to permit further interceptor deployments;

(D) deployment of additional ground-based interceptors for the ground-based midcourse defense system at Fort Greely, Alaska, or Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, or both;

(E) deployment of additional missile defense sensors, including at a site in Alaska as well as an X-band radar on or near the East Coast or elsewhere, to enhance system tracking and discrimination, including various sensor options;

(F) enhancements to the operational effectiveness, cost effectiveness, and overall performance of the ground-based midcourse defense system through improvements to system reliability, discrimination, battle management, exo-atmospheric kill vehicle capability, and related functions;

(G) the potential for future enhancement and deployment of the standard missile-3 block IIA interceptor to augment the ballistic missile defense of the homeland of the United States;

(H) missile defense options to defend the homeland of the United States against ballistic missiles that could be launched from vessels on the seas around the United States, including the Gulf of Mexico, or other ballistic missile threats that could approach the United States from the south, should such a threat arise in the future; and

(I) any other options the Secretary considers appropriate.

(d) EVALUATION OF POTENTIAL OPTIONS.—For each option described under subsection (c)(5), the Secretary shall provide an evaluation of the advantages and disadvantages of such option. The evaluation of each such option shall include consideration of the following:

(1) Technical feasibility.

(2) Operational effectiveness and utility against the projected future threat.

(3) Cost, cost effectiveness, and affordability.

(4) Schedule considerations.

(5) Agility to respond to changes in future threat evolution.

(e) CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.—Based on the evaluations required by subsection (d), the Secretary shall include in the report under subsection (a) such findings, conclusions, and recommendations as the Secretary considers appropriate for potential future options for the ballistic missile defense of the homeland of the United States.

(f) FORM.—The report under subsection (a) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

SEC. 239. BRIEFINGS ON STATUS OF IMPLEMENTATION OF CERTAIN MISSILE DEFENSE MATTERS.

Not later than 180 days after the completion of the site evaluation study required by subsection (a) of section 227 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1678), and again one year after such date, the Secretary of Defense shall provide to the congressional defense committees a detailed briefing on the current status of efforts and plans to implement the requirements of such section, including—

(1) the progress and plans toward preparation of the environmental impact statement required by subsection (b) of such section; and

(2) the development of the contingency plan under subsection (d) of such section for deployment of an additional homeland missile defense interceptor site in case the President determines to proceed with such an additional deployment.

SEC. 240. SENSE OF CONGRESS AND REPORT ON NATO AND MISSILE DEFENSE BURDEN-SHARING.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that as defense budget resources continue to decline in the United States, including by reason of funding reductions under the Budget Control Act of 2011 (Public Law 112-25), and the sequestration in effect by reason of such Act, the importance of burden-sharing among members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization for missile defense is increasing.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the cost of missile defense for members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (in this section referred to as “NATO”), including the phased, adaptive approach to missile defense in Europe, and the contributions made by members of NATO for such missile defense.

(c) MATTERS INCLUDED.—The report under subsection (b) shall include the following:

(1) The total estimated cost directly attributable to the various phases of the phased, adaptive approach to missile defense in Europe, including costs relating to research, development, testing, and evaluation, procurement, and military construction.

(2) With respect to the cost of missile defense for NATO, including the phased, adaptive approach to missile defense in Europe, a description of the level of burden-sharing among members of NATO as of the date of the report, including through contributions made by a member in the form of hosting elements of such approach to missile defense in the territory of the member.

(3) An assessment of, and recommendations for, areas where the Secretary determines that NATO and the members of NATO could improve the burden-sharing among members with respect to the cost of missile defense for NATO described in paragraph (2), including through the possible pooling of missile defense interceptors.

(d) FORM.—The report required by subsection (b) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

SEC. 241. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON DEPLOYMENT OF REGIONAL BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE CAPABILITIES.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the United States develops and deploys regional ballistic missile defense capabilities to protect the forward-deployed forces, allies, and partners of the United States against regional ballistic missile threats, consistent with the security obligations of the United States and as part of the broader theater security and military plans of the geographic combatant commanders of the United States;

(2) in deciding on the deployment of regional missile defense assets and capabilities of the United States, the Secretary of Defense should give priority consideration to the capabilities needed to deter and defend against the ballistic missile threat, including the recommendations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the priorities of the geographic combatant commanders for meeting the operational needs of the commanders for ballistic missile defense;

(3) such deployment decisions should take into account all of the ballistic missile threats to the forces, allies, and partners of the United States in each region;

(4) the United States should encourage the allies and partners of the United States to acquire and contribute to integrated and complementary regional ballistic missile defense capabilities—including coordination, data sharing, and networking arrangements—and such allied and partner capabilities should be taken into account in deciding on the deployment of regional missile defense capabilities of the United States; and

(5) the United States should cooperate closely with the allies and partners of the United States, including such allies and partners in East Asia, on missile defense deployments and cooperation that enhance the mutual security of the United States and such allies and partners.

SEC. 242. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON PROCUREMENT OF CAPABILITY ENHANCEMENT II EXOATMOSPHERIC KILL VEHICLE.

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense should not procure a Capability Enhancement II exoatmospheric kill vehicle for deployment until after the date on which a successful intercept flight test of the Capability Enhancement II ground-based interceptor has occurred, unless such procurement is for test assets or to maintain a warm line for the industrial base.

Subtitle D—Reports

SEC. 251. ANNUAL COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT ON THE AMPHIBIOUS COMBAT VEHICLE ACQUISITION PROGRAM.

(a) ANNUAL GAO REVIEW.—During the period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act and ending on March 1, 2018, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct an annual review of the amphibious combat vehicle acquisition program.

(b) ANNUAL REPORTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 1 of each year beginning in 2014 and ending in 2018, the Comptroller General shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the review of the amphibious combat vehicle acquisition program conducted under subsection (a).

(2) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—Each report under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) The extent to which the program is meeting development and procurement cost, schedule, performance, and risk mitigation goals.

(B) With respect to meeting the desired initial operational capability and full operational capability dates for the amphibious combat vehicle, the progress and results of—

(i) developmental and operational testing of the vehicle; and

(ii) plans for correcting deficiencies in vehicle performance, operational effectiveness, reliability, suitability, and safety.

(C) An assessment of procurement plans, production results, and efforts to improve manufacturing efficiency and supplier performance.

(D) An assessment of the acquisition strategy of the amphibious combat vehicle, including whether such strategy is in compliance with acquisition management best practices and the acquisition policy and regulations of the Department of Defense.

(E) An assessment of the projected operations and support costs and the viability of the Marine Corps to afford to operate and sustain the amphibious combat vehicle.

(3) ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.—In submitting to the congressional defense committees the first report under paragraph (1) and a report following any changes made by the Secretary of the Navy to the baseline documentation of the amphibious combat vehicle acquisition program, the Comptroller General shall include, with respect to such program, an assessment of the sufficiency and objectivity of—

(A) the analysis of alternatives;

(B) the initial capabilities document; and

(C) the capabilities development document.

SEC. 252. ANNUAL COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES REPORT ON THE ACQUISITION PROGRAM FOR THE VXX PRESIDENTIAL HELICOPTER.

(a) ANNUAL GAO REVIEW.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct annually a review of the acquisition program for the VXX Presidential Helicopter aircraft.

(b) ANNUAL REPORTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 1 each year, the Comptroller General shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the review conducted under subsection (a) during the preceding year.

(2) ELEMENTS.—Each report under paragraph (1) shall include such matters as the Comptroller General considers appropriate to fully inform the congressional defense committees of the stage of the acquisition process for the VXX Presidential Helicopter aircraft covered by the review described in such report. Such matters may include the following:

(A) The extent to which the acquisition program for the VXX Presidential Helicopter aircraft is meeting cost, schedule, and performance goals.

(B) The progress and results of developmental testing.

(C) An assessment of the acquisition strategy for the program, including whether the strategy is consistent with acquisition management best practices identified by the Comptroller General for purposes of the program.

(c) SUNSET.—The requirements in this section shall terminate upon the earlier of—

(1) the date on which the Navy awards a contract for full-rate production for the VXX Presidential Helicopter aircraft; or

(2) the date on which the acquisition program for such aircraft is terminated.

SEC. 253. REPORT ON STRATEGY TO IMPROVE BODY ARMOR.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the comprehensive research and development strategy of the Secretary to achieve significant reductions in the weight of body armor.

(b) MATTERS INCLUDED.—The report under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) A brief description of each solution for body armor weight reduction that is being developed as of the date of the report.

(2) For each such solution—

(A) the costs, schedules, and performance requirements;

(B) the research and development funding profile;

(C) a description of the materials being used in the solution; and

(D) the feasibility and technology readiness levels of the solution and the materials.

(3) A strategy to provide resources for future research and development of body armor weight reduction.

(4) An explanation of how the Secretary is using a modular or tailorable solution to approach body armor weight reduction.

(5) A description of how the Secretary coordinates the research and development of body armor weight reduction being carried out by the military departments.

(6) Any other matter the Secretary considers appropriate.

(c) FORM.—The report required by subsection (a) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

Subtitle E—Other Matters

SEC. 261. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMUNICATIONS SECURITY REVIEW AND ADVISORY BOARD.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 7 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“§ 189. Communications Security Review and Advisory Board

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There shall be in the Department of Defense a Communications Security Review and Advisory Board (in this section referred to as the ‘Board’) to review and assess the communications security, cryptographic modernization, and related key management activities of the Department and provide advice to the Secretary with respect to such activities.

“(b) MEMBERS.—(1) The Secretary shall determine the number of members of the Board.

“(2) The Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense shall serve as chairman of the Board.

“(3) The Secretary shall appoint officers in the grade of general or admiral and civilian employees of the Department of Defense in the Senior Executive Service to serve as members of the Board.

“(c) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Board shall—

“(1) monitor the overall communications security, cryptographic modernization, and key management efforts of the Department, including activities under major defense acquisition programs (as defined in section 139c of this title), by—

“(A) requiring each Chief Information Officer of each military department to report the communications security activities of the military department to the Board;

“(B) tracking compliance of each military department with respect to communications security modernization efforts;

“(C) validating lifecycle communications security modernization plans for major defense acquisition programs;

“(2) validate the need to replace cryptographic equipment based on the expiration dates of the equipment and evaluate the risks of continuing to use cryptographic equipment after such expiration dates;

“(3) convene in-depth program reviews for specific cryptographic modernization developments with respect to validating requirements and identifying programmatic risks;

“(4) develop a long-term roadmap for communications security to identify potential issues and ensure synchronization with major planning documents; and “(5) advise the Secretary on the cryptographic posture of the Department, including budgetary recommendations.

“(d) EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN PROGRAMS.—The Board shall not include the consideration of programs funded under the National Intelligence Program (as defined in section 3(6) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 3003(6))) in carrying out this section.”.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding after the item relating to section 188 the following new item:

“189. Communications Security Review and Advisory Board”.

SEC. 262. EXTENSION AND EXPANSION OF MECHANISMS TO PROVIDE FUNDS FOR DEFENSE LABORATORIES FOR RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT OF TECHNOLOGIES FOR MILITARY MIS-

(a) CLARIFICATION OF AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Section 219 of the Duncan Hunter National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2009 (Public Law 110-417; 10 U.S.C. 2358 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1)(D), by striking “and recapitalization” through the period at the end and inserting “recapitalization, or minor military construction of the laboratory infrastructure, in accordance with subsection (b).”;

(2) by redesignating subsections (b) and (c) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection (b):

“(b) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR INFRASTRUCTURE PROJECTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the provisions of this subsection, funds available under a mechanism under subsection (a)(1)(D) that are solely intended to carry out a laboratory infrastructure project shall be available for such project until expended.

“(2) PRIOR NOTICE OF COSTS OF PROJECTS.—Funds shall be available in accordance with paragraph (1) for a project referred to in such paragraph only if the Secretary notifies the congressional defense committees of the total cost of the project before the date on which the Secretary uses a mechanism under subsection (a)(1)(D) for such project.

“(3) ACCUMULATION OF FUNDS FOR PROJECTS.—Funds may accumulate under a mechanism under subsection (a) for a project referred to in paragraph (1) for not more than five years.

“(4) COST LIMIT COMPLIANCE.—The Secretary shall ensure that a project referred to in paragraph (1) for which funds are made available in accordance with such paragraph complies with the applicable cost limitations in the following provisions of law:

“(A) Section 2805(d) of title 10, United States Code, with respect to revitalization and recapitalization projects.

“(B) Section 2811 of such title, with respect to repair projects.”.

(b) EXTENSION.—Subsection (d) of such section, as redesignated by subsection (a)(2) of this section, is amended by striking “September 30, 2016” and inserting “September 30, 2020”.

(c) APPLICATION.—Subsection (b) of such section 219, as added by subsection (a)(3), shall apply with respect to funds made available under such section on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 263. EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY TO AWARD PRIZES FOR ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY ACHIEVEMENTS.

Section 2374a(f) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking “September 30, 2013” and inserting “September 30, 2018”.

SEC. 264. FIVE-YEAR EXTENSION OF PILOT PROGRAM TO INCLUDE TECHNOLOGY PROTECTION FEATURES DURING RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT OF CERTAIN DEFENSE SYSTEMS.

Section 243(d) of the Ike Skelton National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2011 (Public Law 111-383; 10 U.S.C. 2358 note) is amended by striking “October 1, 2015” and inserting “October 1, 2020”.

SEC. 265. BRIEFING ON BIOMETRICS ACTIVITIES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) BRIEFING REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall brief the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives on an assessment of the future program structure for biometrics oversight and execution and architectural requirements for biometrics-enabling capability.

(b) MATTERS INCLUDED.—The briefing under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) An assessment of the roles and responsibilities of the principal staff assistant for biometrics, the program manager for biometrics, and the Defense Forensics and Biometrics Agency, including—

(A) the roles and responsibilities of each element of the Department of Defense, including each military department, with responsibility for biometrics and each such element that is responsible for requirements and testing regarding biometrics; and

(B) whether the executive management responsibilities of the Department of Defense program manager for biometrics should be retained by the Army or transferred to another element of the Department.

(2) An assessment of the current requirements for biometrics-enabling capability, including with respect to—

(A) a governance process for capturing, vetting, and validating requirements and business processes across military department, interagency, and international partners; and

(B) a process to determine resourcing business rules to establish and sustain such capabilities.

(3) An evaluation of the most appropriate element of the Department to take responsibility for defining and managing the end-to-end performance of the biometric enterprise, beginning and ending at the point of biometric encounter, as described in the report of the Comptroller General of the United States titled “Defense Biometrics: Additional Training for Leaders and More Timely Transmission of Data Could Enhance the Use of Biometrics in Afghanistan”, numbered 12-442.

SEC. 266. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON IMPORTANCE OF ALIGNING COMMON MISSILE COMPARTMENT OF OHIO-CLASS REPLACEMENT PROGRAM WITH THE UNITED KINGDOM'S VANGUARD SUCCESSOR PROGRAM.

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of the Navy should make every effort to ensure that the common missile compartment associated with the Ohio-class ballistic missile submarine replacement program stays on schedule and is aligned with the Vanguard-successor program of the United Kingdom in order for the United States to fulfill its longstanding commitment to our ally and partner in sea-based strategic deterrence.

SEC. 267. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON COUNTER-ELECTRONICS HIGH POWER MICROWAVE MISSILE PROJECT.

It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) in carrying out the non-kinetic counter-electronics developmental planning effort of the Air Force, the Secretary of Defense should consider the results of the successful joint technology capability demonstration that the counter-electronics high power microwave missile project conducted in 2012;

(2) an analysis of alternatives is an important step in the long-term development of a non-kinetic counter-electronic system;

(3) the Secretary should pursue both near- and far-term joint non-kinetic counter-electronic systems; and

(4) the counter-electronics high power microwave missile project (or a variant thereof) should be considered among the options for a possible materiel solution in response to any near-term joint urgent operational need, joint emergent operational need, or combatant command integrated priority for a non-kinetic counter-electronic system.

TITLE III—OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Sec. 301. Operation and maintenance funding.

Subtitle B—Energy and Environment

Sec. 311. Deadline for submission of reports on proposed budgets for activities relating to operational energy strategy.

Sec. 312. Facilitation of interagency cooperation in conservation programs of the Departments of Defense, Agriculture, and Interior to avoid or reduce adverse impacts on military readiness activities.

Sec. 313. Reauthorization of Sikes Act.

Sec. 314. Clarification of prohibition on disposing of waste in open-air burn pits.

Sec. 315. Limitation on availability of funds for procurement of drop-in fuels.

Subtitle C—Logistics and Sustainment

Sec. 321. Strategic policy for prepositioned materiel and equipment.

Sec. 322. Department of Defense manufacturing arsenal study and report.

Sec. 323. Consideration of Army arsenals' capabilities to fulfill manufacturing requirements.

Sec. 324. Strategic policy for the retrograde, reconstitution, and replacement of operating forces used to support overseas contingency operations.

Sec. 325. Littoral Combat Ship Strategic Sustainment Plan.

Sec. 326. Strategy for improving asset tracking and in-transit visibility.

Subtitle D—Reports

Sec. 331. Additional reporting requirements relating to personnel and unit readiness.

Sec. 332. Modification of authorities on prioritization of funds for equipment readiness and strategic capability.

Sec. 333. Revision to requirement for annual submission of information regarding information technology capital assets.

Sec. 334. Modification of annual corrosion control and prevention reporting requirements.

Subtitle E—Limitations and Extensions of Authority

Sec. 341. Certification for realignment of forces at Lajes Air Force Base, Azores.

Sec. 342. Limitation on performance of Department of Defense flight demonstration teams outside the United States.

Sec. 343. Limitation on funding for United States Special Operations Command National Capital Region.

Sec. 344. Limitation on availability of funds for Trans Regional Web Initiative.

Subtitle F—Other Matters

Sec. 351. Gifts made for the benefit of military musical units.

Sec. 352. Revised policy on ground combat and camouflage utility uniforms.

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

SEC. 301. OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE FUNDING.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2014 for the use of the Armed Forces and other activities and agencies of the Department of Defense for expenses, not otherwise provided for, for operation and maintenance, as specified in the funding table in section 4301.

Subtitle B—Energy and Environment

SEC. 311. DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSION OF REPORTS ON PROPOSED BUDGETS FOR ACTIVITIES RELATING TO OPERATIONAL ENERGY STRATEGY.

Section 138c(e) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (4), by striking “Not later than 30 days after the date on which the budget for a fiscal year is submitted to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the proposed budgets for that fiscal year” and inserting “The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the proposed budgets for a fiscal year”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(6) The report required by paragraph (4) for a fiscal year shall be submitted by the later of the following dates:

“(A) The date that is 30 days after the date on which the budget for that fiscal year is submitted to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31.

“(B) March 31 of the previous fiscal year.”.

SEC. 312. FACILITATION OF INTERAGENCY COOPERATION IN CONSERVATION PROGRAMS OF THE DEPARTMENTS OF DEFENSE, AGRICULTURE, AND INTERIOR TO AVOID OR REDUCE ADVERSE IMPACTS ON MILITARY READINESS ACTIVITIES.

(a) USE OF FUNDS UNDER CERTAIN AGREEMENTS.—Section 2684a of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (h) and (i) as subsections (i) and (j), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (g) the following new subsection (h):

“(h) INTERAGENCY COOPERATION IN CONSERVATION PROGRAMS TO AVOID OR REDUCE ADVERSE IMPACTS ON MILITARY READINESS ACTIVITIES.—In order to facilitate interagency cooperation and enhance the effectiveness of actions that will protect both the environment and military readiness, the recipient of funds provided pursuant to an agreement under this section or under the Sikes Act (16 U.S.C. et seq.) may, with regard to the lands and waters within the scope of the agreement, use such funds to satisfy any matching funds or cost-sharing requirement of any conservation program of the Department of Agriculture or the Department of the Interior notwithstanding any limitation of such program on the source of matching or cost-sharing funds.”.

(b) SUNSET.—This section and subsection (h) of section 2684a of title 10, United States Code, as added by this section, shall expire on October 1, 2019, except that any agreement referred to in such subsection that is entered into on or before September 30, 2019, shall continue according to its terms and conditions as if this section has not expired.

SEC. 313. REAUTHORIZATION OF SIKES ACT.

Section 108 of the Sikes Act (16 U.S.C. 670f) is amended by striking “fiscal years 2009 through 2014” each place it appears and inserting “fiscal years 2014 through 2019”.

SEC. 314. CLARIFICATION OF PROHIBITION ON DISPOSING OF WASTE IN OPEN-AIR BURN PITS.

Section 317(c)(2) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010 (Public Law 111–84; 123 Stat. 2249; 10 U.S.C. 2701 note) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B), by striking “and”;
(2) by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (Q); and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraphs:

“(C) tires;

“(D) treated wood;

“(E) batteries;

“(F) plastics, except insignificant amounts of plastic remaining after a good-faith effort to remove or recover plastic materials from the solid waste stream;

“(G) munitions and explosives, except when disposed of in compliance with guidance on the destruction of munitions and explosives contained in the Department of Defense Ammunition and Explosives Safety Standards, DoD Manual 6055.09-M;

“(H) compressed gas cylinders, unless empty with valves removed;

“(I) fuel containers, unless completely evacuated of its contents;

“(M) asbestos;

“(N) mercury;

“(O) foam tent material;

“(P) any item containing any of the materials referred to in a preceding paragraph; and”.

SEC. 315. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR PROCUREMENT OF DROP-IN FUELS.

(a) LIMITATION.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended to make a bulk purchase of a drop-in fuel for operational purposes unless the cost of that drop-in fuel is cost-competitive with the cost of a traditional fuel available for the same purpose.

(b) WAIVER.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the requirements of paragraph (2), the Secretary of Defense may waive the limitation under subparagraph (a) with respect to a purchase.

(2) NOTICE REQUIRED.—Not later than 30 days after issuing a waiver under this subsection, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees notice of the waiver. Any such notice shall include each of the following:

(A) The rationale of the Secretary for issuing the waiver

(B) A certification that the waiver is in the national security interest of the United States.

(C) The expected cost of the purchase for which the waiver is issued.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) The term “drop-in fuel” means a neat or blended liquid hydrocarbon fuel designed as a direct replacement for a traditional fuel with comparable performance characteristics and compatible with existing infrastructure and equipment

(2) The term “traditional fuel” means a liquid hydrocarbon fuel derived or refined from petroleum.

(3) The term “operational purposes” means for the purposes of conducting military operations, including training, exercises, large scale demonstrations, and moving and sustaining military forces and military platforms. Such term does not include research, development, testing, evaluation, fuel certification, or other demonstrations.

Subtitle C—Logistics and Sustainment

SEC. 321. STRATEGIC POLICY FOR PREPOSITIONED MATERIEL AND EQUIPMENT.

(a) MODIFICATIONS TO STRATEGIC POLICY.—Section 2229(a) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

“(a) POLICY REQUIRED.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense shall maintain a strategic policy on the programs of the Department of Defense for prepositioned materiel and equipment. Such policy shall take into account national security threats, strategic mobility, service requirements, and the requirements of the combatant commands, and shall address how the Department’s prepositioning programs, both ground and afloat, align with national defense strategies and departmental priorities.

“(2) ELEMENTS.—The strategic policy required under paragraph (1) shall include the following elements:

“(A) Overarching strategic guidance concerning planning and resource priorities that link the Department of Defense’s current and future needs for prepositioned stocks, such as desired responsiveness, to evolving national defense objectives.

“(B) A description of the Department’s vision for prepositioning programs and the desired end state.

“(C) Specific interim goals demonstrating how the vision and end state will be achieved.

“(D) A description of the strategic environment, requirements for, and challenges associated with, prepositioning.

“(E) Metrics for how the Department will evaluate the extent to which prepositioned assets are achieving defense objectives.

“(F) A framework for joint departmental oversight that reviews and synchronizes the military services’ prepositioning strategies to minimize potentially duplicative efforts and maximize efficiencies in prepositioned materiel and equipment across the Department of Defense.

“(3) JOINT OVERSIGHT.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish joint oversight of the military services’ prepositioning efforts to maximize efficiencies across the Department of Defense.”.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a plan for implementation of the prepositioning strategic policy required under section 2229(a) of title 10, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a).

(2) ELEMENTS.—The implementation plan required under paragraph (1) shall include the following elements:

(A) Detailed guidance for how the Department of Defense will achieve the vision, end state, and goals outlined in the strategic policy.

(B) A comprehensive list of the Department's prepositioned materiel and equipment programs.

(C) A detailed description of how the plan will be implemented.

(D) A schedule with milestones for the implementation of the plan.

(E) An assignment of roles and responsibilities for the implementation of the plan.

(F) A description of the resources required to implement the plan.

(G) A description of how the plan will be reviewed and assessed to monitor progress.

(c) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Comptroller General of the United States shall review the implementation plan submitted under subsection (b) and the prepositioning strategic policy required under section 2229(a) of title 10, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a), and submit to the congressional defense committees a report describing the findings of such review and including any additional information relating to the propositioning strategic policy and plan that the Comptroller General determines appropriate.

SEC. 322. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE MANUFACTURING ARSENAL STUDY AND REPORT.

(a) REVIEW.—

(1) MANUFACTURING REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the military services and Defense Agencies, shall review—

(A) current and expected manufacturing requirements across the military services and Defense Agencies to identify critical manufacturing competencies and supplies, components, end items, parts, assemblies, and sub-assemblies for which there is no or limited domestic commercial source and which are appropriate for manufacturing within an arsenal owned by the United States in order to support critical manufacturing capabilities;

(B) how the Department of Defense can more effectively use and manage public-private partnerships to preserve critical industrial capabilities at such arsenals for future national security requirements while providing to the Department of the Army a return on its investment;

(C) the effectiveness of the strategy of the Department of Defense to assign workload to each of the arsenals and the potential for alternative strategies that could better identify workload for each arsenal;

(D) the impact of the rate structure driven by the Department of the Army working-capital funds on public-private partnerships at each such arsenal;

(E) the extent to which operations at each such arsenal can be streamlined, improved, or enhanced; and

(F) the effectiveness of the implementation by the Department of the Army of cooperative agreements authorized at manufacturing arsenals under section 4544 of title 10, United States Code.

(2) MECHANISMS FOR DETERMINING MANUFACTURING CAPABILITIES.—The Secretary shall review mechanisms within the Department of Defense for ensuring that appropriate consideration is given to the unique manufacturing capabilities of arsenals owned by the United States to fulfill manufacturing requirements of the Department of Defense for which there is no or limited domestic commercial capability.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report that includes the results of the reviews conducted under subsection (a) and a description of actions planned to support critical manufacturing capabilities within arsenals owned by the United States.

(c) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date on which the report required under subsection (b) is submitted, the Comptroller General shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report containing an assessment of the report together with the recommendations of the Comptroller General to improve the strategy of the Department of Defense to assign workload.

SEC. 323. CONSIDERATION OF ARMY ARSENALS' CAPABILITIES TO FULFILL MANUFACTURING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) CONSIDERATION OF CAPABILITY OF ARSENALS.—When undertaking a make-or-buy analysis, a program executive officer or program manager of a military service or Defense Agency shall consider the capability of arsenals owned by the United States to fulfill a manufacturing requirement.

(b) NOTIFICATION OF SOLICITATIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall establish and begin implementation of a system for ensuring that the arsenals owned by the United States are notified of any solicitation that fulfills a manufacturing requirement for which there is no or limited domestic commercial source and which may be appropriate for manufacturing within an arsenal owned by the United States.

SEC. 324. STRATEGIC POLICY FOR THE RETROGRADE, RECONSTITUTION, AND REPLACEMENT OF OPERATING FORCES USED TO SUPPORT OVERSEAS CONTINGENCY OPERATIONS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF POLICY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish a policy setting forth the programs and priorities of the Department of Defense for the retrograde, reconstitution, and replacement of units and materiel used to support overseas contingency operations. The policy shall take into account national security threats, the requirements of the combatant commands, the current readiness of the operating forces of the military departments, and risk associated with strategic depth and the time necessary to reestablish required personnel, equipment, and training readiness in such operating forces.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The policy required under paragraph (1) shall include the following elements:

(A) Establishment and assignment of responsibilities and authorities within the Department for oversight and execution of the planning, organization, and management of the programs to reestablish the readiness of redeployed operating forces.

(B) Guidance concerning priorities, goals, objectives, timelines, and resources to reestablish the readiness of redeployed operating forces in support of national defense objectives and combatant command requirements.

(C) Oversight reporting requirements and metrics for the evaluation of Department of Defense and military department progress on restoring the readiness of redeployed operating forces in accordance with the policy required under paragraph (1).

(D) A framework for joint departmental reviews of military services' annual budgets proposed for retrograde, reconstitution, or replacement activities, including an assessment of the strategic and operational risk assumed by the proposed levels of investment across the Department of Defense.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a plan for implementation of the policy required under this section.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The implementation plan required under paragraph (1) shall include the following elements:

(A) The assignment of responsibilities and authorities for oversight and execution of the planning, organization, and management of the programs to reestablish the readiness of redeployed operating forces.

(B) Establishment of priorities, goals, objectives, timelines, and resources to reestablish the readiness of redeployed operating forces in support of national defense objectives and combatant command requirements.

(C) A description of how the plan will be implemented, including a schedule with milestones to meet the goals of the plan.

(D) An estimate of the resources by military service and by year required to implement the plan, including an assessment of the risks assumed in the plan.

(3) UPDATES.—Not later than one year after submitting the plan required under paragraph (1), and annually thereafter for two years, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees an update on progress toward meeting the goals of the plan.

(c) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually after the submittal of each update to the implementation plan under subsection (b), the Comptroller General of the United States shall review the implementation plan submitted under subsection (b) and the policy required by subsection (a), and submit to the congressional defense committees a report describing the findings of such review and progress made toward meeting the goals of the plan and including any additional information relating to the policy and plan that the Comptroller General determines appropriate.

SEC. 325. LITTORAL COMBAT SHIP STRATEGIC SUSTAINMENT PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Navy shall submit to the congressional defense committees and to the Comptroller General of the United States a strategic sustainment plan for the Littoral Combat Ship. Such plan shall include each of the following:

(1) An estimate of the cost and schedule of implementing the plan.

(2) An identification of the requirements and planning for the long-term sustainment of the Littoral Combat Ship and its mission modules in accordance with section 2366b of title 10, United States Code, as amended by section 801 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2012 (Public Law 112-81; 125 Stat. 1482).

(3) A description of the current and future operating environments of the Littoral Combat Ship, as specified or referred to in strategic guidance and planning documents of the Department of Defense.

(4) The facility, supply, and logistics systems requirements, including contractor support, of the Littoral Combat Ship when forward deployed, and an estimate of the cost and personnel required to conduct the necessary maintenance activities.

(5) Any required updates to host-nation agreements to facilitate the forward-deployed maintenance requirements of the Littoral Combat Ship, including a discussion of overseas management of Ship ordnance and hazardous materials and delivery of equipment and spare parts needed for emergent repair.

(6) An evaluation of the forward-deployed maintenance requirements of the Littoral Combat Ship and a schedule of pier-side maintenance timelines when forward-deployed, including requirements for multiple ships and variants.

(7) An assessment of the total quantity of equipment, spare parts, permanently forward-stationed personnel, and size of fly away teams required to support forward-deployed maintenance requirements for the U.S.S. Freedom while in Singapore, and estimates for follow-on deployments of Littoral Combat Ships of both variants.

(8) A detailed description of the continuity of operations plans for the Littoral Combat Ship Squadron and of any plans to increase the number of Squadron personnel.

(9) An identification of mission critical single point of failure equipment for which a sufficient number spare parts are necessary to have on hand, and determination of Littoral Combat Ship forward deployed equipment and spare parts locations and levels.

(b) FORM.—The plan required under subsection (a) shall be submitted in unclassified form but may have a classified annex.

SEC. 326. STRATEGY FOR IMPROVING ASSET TRACKING AND IN-TRANSIT VISIBILITY.

(a) STRATEGY AND IMPLEMENTATION PLANS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a comprehensive strategy for improving asset tracking and in-transit visibility across the Department of Defense, together with the plans of the military departments for implementing the strategy.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The strategy and implementation plans required under paragraph (1) shall include the following elements:

(A) The overarching goals and objectives desired from implementation of the strategy.

(B) A description of steps to achieve those goals and objectives, as well as milestones and performance measures to gauge results.

(C) An estimate of the costs associated with executing the plan, and the sources and types of resources and investments, including skills, technology, human capital, information, and other resources, required to meet the goals and objectives.

(D) A description of roles and responsibilities for managing and overseeing the implementation of the strategy, including the role of program managers, and the establishment of mechanisms for multiple stakeholders to coordinate their efforts throughout implementation and make necessary adjustments to the strategy based on performance.

(E) A description of key factors external to the Department of Defense and beyond its control that could significantly affect the achievement of the long-term goals contained in the strategy.

(F) A detailed description of asset marking requirements and how automated information and data capture technologies could improve readiness, cost effectiveness, and performance.

(G) A defined list of all categories of items that program managers are required to identify for the purposes of asset marking.

(H) A description of steps to improve asset tracking and in-transit visibility for classified programs.

(I) Steps to be undertaken to facilitate collaboration with industry designed to capture best practices, lessons learned, and any relevant technical matters.

(J) A description of how improved asset tracking and in-transit visibility could enhance audit readiness, reduce counterfeit risk, enhance logistical processes, and otherwise benefit the Department of Defense.

(K) An operational security assessment designed to ensure that all Department of Defense assets are appropriately protected during the execution of the strategy and implementation plan.

(b) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT.—Not later than one year after the strategy is submitted under subsection (a), the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth an assessment of the extent to which the strategy and accompanying implementation plans—

(1) include the elements set forth under subsection (a)(2);

(2) align to achieve the overarching asset tracking and in-transit visibility goals and objectives of the Department of Defense;

(3) incorporate, as appropriate, industry best practices related to automated information and data capture technologies for asset tracking and in-transit visibility;

(4) effectively execute the policies prescribed in Department of Defense Instruction 8320.04; and

(5) have been implemented.

Subtitle D—Reports

SEC. 331. ADDITIONAL REPORTING REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO PERSONNEL AND UNIT READINESS.

(a) ASSESSMENT OF ASSIGNED MISSIONS AND CONTRACTOR SUPPORT.—Section 482 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking “The report for a quarter” and inserting “Each report”; and

(B) by striking “(e), and (f)” and inserting “(f), (g), (h), (i), (j), and (k), and the reports for the second and fourth quarters of a calendar year shall also contain the information required by subsection (e)”; and

(2) in subsection (d)—

(A) in paragraph (1)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking “, including the extent” and all that follows through the period at the end and inserting the following: “, including an assessment of the manning of units (authorized versus assigned numbers of personnel) for units not scheduled for deployment and the timing of the arrival of personnel into units preparing for deployments.”; and

(ii) in subparagraph (B), by inserting “unit” before “personnel strength”;

(B) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

“(2) PERSONNEL TURBULENCE.—

“(A) Recruit quality.

“(B) Personnel assigned to a unit but not trained for the level of assigned responsibility or mission.

“(C) Fitness for deployment.

“(D) Recruiting and retention status.”;

(C) by striking paragraph (3) and redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (3); and

(D) in paragraph (3), as redesignated by subparagraph (C), by striking “Training commitments” and inserting “Mission rehearsals”;

(3) by redesignating subsections (e), (f), and (g), as subsections (f), (g), and (i), respectively;

(4) by inserting after subsection (d)(3), as redesignated by paragraph (1)(C), the following new subsection:

“(e) LOGISTICS INDICATORS.—The reports for the second and fourth quarters of a calendar year shall also include information regarding the active components of the armed forces (and an evaluation of such information) with respect to each of the following logistics indicators:”;

(5) in subsection (e), as designated by paragraph (4)—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (5), (6), and (7) as paragraphs (1), (2), and (3), respectively;

(B) in paragraph (1), as redesignated by subparagraph (A), by striking subparagraph (E); and

(C) in paragraph (2), as so redesignated—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking “Maintenance” and inserting “Depot maintenance”; and

(ii) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

“(B) Equipment not available due to a lack of supplies or parts.”; and

(6) by inserting after subsection (g), as redesignated by paragraph (3), the following new subsections:

“(h) COMBATANT COMMAND ASSIGNED MISSION ASSESSMENTS.—(1) Each report shall also include an assessment by each commander of a geographic or functional combatant command of the ability of the command to successfully execute each of the assigned missions of the command. Each such assessment for a combatant command shall also include a list of the mission essential tasks for each assigned mission of the command and an assessment of the ability of the command to successfully complete each task within prescribed timeframes.

“(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘assigned mission’ means any contingency response program plan, theater campaign plan, or named operation that is approved and assigned by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

“(i) RISK ASSESSMENT OF DEPENDENCE ON CONTRACTOR SUPPORT.—Each report shall also include an assessment by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the level of risk incurred by using contract support in contingency operations as required under Department of Defense Instruction 1100.22, ‘Policies and Procedures for Determining Workforce Mix’.

“(j) COMBAT SUPPORT AGENCIES ASSESSMENT.—(1) Each report shall also include an assessment by the Secretary of Defense of the military readiness of the combat support agencies, including, for each such agency—

“(A) a determination with respect to the responsiveness and readiness of the agency to support operating forces in the event of a war or threat to national security, including—

“(i) a list of mission essential tasks and an assessment of the ability of the agency to successfully perform those tasks;

“(ii) an assessment of how the ability of the agency to accomplish the tasks referred to in subparagraph (A) affects the ability of the military departments and the unified and geographic combatant commands to execute operations and contingency plans by number;

“(iii) any readiness deficiencies and actions recommended to address such deficiencies; and

“(iv) key indicators and other relevant information related to any deficiency or other problem identified;

“(B) any recommendations that the Secretary considers appropriate.

“(2) In this subsection, the term ‘combat support agency’ means any of the following Defense Agencies:

“(A) The Defense Information Systems Agency.

“(B) The Defense Intelligence Agency.

“(C) The Defense Logistics Agency.

“(D) The National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency (but only with respect to combat support functions that the agencies perform for the Department of Defense).

“(H) The National Security Agency (but only with respect to combat support functions that the agencies perform for the Department of Defense) and Central Security Service.

“(I) Any other Defense Agency designated as a combat support agency by the Secretary of Defense.

“(k) MAJOR EXERCISE ASSESSMENTS.—(1) Each report shall also include an after-action assessment of each major exercise by the commander of the geographic or functional combatant command concerned or the chief of the military service concerned, as appropriate, that includes—

“(A) a brief description of the exercise;

“(B) planned training objectives for the exercise;

“(C) a full summary of cost associated with the exercise, including in-kind and direct contributions to allies and partners; and “(D) an executive summary of the lessons learned and training objectives met by conducting the exercise.

“(2) In this subsection, the term ‘major exercise’ means a named major training event, an integrated or joint exercise, or a unilateral major exercise.”.

SEC. 332. MODIFICATION OF AUTHORITIES ON PRIORITIZATION OF FUNDS FOR EQUIPMENT READINESS AND STRATEGIC CAPABILITY.

(a) INCLUSION OF MARINE CORPS IN REQUIREMENTS.—Section 323 of the John Warner National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2007 (10 U.S.C. 229 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following new paragraph (2):

“(2) the Secretary of the Army to meet the requirements of the Army, and the Secretary of the Navy to meet the requirements of the Marine Corps, for that fiscal year, in addition to the requirements under paragraph (1), for the reconstitution of equipment and materiel in prepositioned stocks in accordance with requirements under the policy or strategy implemented under the guidelines in section 2229 of title 10, United States Code.”; and

(2) in subsection (b)(2), by striking subparagraph (B) and inserting the following new subparagraph (B):

“(B) the Army and the Marine Corps for the reconstitution of equipment and materiel in prepositioned stocks.”.

(b) REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT FOR ANNUAL ARMY REPORT AND GAO REVIEW.—Such section is further amended by striking subsections (c) through (f) and inserting the following new subsection (c):

“(c) CONTINGENCY OPERATION DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘contingency operation’ has the meaning given that term in section 101(a)(13) of title 10, United States Code.”.

SEC. 333. REVISION TO REQUIREMENT FOR ANNUAL SUBMISSION OF INFORMATION REGARDING INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY CAPITAL ASSETS.

Section 351(a)(1) of the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003 (Public Law 107-314; 10 U.S.C. 221 note) is amended by striking “in excess of $30,000,000” and all that follows and inserting “(as computed in fiscal year 2000 constant dollars) in excess of $32,000,000 or an estimated total cost for the future-years defense program for which the budget is submitted (as computed in fiscal year 2000 constant dollars) in excess of $378,000,000, for all expenditures, for all increments, regardless of the appropriation and fund source, directly related to the assets definition, design, development, deployment, sustainment, and disposal.”.

SEC. 334. MODIFICATION OF ANNUAL CORROSION CONTROL AND PREVENTION REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

Section 903(b)(5) of the Duncan Hunter National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2009 (Public Law 110-417; 10 U.S.C. 2228 note) is amended—

(1) by inserting “(A)” after “(5)”;

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

“(B) The report required under subparagraph (A) shall—

“(i) provide a clear linkage between the corrosion control and prevention program of the military department and the overarching goals and objectives of the long-term corrosion control and prevention strategy developed and implemented by the Secretary of Defense under section 2228(d) of title 10, United States Code; and

“(ii) include performance measures to ensure that the corrosion control and prevention program is achieving the goals and objectives described in clause (i).”.

Subtitle E—Limitations and Extensions of Authority

SEC. 341. CERTIFICATION FOR REALIGNMENT OF FORCES AT LAJES AIR FORCE BASE, AZORES.

The Secretary of Defense shall certify to the congressional defense committees, prior to taking any action to realign forces at Lajes Air Force Base, Azores, that the action is supported by a European Infrastructure Consolidation Assessment initiated by the Secretary of Defense on January 25, 2013. The certification shall include a specific assessment of the efficacy of Lajes Air Force Base, Azores, in support of the United States overseas force posture.

SEC. 342. LIMITATION ON PERFORMANCE OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE FLIGHT DEMONSTRATION TEAMS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

If, during fiscal year 2014 or 2015, any performance by a flight demonstration team under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Defense that is scheduled for a location within the United States is cancelled by reason of budget reductions made pursuant to an order for sequestration issued by the President under section 251A of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, then no such flight demonstration team may perform at any location outside the United States during such fiscal year.

SEC. 343. LIMITATION ON FUNDING FOR UNITED STATES SPECIAL OPERATIONS COMMAND NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION.

(a) LIMITATION.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for fiscal year 2014 for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended for the United States Special Operations Command National Capital Region (USSOCOM-NCR) until 30 days after the Secretary of Defense submits to the congressional defense committees a report on the USSOCOM-NCR.

(b) REPORT ELEMENTS.—The report required under subsection (a) shall include the following elements:

(1) A description of the purpose of the USSOCOM-NCR.

(2) A description of the activities to be performed by the USSOCOM-NCR.

(3) An explanation of the impact of the USSOCOM-NCR on existing activities at United States Special Operations Command headquarters.

(4) A detailed, by fiscal year, breakout of the staffing and other costs associated with the USSOCOM-NCR over the future-years defense program.

(5) A description of the relationship between the USSOCOM-NCR and the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Special Operations and Low-Intensity Conflict.

(6) A description of the role of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Special Operations and Low-Intensity Conflict in providing oversight of USSOCOM-NCR activities.

(7) Any other matters the Secretary determines appropriate.

SEC. 344. LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR TRANS REGIONAL WEB INITIATIVE.

(a) LIMITATION.—Except as provided in subsection (b), none of the funds authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2014 for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended for the Trans Regional Web Initiative.

(b) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), of the amounts authorized to be appropriated by section 301 for operation and maintenance, Defense-wide, not more than $2,000,000 may be obligated or expended for—

(1) the termination of the Trans Regional Web Initiative as managed by Special Operations Command; or

(2) transitioning appropriate capabilities of such Initiative to other agencies.

Subtitle F—Other Matters

SEC. 351. GIFTS MADE FOR THE BENEFIT OF MILITARY MUSICAL UNITS.

Section 974 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (d) and (e) as subsections (e) and (f), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following:

“(d) PRIVATE DONATIONS.—(1) The Secretary concerned may accept contributions of money, personal property, or services on the condition that such money, property, or services be used for the benefit of a military musical unit under the jurisdiction of the Secretary.

“(2) Any contribution of money under paragraph (1) shall be credited to the appropriation or account providing the funds for such military musical unit. Any amount so credited shall be merged with amounts in the appropriation or account to which credited, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such appropriation or account.

“(3) Not later than January 30 of each year, the Secretary concerned shall submit to Congress a report on any contributions of money, personal property, and services accepted under paragraph (1) during the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year during which the report is submitted.”.

SEC. 352. REVISED POLICY ON GROUND COMBAT AND CAMOUFLAGE UTILITY UNIFORMS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States that the Secretary of Defense shall eliminate the development and fielding of Armed Force-specific combat and camouflage utility uniforms and families of uniforms in order to adopt and field a common combat and camouflage utility uniform or family of uniforms for specific combat environments to be used by all members of the Armed Forces.

(b) PROHIBITION.—Except as provided in subsection (c), after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of a military department may not adopt any new camouflage pattern design or uniform fabric for any combat or camouflage utility uniform or family of uniforms for use by an Armed Force, unless—

(1) the new design or fabric is a combat or camouflage utility uniform or family of uniforms that will be adopted by all Armed Forces;

(2) the Secretary adopts a uniform already in use by another Armed Force; or

(3) the Secretary of Defense grants an exception based on unique circumstances or operational requirements.

(c) EXCEPTIONS.—Nothing in subsection (b) shall be construed as—

(1) prohibiting the development of combat and camouflage utility uniforms and families of uniforms for use by personnel assigned to or operating in support of the unified combatant command for special operations forces described in section 167 of title 10, United States Code;

(2) prohibiting engineering modifications to existing uniforms that improve the performance of combat and camouflage utility uniforms, including power harnessing or generating textiles, fire resistant fabrics, and anti-vector, anti-microbial, and anti-bacterial treatments;

(3) prohibiting the Secretary of a military department from fielding ancillary uniform items, including headwear, footwear, body armor, and any other such items as determined by the Secretary;

(4) prohibiting the Secretary of a military department from issuing vehicle crew uniforms;

(5) prohibiting cosmetic service-specific uniform modifications to include insignia, pocket orientation, closure devices, inserts, and undergarments; or

(6) prohibiting the continued fielding or use of pre-existing service-specific or operation-specific combat uniforms as long as the uniforms continue to meet operational requirements.

(d) REGISTRATION REQUIRED.—The Secretary of a military department shall formally register with the Joint Clothing and Textiles Governance Board all uniforms in use by an Armed Force under the jurisdiction of the Secretary and all such uniforms planned for use by such an Armed Force.

(e) LIMITATION ON RESTRICTION.—The Secretary of a military department may not prevent the Secretary of another military department from authorizing the use of any combat or camouflage utility uniform or family of uniforms.

(f) GUIDANCE REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall issue guidance to implement this section.

(2) CONTENT.—At a minimum, the guidance required by paragraph (1) shall require the Secretary of each of the military departments—

(A) in cooperation with the commanders of the combatant commands, including the unified combatant command for special operations forces, to establish, by not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, joint criteria for combat and camouflage utility uniforms and families of uniforms, which shall be included in all new requirements documents for such uniforms;

(B) to continually work together to assess and develop new technologies that could be incorporated into future combat and camouflage utility uniforms and families of uniforms to improve war fighter survivability;

(C) to ensure that new combat and camouflage utility uniforms and families of uniforms meet the geographic and operational requirements of the commanders of the combatant commands; and

(D) to ensure that all new combat and camouflage utility uniforms and families of uniforms achieve interoperability with all components of individual war fighter systems, including body armor, organizational clothing and individual equipment, and other individual protective systems.

(g) REPEAL OF POLICY.—Section 352 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010 (Public Law 111–84, 123 Stat. 2262; 10 U.S.C. 771 note) is repealed.

Subtitle A—Officer Personnel Policy Generally

SEC. 501. CONGRESSIONAL NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS RELATED TO INCREASES IN NUMBER OF GENERAL AND FLAG OFFICERS ON ACTIVE DUTY OR IN JOINT DUTY ASSIGNMENTS.

(a) CONGRESSIONAL NOTIFICATION REQUIRED; BASELINES.—Section 526 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (d) through (h) as subsections (c) through (g), respectively; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

“(h) ACTIVE-DUTY BASELINE.—

“(1) NOTICE AND WAIT REQUIREMENT.—If the Secretary of a military department proposes an action that would increase above the baseline the number of general officers or flag officers of an armed force under the jurisdiction of that Secretary who would be on active duty and would count against the statutory limit applicable to that armed force under subsection (a), the action shall not take effect until after the end of the 60-calendar day period beginning on the date on which the Secretary provides notice of the proposed action, including the rationale for the action, to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

“(2) BASELINE DEFINED.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term ‘baseline’ for an armed force means the lower of—

“(A) the statutory limit of general officers or flag officers of that armed force under subsection (a); or

“(B) the actual number of general officers or flag officers of that armed force who, as of January 1, 2014, counted toward the statutory limit of general officers or flag officers of that armed force under subsection (a).

“(3) LIMITATION.—If, at any time, the actual number of general officers or flag officers of an armed force who count toward the statutory limit of general officers or flag officers of that armed force under subsection (a) exceeds such statutory limit, then no increase described in paragraph (1) for that armed force may occur until the general officer or flag officer total for that armed force is reduced below such statutory limit.

“(i) JOINT DUTY ASSIGNMENT BASELINE.—

“(1) NOTICE AND WAIT REQUIREMENT.—If the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of a military department, or the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff proposes an action that would increase above the baseline the number of general officers and flag officers of the armed forces in joint duty assignments who count against the statutory limit under subsection (b)(1), the action shall not take effect until after the end of the 60-calendar day period beginning on the date on which the Secretary or Chairman, as the case may be, provides notice of the proposed action, including the rationale for the action, to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

“(2) BASELINE DEFINED.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term ‘baseline’ means the lower of—

“(A) the statutory limit on general officer and flag officer positions that are joint duty assignments under subsection (b)(1); or

“(B) the actual number of general officers and flag officers who, as of January 1, 2014, were in joint duty assignments counted toward the statutory limit under subsection (b)(1).

“(3) LIMITATION.—If, at any time, the actual number of general officers and flag officers in joint duty assignments counted toward the statutory limit under subsection (b)(1) exceeds such statutory limit, then no increase described in paragraph (1) may occur until the number of general officers and flag officers in joint duty assignments is reduced below such statutory limit.”.

(b) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) INITIAL REPORT.—Not later than February 1, 2014, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report specifying—

(A) the numbers of general officers and flag officers who, as of January 1, 2014, counted toward the service-specific limits of subsection (a) of section 526 of title 10, United States Code; and

(B) the number of general officers and flag officers in joint duty assignments who, as of January 1, 2014, counted toward the statutory limit under subsection (b)(1) of such section.

(2) ANNUAL REPORTS.—Section 526 of title 10, United States Code, is further amended by inserting after subsection (i), as added by subsection (a)(2) of this section, the following new subsection:

“(j) ANNUAL REPORT ON GENERAL OFFICER AND FLAG OFFICER NUMBERS.—Not later than March 1, 2015, and each March 1 thereafter, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report specifying—

“(1) the numbers of general officers and flag officers who, as of January 1 of the calendar year in which the report is submitted, counted toward the service-specific limits of subsection (a); and

“(2) the number of general officers and flag officers in joint duty assignments who, as of such January 1, counted toward the statutory limit under subsection (b)(1).”.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on January 1, 2014.

SEC. 502. SERVICE CREDIT FOR CYBERSPACE EXPERIENCE OR ADVANCED EDUCATION UPON ORIGINAL APPOINTMENT AS A COMMISSIONED OFFICER.

Section 533 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsections (a)(2) and (c), by inserting “or (g)” after “subsection (b)”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(g)(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, if the Secretary of a military department determines that the number of commissioned officers with cyberspace-related experience or advanced education serving on active duty in an armed force under the jurisdiction of such Secretary is critically below the number needed, such Secretary may credit any person receiving an original appointment with a period of constructive service for the following:

“(A) Special experience or training in a particular cyberspace-related field if such experience or training is directly related to the operational needs of the armed force concerned.

“(B) Any period of advanced education in a cyberspace-related field beyond the baccalaureate degree level if such advanced education is directly related to the operational needs of the armed force concerned.

“(2) Constructive service credited an officer under this subsection shall not exceed one year for each year of special experience, training, or advanced education, and not more than three years total constructive service may be credited.

“(3) Constructive service credited an officer under this subsection is in addition to any service credited that officer under subsection (a) and shall be credited at the time of the original appointment of the officer.

“(4) The authority to award constructive service credit under this subsection expires on December 31, 2018.”.

SEC. 503. SELECTIVE EARLY RETIREMENT AUTHORITY FOR REGULAR OFFICERS AND SELECTIVE EARLY REMOVAL OF OFFICERS FROM RESERVE ACTIVE-STATUS LIST.

(a) REGULAR OFFICERS ON THE ACTIVE-DUTY LIST CONSIDERED FOR SELECTIVE EARLY RETIREMENT.—

(1) LIEUTENANT COLONELS AND COMMANDERS.—Subparagraph (A) of section 638a(b)(2) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking “would be subject to” and all that follows through “two or more times)” and inserting “have failed of selection for promotion at least one time and whose names are not on a list of officers recommended for promotion”.

(2) COLONELS AND NAVY CAPTAINS.—Subparagraph (B) of such section is amended by striking “would be subject to” and all that follows through “not less than two years)” and inserting “have served on active duty in that grade for at least two years and whose names are not on a list of officers recommended for promotion”.

(b) OFFICERS CONSIDERED FOR SELECTIVE EARLY REMOVAL FROM RESERVE ACTIVE-STATUS LIST.—Section 14704 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by inserting “(1)” before “Whenever”; and

(B) by striking “all officers on that list” and inserting “officers on the reserve active-status list”;

(C) by striking “the reserve active-status list, in the number specified by the Secretary by each grade and competitive category.” and inserting “that list.”; and

(D) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

“(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), the list of officers in a reserve component whose names are submitted to a board under paragraph (1) shall include each officer on the reserve active-status list for that reserve component in the same grade and competitive category whose position on the reserve active-status list is between—

“(A) that of the most junior officer in that grade and competitive category whose name is submitted to the board; and

“(B) that of the most senior officer in that grade and competitive category whose name is submitted to the board.

“(3) A list submitted to a board under paragraph (1) may not include an officer who—

“(A) has been approved for voluntary retirement; or

“(B) is to be involuntarily retired under any provision of law during the fiscal year in which the board is convened or during the following fiscal year.”;

(2) by redesignating subsections (b) and (c) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection (b):

“(b) SPECIFICATION OF NUMBER OF OFFICERS WHO MAY BE RECOMMENDED FOR SEPARATION.—The Secretary of the military department concerned shall specify the number of officers described in subsection (a)(1) that a board may recommend for separation under subsection (c).”.

Subtitle B—Reserve Component Management

SEC. 511. SUICIDE PREVENTION EFFORTS FOR MEMBERS OF THE RESERVE COMPONENTS.

(a) IMPROVED OUTREACH UNDER SUICIDE PREVENTION AND RESILIENCE PROGRAM.—Section 10219 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (e) the following new subsection (f):

“(f) OUTREACH FOR CERTAIN MEMBERS OF THE RESERVE COMPONENTS.—(1) Upon the request of an adjutant general of a State, the Secretary may share with the adjutant general the contact information of members described in paragraph (2) who reside in such State in order for the adjutant general to include such members in suicide prevention efforts conducted under this section.

“(2) Members described in this paragraph are—

“(A) members of the Individual Ready Reserve; and

“(B) members of a reserve component who are individual mobilization augmentees.”.

(b) INCLUSION IN DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIPS PILOT PROGRAM.—Section 706 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1800; 10 U.S.C. 10101 note) is amended—

(1) in subsections (a) and (e), by striking “and substance use disorders and traumatic brain injury” and inserting “, substance use disorders, traumatic brain injury, and suicide prevention”; and

(a) ARMY NATIONAL GUARD.—During the period ending on December 31, 2016, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Army:

(1) An officer of the Army National Guard who fills a vacancy in a federally recognized unit of the Army National Guard may be transferred from the active Army National Guard to the inactive Army National Guard.

(2) An officer of the Army National Guard transferred to the inactive Army National Guard pursuant to paragraph (1) may be transferred from the inactive Army National Guard to the active Army National Guard to fill a vacancy in a federally recognized unit.

(b) AIR NATIONAL GUARD.—During the period ending on December 31, 2016, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Air Force:

(1) An officer of the Air National Guard who fills a vacancy in a federally recognized unit of the Air National Guard may be transferred from the active Air National Guard to the inactive Air National Guard.

(2) An officer of the Air National Guard transferred to the inactive Air National Guard pursuant to paragraph (1) may be transferred from the inactive Air National Guard to the active Air National Guard to fill a vacancy in a federally recognized unit.

SEC. 513. LIMITATIONS ON CANCELLATIONS OF DEPLOYMENT OF CERTAIN RESERVE COMPONENT UNITS AND INVOLUNTARY MOBILIZATIONS OF CERTAIN RESERVES.

(a) LIMITATION ON CANCELLATION OF DEPLOYMENT OF CERTAIN UNITS WITHIN 180 DAYS OF SCHEDULED DEPLOYMENT.—

(1) LIMITATION.—The deployment of a unit of a reserve component of the Armed Forces described in paragraph (2) may not be cancelled during the 180-day period ending on the date on which the unit is otherwise scheduled for deployment without the approval, in writing, of the Secretary of Defense.

(2) COVERED DEPLOYMENTS.—A deployment of a unit of a reserve component described in this paragraph is a deployment whose cancellation as described in paragraph (1) is due to the deployment of a unit of a regular component of the Armed Forces to carry out the mission for which the unit of the reserve component was otherwise to be deployed.

(3) NOTICE TO CONGRESS AND GOVERNORS ON APPROVAL OF CANCELLATION OF DEPLOYMENT.—On approving the cancellation of deployment of a unit under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees and the Governor concerned a notice on the approval of cancellation of deployment of the unit.

(b) ADVANCE NOTICE TO CERTAIN RESERVES ON INVOLUNTARY MOBILIZATION.—

(1) ADVANCE NOTICE REQUIRED.—The Secretary concerned may not provide less than 120 days advance notice of an involuntary mobilization to a member of the reserve component of the Armed Forces described in paragraph (2) without the approval, in writing, of the Secretary of Defense.

(2) COVERED RESERVES.—A member of a reserve component described in this paragraph is a member as follows:

(A) A member who is not assigned to a unit organized to serve as a unit.

(B) A member who is to be mobilized apart from the member's unit.

(3) COMMENCEMENT OF APPLICABILITY.—This subsection shall apply with respect to members who are mobilized on or after the date that is 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(4) SECRETARY CONCERNED DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term “Secretary concerned” has the meaning given that term in section 101(a)(9) of title 10, United States Code.

(5) SUNSET.—This subsection shall cease to apply as of the date of the completion of the withdrawal of United States combat forces from Afghanistan.

(c) NONDELEGATION OF APPROVAL.—The Secretary of Defense may not delegate the approval of cancellations of deployments of units under subsection (a) or the approval of mobilization of Reserves without advance notice under subsection (b).

SEC. 514. REVIEW OF REQUIREMENTS AND AUTHORIZATIONS FOR RESERVE COMPONENT GENERAL AND FLAG OFFICERS IN AN ACTIVE STATUS.

(a) REVIEW REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a review of the general officer and flag officer requirements for members of the reserve component in an active status.

(b) PURPOSE OF REVIEW.—The purpose of the review is to ensure that the authorized strengths provided in section 12004 of title 10, United States Code, for reserve general officers and reserve flag officers in an active status—

(1) are based on an objective requirements process and are sufficient for the effective management, leadership, and administration of the reserve components;

(2) provide a qualified, sufficient pool from which reserve component general and flag officers can continue to be assigned on active duty in joint duty and in-service military positions;

(3) reflect a review of the appropriateness and number of exemptions provided by subsections (b), (c), and (d) of section 12004 of title 10, United States Code;

(4) reflect the efficiencies that can be achieved through downgrading or elimination of reserve component general or flag officer positions, including through the conversion of certain reserve component general or flag officer positions to senior civilian positions; and

(5) are subjected to periodic review, control, and adjustment.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report containing the results of the review, including such recommendations for changes in law and policy related to authorized reserve general and flag officers strengths as the Secretary considers to be appropriate.

SEC. 515. FEASIBILITY OF ESTABLISHING A UNIT OF THE NATIONAL GUARD IN AMERICAN SAMOA AND IN THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS.

(a) DETERMINATION REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall determine the feasibility of establishing—

(1) a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa; and

(2) a unit of the National Guard in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

(b) FORCE STRUCTURE ELEMENTS.—In making the feasibility determination under subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall consider the following:

(1) The allocation of National Guard force structure and manpower to American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands in the event of the establishment of a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa and in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the impact of this allocation on existing National Guard units in the 50 States, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the District of Columbia.

(2) The Federal funding that would be required to support pay, benefits, training operations, and missions of members of a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, based on the allocation derived from paragraph (1), and the equipment, including maintenance, required to support such force structure.

(3) The presence of existing infrastructure to support a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the requirement for additional infrastructure, including information technology infrastructure, to support such force structure, based on the allocation derived from paragraph (1).

(4) How a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Island would accommodate the National Guard Bureau's "Essential Ten" homeland defense capabilities (i.e., aviation, engineering, civil support teams, security, medical, transportation, maintenance, logistics, joint force headquarters, and communications) and reflect regional needs.

(5) The manpower cadre, both military personnel and full-time support, including National Guard technicians, required to establish, maintain, and sustain a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the ability of American Samoa and of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands to support demographically a unit of the National Guard at each location.

(6) The ability of a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands to maintain unit readiness and the logistical challenges associated with transportation, communications, supply/resupply, and training operations and missions.

(c) SUBMISSION OF CONCLUSION.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall notify the congressional defense committees of the results of the feasibility determination made under subsection (a). If the Secretary determines that establishment of a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa or the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (or both) is feasible, the Secretary shall include in the notification the following:

(1) A determination of whether the executive branch of American Samoa and of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands has enacted and implemented statutory authorization for an organized militia as a prerequisite for establishing a unit of the National Guard, and a description of any other steps that such executive branches must take to request and carry out the establishment of a National Guard unit.

(2) A list of any amendments to titles 10, 32, and 37, United States Code, that would have to be enacted by Congress to provide for the establishment of a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa and in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

(3) A description of any required Department of Defense actions to establish a unit of the National Guard in American Samoa and in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

(4) A suggested timeline for completion of the steps and actions described in the preceding paragraphs.

SEC. 524. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING THE WOMEN IN SERVICE IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretaries of the military departments—

(1) no later than September 2015, should develop, review, and validate individual occupational standards, using validated gender-neutral occupational standards, so as to assess and assign members of the Armed Forces to units, including Special Operations Forces; and

(2) no later than January 1, 2016, should complete all assessments.

SEC. 525. PROVISION OF MILITARY SERVICE RECORDS TO THE SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS IN AN ELECTRONIC FORMAT.

(a) PROVISION IN ELECTRONIC FORMAT.—In accordance with subsection (b), the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, shall make the covered records of each member of the Armed Forces available to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs in an electronic format.

(b) DEADLINE FOR PROVISION OF RECORDS.—With respect to a member of the Armed Forces who is discharged or released from the Armed Forces on or after January 1, 2014, the Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the covered records of the member are made available to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs not later than 90 days after the date of the member's discharge or release.

(c) SHARING OF PROTECTED HEALTH INFORMATION.—For purposes of the regulations promulgated under section 264(c) of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-191; 42 U.S.C. 1320d-2 note), making medical records available to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs under subsection (a) shall be treated as a permitted disclosure.

(d) RECORDS CURRENTLY AVAILABLE TO SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, shall ensure that the covered records of members of the Armed Forces that are available to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs as of the date of the enactment of this Act are made electronically accessible and available as soon as practicable after that date to the Veterans Benefits Administration.

(e) COVERED RECORDS DEFINED.—In this section, the term “covered records” means, with respect to a member of the Armed Forces—

(1) service treatment records;

(2) accompanying personal records;

(3) relevant unit records; and

(4) medical records created by reason of treatment or services received pursuant to chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 526. REVIEW OF INTEGRATED DISABILITY EVALUATION SYSTEM.

(a) REVIEW.—The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, shall conduct a review of—

(1) the backlog of pending cases in the Integrated Disability Evaluation System with respect to members of the reserve components of the Armed Forces for the purpose of addressing the matters specified in paragraph (1) of subsection (b); and

(2) the improvements to the Integrated Disability Evaluation System specified in paragraph (2) of such subsection.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services and Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report on the review conducted under subsection (a). Such report shall include the following:

(1) With respect to the reserve components of the Armed Forces—

(A) the number of pending cases that exist as of the date of the report, listed by military department, component, and, with respect to the National Guard, State;

(B) as of the date of the report, the average time it takes the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs to process a case through each phase or step of the Integrated Disability Evaluation System under that Department's control;

(C) a description of the measures the Secretary has taken, and will take, to resolve the backlog of cases in the Integrated Disability Evaluation System; and

(D) the date by which the Secretary plans to resolve such backlog for each military department.

(2) With respect to the regular components and reserve components of the Armed Forces—

(A) a description of the progress being made by both the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs to transition the Integrated Disability Evaluation System to an integrated and readily accessible electronic format that a member of the Armed Forces may access to see the status of the member during each phase or step of the system;

(B) an estimate of the cost to complete the transition to an integrated and readily accessible electronic format; and

(C) an assessment of the feasibility of improving in-transit visibility of pending cases, including by establishing a method of tracking a pending case when—

(i) a military treatment facility is assigned a packet and pending case for action regarding a member; and

(ii) a packet is at the Veterans Tracking Application and Disability Rating Activity Site of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(c) PENDING CASE DEFINED.—In this section, the term “pending case” means a case involving a member of the Armed Forces who, as of the date of the review under subsection (a), is within the Integrated Disability Evaluation System and has been referred to a medical evaluation board.

Subtitle D—Military Justice Matters, Other Than Sexual Assault Prevention and Response and Related Reforms

SEC. 531. MODIFICATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR APPOINTMENT AS JUDGE ON THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE ARMED FORCES.

(a) MODIFICATION.—Paragraph (4) of section 942(b) of title 10, United States Code (article 142(b) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice), is amended to read as follows:

“(4) A person may not be appointed as a judge of the court within seven years after retirement from active duty as a commissioned officer of a regular component of an armed force.”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act, and shall apply with respect to appointments to the United States Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces that occur on or after that date.

SEC. 532. ENHANCEMENT OF PROTECTION OF RIGHTS OF CONSCIENCE OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND CHAPLAINS OF SUCH MEMBERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a)(1) of section 533 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1727; 10 U.S.C. prec. 1030 note) is amended—

(1) by striking “The Armed Forces shall accommodate the beliefs” and inserting “Unless it could have an adverse impact on military readiness, unit cohesion, and good order and discipline, the Armed Forces shall accommodate individual expressions of belief”;

(2) by inserting “sincerely held” before “conscience”; and

(3) by striking “use such beliefs” and inserting “use such expression of belief”.

(b) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall prescribe the implementing regulations required by subsection (c) of such section. In prescribing such regulations, the Secretary shall consult with the official military faith-group representatives who endorse military chaplains.

SEC. 533. INSPECTOR GENERAL INVESTIGATION OF ARMED FORCES COMPLIANCE WITH REGULATIONS FOR THE PROTECTION OF RIGHTS OF CONSCIENCE OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND THEIR CHAPLAINS.

(a) INVESTIGATION INTO COMPLIANCE; REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date on which regulations are issued implementing the protections afforded by section 533 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1727; 10 U.S.C. prec. 1030 note), as amended by section 532, the Inspector General of the Department of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report—

(1) setting forth the results of an investigation by the Inspector General during that 18-month period into the compliance by the Armed Forces with the elements of such regulations on adverse personnel actions, discrimination, or denials of promotion, schooling, training, or assignment for members of the Armed Forces based on conscience, moral principles, or religious beliefs; and

(2) identifying the number of times during the investigation period that the Inspector General of the Department of Defense or the Inspector General of a military department was contacted regarding an incident involving the conscience, moral principles, or religious beliefs of a member of the Armed Forces.

(b) CONSULTATION.—In conducting any analysis, investigation, or survey for purposes of this section, the Inspector General of the Department of Defense shall consult with the Armed Forces Chaplains Board, as appropriate.

SEC. 534. SURVEY OF MILITARY CHAPLAINS VIEWS ON DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE POLICY REGARDING CHAPLAIN PRAYERS OUTSIDE OF RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

(a) SURVEY REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a survey among a statistically valid sample of military chaplains of the regular and reserve components of the Armed Forces, to be selected at random, to assess whether—

(1) restrictions placed on prayers offered in a public or non-religious setting have prevented military chaplains from exercising the tenets of their faith as prescribed by their endorsing faith group; and

(2) those restrictions have had an adverse impact on the ability of military chaplains to fulfill their duties to minister to members of the Armed Forces and their dependents.

(b) DEADLINE FOR COMPLETION.—The Secretary of Defense shall complete the survey required by subsection (a) within one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) SUBMISSION OF RESULTS.—Not later than 90 days after completing the survey required by subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report containing—

(1) the survey questionnaire; and

(2) the results of the survey.

Subtitle E—Member Education and Training

SEC. 541. ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS FOR APPROVAL OF EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS FOR PURPOSES OF CERTAIN EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE UNDER LAWS ADMINISTERED BY THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 101 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2006 the following new section:

“§ 2006a. Assistance for education and training: availability of certain assistance for use only for certain programs of education

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Effective as of August, 1, 2014, an individual eligible for assistance under a Department of Defense educational assistance program or authority covered by this section may, except as provided in subsection (b), only use such assistance for educational expenses incurred for a program as follows:

“(1) An eligible program (as defined in section 481 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1088)) that is offered by an institution of higher education that has entered into, and is complying with, a program participation agreement under section 487 of such Act (20 U.S.C. 1094).

“(2) In the case of a program designed to prepare individuals for licensure or certification in any State, if the program meets the instructional curriculum licensure or certification requirements of such State.

“(3) In the case of a program designed to prepare individuals for employment pursuant to standards developed by a State board or agency in an occupation that requires approval or licensure for such employment, if the program is approved or licensed by such State board or agency.

“(b) WAIVER.—The Secretary of Defense may, by regulation, authorize the use of educational assistance under a Department of Defense educational assistance program or authority covered by this chapter for educational expenses incurred for a program of education that is not described in subsection (a) if the program—

“(1) is accredited and approved by a nationally or regionally recognized accrediting agency or association recognized by the Department of Education;

“(2) was not an eligible program described in subsection (a) at any time during the most recent two-year period;

“(3) is a program that the Secretary determines would further the purposes of the educational assistance programs or authorities covered by this chapter, or would further the education interests of students eligible for assistance under the such programs or authorities; and

“(4) the institution providing the program does not provide any commission, bonus, or other incentive payment based directly or indirectly on success in securing enrollments or financial aid to any persons or entities engaged in any student recruiting or admission activities or in making decisions regarding the award of student financial assistance, except for the recruitment of foreign students residing in foreign countries who are not eligible to receive Federal student assistance.

“(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) The term ‘Department of Defense educational assistance programs and authorities covered by this section’ means the programs and authorities as follows:

“(A) The programs to assist military spouses in achieving education and training to expand employment and portable career opportunities under section 1784a of this title.

“(B) The authority to pay tuition for off-duty training or education of members of the armed forces under section 2007 of this title.

“(C) The program of educational assistance for members of the Selected Reserve under chapter 1606 of this title.

“(D) The program of educational assistance for reserve component members supporting contingency operations and certain other operations under chapter 1607 of this title.

“(E) Any other program or authority of the Department of Defense for assistance in education or training carried out under the laws administered by the Secretary of Defense that is designated by the Secretary, by regulation, for purposes of this section.

“(2) The term ‘institution of higher education’ has the meaning given that term in section 102 of the Higher Education Act for 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1002).”

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 101 of such title is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2006 the following new item:

“2006a. Assistance for education and training: availability of certain assistance for use only for certain programs of education.”

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on August 1, 2014.

SEC. 542. ENHANCEMENT OF MECHANISMS TO CORRELATE SKILLS AND TRAINING FOR MILITARY OCCUPATIONAL SPECIALTIES WITH SKILLS AND TRAINING REQUIRED FOR CIVILIAN CERTIFICATIONS AND LICENSES.

(a) IMPROVEMENT OF INFORMATION AVAILABLE TO MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES ABOUT CORRELATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretaries of the military departments, in coordination with the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness, shall, to the maximum extent practicable, make information on civilian credentialing opportunities available to members of the Armed Forces beginning with, and at every stage of, training of members for military occupational specialties, in order to permit members—

(A) to evaluate the extent to which such training correlates with the skills and training required in connection with various civilian certifications and licenses; and

(B) to assess the suitability of such training for obtaining or pursuing such civilian certifications and licenses.

(2) COORDINATION WITH TRANSITION GOALS PLANS SUCCESS PROGRAM.—Information shall be made available under paragraph (1) in a manner consistent with the Transition Goals Plans Success (GPS) program.

(3) TYPES OF INFORMATION.—The information made available under paragraph (1) shall include, but not be limited to, the following:

(A) Information on the civilian occupational equivalents of military occupational specialties (MOS).

(B) Information on civilian license or certification requirements, including examination requirements.

(C) Information on the availability and opportunities for use of educational benefits available to members of the Armed Forces, as appropriate, corresponding training, or continuing education that leads to a certification exam in order to provide a pathway to credentialing opportunities.

(4) USE AND ADAPTATION OF CERTAIN PROGRAMS.—In making information available under paragraph (1), the Secretaries of the military departments may use and adapt appropriate portions of the Credentialing Opportunities On-Line (COOL) programs of the Army and the Navy and the Credentialing and Educational Research Tool (CERT) of the Air Force.

(b) IMPROVEMENT OF ACCESS OF ACCREDITED CIVILIAN CREDENTIALING AND RELATED ENTITIES TO MILITARY TRAINING CONTENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretaries of the military departments, in coordination with the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness, shall, to the maximum extent practicable consistent with national security and privacy requirements, make available to entities specified in paragraph (2), upon request of such entities, information such as military course training curricula, syllabi, and materials, levels of military advancement attained, and professional skills developed.

(2) ENTITIES.—The entities specified in this paragraph are the following:

(A) Civilian credentialing agencies.

(B) Entities approved by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, or by State approving agencies, for purposes of the use of educational assistance benefits under the laws administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

(3) CENTRAL REPOSITORY.—The actions taken pursuant to paragraph (1) may include the establishment of a central repository of information on training and training materials provided members in connection with military occupational specialties that is readily accessible by entities specified in paragraph (2) in order to meet requests described in paragraph (1).

SEC. 543. REPORT ON THE TROOPS TO TEACHERS PROGRAM.

Not later than March 1, 2014, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the Troops to Teachers program that includes each of the following:

(1) An evaluation of whether there is a need to broaden eligibility to allow service members and veterans without a bachelor's degree admission into the program and whether the program can be strengthened.

(2) An evaluation of whether a pilot program should be established to demonstrate the potential benefit of an institutional-based award for troops to teachers, as long as any such pilot program maximizes benefits to service members and minimizes administrative and other overhead costs at the participating academic institutions.

SEC. 544. SECRETARY OF DEFENSE REPORT ON FEASIBILITY OF REQUIRING AUTOMATIC OPERATION OF CURRENT PROHIBITION ON ACCRUAL OF INTEREST ON DIRECT STUDENT LOANS OF CERTAIN MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense, after consultation with relevant Federal agencies, shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report addressing—

(1) the feasibility of automatic application of the benefits provided under section 455(o) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C.

1087e(o)) for members of the Armed Forces eligible for the benefits; and

(2) if the Secretary determines automatic application of such benefits is feasible, how the Department of Defense would implement the automatic operation of the current prohibition on the accrual of interest on direct student loans of certain members, including the Federal agencies with which the Department of Defense would coordinate.

Subtitle F—Defense Dependents' Education and Military Family Readiness Matters

SEC. 551. CONTINUATION OF AUTHORITY TO ASSIST LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES THAT BENEFIT DEPENDENTS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES.

(a) ASSISTANCE TO SCHOOLS WITH SIGNIFICANT NUMBERS OF MILITARY DEPENDENT STUDENTS.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2014 by section 301 and available for operation and maintenance for Defense-wide activities as specified in the funding table in section 4301, $25,000,000 shall be available only for the purpose of providing assistance to local educational agencies under subsection (a) of section 572 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2006 (Public Law 109-163; 20 U.S.C. 7703b).

(b) LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCY DEFINED.—In this section, the term “local educational agency” has the meaning given that term in section 8013(9) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7713(9)).

SEC. 552. IMPACT AID FOR CHILDREN WITH SEVERE DISABILITIES.

Of the amount authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2014 pursuant to section 301 and available for operation and maintenance for Defense-wide activities as specified in the funding table in section 4301, $5,000,000 shall be available for payments under section 363 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106-398; 114 Stat. 1654A-77; 20 U.S.C. 7703a).

SEC. 553. TREATMENT OF TUITION PAYMENTS RECEIVED FOR VIRTUAL ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION COMPONENT OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE EDUCATION PROGRAM.

(a) CREDITING OF PAYMENTS.—Section 2164(1) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(3) Any payments received by the Secretary of Defense under this subsection shall be credited to the account designated by the Secretary for the operation of the virtual educational program under this subsection. Payments so credited shall be merged with other funds in the account and shall be available, to the extent provided in advance in appropriation Acts, for the same purposes and the same period as other funds in the account.”

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENT.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to tuition payments received under section 2164(1) of title 10, United States Code, for enrollments authorized by such section, after the date of the enactment of this Act, in the virtual elementary and secondary education program of the Department of Defense education program.

SEC. 554. FAMILY SUPPORT PROGRAMS FOR IMMEDIATE FAMILY MEMBERS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES ASSIGNED TO SPECIAL OPERATIONS FORCES.

(a) PILOT PROGRAMS AUTHORIZED.—Consistent with such regulations as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe to carry out this section, the Commander of the United States Special Operations Command may conduct up to three pilot programs to assess the feasibility and benefits of providing family support activities for the immediate family members of members of the Armed Forces assigned to special operations forces. In selecting and conducting any pilot program under this subsection, the Commander shall coordinate with the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness.

(b) SELECTION OF PROGRAMS.—In selecting the pilot programs to be conducted under subsection (a), the Commander shall—

(1) identify family support activities that have a direct and concrete impact on the readiness of special operations forces, but that are not being provided by the Secretary of a military department to the immediate family members of members of the Armed Forces assigned to special operations forces; and

(2) conduct a cost-benefit analysis of each family support activity proposed to be included in a pilot program.

(c) EVALUATION.—The Commander shall develop outcome measurements to evaluate the success of each family support activity included in a pilot program under subsection (a).

(d) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—The Commander may expend up to $5,000,000 during each fiscal year specified in subsection (f) to carry out the pilot programs under subsection (a).

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term “Commander” means the Commander of the United States Special Operations Command.

(2) The term “immediate family members” has the meaning given that term in section 1789(c) of title 10, United States Code.

(3) The term “special operations forces” means those forces of the Armed Forces identified as special operations forces under section 167(i) of such title.

(f) DURATION OF PILOT PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The authority provided by subsection (a) is available to the Commander during fiscal years 2014 through 2016.

(g) REPORT REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after completing a pilot program under subsection (a), the Commander shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report describing the results of the pilot program. The Commander shall prepare the report in coordination with the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness.

(2) ELEMENTS OF REPORT.—The report shall include the following:

(A) A description of the pilot program to address family support requirements not being provided by the Secretary of a military department to immediate family members of members of the Armed Forces assigned to special operations forces.

(B) An assessment of the impact of the pilot program on the readiness of members of the Armed Forces assigned to special operations forces.

(C) A comparison of the pilot program to other programs conducted by the Secretaries of the military departments to provide family support to immediate family members of members of the Armed Forces.

(D) Recommendations for incorporating the lessons learned from the pilot program into family support programs conducted by the Secretaries of the military departments.

(E) Any other matters considered appropriate by the Commander or the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness.

SEC. 555. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON PARENTAL RIGHTS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES IN CHILD CUSTODY DETERMINATIONS.

It is the sense of Congress that State courts should not consider a military deployment, including past, present, or future deployment, as the sole factor in determining child custody in a State court proceeding involving a parent who is a member of the Armed Forces. The best interest of the child should always prevail in custody cases, but members of the Armed Forces should not lose custody of their children based solely upon service in the Armed Forces in defense of the United States.

Subtitle G—Decorations and Awards

SEC. 561. REPEAL OF LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF MEDALS OF HONOR THAT MAY BE AWARDED TO THE SAME MEMBER OF THE ARMED FORCES.

(a) ARMY.—Section 3744(a) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking “medal of honor, distinguished-service cross,” and inserting “distinguished-service cross”.

SEC. 565. REVIEW OF ELIGIBILITY FOR, AND AWARD OF, PURPLE HEART TO VICTIMS OF THE ATTACKS AT RECRUITING STATION IN LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS, AND AT FORT HOOD, TEXAS.

(a) REVIEW REGARDING SPECIFIED ATTACKS.—

(1) REVIEW AND AWARD REQUIRED.—The Secretary of the military department concerned shall—

(A) review the circumstances of the attacks that occurred at the recruiting station in Little Rock, Arkansas, on June 1, 2009, and at Fort Hood, Texas, on November 5, 2009, in which members of the Armed Forces were killed and wounded; and

(B) award the Purple Heart to each member determined pursuant to such review to be eligible for the award of the Purple Heart in connection with the death or wounding of the member in the attacks.

(2) CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN EVIDENCE.—In reviewing all the evidence related to the incidents described in paragraph (1) and the criteria established under Executive Order 11016 (Authorizing the Award of the Purple Heart), the Secretary of the military department concerned shall specifically, but not exclusively, assess whether the members of the Armed Forces killed or wounded at Fort Hood and Little Rock qualify for award of the Purple Heart under the criteria as members of the Armed Forces who were killed or wounded as a result of an act of an enemy of the United States.

(3) SUBMISSION.—The results of the review shall be provided to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(4) EXCEPTION.—A Purple Heart may not be awarded pursuant to paragraph (1)(B) to a member of the Armed Forces whose death or wound in an attack described in paragraph (1)(A) was the result of the willful misconduct of the member.

(b) REVIEW OF THE CRITERIA FOR AWARDED PURPLE HEART.—

(1) REVIEW REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a review of the criteria used to determine the eligibility of members of the Armed Forces for the award of the Purple Heart. The review shall include the policies and procedures for determining eligibility for the award of the Purple Heart to members who sustain injuries through acts of violence. The purpose of the review is to determine whether those criteria remain relevant for the broad range of circumstances in and outside the United States in which members are killed or wounded.

(2) SUBMISSION OF RESULTS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report containing the results of the review. The report shall include the findings of the review and any recommendations the Secretary considers appropriate regarding modifying the criteria for eligibility for the Purple Heart.

(1) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report on the POW/MIA accounting community.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) A description and assessment of the current structure of the POW/MIA accounting community.

(B) A description of how the Secretary of Defense will ensure increased oversight of the POW/MIA accounting mission regardless of changes to the POW/MIA accounting community.

(C) An assessment of the feasibility and advisability of reorganizing the community into a single, central command, including—

(i) an identification of the elements that could be organized into such command; and

(ii) an assessment of cost-savings, advantages, and disadvantages of—

(I) transferring the command and control of the Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command (JPAC) and the Central Identification Laboratory (CIL) from the United States Pacific Command to the Office of the Secretary of Defense;

(II) merging the Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command and the Central Identification Laboratory with the Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office (DPMO); and

(III) merging the Central Identification Laboratory with the Armed Forces DNA Identification Lab (AF-DIL).

(D) A recommendation on the element of the Department of Defense to be responsible for directing POW/MIA accounting activities, and on whether all elements of the POW/MIA accounting community should report to that element.

(E) An estimate of the costs to be incurred, and the cost savings to be achieved—

(i) by relocating central POW/MIA accounting activities to the continental United States;

(ii) by closing or consolidating existing Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command facilities; and

(iii) through any actions with respect to the POW/MIA accounting community and POW/MIA accounting activities that the Secretary considers advisable for purposes of the report.

(F) An assessment of the feasibility and advisability of the use by the Department of university anthropology or archaeology programs to conduct field work, particularly in politically sensitive environments, including an assessment of—

(i) the potential cost of the use of such programs;

(ii) whether the use of such programs would result in a greater number of identifications; and

(iii) whether the use of such programs would be consistent with requirements to preserve the integrity of the identification process.

(G) A survey of the manner in which other countries conduct accounting for missing persons, and an assessment whether such practices can be used by the United States to enhance programs to recover and identify missing members of the United States Armed Forces.

(H) A recommendation as to the advisability of continuing to use a military model for recovery operations, including the impact of the use of such model on diplomatic relations with countries in which the United States seeks to conduct recovery operations.

(I) Such recommendations for the reorganization of the POW/MIA accounting community as the Secretary considers appropriate in light of the other elements of the report, including an estimate of the additional numbers of recoveries and identifications anticipated to be made by the accounting community as a result of implementation of the reorganization.

(3) BASIS IN PREVIOUS RECOMMENDATIONS.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall take into account recommendations previously made by the Director of Cost Assessment and Program Evaluation, the Inspector General of the Department of Defense, and the Comptroller General of the United States regarding the organization of the POW/MIA accounting community.

(4) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

(A) The term “appropriate committees of Congress” means—

(i) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and

(ii) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform of the House of Representatives.

(1) COVERED DECEDENTS.—Section 1481(a) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(10) To the extent authorized under section 1482(g) of this title, any person not otherwise covered by the preceding paragraphs whose remains (or partial remains) have been retained by the Secretary concerned for purposes of a forensic pathology investigation by the Armed Forces Medical Examiner under section 1471 of this title.”.

(2) AUTHORIZED EXPENSES RELATING TO CARE AND DISPOSITION OF REMAINS.—Section 1482 of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(g)(1) The payment of expenses incident to the recovery, care, and disposition of the remains of a decedent covered by section 1481(a)(10) of this title is limited to those expenses that, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, would not have been incurred but for the retention of those remains for purposes of a forensic pathology investigation by the Armed Forces Medical Examiner under section 1471 of this title.

“(2) In a case covered by paragraph (1), if the person designated under subsection (c) to direct disposition of the remains of a decedent does not direct disposition of the remains that were retained for the forensic pathology investigation, the Secretary may pay for the transportation of those remains to, and interment or inurnment of those remains in, an appropriate place selected by the Secretary, in lieu of the transportation authorized to be paid under paragraph (8) of subsection (a).

“(3) In a case covered by paragraph (1), expenses that may be paid do not include expenses with respect to an escort under paragraph (8) of subsection (a), whether or not on a reimbursable basis.

“(4) The Secretary concerned may pay any other expenses relating to the remains of such a decedent that are authorized to be paid under this section on a reimbursable basis. Amounts reimbursed to the Secretary concerned under this subsection shall be credited to appropriations available at the time of reimbursement for the payment of such expenses.”.

(b) CLARIFICATION OF COVERAGE OF INURNMENT.—Section 1482(a)(9) of such title is amended by inserting “or inurnment” after “Interment”.

(c) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 1482(f) of such title is amended by striking the third sentence and inserting the following new sentence: “The Secretary concerned may pay any other expenses relating to the remains of such a decedent that are authorized to be paid under this section only on a reimbursable basis.”.

SEC. 652. STUDY OF THE MERITS AND FEASIBILITY OF PROVIDING TRANSITIONAL COMPENSATION AND OTHER TRANSITIONAL BENEFITS TO DEPENDENTS OF MEMBERS SEPARATED FOR VIOLATION OF THE UNIFORM CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a study regarding the merits and feasibility of providing transitional compensation and other transitional benefits to dependents or former dependents of members of the Armed Forces who are separated from the Armed Forces for a violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice under the circumstances described in subsection (b).

(b) COVERED MEMBERS AND CIRCUMSTANCES.—The scope of the study required by subsection (a) is limited to those circumstances in which members of the Armed Forces—

(1) are convicted by court-martial of an offense under chapter 47 of title 10, United States Code (the Uniform Code of Military Justice);

(2) are separated from active duty pursuant to the sentence of the court-martial; and

(3) forfeit all pay and allowances pursuant to such sentence.

(c) STUDY ELEMENTS.—In conducting the study required by subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall consider the following:

(1) The appropriateness of providing transitional compensation and other benefits, including commissary and exchange benefits, to dependents or former dependents of members described in subsection (b), particularly in situations in which such dependents or former dependents would be entitled, or soon be entitled, to such benefits on account of the years of service of a member.

(2) Whether there may be instances in which the provision of such transitional compensation would not be appropriate.

(3) Whether such transitional compensation should be limited to dependent children of members described in subsection (b).

(4) The appropriate duration of such transitional compensation for such dependents or former dependents.

(5) The potential duplication of such transitional compensation with benefits otherwise available for such dependents or former dependents under title 10, United States Code, or other laws.

(d) SUBMISSION OF RESULTS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report containing the results of the study required by subsection (a), including the Secretary's determination regarding the need for transitional compensation.

Subtitle A—TRICARE and Other Health Care Benefits

SEC. 701. FUTURE AVAILABILITY OF TRICARE PRIME FOR CERTAIN BENEFICIARIES ENROLLED IN TRICARE PRIME.

Section 732 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1816) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection (b):

“(b) ACCESS TO TRICARE PRIME.—

“(1) ONE-TIME ELECTION.—Subject to paragraph (3), the Secretary shall ensure that each affected eligible beneficiary who is enrolled in TRICARE Prime as of September 30, 2013, may make a one-time election to continue such enrollment in TRICARE Prime, notwithstanding that a contract described in subsection (a)(2)(A) does not allow for such enrollment based on the location in which such beneficiary resides. The beneficiary may continue such enrollment in TRICARE Prime so long as the beneficiary resides in the same ZIP code as the ZIP code in which the beneficiary resided at the time of such election.

“(2) ENROLLMENT IN TRICARE STANDARD.—If an affected eligible beneficiary makes the one-time election under paragraph (1), the beneficiary may thereafter elect to enroll in TRICARE Standard at any time in accordance with a contract described in subsection (a)(2)(A).

“(3) RESIDENCE AT TIME OF ELECTION.—An affected eligible beneficiary may not make the one-time election under paragraph (1) if, at the time of such election, the beneficiary does not reside—

“(A) in a ZIP code that is in a region described in subsection (c)(1)(B); and “(B) within 100 miles of a military medical treatment facility.

“(4) NETWORK.—In continuing enrollment in TRICARE Prime pursuant to paragraph (1), the Secretary may determine whether to maintain a TRICARE network of providers in an area that is between 40 and 100 miles of a military medical treatment facility.”.

SEC. 702. MENTAL HEALTH CARE TREATMENT THROUGH TELEMEDICINE.

(a) PROVISION OF MENTAL HEALTH CARE VIA TELEMEDICINE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out the Transitional Assistance Management Program, the Secretary of Defense may extend the coverage of such program for covered individuals for an additional 180 days for mental health care provided through telemedicine.

(2) REPORT.—If the Secretary extends coverage under paragraph (1), by not later than one year after the date of carrying out such extension, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report that includes the following:

(A) The rate at which individuals are using the extended coverage provided pursuant to paragraph (1).

(B) A description of the mental health care provided pursuant to such subsection.

(C) An analysis of how the Secretary and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs coordinate the continuation of care with respect to veterans who are no longer eligible for the Transitional Assistance Management Program.

(D) Any other factors the Secretary of Defense determines necessary with respect to extending coverage of the Transitional Assistance Management Program.

(3) TERMINATION.—The authority of the Secretary to carry out subsection (a) shall terminate on December 31, 2018.

(b) REPORT ON USE OF TELEMEDICINE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the use of telemedicine to improve the diagnosis and treatment of post-traumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injuries, and mental health conditions.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall address the following:

(A) The current status, as of the date of the report, of telemedicine initiatives within the Department of Defense to diagnose and treat post-traumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injuries, and mental health conditions.

(B) Plans for integrating telemedicine into the military health care system, including in health care delivery, records management, medical education, public health, and private sector partnerships.

(C) The status of the integration of the telemedicine initiatives of the Department with the telemedicine initiatives of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(D) A description and assessment of challenges to the use of telemedicine as a means of in-home treatment, outreach in rural areas, and in settings that provide group treatment or therapy in connection with treatment of post-traumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injuries, and mental health conditions, and a description and assessment of efforts to address such challenges.

(E) A description of privacy issues related to the use of telemedicine for the treatment of post-traumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injuries, and mental health conditions, and recommendations for mechanisms to remedy any privacy concerns relating to such use of telemedicine.

(a) COMPREHENSIVE POLICY REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall jointly develop and implement a comprehensive policy on improvements to the care, management, and transition of recovering members of the Armed Forces with urotrauma.

(2) SCOPE OF POLICY.—The policy shall cover each of the following:

(A) The care and management of the specific needs of members who are urotrauma patients, including eligibility for the Recovery Care Coordinator Program pursuant to the Wounded Warrior Act (10 U.S.C. 1071 note).

(B) The return of members who have recovered to active duty when appropriate.

(C) The transition of recovering members from receipt of care and services through the Department of Defense to receipt of care and services through the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(b) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after implementing the policy under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall jointly submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that includes—

(A) a review that identifies gaps in the care of members who are urotrauma patients; and
(B) suggested options to respond to such gaps.

(2) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means the following:

(A) The Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

(B) The Committees on Veterans’ Affairs of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

SEC. 704. PILOT PROGRAM ON INVESTIGATIONAL TREATMENT OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES FOR TRAUMATIC BRAIN INJURY AND POST-TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER.

(a) PILOT PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out a pilot program under which the Secretary shall establish a process for randomized placebo-controlled clinical trials of investigational treatments (including diagnostic testing) of traumatic brain injury or post-traumatic stress disorder received by members of the Armed Forces in health care facilities other than military treatment facilities.

(b) CONDITIONS FOR APPROVAL.—The approval by the Secretary for a treatment pursuant to subsection (a) shall be subject to the following conditions:

(1) Any drug or device used in the treatment must be approved, cleared, or made subject to an investigational use exemption by the Food and Drug Administration, and the use of the drug or device must comply with rules of the Food and Drug Administration applicable to investigational new drugs or investigational devices.

(2) The treatment must be approved by the Secretary following approval by an institutional review board operating in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in addition to regulations issued by the Secretary of Defense regarding institutional review boards.

(3) The patient receiving the treatment may not be a retired member of the Armed Forces who is entitled to benefits under part A, or eligible to enroll under part B, of title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395 et seq.).

(c) ADDITIONAL RESTRICTIONS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary may establish additional restrictions or conditions as the Secretary determines appropriate to ensure the protection of human research subjects, appropriate fiscal management, and the validity of the research results.

(d) DATA COLLECTION AND AVAILABILITY.—The Secretary shall develop and maintain a database containing data from each patient case involving the use of a treatment under this section. The Secretary shall ensure that the database preserves confidentiality and that any use of the database or disclosures of such data are limited to such use and disclosures permitted by law and applicable regulations.

(e) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 30 days after the last day of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the implementation of this section and any available results on investigational treatment clinical trials authorized under this section during such fiscal year.

(f) TERMINATION.—The authority of the Secretary to carry out the pilot program authorized by subsection (a) shall terminate on December 31, 2018.

Subtitle B—Health Care Administration

SEC. 711. AUTHORITY OF UNIFORMED SERVICES UNIVERSITY OF HEALTH SCIENCES TO ENTER INTO CONTRACTS AND AGREEMENTS AND MAKE GRANTS TO OTHER NONPROFIT ENTITIES.

Section 2113(g)(1) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) by inserting “, or any other nonprofit entity” after “Military Medicine”; and

(B) by inserting “, or nonprofit entity,” after “such Foundation”; and

(2) in subparagraph (C)—

(A) by inserting “, or any other nonprofit entity,” after “Military Medicine”; and

(B) by inserting “, or nonprofit entity,” after “such foundation”.

SEC. 712. PILOT PROGRAM ON INCREASED THIRD-PARTY COLLECTION REIMBURSEMENTS IN MILITARY MEDICAL TREATMENT FACILITIES.

(a) PILOT PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense, in coordination with the Secretaries of the military departments, shall carry out a pilot program to demonstrate and assess the feasibility of implementing processes described in paragraph (2) to increase the amounts collected under section 1095 of title 10, United States Code, from a third-party payer for charges for health care services incurred by the United States at a military medical treatment facility.

(2) PROCESSES DESCRIBED.—The processes described in this paragraph are commercially available enhanced recovery practices for medical payment collection, including revenue-cycle management together with rates and percentages of collection in accordance with industry standards for such practices.

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—In carrying out the pilot program under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary shall—

(1) identify and analyze the best practice option, including commercial best practices, with respect to the processes described in subsection (a)(2) that are used in non-military health care facilities; and

(2) conduct a cost-benefit analysis to assess measurable results of the pilot program, including an analysis of—

(A) the different processes used in the pilot program;

(B) the amount of third-party collections that resulted from such processes;

(C) the cost to implement and sustain such processes; and

(D) any other factors the Secretary determines appropriate to assess the pilot program.

(c) LOCATIONS.—The Secretary shall carry out the pilot program under subsection (a)(1)—

(1) at military installations that have a military medical treatment facility with inpatient and outpatient capabilities; and

(2) at a number of such installations of different military departments that the Secretary determines sufficient to fully assess the results of the pilot program.

(d) DURATION.—The Secretary shall commence the pilot program under subsection (a)(1) by not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and shall carry out such program for three years.

(e) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after completing the pilot program under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report describing the results of the program, including—

(1) a comparison of—

(A) the processes described in subsection (a)(2) that were used in the military medical treatment facilities participating in the program; and

(B) the third-party collection processes used by military medical treatment facilities not included in the program;

(2) a cost analysis of implementing the processes described in subsection (a)(2) for third-party collections at military medical treatment facilities;

(3) an assessment of the program, including any recommendations to improve third-party collections; and

(4) an analysis of the methods employed by the military departments prior to the program with respect to collecting charges from third-party payers incurred at military medical treatment facilities, including specific data with respect to the dollar amount of third-party collections that resulted from each method used throughout the military departments.

SEC. 713. ELECTRONIC HEALTH RECORDS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AND THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs have failed to implement a solution that allows for seamless electronic sharing of medical health care data; and

(2) despite the significant amount of readily available information shared between the Department of Defense and Department of Veterans Affairs, most of the information shared as of the date of the enactment of this Act is not standardized or available in real time to support all clinical decisions.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs—

(1) shall each ensure that the electronic health record systems of the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs are interoperable with an integrated display of data, or a single electronic health record, by complying with the national standards and architectural requirements identified by the Interagency Program Office of the Departments (in this section referred to as the “Office”), in collaboration with the Office of the National Coordinator for Health Information Technology of the Department of Health and Human Services; and

(2) shall each deploy modernized electronic health record software supporting clinicians of the Departments by no later than December 31, 2016, while ensuring continued support and compatibility with the interoperability platform and full standards-based interoperability.

(c) DESIGN PRINCIPLES.—The interoperable electronic health records with integrated display of data, or a single electronic health record, established under subsection (b) shall adhere to the following principles:

(1) To the extent practicable, efforts to establish such records shall be based on objectives, activities, and milestones established by the Joint Executive Committee Joint Strategic Plan Fiscal Years 2013–2015, as well as future addendums or revisions.

(2) Transition the current data exchanges between the Departments and private sector health care providers where practical to modern, open-architecture frameworks that use computable data mapped to national standards to make data available for determining medical trends and for enhanced clinician decision support.

(3) Principles with respect to open architecture standards, including—

(A) adoption of national data standards;

(B) if such national standards do not exist as of the date on which the record is being established, adoption of the articulation of data of the Health Data Dictionary until such national standards are established;

(C) use of enterprise investment strategies that maximize the use of commercial best practices to ensure robust competition and best value;

(D) aggressive life-cycle sustainment planning that uses proven technology insertion strategies and product upgrade techniques;

(E) enforcement of system design transparency, continuous design disclosure and improvement, and peer reviews that align with the requirements of the Federal Acquisition Regulation; and

(F) strategies for data management rights to ensure a level competitive playing field and access to alternative solutions and sources across the life-cycle of the programs.

(4) By the point of deployment, such record must be at a generation 3 level or better for a health information technology system.

(5) To the extent the Secretaries consider feasible and advisable, principles with respect to—

(A) the creation of a health data authoritative source by the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs that can be accessed by multiple providers and standardizes the input of new medical information;

(B) the ability of patients of both the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs to download, or otherwise receive electronically, the medical records of the patient; and

(C) the feasibility of establishing a secure, remote, network-accessible computer storage system to provide members of the Armed Forces and veterans the ability to upload the health care records of the member or veteran if the member or veteran elects to do so and allow medical providers of the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs to access such records in the course of providing care to the member or veteran.

(d) PROGRAMS PLAN.—Not later than January 31, 2014, the Secretaries shall prepare and brief the appropriate congressional committees with a detailed programs plan for the oversight and execution of the interoperable electronic health records with an integrated display of data, or a single electronic health record, established under subsection (b). This briefing and supporting documentation shall include—

(1) programs objectives;

(2) organization;

(3) responsibilities of the Departments;

(4) technical objectives and design principles;

(5) milestones, including a schedule for the development, acquisition, or industry competitions for capabilities needed to satisfy the technical system requirements;

(6) data standards being adopted by the programs;

(7) outcome-based metrics proposed to measure the performance and effectiveness of the programs; and

(8) the level of funding for fiscal years 2014 through 2017.

(e) LIMITATION ON FUNDS.—Not more than 25 percent of the amounts authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise made available for development, procurement, modernization, or enhancement of the interoperable electronic health records with an integrated display of data, or a single electronic health record, established under subsection (b) for the Department of Defense or the Department of Veterans Affairs may be obligated or expended until the date on which the Secretaries brief the appropriate congressional committees of the programs plan under subsection (d).

(f) REPORTING.—

(1) QUARTERLY REPORTING.—On a quarterly basis, the Secretaries shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a detailed financial summary.

(2) NOTIFICATION.—The Secretary of Defense and Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees written notification prior to obligating funds for any contract or task order for electronic health record system modernization efforts that is in excess of $5,000,000.

(g) REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than October 1, 2014, all health care data contained in the Department of Defense AHLTA and the Department of Veterans Affairs VistA systems shall be computable in real time and comply with the existing national data standards and have a process in place to ensure data is standardized as national standards continue to evolve. On a quarterly basis, the Secretaries shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees updates on the progress of data sharing.

(2) CERTIFICATION.—At such time as the operational capability described in subsection (b)(1) is achieved, the Secretaries shall jointly certify to the appropriate congressional committees that the Secretaries have complied with such data standards described in paragraph (1).

(3) RESPONSIBLE OFFICIAL.—The Secretaries shall each identify a senior official to be responsible for the modern platforms supporting an interoperable electronic health record with an integrated display of data, or a single electronic health record, established under subsection (b). The Secretaries shall also each identify a senior official to be responsible for modernizing the electronic health record software of the respective Department. Such official shall have included within their performance evaluation performance metrics related to the execution of the responsibilities under this paragraph. Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, each Secretary shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees the name of each senior official selected under this paragraph.

(4) COMPTROLLER GENERAL ASSESSMENT.—If both Secretaries do not meet the requirements under paragraph (1), the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees an assessment of the performance of the compliance of both Secretaries of such requirements.

(h) EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretaries shall jointly establish an executive committee to support the development and validation of adopted standards, required architectural platforms and structure, and the capacity to enforce such standards, platforms, and structure as the Secretaries execute requirements and develop programmatic assessment as needed by the Secretaries to ensure interoperable electronic health records with an integrated display of data, or a single electronic health record, are established pursuant to the requirements of subsection (b). The Executive Committee shall annually certify to the appropriate congressional committees that such record meets the definition of “integrated” as specified in subsection (k)(4).

(2) MEMBERSHIP.—The Executive Committee established under paragraph (1) shall consist of not more than 6 members, appointed by the Secretaries as follows:

(A) Two co-chairs, one appointed by each of the Secretaries.

(B) One member from the technical community of the Department of Defense appointed by the Secretary of Defense.

(C) One member from the technical community of the Department of Veterans Affairs appointed by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

(D) One member from the clinical community of the Department of Defense appointed by the Secretary of Defense.

(E) One member from the clinical community of the Department of Veterans Affairs appointed by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

(3) REPORTING.—Not later than June 1, 2014, and on a quarterly basis thereafter, the Executive Committee shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the activities of the Committee.

(i) INDEPENDENT REVIEW.—The Secretary of Defense shall request the Defense Science Board to conduct an annual review of the progress of the Secretary toward achieving the requirements in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b). The Defense Science Board shall submit to the Secretary a report of the findings of the review. Not later than 30 days after receiving the report, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees the report with any comments considered appropriate by the Secretary.

(j) DEADLINE FOR COMPLETION OF IMPLEMENTATION OF THE HEALTHCARE ARTIFACT AND IMAGE MANAGEMENT SOLUTION PROGRAM.—

(1) DEADLINE.—The Secretary of Defense shall complete the implementation of the Healthcare Artifact and Image Management Solution program of the Department of Defense by not later than the date that is 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) REPORT.—Upon completion of the implementation of the Healthcare Artifact and Image Management Solution program, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report describing the extent of the interoperability between the Healthcare Artifact and Image Management Solution program and the Veterans Benefits Management System of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(k) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the congressional defense committees; and

(B) the Committees on Veterans’ Affairs of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

(2) GENERATION 3.—The term “generation 3” means, with respect to an electronic health system, a system that has the technical capability to bring evidence-based medicine to the point of care and provide functionality for multiple care venues.

(3) INTEROPERABLE.—The term “interoperable” refers to the ability of different electronic health records systems or software to meaningfully exchange information in real time and provide useful results to one or more systems.

(4) INTEGRATED.—The term “integrated” refers to the integration of health data from the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs and outside providers to provide clinicians with a comprehensive medical record that allows data existing on disparate systems to be shared or accessed across functional or system boundaries in order to make the most informed decisions when treating patients.

Subtitle C—Reports and Other Matters

SEC. 721. DISPLAY OF BUDGET INFORMATION FOR EMBEDDED MENTAL HEALTH PROVIDERS OF THE RESERVE COMPONENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 9 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 236, as added by section 141 of this Act, the following new section:

“§ 237. Embedded mental health providers of the reserve components: display of budget information

“The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress, as a part of the documentation that supports the President’s annual budget for the Department of Defense, a budget justification display with respect to embedded mental health providers within each reserve component, including the amount requested for each such component.”.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

“237. Embedded mental health providers of the reserve components: display of budget information.”.

SEC. 722. REPORT ON ROLE OF DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS IN CERTAIN CENTERS OF EXCELLENCE.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on covered centers of excellence. Such report shall include the following with respect to each covered center of excellence:

(1) The amount of resources obligated by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs in support of the center beginning on the date on which the center was established, including the amount of funds, personnel, time, and functions provided in support of the center.

(2) An estimate of the amount of resources the Secretary plans to dedicate to the center during each of fiscal years 2014 through 2018.

(3) A description of the role of the Secretary.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term “appropriate congressional committees” means the following:

(A) The Committees on Armed Services and Veterans’ Affairs of the House of Representatives.

(B) The Committees on Armed Services and Veterans’ Affairs of the Senate.

(2) The term “covered centers of excellence” means the following:

(A) The centers established under sections 1621, 1622, and 1623 of the Wounded Warrior Act (title XVI of Public Law 110-181; 10 U.S.C. 1071 note).

(B) The center established under section 721 of the Duncan Hunter National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2009 (Public Law 110-417; 10 U.S.C. 1071 note).

(C) The center established under section 723 of such Act (Public Law 110-417; 122 Stat. 4508).

SEC. 723. REPORT ON MEMORANDUM REGARDING TRAUMATIC BRAIN INJURIES.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on how the Secretary identifies, refers, and treats traumatic brain injuries with respect to members of the Armed Forces who served in Operation Enduring Freedom or Operation Iraqi Freedom before the effective date in June 2010 of directive type memorandum 09-033 titled “Policy Guidance for Management of Concussion/Mild Traumatic Brain Injury in the Deployed Setting”, regarding using a 50-meter distance from an explosion as a criterion to properly identify, refer, and treat members for potential traumatic brain injury.

SEC. 724. REPORT ON PROVISION OF ADVANCED PROSTHETICS AND ORTHOTICS TO MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND VETERANS.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall jointly submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report on the plans of the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs, respectively, to ensure that the most clinically appropriate prosthetics and orthotics are made available to injured members of the Armed Forces and veterans using technological advances as appropriate. Such report shall include a description of the processes of each Secretary with respect to coordinating and identifying care in the Department of Veterans Affairs for an injured member of the Armed Forces who, prior to the member being discharged or released from the Armed Forces, has an advanced technology prosthetic.

(b) COVERED PROSTHETICS AND ORTHOTICS.—The prosthetics and orthotics to be covered by the report under subsection (a) shall include powered prosthetics and orthotics that will enable members of the Armed Forces and veterans who have suffered amputation and, in the case of orthotics wearers, other injuries with limb salvage, to restore functionality to the maximum extent practicable.

(c) APPROPRIATE COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS DEFINED.—In this section, the term “appropriate committees of Congress” means—

(1) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs of the Senate; and

(2) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 725. COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORTS ON TRICARE RECOVERY AUDIT PROGRAM AND AVAILABILITY OF COMPOUNDED PHARMACEUTICALS.

(a) RECOVERY AUDIT PROGRAM.—

(1) REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report that evaluates the similarities and differences of Medicare and the TRICARE program with respect to identifying and recovering improper payments.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report shall contain an evaluation of the following:

(A) Claims processing efforts of both Medicare and the TRICARE program to prevent improper payments by denying claims prior to payment.

(B) Claims processing efforts of both Medicare and the TRICARE program to correct improper payments post-payment.

(C) The effectiveness of post-payment audit programs of both Medicare and the TRICARE program to identify and correct improper payments that are returned to Medicare or the TRICARE program, respectively.

(b) COMPOUNDED PHARMACEUTICALS.—

(1) REPORT.—Not later than September 30, 2014, the Comptroller General shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the availability of compounded pharmaceuticals in the military health care system.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) A description of the number of prescriptions for compounded pharmaceuticals processed, and the types of compounded pharmaceuticals dispensed, during fiscal year 2013 in pharmacy venues.

(B) A description of the categories of eligible beneficiaries who received compounded pharmaceuticals in each pharmacy venue during fiscal year 2013.

(C) A description of the claims reimbursement methodology used by the manager of the TRICARE pharmacy benefits program to reimburse pharmacy providers for compounded pharmaceuticals, and an assessment of the manner in which such methodology compares with reimbursement methodologies used by other health programs of the Federal Government.

(D) A review of the existing accreditation standards, as of the date of the report, intended to assure the safety and efficacy of compounded pharmaceuticals available through the military health care system.

(3) PHARMACY VENUE DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term “pharmacy venue” means facilities of the uniformed services, retail pharmacies, and the national mail-order pharmacy program, as described in section 1074g(a)(2)(E) of title 10, United States Code.

TITLE VIII—ACQUISITION POLICY, ACQUISITION MANAGEMENT, AND RELATED MATTERS

Subtitle A—Acquisition Policy and Management

Sec. 801. Enhanced transfer of technology developed at Department of Defense laboratories.

Sec. 802. Extension of limitation on aggregate annual amount available for contract services.

Sec. 803. Identification and replacement of obsolete electronic parts.

Subtitle B—Amendments to General Contracting Authorities, Procedures, and Limitations

Sec. 811. Government-wide limitations on allowable costs for contractor compensation.

Sec. 812. Inclusion of additional cost estimate information in certain reports.

Sec. 813. Amendment relating to compelling reasons for waiving suspension or debarment.

Sec. 814. Extension of pilot program on acquisition of military purpose nondevelopmental items.

Subtitle C—Provisions Relating to Major Defense Acquisition Programs

Sec. 821. Synchronization of cryptographic systems for major defense acquisition programs.

Sec. 822. Assessment of dedicated ground control system before Milestone B approval of major defense acquisition programs constituting a space program.

Sec. 823. Additional responsibility for product support managers for major weapon systems.

Sec. 824. Comptroller General review of Department of Defense processes for the acquisition of weapon systems.

Subtitle D—Provisions Relating to Contracts in Support of Contingency Operations in Iraq or Afghanistan

Sec. 831. Prohibition on contracting with the enemy.

Sec. 832. Extension of authority to acquire products and services produced in countries along a major route of supply to Afghanistan.

Subtitle A—Acquisition Policy and Management

SEC. 801. ENHANCED TRANSFER OF TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPED AT DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE LABORATORIES.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) The term “military department” has the meaning provided in section 101 of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The term “DOD laboratory” or “laboratory” means any facility or group of facilities that—

(A) is owned, leased, operated, or otherwise used by the Department of Defense; and

(B) meets the definition of “laboratory” as provided in subsection (d)(2) of section 12 of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710a).

(b) AUTHORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of a military department each may authorize the heads of DOD laboratories to grant nonexclusive, exclusive, or partially exclusive licenses, royalty free or for royalties or for rights to other intellectual property, for computer software and its related documentation developed at a DOD laboratory, but only if—

(A) the computer software and related documentation would be a trade secret under the meaning of section 552(b)(4) of title 5, United States Code, if the information had been obtained from a non-Federal party;

(B) the public is notified of the availability of the software and related documentation for licensing and interested parties have a fair opportunity to submit applications for licensing;

(C) such licensing activities and licenses comply with the requirements under section 209 of title 35, United States Code; and

(D) the software originally was developed to meet the military needs of the Department of Defense.

(2) PROTECTIONS AGAINST UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of a military department each shall provide appropriate precautions against the unauthorized disclosure of any computer software or documentation covered by paragraph (1)(A), including exemption from section 552 of title 5, United States Code, for a period of up to 5 years after the development of the computer software by the DOD laboratory.

(c) ROYALTIES.—

(1) USE OF ROYALTIES.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), any royalties or other payments received by the Department of Defense or a military department from licensing computer software or documentation under paragraph (b)(1) shall be retained by the Department of Defense or the military department and shall be disposed of as follows:

(A)(i) The Department of Defense or the military department shall pay each year the first $2,000, and thereafter at least 15 percent, of the royalties or other payments, to be divided among the employees who developed the computer software.

(ii) The Department of Defense or the military department may provide appropriate lesser incentives, from the royalties or other payments, to laboratory employees who are not developers of such computer software but who substantially increased the technical value of the software.

(iii) The Department of Defense or the military department shall retain the royalties and other payments received until it makes payments to employees of a DOD laboratory under clause (i) or (ii).

(iv) The Department of Defense or the military department may retain an amount reasonably necessary to pay expenses incidental to the administration and distribution of royalties or other payments under this section by an organizational unit of the Department of Defense or military department other than its laboratories.

(B) The balance of the royalties or other payments shall be transferred by the Department of Defense or the military department to its laboratories, with the majority share of the royalties or other payments going to the laboratory where the development occurred. The royalties or other payments so transferred to any DOD laboratory may be used or obligated by that laboratory during the fiscal year in which they are received or during the 2 succeeding fiscal years—

(i) to reward scientific, engineering, and technical employees of the DOD laboratory, including developers of sensitive or classified technology, regardless of whether the technology has commercial applications;

(ii) to further scientific exchange among the laboratories of the agency;

(iii) for education and training of employees consistent with the research and development missions and objectives of the Department of Defense, military department, or DOD laboratory, and for other activities that increase the potential for transfer of the technology of the DOD laboratory;

(iv) for payment of expenses incidental to the administration and licensing of computer software or other intellectual property made at the DOD laboratory, including the fees or other costs for the services of other agencies, persons, or organizations for intellectual property management and licensing services; or

(v) for scientific research and development consistent with the research and development missions and objectives of the DOD laboratory.

(C) All royalties or other payments retained by the Department of Defense, military department, or DOD laboratory after payments have been made pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B) that are unobligated and unexpended at the end of the second fiscal year succeeding the fiscal year in which the royalties and other payments were received shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States.

(2) EXCEPTION.—If, after payments under paragraph (1)(A), the balance of the royalties or other payments received by the Department of Defense or the military department in any fiscal year exceed 5 percent of the funds received for use by the DOD laboratory for research, development, engineering, testing, and evaluation or other related administrative, processing, or value-added activities for that year, 75 percent of such excess shall be paid to the Treasury of the United States and the remaining 25 percent may be used or obligated under paragraph (1)(B). Any funds not so used or obligated shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States.

(3) STATUS OF PAYMENTS TO EMPLOYEES.—Any payment made to an employee under this section shall be in addition to the regular pay of the employee and to any other awards made to the employee, and shall not affect the entitlement of the employee to any regular pay, annuity, or award to which the employee is otherwise entitled or for which the employee is otherwise eligible or limit the amount thereof except that the monetary value of an award for the same project or effort shall be deducted from the amount otherwise available under this paragraph. Payments, determined under the terms of this paragraph and made to an employee developer as such, may continue after the developer leaves the DOD laboratory or the Department of Defense or military department. Payments made under this section shall not exceed $75,000 per year to any one person, unless the President approves a larger award (with the excess over $75,000 being treated as a Presidential award under section 4504 of title 5, United States Code).

(d) INFORMATION IN REPORT.—The report required by section 2515(d) of title 10, United States Code, shall include information regarding the implementation and effectiveness of this section.

(e) EXPIRATION.—The authority provided in this section shall expire on December 31, 2017.

SEC. 802. EXTENSION OF LIMITATION ON AGGREGATE ANNUAL AMOUNT AVAILABLE FOR CONTRACT SERVICES.

Section 808 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2012 (Public Law 112-81; 125 Stat. 1489) is amended—

(1) in subsections (a) and (b), by striking “fiscal year 2012 or 2013” and inserting “fiscal year 2012, 2013, or 2014”;

(2) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking “during fiscal years 2012 and 2013” in the matter preceding paragraph (1);

(B) by striking paragraphs (1) and (2) and redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) as paragraphs (1), (2), and (3), respectively; and

(C) in paragraph (3), as so redesignated, by striking “fiscal years 2012 and 2013” and inserting “fiscal years 2012, 2013, and 2014”;

(3) in subsection (d)(4), by striking “fiscal year 2012 or 2013” and inserting “fiscal year 2012, 2013, or 2014”; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(e) CARRYOVER OF REDUCTIONS REQUIRED.—If the reductions required by subsection (c)(2) for fiscal years 2012 and 2013 are not implemented, the amounts remaining for those reductions in fiscal years 2012 and 2013 shall be implemented in fiscal year 2014.”.

SEC. 803. IDENTIFICATION AND REPLACEMENT OF OBSOLETE ELECTRONIC PARTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall implement a process for the expedited identification and replacement of obsolete electronic parts included in acquisition programs of the Department of Defense.

(b) ISSUES TO BE ADDRESSED.—At a minimum, the expedited process established pursuant to subsection (a) shall—

(1) include a mechanism pursuant to which contractors, or other sources of supply, may provide to appropriate Department of Defense officials information that identifies—

(A) obsolete electronic parts that are included in the specifications for an acquisition program of the Department of Defense; and

(B) suitable replacements for such electronic parts;

(2) specify timelines for the expedited review and validation of information submitted by contractors, or other sources of supply, pursuant to paragraph (1);

(3) specify procedures and timelines for the rapid submission and approval of engineering change proposals needed to accomplish the substitution of replacement parts that have been validated pursuant to paragraph (2);

(4) provide for any incentives for contractor participation in the expedited process that the Secretary may determine to be appropriate; and

(5) provide that, in addition to the responsibilities under section 2337 of title 10, United States Code, a product support manager for a major weapon system shall work to identify obsolete electronic parts that are included in the specifications for an acquisition program of the Department of Defense and approve suitable replacements for such electronic parts.

(c) ADDITIONAL MATTERS.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) an electronic part is obsolete if—

(A) the part is no longer in production; and

(B) the original manufacturer of the part and its authorized dealers do not have sufficient parts in stock to meet the requirements of such an acquisition program; and

(2) an electronic part is a suitable replacement for an obsolete electronic part if—

(A) the part could be substituted for an obsolete part without incurring unreasonable expense and without degrading system performance; and

(B) the part is or will be available in sufficient quantity to meet the requirements of such an acquisition program.

SEC. 824. COMPTROLLER GENERAL REVIEW OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE PROCESSES FOR THE ACQUISITION OF WEAPON SYSTEMS.

(a) REVIEW REQUIRED.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall carry out a comprehensive review of the processes and procedures of the Department of Defense for the acquisition of weapon systems.

(b) OBJECTIVE OF REVIEW.—The objective of the review required by subsection (a) shall be to identify processes and procedures for the acquisition of weapon systems that provide little or no value added or for which any value added is outweighed by cost or schedule delays without adding commensurate value.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than January 31, 2015, the Comptroller General shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the results of the review required by subsection (a) and based on the objective set forth in subsection (b). The report shall include, at a minimum, the following:

(1) A statement of any processes, procedures, organizations, or layers of review that are recommended by the Comptroller General for modification or elimination, including the rationale for the modification or elimination recommended based on the objective set forth in subsection (b).

(2) Such other findings and recommendations, including recommendations for legislative or administrative action, as the Comptroller General considers appropriate in light of the review required by subsection (a) and the objective set forth in subsection (b).

Subtitle D—Provisions Relating to Contracts in Support of Contingency Operations in Iraq or Afghanistan

SEC. 831. PROHIBITION ON CONTRACTING WITH THE ENEMY.

(a) AUTHORITY TO TERMINATE OR VOID CONTRACTS, GRANTS, AND COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS AND TO RESTRICT FUTURE AWARD.—

(1) IDENTIFICATION OF PERSONS AND ENTITIES.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish in each covered combatant command a program to identify persons or entities, within the area of responsibility of such covered combatant command, that—

(A) provide funds received under a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement of the Department of Defense directly or indirectly to a covered person or entity; or

(B) fail to exercise due diligence to ensure that none of the funds received under a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement of the Department of Defense are provided directly or indirectly to a covered person or entity.

(2) NOTICE OF PERSONS OR ENTITIES IDENTIFIED.—Upon the identification of a person or entity as meeting subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1), the commander of the combatant command concerned, and any deputies of the commander specified by the commander for purposes of this section, shall be notified in writing of such identification of such person or entity.

(3) RESPONSIVE ACTIONS.—Upon receipt of a notice under paragraph (2), the commander of the combatant command concerned may, in consultation with the Under Secretary of Defense for Policy, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, and the appropriate Chief of Mission, notify the heads of appropriate contracting activities, in writing, of such identification and request that the heads of such contracting activities exercise the authorities provided pursuant to paragraph (4) and the Department of Defense Supplement to the Federal Acquisition Regulation, as revised, with respect to any contract, grant, or cooperative agreement that provides funding directly or indirectly to the person or entity covered by the notice.

(4) AUTHORITIES.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall revise the Department of Defense Supplement to the Federal Acquisition Regulation to authorize the head of a contracting activity in each covered combatant command, pursuant to a request from the commander of a covered combatant command under paragraph (3)—

(A) to prohibit, limit, or otherwise place restrictions on the award of any Department of Defense contract, grant, or cooperative agreement to a person or entity identified pursuant to paragraph (1)(A);

(B) to terminate for default any Department contract, grant, or cooperative agreement awarded to a person or entity identified pursuant to paragraph (1)(B); or

(C) to void in whole or in part any Department contract, grant, or cooperative agreement awarded to a person or entity identified pursuant to paragraph (1)(A).

(b) CONTRACT CLAUSE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Department of Defense Supplement to the Federal Acquisition Regulation shall be revised to require that—

(A) the clause described in paragraph (2) shall be included in each covered contract, grant, and cooperative agreement of the Department of Defense that is awarded on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(B) to the maximum extent practicable, each covered contract, grant, and cooperative agreement of the Department of Defense that is awarded before the date of the enactment of this Act shall be modified to include the clause described in paragraph (2).

(2) CLAUSE DESCRIBED.—The clause described in this paragraph is a clause that—

(A) requires the contractor, or the recipient of the grant or cooperative agreement, to exercise due diligence to ensure that none of the funds received under the contract, grant, or cooperative agreement are provided directly or indirectly to a covered person or entity; and

(B) notifies the contractor, or the recipient of the grant or cooperative agreement, of the authority of the head of the contracting activity to terminate or void the contract, grant, or cooperative agreement, in whole or in part.

(3) COVERED CONTRACT, GRANT, OR COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT.—In this subsection, the term “covered contract, grant, or cooperative agreement” means a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement with an estimated value in excess of $50,000.

(4) TREATMENT AS VOID.—For purposes of subsection (a)(4) and the exercise under subsection (a)(3) of the authorities in the Department of Defense Supplement to the Federal Acquisition Regulation pursuant to this subsection:

(A) A contract, grant, or cooperative agreement that is void is unenforceable as contrary to public policy.

(B) A contract, grant, or cooperative agreement that is void in part is unenforceable as contrary to public policy with regard to a segregable task or effort under the contract, grant, or cooperative agreement.

(c) REQUIREMENTS FOLLOWING CONTRACT ACTIONS.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Department of Defense Supplement to the Federal Acquisition Regulation shall be revised as follows:

(1) To require that any head of contracting activity taking an action pursuant to subsection (a)(3) or (a)(4) to terminate, void, or restrict a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement notify in writing the contractor or recipient of the grant or cooperative agreement, as applicable, of the action.

(2) To permit, in such manner as the Department of Defense Supplement to the Federal Acquisition Regulation as so revised shall provide, the contractor or recipient of a grant or cooperative agreement subject to an action taken pursuant to subsection (a)(3) or (a)(4) to terminate or void the contract, grant, or cooperative agreement, as the case may be, an opportunity to challenge the action by requesting administrative review within 30 days after receipt of notice of the action.

(d) ANNUAL REVIEW.—The commanders of the covered combatant commands shall, on an annual basis, review the lists of persons and entities previously identified pursuant to subsection (a)(1) in order to determine whether or not such persons and entities continue to warrant identification pursuant to that subsection. If a commander determines pursuant to such a review that a person or entity no longer warrants identification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), the commander shall notify the heads of contracting activities of the Department of Defense in writing of such determination.

(e) PROTECTION OF CLASSIFIED INFORMATION.—Classified information relied upon to make an identification pursuant to subsection (a)(1) may not be disclosed to a contractor or a recipient of a grant or cooperative agreement with respect to which an action is taken pursuant to subsection (a)(3) or (a)(4) or to their representatives, in the absence of a protective order issued by a court of competent jurisdiction established under Article I or Article III of the Constitution of the United States that specifically addresses the conditions upon which such classified information may be so disclosed.

(f) DELEGATION.—

(1) RESPONSIBILITIES RELATING TO IDENTIFICATION AND REVIEW.—The commander of a covered combatant command may delegate the responsibilities in subsection (a)(3) to any deputies of the commander specified by the commander pursuant to that subsection. The commander may delegate any responsibilities under subsection (d) to the deputy commander of the combatant command. Any delegation of responsibilities under this paragraph shall be made in writing.

(2) NONDELEGATION OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR CONTRACT ACTIONS.—The authority provided by subsections (a)(3) and (a)(4) to terminate, void, or restrict contracts, grants, and cooperative agreements may not be delegated below the level of head of contracting activity.

(g) INCLUSION OF INFORMATION ON CONTRACT ACTIONS IN FAPIIS.—Upon the termination, voiding, or restriction of a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement pursuant to subsection (a)(3) or (a)(4), the head of contracting activity concerned shall provide for the inclusion in the Federal Awardee Performance and Integrity Information System (FAPIIS), or other formal system of records on contractors or entities, of appropriate information on the termination, voiding, or restriction of the contract, grant, or cooperative agreement.

(h) REPORTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 1 each year through 2019, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the use of the authorities in this section in the preceding calendar year, including the following:

(A) For each instance in which a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement was terminated or voided, or entry into contracts, grants, and cooperative agreements was restricted, pursuant to subsection (a)(3) or (a)(4), the following:

(i) An explanation of the basis for the action taken.

(ii) The value of the contract, grant, or cooperative agreement terminated or voided.

(iii) The value of all contracts, grants, or cooperative agreements of the Department of Defense in force with the person or entity concerned at the time the contract, grant, or cooperative agreement was terminated or voided.

(iv) Information on how the goods or services covered by the terminated or voided contract, grant, or cooperative agreement were otherwise obtained by the commander of the combatant command concerned.

(B) For each instance in which a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement of a person or entity identified pursuant to subsection (a)(1) was not terminated or voided pursuant to subsection (a)(3) or (a)(4), or the future award of contracts, grants, and cooperative agreements to such person or entity was not restricted pursuant to subsection (a)(3) or (a)(4), an explanation why such action was not taken.

(2) FORM.—Any report under this subsection may be submitted in classified form.

(i) OTHER DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term “covered combatant command” means United States Central Command, United States European Command, United States Africa Command, United States Southern Command, or United States Pacific Command.

(2) The term “head of contracting activity” has the meaning given that term in subpart 601 of part 1 of the Federal Acquisition Regulation.

(3) The term “covered person or entity” means a person or entity that is actively opposing United States or coalition forces involved in a contingency operation in which members of the armed forces are actively engaged in hostilities.

(j) SUNSET.—The provisions of this section shall cease to be effective on December 31, 2018.

SEC. 832. EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY TO ACQUIRE PRODUCTS AND SERVICES PRODUCED IN COUNTRIES ALONG A MAJOR ROUTE OF SUPPLY TO AFGHANISTAN.

(a) EXTENSION.—Subsection (f) of section 801 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010 (Public Law 111–84; 123 Stat. 2399), as amended by section 841(a) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112–239; 126 Stat. 1845), is further amended by striking “December 31, 2014” and inserting “December 31, 2015”.

SEC. 907. PERSONNEL SECURITY.

(a) COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall, acting through the Director of Cost Assessment and Program Evaluation and in consultation with the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report setting forth a comprehensive analysis comparing the quality, cost, and timeliness of personnel security clearance investigations and reinvestigations for employees and contractor personnel of the Department of Defense that are conducted by the Office of Personnel Management with the quality, cost, and timeliness of personnel security clearance investigations and reinvestigations for such personnel that are conducted by components of the Department of Defense.

(2) ELEMENTS OF ANALYSIS.—The analysis under paragraph (1) shall do the following:

(A) Determine and compare, for each of the Office of Personnel Management and the components of the Department that conduct personnel security investigations as of the date of the analysis, the quality, cost, and timeliness associated with personnel security investigations and reinvestigations of each type and level of clearance, and identify the elements that contribute to such cost, schedule, and performance.

(B) Identify mechanisms for permanently improving the transparency of the cost structure of personnel security investigations and reinvestigations.

(b) PERSONNEL SECURITY FOR DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE EMPLOYEES AND CONTRACTORS.—If the Secretary of Defense determines that the current approach for obtaining personnel security investigations and reinvestigations for employees and contractor personnel of the Department of Defense is not the most efficient and effective approach for the Department, the Secretary shall develop a plan, by not later than October 1, 2014, for the transition of personnel security investigations and reinvestigations to the approach preferred by the Secretary.

(C) STRATEGY FOR MODERNIZING PERSONNEL SECURITY.—

(1) STRATEGY REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense, the Director of National Intelligence, and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall jointly develop, implement, and provide to the appropriate committees of Congress a strategy to modernize all aspects of personnel security for the Department of Defense with the objectives of improving quality, providing for continuous monitoring, decreasing unauthorized disclosures of classified information, lowering costs, increasing efficiencies, and enabling and encouraging reciprocity.

(2) CONSIDERATION OF ANALYSIS.—In developing the strategy under paragraph (1), the Secretary and the Directors shall consider the results of the analysis required by subsection (a) and the results of any ongoing reviews of recent unauthorized disclosures of national security information.

(3) METRICS.—

(A) METRICS REQUIRED.—In developing the strategy required by paragraph (1), the Secretary and the Directors shall jointly establish metrics to measure the effectiveness of the strategy in meeting the objectives specified in that paragraph.

(B) REPORT.—At the same time the budget of the President for each of fiscal years 2016 through 2019 is submitted to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, the Secretary and the Directors shall jointly submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report on the metrics established under paragraph (1), including an assessment using the metrics of the effectiveness of the strategy in meeting the objectives specified in paragraph (1).

(4) ELEMENTS.—In developing the strategy required by paragraph (1), the Secretary and the Directors shall address issues including but not limited to the following:

(A) Elimination of manual or inefficient processes in investigations and reinvestigations for personnel security, wherever practicable, and automating and integrating the elements of the investigation and adjudication processes, including in the following:

- (i) The clearance application process.
- (ii) Investigation case management.
- (iii) Adjudication case management.

(iv) Investigation methods for the collection, analysis, storage, retrieval, and transfer of data and records from investigative sources and between any case management systems.

(v) Records management for hiring and clearance decisions.

(B) Elimination or reduction, where possible, of the use of databases and information sources that cannot be accessed and processed automatically electronically, or modification of such databases and information sources, if appropriate and cost-effective, to enable electronic access and processing.

(C) Access and analysis of government, publicly available, and commercial data sources, including social media, that provide independent information pertinent to adjudication guidelines and termination standards to improve quality and timeliness, and reduce costs, of investigations and reinvestigations.

(D) Use of government-developed and commercial technology for continuous monitoring and evaluation of government and commercial data sources that can identify and flag information pertinent to hiring and clearance determinations.

(E) Standardization of forms used for routine reporting required of cleared personnel

(such as travel, foreign contacts, and financial disclosures) and use of continuous monitoring technology to access databases containing such reportable information to independently obtain and analyze reportable data and events.

(F) Establishment of an authoritative central repository of personnel security information that is accessible electronically at multiple levels of classification and eliminates technical barriers to rapid access to information necessary for eligibility determinations and reciprocal recognition thereof, including the ability to monitor the status of an individual and any events related to the continued eligibility of such individual for employment or clearance during intervals between investigations.

(G) Elimination or reduction of the scope of, or alteration of the schedule for, periodic reinvestigations of cleared personnel, when such action is appropriate in light of the information provided by continuous monitoring or evaluation technology.

(H) Electronic integration of personnel security processes and information systems with insider threat detection and monitoring systems, and pertinent law enforcement, counterintelligence and intelligence information, for threat detection and correlation, including those processes and systems operated by components of the Department of Defense for purposes of local security, workforce management, or other related purposes.

(5) RISK-BASED MONITORING.—The strategy required by paragraph (1) shall—

(A) include the development of a risk-based approach to monitoring and reinvestigation that prioritizes which cleared individuals shall be subject to frequent reinvestigations and random checks, such as the personnel with the broadest access to classified information or with access to the most sensitive classified information, including information technology specialists or other individuals with such broad access commonly known as “super users”;

(B) ensure that if the system of continuous monitoring for all cleared individuals described in paragraph (4)(D) is implemented in phases, such system shall be implemented on a priority basis for the individuals prioritized under subparagraph (A); and

(C) ensure that the activities of individuals prioritized under subparagraph (A) shall be monitored especially closely.

(d) RECIPROCITY OF CLEARANCES.—The Secretary of Defense and the Director of National Intelligence shall jointly ensure the reciprocity of personnel security clearances among positions requiring personnel holding secret, top secret, or sensitive compartmented information clearances, to the maximum extent feasible consistent with national security requirements.

(e) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REVIEW.—

(1) REVIEW REQUIRED.—Not later than 150 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall carry out a review of the personnel security process.

(2) OBJECTIVE OF REVIEW.—The objective of the review required by paragraph (1) shall be to identify the following:

(A) Differences between the metrics used by the Department of Defense and other departments and agencies that grant security clearances in granting reciprocity for security clearances, and the manner in which such differences can be harmonized.

(B) The extent to which existing Federal Investigative Standards are relevant, complete, and sufficient for guiding agencies and individual investigators as they conduct their security clearance background investigations.

(C) The processes agencies have implemented to ensure quality in the security clearance background investigation process.

(D) The extent to which agencies have developed and implemented outcome-focused performance measures to track the quality of security clearance investigations and any insights from these measures.

(E) The processes agencies have implemented for resolving incomplete or subpar investigations, and the actions taken against government employees and contractor personnel who have demonstrated a consistent failure to abide by quality assurance measures.

(3) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report on the results of the review required by paragraph (1).

(f) TASK FORCE ON RECORDS ACCESS FOR SECURITY CLEARANCE BACKGROUND INVESTIGATIONS.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Suitability and Security Clearance Performance Accountability Council, as established by Executive Order No. 13467, shall convene a task force to examine the different policies and procedures that determine the level of access to public records provided by State and local authorities in response to investigative requests by Federal Government employees or contracted employees carrying out background investigations to determine an individual's suitability for access to classified information or secure government facilities.

(2) MEMBERSHIP.—The members of the task force shall include, but need not be limited to, the following:

(A) The Chair of the Suitability and Security Clearance Performance and Accountability Council, who shall serve as chair of the task force.

(B) A representative from the Office of Personnel Management.

(C) A representative from the Office of the Director of National Intelligence.

(D) A representative from the Department of Defense responsible for administering security clearance background investigations.

(E) Representatives from Federal law enforcement agencies within the Department of Justice and the Department of Homeland Security involved in security clearance background investigations.

(F) Representatives from State and local law enforcement agencies, including—

- (i) agencies in rural areas that have limited resources and less than 500 officers; and
- (ii) agencies that have more than 1,000 officers and significant technological resources.

(G) A representative from Federal, State, and local law enforcement associations involved with security clearance background administrative actions and appeals.

(H) Representatives from Federal, State, and local judicial systems involved in the sharing of records to support security clearance background investigations.

(3) INITIAL MEETING.—The task force shall convene its initial meeting not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(4) DUTIES.—The task force shall do the following:

(A) Analyze the degree to which State and local authorities comply with investigative requests made by Federal Government employees or contractor employees carrying out background investigations to determine an individual's suitability for access to classified information or secure government facilities, including the degree to which investigative requests are required but never formally requested.

(B) Analyze limitations on the access to public records provided by State and local authorities in response to investigative requests by Federal Government employees and contractor employees described in subparagraph (A), including, but not be limited to, limitations relating to budget and staffing constraints on State and local authorities, any procedural and legal obstacles impairing Federal access to State and local law enforcement records, or inadequate investigative procedural standards for background investigators.

(C) Provide recommendations for improving the degree of cooperation and records-sharing between State and local authorities and Federal Government employees and contractor employees described in subparagraph (A).

(5) REPORT.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the task force shall submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report setting forth a detailed statement of the findings and conclusions of the task force pursuant to this subsection, together with the recommendations of the task force for such legislative or administrative action as the task force considers appropriate.

(g) APPROPRIATE COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS DEFINED.—In this section, the term "appropriate committees of Congress" means—

(1) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate; and

(2) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

Subtitle B—Space Activities

SEC. 911. NATIONAL SECURITY SPACE SATELLITE REPORTING POLICY.

(a) NOTIFICATION OF FOREIGN INTERFERENCE OF NATIONAL SECURITY SPACE.—Chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 2278. Notification of foreign interference of national security space

"(a) NOTICE REQUIRED.—The Commander of the United States Strategic Command shall, with respect to each intentional attempt by a foreign actor to disrupt, degrade, or destroy a United States national security space capability, provide to the appropriate congressional committees—

"(1) not later than 48 hours after the Commander determines that there is reason to believe such attempt occurred, notice of such attempt; and

"(2) not later than 10 days after the date on which the Commander determines that there is reason to believe such attempt occurred, a notification described in subsection (b) with respect to such attempt.

"(b) NOTIFICATION DESCRIPTION.—A notification described in this subsection is a written notification that includes—

"(1) the name and a brief description of the national security space capability that was impacted by an attempt by a foreign actor to disrupt, degrade, or destroy a United States national security space capability;

"(2) a description of such attempt, including the foreign actor, the date and time of such attempt, and any related capability outage and the mission impact of such outage; and

"(3) any other information the Commander considers relevant.

"(c) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'appropriate congressional committees' means—

"(1) the congressional defense committees; and

"(2) with respect to a notice or notification related to an attempt by a foreign actor to disrupt, degrade, or destroy a United States national security space capability that is intelligence-related, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end the following item:

"2278. Notification of foreign interference of national security space."

SEC. 912. NATIONAL SECURITY SPACE DEFENSE AND PROTECTION.

(a) REVIEW.—The Secretary of Defense and the Director of National Intelligence shall jointly enter into an arrangement with the National Research Council to respond to the near-term and long-term threats to the national security space systems of the United States by—

(1) conducting a review of—

(A) the range of options available to address such threats, in terms of deterring hostile actions, defeating hostile actions, and surviving hostile actions until such actions conclude;

(B) strategies and plans to counter such threats, including resilience, reconstitution, disaggregation, and other appropriate concepts; and

(C) existing and planned architectures, warfighter requirements, technology development, systems, workforce, or other factors related to addressing such threats; and

(2) recommending architectures, capabilities, and courses of action to address such threats and actions to address the affordability, technology risk, and any other potential barriers or limiting factors in implementing such courses of action.

(b) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the National Research Council shall submit to the congressional defense committees, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate a report containing the results of the review conducted pursuant to the arrangement under subsection (a) and the recommended courses of action identified pursuant to such arrangement.

(2) FORM.—The report required under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

(c) SPACE PROTECTION STRATEGY.—Section 911(f)(1) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008 (10 U.S.C. 2271 note) is amended by striking "including each of the matters required by subsection (c)," and inserting the following: "including—

"(A) each of the matters required by subsection (c); and

"(B) a description of how the Department of Defense and the intelligence community plan to provide necessary national security capabilities, through alternative space, airborne, or ground systems, if a foreign actor degrades, denies access to, or destroys United States national security space capabilities."

SEC. 913. SPACE ACQUISITION STRATEGY.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) commercial satellite services, particularly communications, are needed to satisfy Department of Defense requirements;

(2) the Department predominately uses one-year leases to obtain commercial satellite services, which are often the most expensive and least strategic method to acquire necessary commercial satellite services; and

(3) consistent with the required authorization and appropriations, Congress encourages the Department to pursue a variety of methods to reduce cost and meet the necessary military requirements, including multi-year leases and procurement of Government-owned payloads on commercial satellites.

(b) STRATEGY REQUIRED.—The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, in consultation with the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense, shall establish a strategy to enable the multi-year procurement of commercial satellite services.

(c) BASIS.—The strategy required under subsection (b) shall include and be based on—

(1) an analysis of financial or other benefits to acquiring satellite services through multi-year acquisition approaches;

(2) an analysis of the risks associated with such acquisition approaches;

(3) an identification of methods to address planning, programming, budgeting, and execution challenges to such approaches, including methods to address potential termination liability or cancellation costs generally associated with multi-year contracts;

(4) an identification of any changes needed in the requirements development and approval processes of the Department of Defense to facilitate effective and efficient implementation of such strategy, including an identification of any consolidation of requirements for such services across the Department that may achieve increased buying power and efficiency; and

(5) an identification of any necessary changes to policies, procedures, regulations, or statutes.

(d) BRIEFINGS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, in consultation with the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense, shall provide to the congressional defense committees a briefing regarding the strategy required under subsection (b), including the elements required under subsection (c).

(2) INTERIM BRIEFING.—At the same time that the budget for fiscal year 2015 is submitted to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, in consultation with the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense, shall provide to the congressional defense committees an interim briefing regarding the strategy required under subsection (b).

SEC. 914. SPACE CONTROL MISSION REPORT.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the space control mission of the Department of Defense. Such report shall include—

(1) an identification of existing offensive and defensive space control systems, policies, and technical possibilities of future systems;

(2) an identification of any gaps or risks in existing space control system architecture and possibilities for improvement or mitigation of such gaps or risks;

(3) a description of existing and future sensor coverage and ground processing capabilities for space situational awareness;

(4) an explanation of the extent to which all relevant and available information is being utilized for space situational awareness to detect, track, and identify objects in space;

(5) a description of existing space situational awareness data sharing practices, including what information is being shared and what the benefits and risks of such sharing are to the national security of the United States; and

(6) plans for the future space control mission, including force levels and structure.

SEC. 915. RESPONSIVE LAUNCH.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) United States Strategic Command has identified three needs as a result of dramatically increased demand and dependence on space capabilities as follows:

(A) To rapidly augment existing space capabilities when needed to expand operational capability.

(B) To rapidly reconstitute or replenish critical space capabilities to preserve continuity of operations capability.

(C) To rapidly exploit and infuse space technological or operational innovations to increase the advantage of the United States.

(2) Operationally responsive low cost launch could assist in addressing such needs of the combatant commands.

(b) STUDY.—The Department of Defense Executive Agent for Space shall conduct a study on responsive, low-cost launch efforts. Such study shall include—

(1) a review of existing and past operationally responsive, low-cost launch efforts by domestic or foreign governments or industry;

(2) an identification of the conditions or requirements for responsive launch that would provide the necessary military value, including the requisite payload capacity, timelines for responsiveness, and the target launch costs;

(3) a technology assessment of various methods to develop an operationally responsive, low-cost launch capability; and

(4) an assessment of the viability of greater utilization of innovative methods, including the use of secondary payload adapters on existing launch vehicles.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Department of Defense Executive Agent for Space shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report containing—

(1) the results of the study conducted under subsection (b); and

(2) a consolidated plan for development within the Department of Defense of an operationally responsive, low-cost launch capability.

(d) GOVERNMENT ACCOUNTABILITY OFFICE REVIEW.—Not later than 60 days after the date on which the report required under subsection (c) is submitted to the congressional defense committees, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the congressional defense committees an assessment of such report and any related findings or recommendations that the Comptroller General considers appropriate.

SEC. 916. LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR SPACE PROTECTION PROGRAM.

Of the amount authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2014 by section 201 for the Department of Defense for research, test, development, and evaluation, Air Force, and available for the Space Protection Program (PE# 0603830F) as specified in the funding table in section 4201, $10,000,000 may not be obligated or expended until the Secretary of Defense submits to the congressional defense committees a copy of the study conducted at the direction of the Deputy Secretary of Defense on the counter space strategy of the Department of Defense that resulted in significant revisions to that strategy by the Department.

SEC. 917. EAGLE VISION SYSTEM.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Chief of Staff of the Air Force shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the Eagle Vision system.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall include a description and assessment of the various commands, components of the Armed Forces, and Defense Agencies to which control of the Eagle Vision system could be transferred from the Headquarters of the Air Force, including the actions to be completed before transfer, potential schedules for transfer, and the effects of transfer on the capabilities of the system or use of the system by other elements of the Department.

(b) LIMITATION ON CERTAIN ACTIONS.—The Secretary of the Air Force may not undertake any changes to the organization or control of the Eagle Vision system until 90 days after the date of the submittal to the congressional defense committees of the report required by subsection (a).

Subtitle C—Defense Intelligence and Intelligence-Related Activities

SEC. 921. REVISION OF SECRETARY OF DEFENSE AUTHORITY TO ENGAGE IN COMMERCIAL ACTIVITIES AS SECURITY FOR INTELLIGENCE COLLECTION ACTIVITIES.

(a) CONGRESSIONAL SUBMISSION FOR REQUIRED AUDITS.—The second sentence of section 432(b)(2) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking “the intelligence committees” and all that follows and inserting “the congressional defense committees and the congressional intelligence committees (as defined in section 437(c) of this title).”

(b) REPEAL OF DESIGNATION OF DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE AGENCY AS REQUIRED OVERSIGHT AUTHORITY WITHIN DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.—Section 436(4) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking “Defense Intelligence Agency” and inserting “Department of Defense”; and

(2) by striking “management and supervision” and inserting “oversight”.

(c) CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT.—Section 437 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking “the intelligence committees” and inserting “congressional defense committees and the congressional intelligence committees”; and

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) by striking “Consistent with” and all that follows through “the Secretary” and insert “The Secretary”; and

(B) by striking “the intelligence committees” and inserting “congressional defense committees and the congressional intelligence committees”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(c) CONGRESSIONAL INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘congressional intelligence committees’ has the meaning given the term in section 3 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 3003).”

SEC. 922. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE PRIORITIES.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall—

(1) establish a written policy governing the internal coordination and prioritization of intelligence priorities of the Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Joint Staff, the combatant commands, and the military departments to improve identification of the intelligence needs of the Department of Defense;

(2) identify any significant intelligence gaps of the Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Joint Staff, the combatant commands, and the military departments; and

(3) provide to the congressional defense committees, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate a briefing on the policy established under paragraph (1) and the gaps identified under paragraph (2).

SEC. 923. DEFENSE CLANDESTINE SERVICE.

(a) CERTIFICATION REQUIRED.—Not more than 50 percent of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or otherwise available to the Department of Defense for the Defense Clandestine Service for fiscal year 2014 may be obligated or expended for the Defense Clandestine Service until such time as the Secretary of Defense certifies to the covered congressional committees that—

(1) the Defense Clandestine Service is designed primarily to—

(A) fulfill priorities of the Department of Defense that are unique to the Department of Defense or otherwise unmet; and

(B) provide unique capabilities to the intelligence community (as defined in section 3(4) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 3003(4))); and

(2) the Secretary of Defense has designed metrics that will be used to ensure that the Defense Clandestine Service is employed as described in paragraph (1).

(b) ANNUAL ASSESSMENTS.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter for five years, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the covered congressional committees a detailed assessment of Defense Clandestine Service employment and performance based on the metrics referred to in subsection (a)(2).

(c) NOTIFICATION OF FUTURE CHANGES TO DESIGN.—Following the submittal of the certification referred to in subsection (a), in the event that any significant change is made to the Defense Clandestine Service, the Secretary shall promptly notify the covered congressional committees of the nature of such change.

(d) QUARTERLY BRIEFINGS.—The Secretary of Defense shall quarterly provide to the covered congressional committees a briefing on the deployments and collection activities of personnel of the Defense Clandestine Service.

(e) COVERED CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “covered congressional committees” means the congressional defense committees, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate.

SEC. 924. PROHIBITION ON NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE PROGRAM CONSOLIDATION.

(a) PROHIBITION.—No amounts authorized to be appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense may be used during the period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act and ending on December 31, 2014, to execute—

(1) the separation of the National Intelligence Program budget from the Department of Defense budget;

(2) the consolidation of the National Intelligence Program budget within the Department of Defense budget; or

(3) the establishment of a new appropriations account or appropriations account structure for the National Intelligence Program budget.

(b) BRIEFING REQUIREMENT.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense and the Director of National Intelligence shall jointly provide to the congressional defense committees, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate a briefing regarding any planning relating to the future execution of the activities described in subsection (a) that has occurred during the two-year period ending on such date and any anticipated future planning relating to such execution or related efforts.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE PROGRAM.—The term “National Intelligence Program” has the meaning given the term in section 3 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 3003).

(2) NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE PROGRAM BUDGET.—The term “National Intelligence Program budget” means the portions of the Department of Defense budget designated as part of the National Intelligence Program.

Subtitle D—Cyberspace-Related Matters

SEC. 931. MODIFICATION OF REQUIREMENT FOR INVENTORY OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE TACTICAL DATA LINK SYSTEMS.

Section 934(a)(1) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 126 Stat. 1885; 10 U.S.C. 2225 note) is amended by inserting “and an assessment of vulnerabilities to such systems in anti-access or area-denial environments” before the semicolon.

SEC. 932. AUTHORITIES, CAPABILITIES, AND OVERSIGHT OF THE UNITED STATES CYBER COMMAND.

(a) PROVISION OF CERTAIN OPERATIONAL CAPABILITIES.—The Secretary of Defense shall take such actions as the Secretary considers appropriate to provide the United States Cyber Command operational military units with infrastructure and equipment enabling access to the Internet and other types of networks to permit the United States Cyber Command to conduct the peacetime and wartime missions of the Command.

(b) CYBER RANGES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall review existing cyber ranges and adapt one or more such ranges, as necessary, to support training and exercises of cyber units that are assigned to execute offensive military cyber operations.

(2) ELEMENTS.—Each range adapted under paragraph (1) shall have the capability to support offensive military operations against targets that—

(A) have not been previously identified and prepared for attack; and

(B) must be compromised or neutralized immediately without regard to whether the adversary can detect or attribute the attack.

(c) PRINCIPAL ADVISOR ON MILITARY CYBER FORCE MATTERS.—

(1) DESIGNATION.—The Secretary shall designate, from among the personnel of the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Policy, a Principal Cyber Advisor to act as the principal advisor to the Secretary on military cyber forces and activities. The Secretary may only designate an official under this paragraph if such official was appointed to the position in which such official serves by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(2) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Principal Cyber Advisor shall be responsible for the following:

(A) Overall supervision of cyber activities related to offensive missions, defense of the United States, and defense of Department of Defense networks, including oversight of policy and operational considerations, resources, personnel, and acquisition and technology.

(B) Such other matters relating to offensive military cyber forces as the Secretary shall specify for purposes of this subsection.

(3) CROSS-FUNCTIONAL TEAM.—The Principal Cyber Advisor shall—

(A) integrate the cyber expertise and perspectives of appropriate organizations within the Office of the Secretary of Defense, Joint Staff, military departments, Defense Agencies, and combatant commands, by establishing and maintaining a full-time cross-functional team of subject matter experts from those organizations; and

(B) select team members, and designate a team leader, from among those personnel nominated by the heads of such organizations.

(d) TRAINING OF CYBER PERSONNEL.—The Secretary shall establish and maintain training capabilities and facilities in the Armed Forces and, as the Secretary considers appropriate, at the United States Cyber Command, to support the needs of the Armed Forces and the United States Cyber Command for personnel who are assigned offensive and defensive cyber missions in the Department of Defense.

SEC. 933. MISSION ANALYSIS FOR CYBER OPERATIONS OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) MISSION ANALYSIS REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall conduct a mission analysis of the cyber operations of the Department of Defense.

(b) ELEMENTS.—The mission analysis under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) The concept of operations and concept of employment for cyber operations forces.

(2) An assessment of the manpower needs for cyber operations forces, including military requirements for both active and reserve components and civilian requirements.

(3) An assessment of the mechanisms for improving recruitment, retention, and management of cyber operations forces, including through focused recruiting; educational, training, or certification scholarships; bonuses; or the use of short-term or virtual deployments without the need for permanent relocation.

(4) A description of the alignment of the organization and reporting chains of the Department, the military departments, and the combatant commands.

(5) An assessment of the current, as of the date of the analysis, and projected equipping needs of cyber operations forces.

(6) An analysis of how the Secretary, for purposes of cyber operations, depends upon organizations outside of the Department, including industry and international partners.

(7) Methods for ensuring resilience, mission assurance, and continuity of operations for cyber operations.

(8) An evaluation of the potential roles of the reserve components in the concept of operations and concept of employment for cyber operations forces required under paragraph (1), including—

(A) in consultation with the Secretaries of the military departments and the Commander of the United States Cyber Command, an identification of the Department of Defense cyber mission requirements that could be discharged by members of the reserve components;

(B) in consultation with the Secretary of Homeland Security, consideration of ways to ensure that the Governors of the several States, through the Council of Governors, as appropriate, have an opportunity to provide the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Homeland Security an independent evaluation of State cyber capabilities, and State cyber needs that cannot be fulfilled through the private sector;

(C) an identification of the existing capabilities, facilities, and plans for cyber activities of the reserve components, including—

(i) an identification of current positions in the reserve components serving Department cyber missions;

(ii) an inventory of the existing cyber skills of reserve component personnel, including the skills of units and elements of the reserve components that are transitioning to cyber missions;

(iii) an inventory of the existing infrastructure of the reserve components that contributes to the cyber missions of the United States Cyber Command, including the infrastructure available to units and elements of the reserve components that are transitioning to such missions; and

(iv) an assessment of the manner in which the military departments plan to use the reserve components to meet total force resource requirements, and the effect of such plans on the potential ability of members of the reserve components to support the cyber missions of the United States Cyber Command;

(D) an assessment of whether the National Guard, when activated in a State status (either State Active Duty or in a duty status under title 32, United States Code) can operate under unique and useful authorities to support domestic cyber missions and requirements of the Department or the United States Cyber Command;

(E) an assessment of the appropriateness of hiring on a part-time basis non-dual status technicians who possess appropriate cyber security expertise for purposes of assisting the National Guard in protecting critical infrastructure and carrying out cyber missions;

(F) an assessment of the current and potential ability of the reserve components to—

(i) attract and retain personnel with substantial, relevant cyber technical expertise who use those skills in the private sector;

(ii) organize such personnel into units at the State, regional, or national level under appropriate command and control arrangements for Department cyber missions;

(iii) meet and sustain the training standards of the United States Cyber Command; and

(iv) establish and manage career paths for such personnel;

(G) a determination of how the reserve components could contribute to total force solutions to cyber operations requirements of the United States Cyber Command; and

(H) development of an estimate of the personnel, infrastructure, and training required, and the costs that would be incurred, in connection with implementing a strategy for integrating the reserve components into the total force for support of the cyber missions of the Department and United States Cyber Command, including by taking into account the potential savings under the strategy through use of personnel referred to in subparagraph (C)(i), provided that for specific cyber units that exist or are transitioning to a cyber mission, the estimate shall examine whether there are misalignments in existing plans between unit missions and facility readiness to support such missions.

(c) LIMITATIONS ON CERTAIN ACTIONS.—

(1) REDUCTION IN PERSONNEL OF AIR NATIONAL GUARD CYBER UNITS.—No reduction in personnel of a cyber unit of the Air National Guard of the United States may be implemented or carried out in fiscal year 2014 before the submittal of the report required by subsection (d).

(2) REDUCTION IN PERSONNEL AND CAPACITY OF AIR NATIONAL GUARD RED TEAMS.—No reduction in the personnel or capacity of a Red Team of the Air National Guard of the United States may be implemented or carried out unless the report required by subsection (d) includes a certification that the personnel or capacity to be reduced is directly related to Red Team capabilities that are no longer required.

(d) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 30 days after the completion of the mission analysis under subsection (a), the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report containing—

(1) the results of the mission analysis;

(2) recommendations for improving or changing the roles, organization, missions, concept of operations, or authorities related to the cyber operations of the Department; and

(3) any other matters concerning the mission analysis that the Secretary considers appropriate.

(e) NATIONAL GUARD ASSESSMENT.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which the Secretary submits the report required under subsection (d), the Chief of the National Guard Bureau shall submit to the congressional defense committees an assessment of the role of the National Guard in supporting the cyber operations mission of the Department of Defense as such mission is described in such report.

(f) FORM.—The report under subsection (d) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

SEC. 934. MODIFICATION OF REQUIREMENT FOR REPORT ON DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE PROGRESS IN DEFENDING THE DEPARTMENT AND THE DEFENSE INDUSTRIAL BASE FROM CYBER EVENTS.

Section 935(b)(3) of the Ike Skelton National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2011 (Public Law 111-383; 124 Stat. 4339) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking “capabilities,” and inserting “capabilities, including estimated economic impacts.”; and

(2) in subparagraph (B), by striking “remediation,” and inserting “remediation and estimates of economic losses resulting from such event.”.

SEC. 935. ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO THE SOFTWARE LICENSES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) UPDATED PLAN.—

(1) UPDATE.—The Chief Information Officer of the Department of the Defense shall, in consultation with the chief information officers of the military departments and the Defense Agencies, update the plan for the inventory of selected software licenses of the Department of Defense required under section 937 of the National Defense Authorization Act for 2013 (Public Law 112-239; 10 U.S.C. 2223 note) to include a plan for the inventory of all software licenses of the Department of Defense for which a military department spends more than $5,000,000 annually on any individual title, including a comparison of licenses purchased with licenses in use.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The update required under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) include plans for implementing an automated solution capable of reporting the software license compliance position of the Department and providing a verified audit trail, or an audit trail otherwise produced and verified by an independent third party;

(B) include details on the process and business systems necessary to regularly perform reviews, a procedure for validating and reporting deregistering and registering new software, and a mechanism and plan to relay that information to the appropriate chief information officer; and

(C) a proposed timeline for implementation of the updated plan in accordance with paragraph (3).

(3) SUBMISSION.—Not later than September 30, 2015, the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees the updated plan required under paragraph (1).

(b) PERFORMANCE PLAN.—If the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense determines through the implementation of the process and business systems in the updated plan required by subsection (a) that the number of software licenses of the Department for an individual title for which a military department spends greater than $5,000,000 annually exceeds the needs of the Department for such software licenses, or the inventory discloses that there is a discrepancy between the number of software licenses purchased and those in actual use, the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense shall implement a plan to bring the number of such software licenses into balance with the needs of the Department and the terms of any relevant contract.

SEC. 936. CYBER OUTREACH AND THREAT AWARENESS FOR SMALL BUSINESSES.

Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall provide to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate a briefing on options for strengthening outreach and threat awareness programs for small businesses (as defined in section 3 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 632)) that are awarded contracts by the Department of Defense to assist such businesses to—

(1) understand the gravity and scope of cyber threats;

(2) develop a plan to protect intellectual property; and

(3) develop a plan to protect the networks of such businesses.

SEC. 937. JOINT FEDERATED CENTERS FOR TRUSTED DEFENSE SYSTEMS FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) FEDERATION REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide for the establishment of a joint federation of capabilities to support the trusted defense system needs of the Department of Defense (in this section referred to as the “federation”).

(2) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the federation shall be to serve as a joint, Department-wide federation of capabilities to support the trusted defense system needs of the Department to ensure security in the software and hardware developed, acquired, maintained, and used by the Department, pursuant to the trusted defense systems strategy of the Department and supporting policies related to software assurance and supply chain risk management.

(b) DISCHARGE OF ESTABLISHMENT.—In providing for the establishment of the federation, the Secretary shall consider whether the purpose of the federation can be met by existing centers in the Department. If the Department determines that there are capabilities gaps that cannot be satisfied by existing centers, the Department shall devise a strategy for creating and providing resources for such capabilities to fill such gaps.

(c) CHARTER.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall issue a charter for the federation. The charter shall—

(1) be established pursuant to the trusted defense systems strategy of the Department and supporting policies related to software assurance and supply chain risk management; and

(2) set forth—

(A) the role of the federation in supporting program offices in implementing the trusted defense systems strategy of the Department;

(B) the software and hardware assurance expertise and capabilities of the federation, including policies, standards, requirements, best practices, contracting, training, and testing;

(C) the requirements for the discharge by the federation, in coordination with the Center for Assured Software of the National Security Agency, of a program of research and development to improve automated software code vulnerability analysis and testing tools;

(D) the requirements for the federation to procure, manage, and distribute enterprise licenses for automated software vulnerability analysis tools; and

(E) the requirements for the discharge by the federation, in coordination with the Defense Microelectronics Activity, of a program of research and development to improve hardware vulnerability, testing, and protection tools.

(d) REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees, at the time of the submittal to Congress of the budget of the President for fiscal year 2016 pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, a report on the funding and management of the federation. The report shall set forth such recommendations as the Secretary considers appropriate regarding the optimal placement of the federation within the organizational structure of the Department, including responsibility for the funding and management of the federation.

SEC. 938. SUPERVISION OF THE ACQUISITION OF CLOUD COMPUTING CAPABILITIES.

(a) SUPERVISION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense shall, acting through the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence, the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense, and the Chairman of the Joint Requirements Oversight Council, supervise the following:

(A) Review, development, modification, and approval of requirements for cloud computing solutions for data analysis and storage by the Armed Forces and the Defense Agencies, including requirements for cross-domain, enterprise-wide discovery and correlation of data stored in cloud and non-cloud computing databases, relational and non-relational databases, and hybrid databases.

(B) Review, development, modification, approval, and implementation of plans for the competitive acquisition of cloud computing systems or services to meet requirements described in subparagraph (A), including plans for the transition from current computing systems to systems or services acquired.

(C) Development and implementation of plans to ensure that the cloud systems or services acquired pursuant to subparagraph (B) are interoperable and universally accessible and usable through attribute-based access controls.

(D) Integration of plans under subparagraphs (B) and (C) with enterprise-wide plans of the Armed Forces and the Department of Defense for the Joint Information Environment and the Defense Intelligence Information Environment.

(2) DIRECTION.—The Secretary shall provide direction to the Armed Forces and the Defense Agencies on the matters covered by paragraph (1) by not later than March 15, 2014.

(b) INTEGRATION WITH INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY EFFORTS.—The Secretary shall coordinate with the Director of National Intelligence to ensure that activities under this section are integrated with the Intelligence Community Information Technology Enterprise in order to achieve interoperability, information sharing, and other efficiencies.

(c) LIMITATION.—The requirements of subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D) of subsection (a)(1) shall not apply to a contract for the acquisition of cloud computing capabilities in an amount less than $1,000,000.

(d) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or affect the authorities or responsibilities of the Director of National Intelligence under section 102A of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 3024).

SEC. 939. CYBER VULNERABILITIES OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE WEAPON SYSTEMS AND TACTICAL COMMUNICATIONS SYSTEMS.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the status of the capability of each military department to operate in non-permissive and hostile cyber environments.

(b) ELEMENTS.—The report required by subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) A description and assessment of potential cyber threats or threat systems to major weapon systems and tactical communications systems that could emerge in the next five years.

(2) A description and assessment of cyber vulnerabilities of current major weapon and tactical communications systems.

(3) A detailed description of the current strategy to detect, deter, and defend against cyber attacks on current and planned major weapon systems and tactical communications systems.

(4) An estimate of the costs anticipated to be incurred in addressing cyber vulnerabilities to Department of Defense weapon systems and tactical communications systems over the next five years.

(c) FORM.—The report required by subsection (a) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

SEC. 940. CONTROL OF THE PROLIFERATION OF CYBER WEAPONS.

(a) INTERAGENCY PROCESS FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF POLICY.—The President shall establish an interagency process to provide for the establishment of an integrated policy to control the proliferation of cyber weapons through unilateral and cooperative law enforcement activities, financial means, diplomatic engagement, and such other means as the President considers appropriate.

(b) INDUSTRY PARTICIPATION.—The President shall include, to the extent practicable, private industry participation in the process established under subsection (a).

(c) OBJECTIVES.—The objectives of the interagency process established under subsection (a) shall be as follows:

(1) To identify the intelligence, law enforcement, and financial sanctions tools that can and should be used to suppress the trade in cyber tools and infrastructure that are or can be used for criminal, terrorist, or military activities while preserving the ability of governments and the private sector to use such tools for legitimate purposes of self-defense.

(2) To establish a statement of principles to control the proliferation of cyber weapons, including principles for controlling the proliferation of cyber weapons that can lead to expanded cooperation and engagement with international partners.

(d) RECOMMENDATIONS.—The interagency process established under subsection (a) shall develop, by not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, recommendations on means for the control of the proliferation of cyber weapons, including a draft statement of principles and a review of applicable legal authorities.

SEC. 941. INTEGRATED POLICY TO DETER ADVERSARIES IN CYBERSPACE.

(a) INTEGRATED POLICY.—The President shall establish an interagency process to provide for the development of an integrated policy to deter adversaries in cyberspace.

(b) OBJECTIVE.—The objective of the interagency process established under subsection (a) shall be to develop a deterrence policy for reducing cyber risks to the United States and our allies.

(c) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth the integrated policy developed pursuant to subsection (a).

(2) FORM.—The report under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

SEC. 942. NATIONAL CENTERS OF ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE IN INFORMATION ASSURANCE EDUCATION MATTERS.

(a) PRESERVATION OF DESIGNATION DURING ACADEMIC YEARS 2013–2014 AND 2014–2015.—Each institution of higher education that was designated by the National Security Agency and the Department of Homeland Security as a National Center of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education as of January 1, 2013, shall continue to be designated as such a Center through June 30, 2015, provided that such institution maintains the standards by which such institution was originally designated as such a Center.

(b) ASSESSMENT AND RECOMMENDATION OF ACCREDITATION OR DESIGNATION PROCESS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Homeland Security, the Director of the National Security Agency, and other appropriate departments and agencies of the Federal Government and non-Federal organizations, shall—

(1) assess the National Centers of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education program strengths and weaknesses, including processes and criteria used to develop curricula and designate an institution of higher education as a National Center of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education;

(2) assess the maturity of information assurance as an academic discipline;

(3) assess the role the Federal Government should play in the future development of curricula and other criteria for designating or accrediting information assurance education programs of institutions of higher education as National Centers of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education;

(4) assess the advantages and disadvantages of broadening the governance structure of such Centers;

(5) assess the extent to which existing and emerging curricula and other criteria for designation as such a Center is aligned with the National Initiative for Cybersecurity Education and will provide the knowledge and skills needed by the information assurance workforce for existing and future employment;

(6) make recommendations for improving and evolving the mechanisms and processes for developing the curricula and other criteria for accrediting or designating information assurance programs of institutions of higher education as Centers; and

(7) make recommendations on transitioning the responsibility for developing the curricula and other criteria for accrediting or designating information assurance programs of institutions of higher education as Centers from the sole administration of the National Security Agency.

(c) ASSESSMENT OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE COLLABORATION WITH CENTERS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall assess the collaboration of the Department of Defense with the National Centers of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education. Such assessment shall include—

(1) the extent to which the information security scholarship program of the Department of Defense established under chapter 112 of title 10, United States Code, contributes to—

(A) building the capacity to educate the information assurance and cybersecurity workforce needed for the future; and

(B) employing exceptional information assurance and cybersecurity workers in the Department; and

(2) mechanisms for increasing Department employment of graduates of such Centers.

(d) PLAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Homeland Security, the Director of the National Security Agency, and other appropriate departments and agencies of the Federal Government and non-Federal organizations, shall submit to Congress—

(A) a plan for implementing the recommendations made pursuant to subsection (b) on improving and evolving the mechanisms and processes for developing the curricula and other criteria for accrediting or designating the information assurance programs of institutions of higher education as National Centers of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education;

(B) the results of the assessments conducted under subsections (b) and (c); and

(C) the recommendations made under subsection (b).

(2) CONSULTATION.—In developing the plan under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consult with appropriate representatives of information assurance interests in departments and agencies of the Federal Government, State and local governments, academia, and the private sector.

(e) INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION DEFINED.—In this section, the term “institution of higher education” has the meaning given the term in section 101 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001).

Subtitle E—Total Force Management

SEC. 951. REVIEWS OF APPROPRIATE MANPOWER PERFORMANCE.

(a) REPORTS REQUIRED.—Section 2330a of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as subsections (i) and (j), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsections (g) and (h):

“(g) INSPECTOR GENERAL REPORT.—Not later than May 1 of each year, beginning with 2014 and ending with 2016, the Inspector General of the Department of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report containing the Inspector General’s assessment of—

“(1) the efforts by the Department of Defense to compile the inventory pursuant to subsection (c); and

“(2) the reviews conducted under subsection (e), including the actions taken to resolve the findings of the reviews in accordance with section 2463 of this title.

“(h) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT.—Not later than September 30 of each year, beginning with 2014 and ending with 2016, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report containing the Comptroller General’s assessment of the efforts by the Department of Defense to implement subsections (e) and (f).”

(b) EXTENSION OF COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT ON INVENTORY.—Section 803(c) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010 (Public Law 111-84; 123 Stat. 2402) is amended by striking “2011 and 2012” and inserting “2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, and 2015”.

SEC. 1001. GENERAL TRANSFER AUTHORITY.

(a) AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER AUTHORIZATIONS.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—Upon determination by the Secretary of Defense that such action is necessary in the national interest, the Secretary may transfer amounts of authorizations made available to the Department of Defense in this division for fiscal year 2014 between any such authorizations for that fiscal year (or any subdivisions thereof). Amounts of authorizations so transferred shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes as the authorization to which transferred.

(2) LIMITATION.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), the total amount of authorizations that the Secretary may transfer under the authority of this section may not exceed $5,000,000,000.

(3) EXCEPTION FOR TRANSFERS BETWEEN MILITARY PERSONNEL AUTHORIZATIONS.—A transfer of funds between military personnel authorizations under title IV shall not be counted toward the dollar limitation in paragraph (2).

(b) LIMITATIONS.—The authority provided by subsection (a) to transfer authorizations—

(1) may only be used to provide authority for items that have a higher priority than the items from which authority is transferred; and

(2) may not be used to provide authority for an item that has been denied authorization by Congress.

(c) EFFECT ON AUTHORIZATION AMOUNTS.—A transfer made from one account to another under the authority of this section shall be deemed to increase the amount authorized for the account to which the amount is transferred by an amount equal to the amount transferred.
